19:49-51 A few individuals' allotments are listed apart from allotments of their tribes. Here Joshua is given his own inheritance, the city of Timnath-serah within the tribal allotments of Ephraim (19:50). The whole section that describes the allotments concludes in 19:51 with the reminder that Eleazar and Joshua assigned the legacies at Shiloh before the LORD at the entrance of the meeting tent (see note on Josh 18:1).

20:1-9 In Numbers 35:1-8, God commanded the Israelites to give, from their inherited territories, cities for the Levites (see Josh 21:1-42). Some of those cities were to be designated as cities of refuge. God designated cities of refuge to protect life. Joshua 20 designates some cities as places of refuge for those who have killed another person under such circumstances that the killing wasn't considered a capital crime. (See sidebar, "Refuge Cities"). The cities of refuge are discussed also in Exodus 21:13; Numbers 35:9-15; Deuteronomy 4:41-43; 19:1-13; and 1 Chronicles 6:54-81. The overarching concern of these texts and Joshua 20 is the shedding of innocent blood.

21:1-42 Joshua 13-21 accentuates the notion that the land and its people are holy by carefully delineating the divisions of land in relation to the Levites. The assignment by Moses of land east of the Jordan River (Josh 13:15-31) is framed by notes that "Moses gave no legacy to the tribe of Levi" (Josh 13:14, 33). God alone would be the inheritance for this tribe (Josh 13:33). The allotments by Joshua, Eleazar, and the heads of the tribes begins

Refuge Cities The identification of these towns, and the need for them, is tied to specific ancient Near Eastern assumptions about murder and the punishment for it, ideas that may seem strange to modern readers. At the core of Joshua 20 is the notion that the spilling of blood (which was understood in an almost magical sense as representative of life) by murder brought an imbalance (as well as an injustice) to the created order. It brought a type of curse on the land (Deut 19:10). As Numbers 35:33 states, “blood pollutes the land.” Bloodguilt could be averted, it was believed, by the action of an “avenger of blood,” an individual designated by the family of the dead person to seek revenge in the case of homicide (the avenger was usually the nearest relative to the deceased). To understand the concept further, it is important to recognize that the English “avenger” translates the Hebrew term which more properly means “redeemer” (Ruth 2:20; 3:13). Hence, the avenger was thought to “redeem” the blood of the dead relative, spilled in a manner that wasn’t proper, by shedding the blood of the murderer. Again, as Numbers 35:33 states, in the case of the land being polluted by blood, no redemption or purification can be made for the land except by the blood of the one who shed it. The practice of avenging a murder was so deeply ingrained in the Israelite psyche that it was institutionalized (Deut 19:12). It was recognized, however, that homicide occurred sometimes under circumstances that weren’t clearly premeditated and, therefore, didn’t warrant avenging (Num 35:22-24). In fact, if the avenger took the life of someone who had killed by accident, that act of retaliation itself would amount to shedding innocent blood and, therefore, perpetuate bloodguilt (again, see Deut 19:10). In terms of modern justice, the cases exempted from the avenger would be classified as manslaughter or perhaps third-degree murder. Deuteronomy 19:4-5 provides a classic example. Two men go into the forest to cut wood. The ax head belonging to one man slips and kills the other. If there was no previous hatred between the men, the case might be judged an accident, and the killer would be entitled to protection from the avenger of the dead man’s family (see further, Num 35:22-24).

Like so many other aspects of Joshua’s leadership, this allotment of refuge cities follows the guidelines of Moses in Deuteronomy (Deut 19:1-13). The identity of the cities seems to be motivated by consideration for even geographical distribution. Three cities were named east of the Jordan (Golan, Ramoth, and Bezer) and three west of the river (Kedesh, Shechem, and Hebron); in both cases cities were located in northern, central, and southern regions. The particular place of asylum in each of these cities may have been a sanctuary in which the person was thought to be protected by God’s “shelter” at the altar (see an expression of the general idea, though perhaps not the specific notion of refuge from an avenger, in Ps 61:1-4). Exodus 21:14 implies that a sanctuary is the site of refuge when it notes that a person who kills another by accident should be given refuge, but one who “plots and kills another person on purpose” should be taken from the altar for execution. Whether or not Joshua 20 has a sanctuary in mind isn’t certain, but the initial procedure for the one seeking refuge is clear, and Joshua 20:4-5 is somewhat unique in this detail. The slayer is to appear before the elders of the refuge city. They decide whether the person deserves asylum. If so, they are responsible for protecting the man from the avenger who pursues him (cf. Deut 19:12, which speaks of the elders of the town from which the killer has come; see Num 35:24). Joshua 24:6 includes another provision of uncertain meaning, namely, that at the death of the high priest at the time of the murder, the slayer could return to his home. This loophole for the manslayer is emphasized in Numbers 35:25, 28, 32. It probably reflects an extension of amnesty offered when a high priest died. Moreover, it also indicates that the action of the avenger of blood wasn’t primarily for retaliation (though that may have motivated him as well). Rather, the death of a murderer was to purify the land of bloodguilt. Thus refuge cities are appointed not only as refuge for the person who killed accidentally but also as a kind of quarantined space to ensure the purity of the land. Even though the killing was accidental, blood was still spilled, and thus the land was polluted by it. This concern for the purity of the land explains why the refuge cities are also levitical towns. The Levites are placed so as to oversee the boundaries between clean and unclean, and to oversee the process of justice.

with similar comments (Josh 14:3-4), and the allotment concludes in Joshua 21 with a list of 48 towns given as places to live for the Levites. Thus the entire account of land distribution is ordered to call attention to the special status of the Levites, which entails what they did and didn’t possess.

<sup>41</sup>This is the total of all the cities of the Levites within the property of the Israelites: forty-eight cities with their pastures. <sup>42</sup>Each of these cities had its pastures around it. This was the case for all these cities.

Summary of the conquest

<sup>43</sup>The LORD gave to Israel all the land he had pledged to give to their ancestors. They took it over and settled there. <sup>44</sup>The LORD gave them rest from surrounding danger, exactly as he had pledged to their ancestors. Not one of all their enemies held out against them. The LORD gave all their enemies into their power. <sup>45</sup>Not one of all the good things that the LORD had promised to the house of Israel failed. Every promise was fulfilled.

Eastern tribes go home

22 Then Joshua summoned the Reubenites, the Gadites, and half the tribe of Manasseh. <sup>2</sup>He said to them, “You obeyed everything that Moses the LORD’s servant commanded you. You have also obeyed me in everything that I have commanded you. <sup>3</sup>During these many years, you never once deserted your fellow Israelites. You faithfully obeyed the command of the LORD your God. <sup>4</sup>The LORD your God has now given rest to your fellow Israelites, exactly as he promised them. So turn around and go back home. 21:43-45 The distribution of the land concludes with a summary that declares all God’s promises to Israel’s ancestors are complete, a common theme in Joshua (see Josh 11:23; 22:4; 23:14).

22:1-8 Joshua gives a final blessing to the Reubenites, Gadites, and half the tribe of Manasseh, and sends them to their territories. Joshua’s words to them have two focal points. First, he praises them for remaining faithful to the other tribes and for being obedient to the covenant. The emphasis here is on the unity of the tribes in their service to God. This unity will become an issue in the next section (see Josh 22:9-34). Second, Joshua charges the two and a half eastern tribes to obey the instruction from Moses. Specifically, he charges them to Love the LORD your God

Love the LORD your God. Walk in all his ways and obey his commandments. Hold on to him and serve him with all your heart and being." <sup>6</sup>Then Joshua blessed them. He sent them away, and they went home.

<sup>7</sup>Moses had provided for half of the tribe of Manasseh in Bashan. But Joshua provided for the other half on the west side of the Jordan along with their fellow Israelites. When he sent them back home, Joshua also blessed them. <sup>8</sup>He said to them, "Return home with great wealth and many cattle, with silver, gold, bronze, and iron, and with much clothing. Divide the spoil taken from your enemies among your own people."

Disagreement about an altar

<sup>9</sup>So the people of Reuben, the people of Gad, and half the tribe of Manasseh went back. They left the Israelites at Shiloh, which is in the land of Canaan. They went to the land of Gilead, to the land that they owned. They had settled there at the LORD's command given by Moses. <sup>10</sup>They came to the districts<sup>a</sup> of the Jordan that are in the land of Canaan. The people of Reuben, the people of Gad, and half the tribe of Manasseh built an altar there by the Jordan, an altar that appeared to be immense. <sup>11</sup>Then the Israelites heard a report: "Look. The people of Reuben, the people of Gad, and half the tribe of Manasseh have built an altar at the far edge of the land of Canaan. It lies in the districts of the Jordan on the Israelite side!" <sup>12</sup>When the Israelites heard this, the entire Israelite community assembled at Shiloh to go up to war against them.

<sup>13</sup>Then the Israelites sent Phinehas son of Eleazar the priest to the people of Reuben, the people of Gad, and half the tribe of Manasseh in the land of Gilead. <sup>14</sup>They sent with him ten leaders, one leader from each important family among the tribes of Israel. Each was the head of an important family among the military units of Israel. <sup>15</sup>They came to the people of Reuben, the people of Gad, and half the tribe of Manasseh in the land of Gilead and spoke with them. <sup>16</sup>They said, "Here is what the LORD's entire community says: 'What's this disrespectful thing that you've done to the God of Israel? Today you've turned away from following the LORD by building yourselves an altar as an act of rebellion against the LORD. <sup>17</sup>Wasn't the offense of Peor enough for us? Even today we still haven't cleansed ourselves from that sin, when there was a plague on the LORD's community! <sup>18</sup>Today you are turning away from following the LORD. If you rebel against the LORD today, he will be angry with the entire community of Israel tomorrow. <sup>19</sup>If your own property is unclean land, then cross over into the land of the LORD's property and settle among us. That's where the dwelling of the LORD stands. But don't rebel against the LORD. And don't involve us in rebellion<sup>a</sup> by building an altar for yourselves other than the altar of the LORD our God. <sup>20</sup>Didn't Achan, Zerah's son, do such a disrespectful thing with the items reserved for God? Wrath came on the entire community of Israel. And he wasn't the only one to die for his crime.'"

(22:5). This language reflects the basic covenant expectation. Deuteronomy 6:5 commands love of God completely, and now Joshua repeats the expectation.

22:9-34 When the two and a half eastern tribes return to their territories, controversy arises about proper worship. The Reubenites, Gadites, and half the tribe of Manasseh built an altar, which the other tribes interpreted as rebellion against them. Although the reason for this conflict isn't specified, they apparently thought the altar violated the instruction in Deuteronomy against making sacrifices anywhere except the central worship site (Deut 12:13, 14). The eastern tribes defend themselves, however, by saying the altar wasn't for sacrifice. Rather, it was to serve as a reminder that they too belonged to Israel's worshipping community. It was essentially a model or copy of an altar that would serve as a monument for the Reubenites, Gadites, and half the tribe of Manasseh (22:28).

22:11 Israelite side: It isn't certain which side is meant. Are the western tribes claiming that the eastern tribes have built an altar west of the Jordan River or east of it? Regardless, it is clear that the Jordan River boundary poses a problem. The tribes east of the Jordan at least perceive that they are in inferior territory and risk being cut off from the people of God (see Josh 22:21-34).

22:13-20 It is fitting that the Israelites sent Phinehas to address the matter of the altar. In the wilderness period, Phinehas proved zealous for religious purity. He compared the building of the altar to a well-known sin of the Israelites during that time, the offense of Peor (22:17). At a place called Peor the Israelites began to worship a fertility god called the Baal of Peor, and God ordered all those who worshipped the deity to be killed (Num 25:3). A plague fell on the Israelites. Phinehas saw an Israelite man take a Moabite woman (presumably a worshipper of the Baal of Peor) into his tent. Phinehas went in and ran a spear through them both (Num 25:8), thus stopping the plague.

<sup>21</sup>Then the people of Reuben, the people of Gad, and half the tribe of Manasseh answered the heads of the military units of Israel: <sup>22</sup>"The LORD is God of gods! The LORD is God of gods! He already knows, and now let Israel also know it! If we acted in rebellion or in disrespect against the LORD, don't spare us today. <sup>23</sup>If we've built ourselves an altar to turn away from following the LORD or to offer on it an entirely burned offering or gift offering, or to perform well-being sacrifices on it, let the LORD himself seek punishment. <sup>24</sup>No! The truth is we did this out of concern for what might happen. In the future your children might say to our children, 'What have you got to do with the LORD, the God of Israel?' <sup>25</sup>The LORD has set the Jordan as a border between us and you people of Reuben and Gad. You have no portion in the LORD!' So your children might make our children stop worshipping the LORD. <sup>26</sup>As a result we said, 'Let's protect ourselves by building an altar. It isn't to be for an entirely burned offering or for sacrifice.' <sup>27</sup>But it is to be a witness between us and you and between our descendants after us. It witnesses that we too perform the service of the LORD in his presence through our entirely burned offerings, sacrifices, and well-being offerings. So in the future your children could never say to our children, 'You have no portion in the LORD.' <sup>28</sup>We thought, If in the future they ever say this to us or to our descendants, we could say, 'Look at this replica of the altar of the LORD that our ancestors made. It isn't for entirely burned offerings or for sacrifice but to be a witness between us and you.' <sup>29</sup>God forbid that we should rebel against the LORD and turn away today from following the LORD by building an altar for an entirely burned offering, gift offering, or sacrifice, other than the altar of the LORD our God that stands before his dwelling!"

<sup>30</sup>Phinehas the priest, the leaders of the community, and the heads of the military units of Israel who were with him heard the words that the people of Reuben, Gad, and Manasseh spoke and approved them. <sup>31</sup>So Phinehas the son of Eleazar the priest said to the people of Reuben, Gad, and Manasseh, "Today we know that the LORD is among us, because you haven't done a disrespectful thing against the LORD. Now you've delivered the Israelites from the power of the LORD." <sup>32</sup>Then Phinehas the son of Eleazar the priest and the leaders left the people of Reuben and Gad in the land of Gilead and came back to the Israelites in the land of Canaan. They brought word back to them. <sup>33</sup>The Israelites agreed and blessed God. They no longer spoke of going to war against them to destroy the land where the people of Reuben and Gad were living. <sup>34</sup>The people of Reuben and Gad referred to the altar in this way: "It is a witness between us that the LORD is God."

Joshua's word of warning

23 A long time passed. The LORD had given rest to Israel from all their surrounding enemies, and Joshua had grown very old. <sup>2</sup>Joshua summoned all Israel, their elders, their heads, their judges, and their officers. He said to them, "I've grown very old. <sup>3</sup>You've seen all that the LORD your God has done to all these nations because of you. It is the LORD your God who fights for you. <sup>4</sup>Look. I've allotted to you these remaining nations as a legacy for 22:21-34 At the center of the controversy over the altar east of the Jordan River is the nature of the territory occupied by the Reubenites, Gadites, and half the tribe of Manasseh. The eastern tribes express fear that the other tribes will regard the Jordan River as a border that cuts them off from the people of God. The altar is meant to serve as a witness that the eastern tribes are indeed part of the chosen people (22:34).

22:34 the LORD is God: "the LORD" is the common translation for four Hebrew letters that stand for the name of God (see Exod 3:13-15). The confession here is that the one the Israelites worship is the supreme deity.

23:1-16 In this first of two concluding speeches, Joshua reminds the Israelites of all God has done for them. Then Joshua charges them to be faithful to God, and warns them God will remove them from the land if they worship other gods. Joshua's farewell speech is like those of other great leaders (Moses, Deut 19-31; Samuel, 1 Sam 12; David, 1 Kgs 2:1-9). The language and themes of the speech follow closely the religious convictions of Deuteronomy: assurance that the Lord gave Israel the land (Deut 1:8); call to singular devotion to Israel's God (Deut 6:4-5); warnings against mixing and intermarrying with those who worship other gods (Deut 7:1-11), and threat of losing the land if the people are unfaithful (Deut 29:25-28).

23:1 The setting for this speech in Joshua's old age is identical to the setting of Joshua 13:1 when Joshua allotted the land to the Israelites. Both the distribution of inheritances and the final warnings to the Israelites are essential acts before Joshua's death.

23:2 all Israel: The tribes are unified completely under the leadership of Joshua, and all are present for Joshua's last words as for other major events (see Josh 4:1; 8:33; 18:1).

23:3 It is the LORD your God who fights for you: This theme of God fighting for Israel goes back to the exodus, when God defeated Pharaoh and the Israelites simply stood still (Exod 14:14). Throughout Joshua this notion has been prominent as well, with emphasis on God defeating the residents of the land and giving the land to the Israelites (Josh 1:3; 2:10-11; 6:2; 11:6; 21:43-45).

your tribes, along with all the nations I have destroyed. They stretch from the Jordan to the Mediterranean Sea. <sup>5</sup>The LORD your God will force them out before you and remove them from you. Then you will take over their land, exactly as the LORD your God has promised you. <sup>6</sup>Be very strong. Carefully obey everything written in the Instruction scroll from Moses. Don't deviate a bit from it either to the right or to the left. <sup>7</sup>Don't have anything to do with these nations that remain with you. Don't invoke the names of their gods or take oaths by them. Don't serve them or worship them. <sup>8</sup>Hold on to the LORD your God instead, exactly as you've done right up to today.

<sup>9</sup>"The LORD has removed great and powerful nations before you. To this day, no one has stood up to you. <sup>10</sup>A single one of you puts a thousand to flight. This is because the LORD your God fights for you, exactly as he promised you. <sup>11</sup>For your own sake, be very careful to love the LORD your God. <sup>12</sup>But if you should turn away and join the rest of these nations that remain with you, intermarry with them, and associate with each other, <sup>13</sup>then know for certain that the LORD your God won't keep on removing these nations before you. Instead, they will be a snare and a trap for you. They will be a whip on your sides and thorns in your eyes, until you vanish from this fertile land that the LORD your God has given you.

<sup>14</sup>"Look. I'm now walking on the road to death that all the earth must take. You know with all your heart and being that not a single one of all the good things that the LORD your God promised about you has failed. They were all fulfilled for you. Not a single one of them has failed. <sup>15</sup>But in the same way that every good thing that the LORD your God promised about you has been fulfilled, so the LORD could bring against you every bad thing as well. He could wipe you out from this fertile land that the LORD your God has given you. <sup>16</sup>If you violate the covenant of the LORD your God, which he commanded you to keep, and go on to serve other gods and worship them, then the LORD will be furious with you. You will quickly vanish from the fertile land that he has given you."

What God has done

24 Joshua gathered all the tribes of Israel at Shechem. He summoned the elders of Israel, its leaders, judges, and officers. They presented themselves before God. <sup>2</sup>Then Joshua River to the Mediterranean Sea, in contrast to the idealistic borders given in Joshua 1:4.

23:6 Instruction scroll: the written deposit of Moses' final instructions (see note on Josh 1:7; Deut 31:9, 24; see sidebar, "Instruction Scroll" at Josh 1), to the right or to the left: denotes complete commitment (see Josh 1:7).

23:7 The warning against mixing with the people of the land, lest the Israelites worship the gods of the nations, is an important theme drawn from Deuteronomy 7:1-11.

23:12 The warning against intermarriage is driven by the concern that intermarriage will lead Israel to worship the gods of the nations (see Josh 23:7). Therefore, the charge to separate completely from the people of the land is intended to preserve Israel's pure faith in God. The concern and the way it is expressed here is drawn from similar concerns in Deuteronomy 7:1-11.

23:13 a snare and a trap: The idea that the nations remain to provoke and test Israel is a theme in the book of Judges as well (Judg 2:23). The underlying notion is that Israel could have removed all the people of the land if they had had enough trust in God.

23:14 The theme of God's promises being fulfilled completely appears in Joshua 11:23; 21:43-45; 22:4.

23:16 The threat of Israel losing the land if they worship other gods is another prominent theme in Deuteronomy and the books that are influenced by it (Deut 28:30, 33, 36; 1 Kgs 8:46-51).

24:1-28 The final chapter seems like a second ending to the book, since Joshua spoke to the Israelites in chapter 23 when he was "very old" and admonished them to worship God alone. Nevertheless, since chapter 24 has no new introduction in terms of time, it follows chapter 23 logically with an additional charge, albeit in a new place: Shechem. In this final speech, Joshua charges the Israelites to be faithful to their God. Joshua's speech resembles ancient Near Eastern treaties, known primarily from the Hittites, in which powerful kings laid down conditions for their relationships with less powerful peoples. Such treaties begin with a historical prologue in which the king reminds his subjects of how he has protected them in the past in order to motivate the people to obedience. In Joshua's speech the primary motivation for faithfulness is the history of what God has done for the Israelites (24:2-13). Ancient Near Eastern treaties of this sort then list stipulations of covenant obedience. Thus Joshua charges the Israelites to put away their foreign gods (24:14). In addition to these elements, the Hittite treaties typically included warnings for unfaithfulness (see 24:19-20) and witnesses to the treaty. In Joshua 24 the Israelites are said to be witnesses against themselves (24:22). Joshua also sets up a stone to commemorate the event, and the stone serves as a witness of the covenant (24:27). The comparison of 24:1-28 to a treaty, however, has limitations. Unlike the treaties made by Hittite kings, this passage doesn't actually present the expectations as God's demands. Rather, the Israelites led by Joshua place stipulations on themselves. Nevertheless, the comparison to ancient Near Eastern treaties is useful in that it indicates the seriousness of the demands on Israel and the expectations for absolute loyalty to God. (See sidebar, "Jealous God").

24:1 Shechem: An important religious site in northern Israel. God first appeared to Abraham at Shechem (Gen 12:7). The site was associated with making a covenant and covenant renewal (Gen 35:2-4).

24:2-13 The historical summary may be compared to said to the entire people, “This is what the LORD, the God of Israel, says: Long ago your ancestors lived on the other side of the Euphrates. They served other gods. Among them was Terah the father of Abraham and Nahor. <sup>3</sup>I took Abraham your ancestor from the other side of the Euphrates. I led him around through the whole land of Canaan. I added to his descendants and gave him Isaac. <sup>4</sup>To Isaac I gave Jacob and Esau. I gave Mount Seir to Esau to take over. But Jacob and his sons went down to Egypt. <sup>5</sup>Then I sent Moses and Aaron. I plagued Egypt with what I did to them. After that I brought you out. <sup>6</sup>I brought your ancestors out of Egypt, and you came to the sea. The Egyptians chased your ancestors with chariots and horses to the Reed Sea. <sup>7</sup>Then they cried for help to the LORD. So he set darkness between you and the Egyptians. He brought the sea down on them, and it covered them. With your own eyes you saw what I did to the Egyptians. You lived in the desert for a long time.

<sup>8</sup>Then I brought you into the land of the Amorites who lived on the other side of the Jordan. They attacked you, but I gave them into your power, and you took over their land. I wiped them out before you. <sup>9</sup>Then Moab’s King Balak, Zippor’s son, set out to attack Israel. He summoned Balaam, Beor’s son, to curse you. <sup>10</sup>But I wasn’t willing to listen to Balaam, so he actually blessed you. I rescued you from his power. <sup>11</sup>Then you crossed over the Jordan. You came to Jericho, and the citizens of Jericho attacked you. They were Amorites, Perizzites, Canaanites, Hittites, Girgashites, Hivites, and Jebusites. But I gave them into your power. <sup>12</sup>I sent the hornet<sup>c</sup> before you. It drove them out before you and did the same to the two kings of the Amorites. It wasn’t your sword or bow that did this. <sup>13</sup>I gave you land on which you hadn’t toiled and cities that you hadn’t built. You settled in them and are enjoying produce from vineyards and olive groves that you didn’t plant.

<sup>14</sup>So now, revere the LORD. Serve him honestly and faithfully. Put aside the gods that your ancestors served beyond the Euphrates and in Egypt and serve the LORD. <sup>15</sup>But if it seems wrong in your opinion to serve the LORD, then choose today whom you will serve. Choose the gods whom your ancestors served beyond the Euphrates or the gods of the Amorites in whose land you live. But my family and I will serve the LORD.”

Deuteronomy 26:5-9 in its broad outline. Both of these summaries also have a creedal quality in that they profess faith in God through the summary of God’s action for Israel. Joshua 24:2-13 is unique, however, in two important details. First, 24:2-4 includes details in the story of the patriarchs, including the account of Abraham’s origins in Mesopotamia, that don’t appear in Deuteronomy 26:5-9 (see Gen 11:27-32). Second, the entire summary in 24:2-13 emphasizes God’s initiative and God’s action to a degree that isn’t evident in the Deuteronomy summary. Even Abraham’s movement from the other side of the Euphrates River is presented as God’s doing (I took Abraham, 24:3). The effect of this focus on God’s action is to heighten the sense of Israel’s obligation to revere and serve God alone. 24:2 your ancestors lived on the other side of the Euphrates: The beginning of Israel’s creed emphasizes Abraham’s beginnings in Mesopotamia (Gen 11:27-32; Deut 26:5-9). The note about worshipping other gods is somewhat unique in summaries of this type. It anticipates the call in Joshua 24:14 to put away foreign gods. 24:3 I took Abraham: The creed highlights God’s action and barely acknowledges the ancestors’ action. Compare with Deuteronomy 26:5. Indeed, the only statement about human action concerns the Israelites’ travel to Egypt (“Jacob and his sons went down to Egypt,” Josh 24:4). 24:4 Mount Seir: Esau is the ancestor of the Edomites. Seir is located in Edom (Gen 25:25; 36:8). 24:6-7 Once again the account emphasizes God’s actions for Israel (I brought your ancestors out of Egypt; he set darkness . . . He brought the sea down). Only two human actions are reported: The Egyptians pursued the Israelites, and the Israelites cried to God for help. Thus the historical summary emphasizes Israel’s helplessness on the one hand and God’s power on the other hand. 24:8 Amorites: the people east of the Jordan led by kings Sihon and Og (Deut 1:7; 2:26–3:22; Josh 2:10). See note on Joshua 2:10. 24:9-10 Balaam: a prophet who hired himself out to Moab’s King Balak to curse the Israelites (Num 22–24). 24:11-13 The conclusion to the historical summary states again, and now more directly, that Israel’s success was due to God’s action for them. Two statements highlight this point: It wasn’t your sword or bow that did this (24:12) and I gave you land on which you hadn’t toiled (24:13). 24:14-24 After Joshua recalls how God established and saved Israel from its enemies, he now charges them to faithfulness, and the people respond with statements of their desire to serve God alone. 24:14-15 Joshua charges Israel to faithfulness, and then makes his own declaration of devotion to God. The word revere is sometimes translated “fear,” but the rendering here is most helpful. The term has to do with the reverence and honor for God seen in complete devotion. As 24:15 indicates, serving God is ultimately a choice. 24:16-18 The people respond to Joshua’s charge with awareness of the historical summary. They declare they

Jealous God The label “jealous God” indicates God’s passionate desire for Israel’s love and devotion. This characterization of God is a key element of OT faith in that it distinguishes Israel’s God from the gods of the nations. God’s jealousy in Joshua 24:19 indicates that God expects absolute devotion. Israel’s neighbors typically worshipped multiple deities, and a single God who expected them to worship no other god would have been a foreign concept. The notion that God is jealous, however, indicates that the Israelites can’t divide their commitment between God and another deity. God’s jealousy also has another, deeper meaning in the OT. The first occurrence of this label in the OT is in the explanation of the commandment against making idols (Exod 20:5). Since the commandment is probably a prohibition against representing Israel’s God with images, the idea that God is jealous also means God won’t be limited by human conceptions and representations. God defines God’s self and reveals God’s self in God’s own terms. God is known by God’s action in Israel’s history, primarily by God’s rescue of the Israelites from slavery in Egypt (Exod 20:1-2; Josh 24:17).

of Egypt, from the house of bondage. He has done these mighty signs in our sight. He has protected us the whole way we’ve gone and in all the nations through which we’ve passed. <sup>18</sup>The LORD has driven out all the nations before us, including the Amorites who lived in the land. We too will serve the LORD, because he is our God.”

<sup>19</sup>Then Joshua said to the people, “You can’t serve the LORD, because he is a holy God. He is a jealous God. He won’t forgive your rebellion and your sins. <sup>20</sup>If you leave the LORD and serve foreign gods, then he will turn around and do you harm and finish you off, in spite of having done you good in the past.”

<sup>21</sup>Then the people said to Joshua, “No! The LORD is the one we will serve.”

<sup>22</sup>So Joshua said to the people, “You are witnesses against yourselves that you have chosen to serve the LORD.”

They said, “We are witnesses!”

<sup>23</sup>“So now put aside the foreign gods that are among you. Focus your hearts on the LORD, the God of Israel.”

<sup>24</sup>The people said to Joshua, “We will serve the LORD our God and will obey him.”

Joshua makes a covenant

<sup>25</sup>On that day Joshua made a covenant for the people and established just rule for them at Shechem. <sup>26</sup>Joshua wrote these words in God’s instruction scroll. Then he took a large stone and put it up there under the oak in the sanctuary of the LORD. <sup>27</sup>Joshua said to all the people, “This stone will serve here as a witness against us, because it has heard all the LORD’s words that he spoke to us. It will serve as a witness against you in case you aren’t true to your God.” <sup>28</sup>Then Joshua sent the people away to each one’s legacy.

will serve God because God is the one who brought their ancestors from Egypt and brought them safely to Canaan. The people’s response begins and ends appropriately with the confession, he is our God.

24:19-20 He won’t forgive your rebellion... he will turn around and do you harm: This statement seems at odds with God’s character described in other passages (Exod 34:6-7). It fits, however, with the statement that God is jealous. (See sidebar, “Jealous God”). The extreme actions of God reflect God’s passion for God’s people and represents the backside of God’s love.

24:23 put aside the foreign gods that are among you: Earlier, Joshua charged the Israelites to “Put aside the gods that your ancestors served beyond the Euphrates” (Josh 24:14). Now Joshua repeats the charge so as to recognize the Israelites have their own false gods to put aside. The charge is an approximate quotation from Genesis 35:2, in which Jacob charged members of his household to relinquish their foreign gods. The multiple references to this issue reveals that the Israelites were never without foreign gods and the call to get rid of them. Furthermore, the liturgical setting of 24:23 is evidence that the Israelites made the putting away of foreign gods an aspect of worship in order to aid their devotion to God.

24:25-28 The report of Joshua making a covenant with the Israelites at Shechem concludes with a summary of what transpired: Joshua made a covenant with the Israelites. Although it also says Joshua made statutes and ordinances, Joshua only reiterated those already made by Moses. But Joshua sums up the covenant expectations with his own unique expression of God’s demand to serve the Lord alone (Josh 24:14-15). Then Joshua wrote down the words of the covenant in God’s instruction scroll (see note on Josh 1:7; see sidebar, “Instruction Scroll” at Josh 1). He also presents a witness against the Israelites should they break the covenant: a memorial stone that has heard the agreement. 24:27 Deuteronomy 16:21-22 forbids the placement of stones as objects of worship or as representative of a deity. This stone merely reminds Israel of what God has done for them.

<sup>32</sup>The Israelites had brought up the bones of Joseph from Egypt. They buried them at Shechem in the portion of field that Jacob had purchased for one hundred qesitahs from the descendants of Hamor the father of Shechem. They became a legacy of the descendants of Joseph.

24:29-33 The book concludes with a record of two deaths. Verses 29-31 report that Joshua died and was buried in the territory God gave him as an inheritance. Two notes on Joshua's death recognize that he was successful in responding to God's commission to lead the Israelites (Josh 1:1-9). He is called the LORD's servant (24:29), the same label given to Moses at the opening of the book (Josh 1:1). Under Joshua's leadership the people of Israel also served the Lord (24:31) as Joshua had charged them to do in his final speech (Josh 24:14). The book's final note concerns the death of Eleazar, the priest who helped Joshua divide the land for the Israelites (24:33). Between these the records of these two deaths is the note that Joseph's bones were buried at Shechem. With this note the story of Joshua and the conquest appears to conclude the larger story of God's promise to the ancestors concerning the possession of Canaan. Joseph's bones are buried in the place Jacob purchased in Genesis 33. Thus the whole story of God's wandering, homeless people reaches the resolution God promised Abraham (Gen 12:7).

JUDGES

The book of Judges is a collection of stories about the time between Israel's entrance into the land of Canaan and the rise of kings. It shows Israel as a society divided into tribal groups dealing with foreign enemies and each other. The stories feature a series of tribal figures who are raised up by God for specific occasions. They serve as military leaders who rescue the people from enemies. The book's name comes from the decision of the Vulgate (a Latin translation) to call these figures "judges," but they are called "leaders" in the CEB in Judges 2:16-19. Several statements indicate that some of them "led" Israel (translated "judged" in older translations at Judges 3:10; 10:2-3; 15:20; 16:31). The Hebrew root for "judge" has the basic meaning of settling disputes. However, with the exception of Deborah (Judg 4:4-5), the book uses this Hebrew term for a tribal leader who delivers or rescues the people from distress. Alongside the central characters, Judges mentions five minor leaders in lists rather than in developed stories. Judges describes these leaders as people who governed all Israel for some period of time (Judg 10:1-5; 12:7-15).

The production of the book has a complicated history, and the exact process and date of its composition remain unclear. The stories of local, tribal deliverers appear within an overarching framework that presents a sequence of leaders ruling over a united Israel. This framework has Israel worshipping other gods, for which they are punished by being attacked. Then they call to God for help, and God sends someone to rescue them. At this point, the stories of the "leaders" appear inside the frame. These stories range from one sentence to up to four chapters in length. After the main story ends, the frame story concludes with a statement that Israel was at peace for a period of time. In its present form, Judges is part of what scholars call the Deuteronomistic History (the books of Joshua through Kings). Together, these books reflect theologically on the past and future of God's people in light of the exile in 587 BCE. Judges is now a unified work that can be fruitfully studied as a whole, especially by focusing on its use of literary elements, such as characterization, repetition, and irony.

Judges presents several problems for contemporary readers. First, it isn't clear how accurately its stories reflect historical events and circumstances in the time of Israel's emergence (ca. 1200–1050 BCE; see notes on Judg 1:1–2:5). For example, the stories seem to preserve an accurate picture of the general social and religious character of Israel in the early Iron Age. Yet the number of years given for the persons and events is difficult to reconcile with other data, and the history of the book's composition and its theological character make it hard to match with current histories of Israel's origins (see sidebar, "Joshua, Judges, and the Early History of Israel" at Judg 1). Second, the stories portray a troubling type of "holy war" in which God fights against Israel's enemies. They portray brutal violence against entire populations and the most defenseless members of society (see notes on Judg 1:17; 19:1–21:25). This problem has special force with regard to how the book depicts women. Nearly 20 different female characters appear in the book, and almost every major tribal leader is connected in some way to a female figure. Yet women often appear as trophies of war or as items of property. As Israel's faithfulness declines throughout the book, the descriptions of women become increasingly negative, and they become more and more the victims of violence.

The book's primary theological focus is to show the people's increasing unfaithfulness to God and the decline of the people's social and moral life. Several stories portray a repeating cycle of unfaithfulness, oppression, changed hearts, and deliverance (see Judg 2:11–23), though all these elements do not appear in every story. Most prominent is the book's description of the tribal leaders' era as a downward slide from beginning to end. There is a steady religious and moral decline from obedient and successful leaders like Othniel, to tragic figures like Samson, to complete moral chaos and civil war. This movement features gradual increases in religious unfaithfulness, murder, revenge, and sexual violence. In this way, Judges appears to approve the need for kings in Israel (see Judg 17:6; 18:1; 19:1; 21:25). Yet the book actually holds different views about kings in tension. Some stories critique attempts at royal rule (see Judg 8:1–35; 9:1–57), while others critique nonroyal leadership (see Judg 11:1–40; 13:1–16:31). In the context of the entire Deuteronomistic History, the book calls on God's people in exile to examine their past and possible futures. Various stories critique different types of leadership, including kings, in an effort to explore what kinds of community character and moral leadership are required for God's people to live faithfully into the future. The book invites its readers—both ancient and modern—into a conversation about the possibilities and problems of different forms of leadership and community, and whether they will lead to a future characterized by religious faithfulness and moral uprightness.

The tribes and their military conflicts

1 After Joshua's death, the Israelites asked the LORD, "Who should go up first to fight for us against the Canaanites?"

<sup>2</sup>The LORD said, "The tribe of Judah will go up. I've handed over the land to them."

<sup>3</sup>So the tribe of Judah said to the tribe of Simeon, their brothers, "Come up with us into our territory, and let's fight against the Canaanites. Then we'll go with you into your territory too." So Simeon went with them.

<sup>15</sup>Achsah said to Caleb, "Give me a gift. Since you've given me land in the southern plain, give me springs of water." So Caleb gave her the upper and lower springs.

1:1–2:5 The language of 1:1 echoes the opening phrase of the book of Joshua ("After Moses the Lord's servant died," Josh 1:1) and marks the start of a new era focused on the generation that followed Joshua (but cf. Judg 2:6–8, where Joshua is still alive and his death reported). The opening unit extends to 2:5 and forms the first of two introductions to the book (the second is found in Judg 2:6–3:6). It provides a picture of the Israelite settlement in the land that differs from the idealized picture in Joshua and centers on the achievements and failures of individual tribes in dislocation of the Canaanites, working without a central leader or organization (see sidebar, "Joshua, Judges, and the Early History of Israel"). The passage adapts several texts from Joshua 14–19 (cf. 1:8 and Josh 15:63; cf. 1:10, 20 and Josh 15:13–14), organizing the traditions about separate groups into a south to north movement from the tribe of Judah in the south to Dan in the north. The introduction describes a gradual decline from the obedience and success of the southern tribes (1:1–21) to the limited success and ultimate failure of the northern tribes (1:22–34), ending with a divine statement of judgment (2:1–5). This increasing military failure is an example of the steady decline in success and obedience that will characterize the entire era (cf. Judg 2:6–3:6, which shows a gradual decline in religious faithfulness).

1:1–21 The victories of the southern tribes mark the positive beginning from which Israel's success and obedience will decline.

1:1 go up: The verb here and throughout the introduction expresses aggressive military activity. The opening question raises the issue of proper leadership, a question that would have been particularly pressing for exiles reading the book while pondering their possible future.

1:5–7 The defeat of Adoni-bezek ("the lord of Bezek") is the first major victory in the book, and it confronts contemporary readers with brutal violence. Such actions, known from texts throughout the ancient Near East, served to disable and humiliate enemies, making them unable to attack again. Such actions also resemble the instruction about retaliation in Exodus 21:22–25. Here, a non-Israelite king is the first character to acknowledge God's authority. 1:8 Jerusalem: Joshua 12:10 reports that Joshua defeated Jerusalem's king, while here the tribe of Judah captures the city. But Judges 1:21 reports that the tribe of Benjamin failed to expel the Jebusites from the city while Joshua 15:63 says the same thing of Judah. 2 Samuel 5:6–9 credits David with conquering the city. This confusing history may reflect different memories about how Israel took Jerusalem.

1:9 the southern plain, and the western foothills: The Hebrew terms Negeb ("dry land") and Shephelah ("low land") are modern proper names for these geographic areas.

1:11–15 It's difficult to relate these Caleb traditions to those in Joshua 15:13–19. Achsah (see Josh 15:15–19) represents the full spectrum of female roles in the book: She is both a passive object given away under male control and an assertive actor who secures her own provision (see sidebar, "Women, Gender, and Violence in Judges" at Judg 11). upper and lower springs: Caleb gives Achsah double what she requests.

<sup>16</sup>The descendants of Moses' father-in-law the Kenite went up with the people of Judah from Palm City into the Judean desert, which was in the southern plain near Arad. They went and lived with the Amalekites.<sup>c</sup> <sup>17</sup>Then the Judahites went with the Simeonites, their brothers, and they defeated the Canaanites who lived in Zephath, and they completely destroyed it. So the city was called Hormah.<sup>d</sup> <sup>18</sup>Judah also captured Gaza, Ashkelon, Ekron, and all their territories. <sup>19</sup>Thus the LORD was with the tribe of Judah, and they took possession of the highlands. However, they didn't drive out those who lived in the plain because they had iron chariots. <sup>20</sup>They gave Hebron to Caleb, just as Moses had commanded, and they drove out from there the three sons of Anak. <sup>21</sup>But the people of Benjamin didn't drive out the Jebusites who lived in Jerusalem. So the Jebusites still live with the people of Benjamin in Jerusalem today.

<sup>22</sup>In the same way, Joseph's household went up against Bethel, and the LORD was with them. <sup>23</sup>When they sent men to spy on Bethel, previously named Luz, <sup>24</sup>the spies saw a man coming out of the city, and they said to him, "Show us the way into the city, and we'll be loyal to you in return." <sup>25</sup>So he showed them the way into the city. They killed the city's people with their swords, but they let that man and all his relatives go. <sup>26</sup>The man went to the land of the Hittites and built a city. He named it Luz, which is still its name today.

<sup>27</sup>The tribe of Manasseh didn't drive out the people in Beth-shean, Taanach, Dor, Ibleam, Megiddo, or any of their villages. The Canaanites were determined to live in that land. <sup>28</sup>When Israel became stronger they forced the Canaanites to work for them, but they didn't completely drive them out. <sup>29</sup>The tribe of Ephraim didn't drive out the Canaanites living in Gezer, so the Canaanites kept on living there with them.

Joshua, Judges, and the Early History of Israel The book of Judges provides a picture of Israel's settlement in the land that differs from the idealized picture in Joshua. It describes a gradual process consisting of military victories and failures by individual tribes, who lived alongside the Canaanites and worked without a central leader or organization. Scholars throughout the 20th century tried to combine the stories of Joshua and Judges with archaeological data and non-biblical texts to describe Israel's emergence in the early Iron Age (ca. 1200 BCE). Numerous models for Israel's origins exist with varying degrees of relationship to the biblical accounts (e.g., conquest, infiltration, peasant's revolt from within the land, pioneer settlement or ruralization into the highlands). The tribal leaders' stories may reflect old traditions of local tribal leaders, but the book's complex editorial history and theological frame story make it impossible to connect the stories with precise historical realities. The book may describe accurately the social reality of early Israel as a segmented, tribal society, but current historians' descriptions of Israel's emergence in Canaan suggest a picture not reflected in either Joshua or Judges.

1:16 Palm City: likely Jericho, six miles north of the Dead Sea. the Amalekites: This is what some ancient Greek manuscripts say, to agree with 1 Samuel 15:6. The Hebrew manuscript says simply "the people," presumably the Judahites.

1:17 completely destroyed it: The Hebrew term ("devote to destruction") indicates the practice of so-called "holy war," killing all living things during the conquest of a city (see Deut 7:1-6). References to this practice appear in other texts from ancient Israel's environment, but the text presents contemporary readers with the troubling image of divinely approved slaughter of men, women, children, and animals that is memorialized in the city's name, Hormah, which means "destruction" (see sidebar, "Holy War and Violence" at Judg 21).

1:19-20 Although the tribes of Judah and Simeon represent the success from which the remainder of the tribes will decline, even these groups experience less than complete success. Judges 1-2 contain several different reasons for the tribes' failures (see 1:19; Judg 2:2-3, 22; 3:2). Here, it is the Canaanites' iron chariots (see Judg 4:13), i.e., chariots made of wood but with iron fittings. The fact that Judah fails even though God is with them and they are not yet said to disobey raises a theological difficulty for the view stated elsewhere that obedience brings success (see Judg 2:6-3:6). Perhaps the text implies that God's plans can change due to human actions and circumstances (see 1 Sam 8).

1:22-36 The accounts of the central and northern tribes show increasing failure due to disobedience, represented by the recurring statement that they were unable to drive out the Canaanites but only forced the Canaanites to work for them (1:28, 30, 33, 35). The descriptions parallel Joshua 17:11-13, where the tribes "could not" drive out the Canaanites, but here they didn't (1:27). See sidebar, "Holy War and Violence" at Judges 21.

1:22-26 Joseph's household: typically refers to the tribes of Manasseh and Ephraim; here it is a general term for all the northern tribes. The story of the taking of Bethel parallels the story of Rahab at Jericho in Joshua 2.

<sup>30</sup>The tribe of Zebulun didn't drive out the people living in Kitron or Nahalol. These Canaanites lived with them but were forced to work for them. <sup>31</sup>The tribe of Asher didn't drive out the people living in Acco, Sidon, Ahlab, Achzib, Helbah, Aphik, or Rehob. <sup>32</sup>The people of Asher settled among the Canaanites in the land because they couldn't drive them out. <sup>33</sup>The tribe of Naphtali didn't drive out the people living in Beth-shemesh or Beth-anath but settled among the Canaanites in the land. The people living in Beth-shemesh and Beth-anath were forced to work for them.

<sup>34</sup>The Amorites pushed the people of Dan back into the highlands because they wouldn't allow them to come down to the plain. <sup>35</sup>The Amorites were determined to live in Har-heres, Aijalon, and Shaalbim, but Joseph's household became strong, and the Amorites were forced to work for them. <sup>36</sup>The border of the Amorites ran from the Akkrabbim pass, from Sela, and upward.

The LORD's messenger condemns

2 The LORD's messenger came up from Gilgal to Bochim and said, "I brought you up from Egypt and led you into the land that I had promised to your ancestors. I said, 'I will never break my covenant with you, <sup>2</sup>and you are not to make a covenant with those who live in this land. You should break down their altars.' But you didn't obey me. What have you done? <sup>3</sup>So now I tell you, I won't drive them out before you, but they'll be a problem<sup>e</sup> for you, and their gods will be a trap for you." <sup>4</sup>When the LORD's messenger spoke these words to all the Israelites, they raised their voices and cried out loud. <sup>5</sup>So they named that place Bochim,<sup>f</sup> and they offered a sacrifice to the LORD there.

Death of Joshua and his generation

<sup>6</sup>When Joshua dismissed the people, the Israelites each went to settle on their own family property in order to take possession of the land. <sup>7</sup>The people served the LORD throughout the rest of Joshua's life and throughout the next generation of elders who outlived him, those who had seen all the great things that the LORD had done for Israel. <sup>8</sup>Joshua, Nun's son and the LORD's servant, died when he was 110 years old. <sup>9</sup>They buried him within the boundaries of his family property in Timnath-heres in the highlands of Ephraim north of Mount Gaash. <sup>10</sup>When that whole generation had passed away, another generation came after them who didn't know the LORD or the things that he had done for Israel.

1:34 The complete failure of the tribe of Dan, which is actually moved by the Canaanites, provides the worst example of the struggles of the northern tribes and the low point of the decline of military success portrayed in 1:1–2:5 (see Judg 17–18 for the continuation of Dan's story).

1:36 It is ironic that the final statement reports Amorite borders rather than Israelite.

2:1–5 The LORD's messenger expresses the divine reaction to the tribes' declining obedience and success. The judgment is on all Israel and is cast in covenant terms: God has fulfilled the covenant, but Israel has not (see Exod 23:31–33; Deut 7:1–6).

2:2–3 The people's disobedience leads to a change in the Lord's operations that will provide the background for the remainder of the book: the people of the land not only will remain, but they will constitute an ongoing problem for Israel.

2:5 Bochim: "weepers" or "weeping"; emphasizes that here, at the beginning of the book, the people still listen to God's warnings.

2:6–3:6 The surprising reference to Joshua (cf. Judg 1:1) marks the beginning of a second introduction to the book, which begins the overarching story of a united, 12-tribe Israel with successive individual leaders, instead of the individual activities of the specific tribes pictured in Judges 1:1–2:5. The flashback to the time before Joshua's death repeats Joshua 24:28–31. This second introduction contains Deuteronomistic language and themes (see intro.), including an emphasis on idolatry and the belief that obedience brings blessing while disobedience brings punishment. This "retribution theology" is challenged in other OT texts, such as Job and Ecclesiastes. The verses describe a cycle of disobedience and punishment (2:11–23) for the era, but the introduction as a whole shows Israel's gradual theological and religious decline. By taking the reader back to the very beginning of the judges' era, it reveals a steady erosion of the ideal faithfulness of Joshua's generation. Whereas Judges 1:1–2:5 portrayed a decline in the tribes' military success across the era, 2:6–3:6 describes a decline in the people's covenant faithfulness.

2:6–10 The faithfulness of Joshua's generation (cf. Judg 1:1; see Josh 24:1–31) is a high point from which the tribal leaders' generations will steadily decline.

2:10 who didn't know the LORD: This doesn't indicate a lack of information but, using covenant language, indicates a refusal to recognize the Lord's authority and to carefully obey all the covenant requirements (cf. Exod 29:45–46).

Israel's pattern of sin and punishment

<sup>11</sup>Then the Israelites did things that the LORD saw as evil. They served the Baals; <sup>12</sup>and they went away from the LORD, their ancestors' God, who had brought them out of the land of Egypt. They went after other gods from among the surrounding peoples, they worshipped them, and they angered the LORD. <sup>13</sup>They went away from the LORD and served Baal and the Astartes. <sup>14</sup>So the LORD became angry with Israel, and he handed them over to raiders who plundered them. He let them be defeated by their enemies around them, so that they were no longer able to stand up to them. <sup>15</sup>Whenever the Israelites marched out, the LORD's power worked against them, just as the LORD had warned them. And they were very distressed.

<sup>18</sup>The LORD was moved by Israel's groaning under those who oppressed and crushed them. So the LORD would raise up leaders for them, and the LORD would be with the leader, and he would rescue Israel from the power of their enemies as long as that leader lived.

<sup>19</sup>But then when the leader died, they would once again act in ways that weren't as good as their ancestors', going after other gods, to serve them and to worship them. They wouldn't drop their bad practices or hardheaded ways. <sup>20</sup>So the LORD became angry with Israel and said, "Because this nation has violated my covenant that I required of their ancestors and hasn't obeyed me, <sup>21</sup>I in turn will no longer drive out before them any of the nations that Joshua left when he died." <sup>22</sup>As a test for Israel, to see whether they would carefully walk in the LORD's ways just as their ancestors had done, <sup>23</sup>the LORD left these nations instead of driving them out immediately or handing them over to Joshua.

Nations remaining in the land

3These are the nations that the LORD left to test all those Israelites who had no firsthand knowledge of the wars of Canaan. <sup>2</sup>They survived only to teach war to the generations of Israelites who had no firsthand knowledge of the earlier wars: <sup>3</sup>the five rulers of the Philistines, and all the Canaanites, Sidonians, and Hivites who lived in the highlands of Lebanon from Mount Baal-hermon to Lebo-hamath. <sup>4</sup>They were to be the test for Israel, to find

2:11-23 The repeating elements of the descending cycle of Israel's life in the land are peace, unfaithfulness, punishment through an enemy, changed hearts, deliverance through a divinely appointed tribal leader, and peace until the death of the leader. After the leader's death, the cycle begins again, often from a "lower" point (see 2:19). This indicates the gradual decline in Israel's social and religious life. These elements provide the outline for many of the individual stories in the book (e.g., Judg 6:1-10).

2:11 did things that the LORD saw as evil: This phrase will appear at the opening of several specific stories, and Judges 2:11-13 define the phrase as meaning unfaithfulness with other gods. Baals: The title ("master") refers to various forms of the storm god whom the Canaanites held responsible for the fertility of crops and animals. So Baal was a popular god among farmers and herders in ancient Syria-Palestine.

2:13 Astartes: Hebrew, "Ashtaroth". This is a plural reference to the Canaanite goddess of fertility and war (known in Mesopotamia as Ishtar), pictured in some nonbiblical texts as one of Baal's mates (along with Anat and Asherah). The connection of Baal and Astarte with fertility made their worship a significant temptation for the Israelite farmers and herders.

2:16-18 leaders: The Hebrew root has the basic meaning "settling disputes" and is often translated in other versions as "judges." However, with the exception of Deborah (Judg

4:4-5), the book uses this term for a military leader who rescues the people from their enemies (which Deborah ends up doing too). God's action to send leaders to deliver the people even in the midst of their disobedience reveals divine mercy and grace.

2:18 the LORD was moved: accounts for this mercy with the Lord's compassion rather than the people's merit.

2:19 weren't as good as their ancestors: Judges 2:11-19 is a descending cycle in which each succeeding generation's faithfulness begins at a lower point than the previous generation's.

2:22 Here, the reason for the people's failure to drive out the Canaanites is due to the Lord's decision to test Israel's faithfulness, rather than to the power of Canaanite military technology (cf. Judg 1:19; 2:2-3; 3:2).

3:1-6 A list of nations who will provide the test of obedience for Israel's life in the land (cf. Judg 2:22). Here the text says God did not let Israel drive out the Canaanites, so that new generations would learn the art of war (3:2). Previous explanations have included the enemy's possession of iron chariots (Judg 1:19), the people's disobedience (Judg 2:2-3), and the Lord's desire to test Israel (Judg 2:22).

3:3 Philistines: The statement that the Philistines were one of the remaining nations conflicts with the description of Judah's capture of the Philistine cities in 1:18, perhaps further indicating that Judges 2:6-3:6 originated independently from Judges 1:1-2:5.

out whether they would obey the LORD's commands, which he had made to their ancestors through Moses. <sup>5</sup>So the Israelites lived among the Canaanites, Hittites, Amorites, Perizzites, Hivites, and Jebusites. <sup>6</sup>But the Israelites intermarried with them and served their gods.

Othniel, the model judge

<sup>7</sup>The Israelites did things that the LORD saw as evil, and they forgot the LORD their God. They served the Baals and the Asherahs. <sup>8</sup><sup>a</sup>The LORD became angry with Israel and gave them over to King Cushan-rishathaim of Aram-naharaim. The Israelites served Cushan-rishathaim eight years. <sup>9</sup>But then they cried out to the LORD. So the LORD raised up a deliverer for the Israelites, Othniel, Kenaz's son, Caleb's younger brother, who rescued them. <sup>10</sup>The LORD's spirit was in Othniel, and he led Israel. When he marched out for war, the LORD handed over Aram's King Cushan-rishathaim. Othniel overpowered Cushan-rishathaim, <sup>11</sup>and the land was peaceful for forty years, until Othniel, Kenaz's son, died.

Ehud

<sup>12</sup>The Israelites again did things that the LORD saw as evil, and the LORD put Moab's King Eglon in power over them, because they did these things that the LORD saw as evil. <sup>13</sup>He convinced the Ammonites and Amalekites to join him, defeated Israel, and took possession of Palm City. <sup>14</sup>So the Israelites served Moab's King Eglon eighteen years.

3:5 Compare with the seven nations in the land listed in Deuteronomy 7:1. Hittites: peoples descending from kingdoms in Anatolia. Amorites: a general term for "westerners" often connected with Canaanites in OT texts. Perizzites: the precise name remains unclear, but it is commonly linked with the Canaanites (see Gen 13:7). Hivites: groups originating from southeast Asia Minor. Jebusites: the inhabitants of Jerusalem (previously known as Jebus) in the pre-Israelite era.

3:6 intermarried: The Deuteronomistic History (Joshua to Kings) frequently links intermarriage with idolatry, in contrast to the neutral or even positive stance of some other biblical books (see Exod 2:16-22, Num 12:1-16, and the marriages of the main characters in Ruth and Esther).

3:7-5:31 The accounts of Othniel, Ehud, and Deborah begin the stories of the major leaders that make up the center of the book (Judg 3:7-16:31; see chart, "Overview of the Tribal Leaders" at Judg 9). Through the book of Judges, there is a steady decline in military success and religious faithfulness, and Othniel, Ehud, and Deborah are the highest point. The stories of Gideon and Abimelech (Judg 6-9) introduce elements of failure and unfaithfulness through personal revenge and selfish ambition, and the stories of Jephthah and Samson (Judg 10-16) end in failure and tragedy. The stories examine and evaluate negatively a variety of kinds of leadership, including kings (see Judg 8:22-23; 9:7-15), an exploration perhaps especially relevant to the book's exilic audience wrestling with the question of how to construct a future without a king. The book as a whole explores the possibilities and problems of different forms of leadership and community and to what extent they might produce a new future characterized by religious faithfulness and moral uprightness.

3:7-11 As the first of the major tribal leaders' stories, the narrative includes all of the elements of the recurring pattern of disobedience, oppression, and deliverance (see Judg 2:11-19). The story shows Othniel as an ideal leader who gets an immediately positive divine response and is completely successful in uniting and delivering Israel. His story provides the model from which all the later leaders steadily decline.

3:7 Baals... Asherahs: See notes on Judges 2:11, 13. Asherahs may refer to a fertility goddess associated with Yahweh and Baal in other ancient texts or to a type of pole devoted to the goddess (see Judg 6:26).

3:8 Cushan-rishathaim: "Cushan of the Double Wickedness," perhaps to emphasize the power of the enemy and so the greater power of God. Aram-naharaim: "Aram between the Two Rivers." The name suggests a Syrian territory between the Tigris and Euphrates rivers, but there was no such historical location. Maybe the name is a wordplay on the king's name (double wickedness, double rivers).

3:9 Othniel, Kenaz's son, Caleb's younger brother: See Judges 1:13.

3:10 The LORD's spirit in Judges functions as a divine force that makes one capable of extraordinary acts. When it comes upon a leader, it serves as a type of guarantee of victory through God's help. But the only other tribal leaders who clearly receive the spirit (Gideon, Jephthah, Samson) are those associated with elements of failure and disobedience in Israel's downward slide (see Judg 6:34; 11:29; 13:25; 14:6, 19; 15:14). These associations may reflect the audience's struggle over the question of proper leadership for the future by emphasizing the negative aspects of spirit-led types of leadership. In that case, the pattern provides an implicit critique of nonroyal leaders.

3:12-30 The story of Ehud sits inside the recurring cycle of the overarching frame story (3:12-15), but by contrast is full of colorful elements that are humorous, ironic, and even grotesque (see 3:22-24). It makes fun of the enemy who oppresses God's people.

3:12-13 Eglon: meaning "young bull" or "fat calf," so the king's obesity (Judg 3:17, 21-22) not only adds to the story's mocking tone but also casts him as a sacrificial animal for slaughter.

3:13 Ammon was a kingdom just north of Moab and east of Israel across the Jordan River. The Amalekites are associated with Edom in Genesis 36:16, but are often presented in the OT as a roaming group. Palm City: probably Jericho (cf. Judg 1:16).

3:14 In keeping with Israel's worsening situation, the years of enemy oppression are significantly more than in the previous story (cf. Judg 3:8).

<sup>15</sup>Then the Israelites cried out to the LORD. So the LORD raised up a deliverer for them, Ehud, Gera's son, a Benjaminite, who was left-handed. The Israelites sent him to take their tribute payment to Moab's King Eglon. <sup>16</sup>Now Ehud made for himself a double-edged sword that was about a foot and a half long, and he strapped it on his right thigh under his clothes. <sup>17</sup>Then he presented the tribute payment to Moab's King Eglon, who was a very fat man. <sup>18</sup>When he had finished delivering the tribute payment, Ehud sent on their way the people who had carried it. <sup>19</sup>But he himself turned back at the carved stones near Gilgal, and he said, "I have a secret message for you, King."

So Eglon said, "Hush!" and all his attendants went out of his presence. <sup>20</sup>Ehud approached him while he was sitting alone in his cool second-story room, and he said, "I have a message from God for you." At that, Eglon got up from his throne. <sup>21</sup>Ehud reached with his left hand and grabbed the sword from his right thigh. He stabbed it into Eglon's stomach, <sup>22</sup>and even the handle went in after the blade. Since he did not pull the sword out of his stomach, the fat closed over the blade, and his guts spilled out.<sup>1</sup> <sup>23</sup>Ehud slipped out to the porch, and closed and locked the doors of the second-story room behind him.

<sup>24</sup>After Ehud had slipped out, the king's servants came and found that the room's doors were locked. So they thought, He must be relieving himself in the cool chamber. <sup>25</sup>They waited so long that they were embarrassed, but he never opened the doors of the room. Then they used the key to open them, and there was their master lying dead on the ground!

<sup>26</sup>Ehud had gotten away while they were waiting and had passed the carved stones and escaped to Seirah. <sup>27</sup>When he arrived, he blew the ram's horn in the Ephraim highlands. So the Israelites went down from the highlands with Ehud leading them. <sup>28</sup>He told them, "Follow me, for the LORD has handed over your enemies the Moabites." So they followed him, and they took control of the crossing points of the Jordan in the direction of Moab, allowing no one to cross. <sup>29</sup>This time, they defeated the Moabites, about ten thousand big and strong men, and no one escaped. <sup>30</sup>Moab was brought down by the power of Israel on that day, and there was peace in the land for eighty years.

3:21-25 The way Ehud kills King Eglon and the reaction of the king's servants features humorous and mocking elements, as well as sexual overtones that give Eglon certain feminine qualities.

Deborah, Barak, and Jael

4 After Ehud had died, the Israelites again did things that the LORD saw as evil. <sup>2</sup>So the LORD gave them over to King Jabin of Canaan, who reigned in Hazor. The commander of his army was Sisera, and he was stationed in Harosheth-ha-goiim. <sup>3</sup>The Israelites cried out to the LORD because Sisera<sup>j</sup> had nine hundred iron chariots and had oppressed the Israelites cruelly for twenty years.

<sup>9</sup>Deborah answered, "I'll definitely go with you. However, the path you're taking won't bring honor to you, because the LORD will hand over Sisera to a woman." Then Deborah got up and went with Barak to Kedesh. <sup>10</sup>He summoned Zebulun and Naphtali to Kedesh, and ten thousand men marched out behind him. Deborah marched out with him too.

<sup>11</sup>Now Heber the Kenite had moved away from the other Kenites, the descendants of Hobab, Moses' father-in-law, and had settled as far away as Elon-bezaananim, which is near Kedesh.

<sup>12</sup>When it was reported to Sisera that Barak, Abinoam's son, had marched up to Mount Tabor, <sup>13</sup>Sisera summoned all of his nine hundred iron chariots and all of the soldiers who were with him from Harosheth-ha-goiim to the Kishon River. <sup>14</sup>Then Deborah said to Barak, mentioned among the longer narratives (see also Judg 10:1-5; 12:8-15). Deborah's Song also mentions him (Judg 5:6). Like the left-handed Ehud, Shamgar uses unconventional and unexpected means (an animal prod) to defeat the enemy.

4:1-5:31 The story of Deborah and Barak's campaign against a Canaanite enemy in the north concludes the first section of stories in which the tribal leaders win victories and are faithful to God. The account of these events appears in two versions: a prose story in Judges 4 and a likely older poem, "Deborah's Song," in Judges 5. Although there are differences between the two versions, they share the central message that Israel defeated a superior enemy because the Lord fought for Israel. This message is emphasized by the image of God as the divine warrior (4:15; 5:19-22) and parallels with the story of God's deliverance of Israel at the sea in Exodus 14 (4:15). Even so, the emphasis on the need for the people to unite and obey the Lord's commands (4:6-10; 5:11b-18) suggests that victory comes when divine power and human agency cooperate. The events unfold within the cycle of sin, oppression, and deliverance that constitutes the book's overarching story (see 4:1-3; cf. Judg 2:11-19; 5:31b). The story revolves around the attack of the Canaanite king Jabin (cf. Josh 11:1), on the northern territory of Naphtali and Zebulun, but focuses on the defeat and death of his general, Sisera. Deborah holds the prominent leadership position in the story, and the narrative turns on the unexpected actions of the woman Jael, whose cunning leads to Sisera's death (see sidebar, "Women, Gender, and Violence in Judges" at Judg 11). The NT writer of Hebrews praises Barak as a leader and doesn't mention Deborah or Jael (Heb 11:32) even though Barak seems to recognize Deborah as the Lord's appointed leader who must personally lead the people.

4:1-24 The account of the defeat of King Jabin of Canaan and his general, Sisera.

4:2 Jabin is called "King of Hazor" in Joshua 11:1. Hazor: a significant city just north of the Sea of Galilee. Harosheth-ha-goiim: "Harosheth of the Nations" (i.e., non-Israelites).

4:3 Sisera: The Hebrew is just "he" and could refer to Jabin instead. iron chariots: the reason Judah and Benjamin had been defeated by the inhabitants of the plain (Judg 1:19). twenty years: In keeping with Israel's worsening situation, the years of enemy oppression are longer than in the previous story (cf. Judg 3:14).

4:4-5 Deborah is Israel's leader who also provides divine responses to questions (prophet). Deborah is one of only four women identified as prophets in the OT (see Exod 15:20; 2 Kgs 22:14; Neh 6:14). wife of Lappidoth can be translated "woman of torches" instead; this name does not appear anywhere else in the OT. Deborah is the only tribal leader in Judges who actually settle[s] disputes. The others, like Barak, function as tribal military leaders (Judg 4:10), but Barak insists that Deborah share this role too (Judg 4:8). The figure of Deborah offers a positive contrast to more male-oriented depictions of women in the book (cf. Judg 11:34-40; 19:1-30; see sidebar, "Women, Gender, and Violence in Judges" at Judg 11).

4:9 hand over . . . woman: The reader naturally expects the woman in question to be Deborah, but she turns out to be Jael (Judg 4:17-22).

4:10 Zebulun and Naphtali: tribes in the Galilee area. Compare with the six tribes mentioned in Judges 5:14-18.

4:11 See Judges 1:16, where other Kenites settled in the south with Judah.

“Get up! This is the day that the LORD has handed Sisera over to you. Hasn’t the LORD gone out before you?” So Barak went down from Mount Tabor with ten thousand men behind him. <sup>15</sup>The LORD threw Sisera and all the chariots and army into a panic<sup>d</sup> before Barak; Sisera himself got down from his chariot and fled on foot. <sup>16</sup>Barak pursued the chariots and the army all the way back to Harosheth-ha-goiim, killing Sisera’s entire army with the sword. No one survived.

<sup>17</sup>Meanwhile, Sisera had fled on foot to the tent of Jael, the wife of Heber the Kenite, because there was peace between Hazor’s King Jabin and the family of Heber the Kenite. <sup>18</sup>Jael went out to meet Sisera and said to him, “Come in, sir, come in here. Don’t be afraid.” So he went with her into the tent, and she hid him under a blanket.

<sup>19</sup>Sisera said to her, “Please give me a little water to drink. I’m thirsty.” So she opened a jug of milk, gave him a drink, and hid him again. <sup>20</sup>Then he said to her, “Stand at the entrance to the tent. That way, if someone comes and asks you, ‘Is there a man here?’ you can say, ‘No.’”

<sup>21</sup>But Jael, Heber’s wife, picked up a tent stake and a hammer. While Sisera was sound asleep from exhaustion, she tiptoed to him. She drove the stake through his head and down into the ground, and he died. <sup>22</sup>Just then, Barak arrived after chasing Sisera. Jael went out to meet him and said, “Come and I’ll show you the man you’re after.” So he went in with her, and there was Sisera, lying dead, with the stake through his head.

<sup>23</sup>So on that day God brought down Canaan’s King Jabin before the Israelites. <sup>24</sup>And the power of the Israelites grew greater and greater over Canaan’s King Jabin until they defeated him completely.

Deborah’s song

5 At that time, Deborah and Barak, Abinoam’s son, sang:

when people willingly offer themselves—bless the LORD!

I, to the LORD, I will sing.
I will make music to the LORD, Israel’s God.

<sup>4</sup>LORD, when you set out from Seir, when you marched out from Edom’s fields, the land shook,
the sky poured down,
the clouds poured down water.

before the LORD, the one from Sinai, before the LORD, the God of Israel.

<sup>6</sup>In the days of Shamgar, Anath’s son,
in the days of Jael, caravans ceased.
Those traveling by road kept to the backroads.

until you,<sup>m</sup> Deborah, arose, until you arose as a mother in Israel.

4:15 The Hebrew text includes before the edge of the sword, but it has been omitted because it is probably an accidental doubling of the same phrase in Judges 4:16.
4:17–22 In the history of interpretations of this story, Jael has been variously seen as faithful and heroic or lying and sinful. Her Kenite group wasn’t an ally of either the Israelites or Canaanites in the conflict. She is another trickster (see note on Judg 3:15) who uses the traditional practice of hospitality to kill Sisera.
5:1–31 “Deborah’s Song” has elements of traditional oral literature, with old-fashioned Hebrew words and sentence structure, and may be one of the oldest compositions in the OT. It takes the well-known ancient Near Eastern form of the “victory hymn” (cf. Exod 15), and offers a poetic testimony to the rulers of the earth (5:3) about the Lord’s rescue of Israel as presented in Judges 4.

5:4–5 OT texts often associate earthquakes and storms with the appearance of the Lord’s presence (e.g. Exod 19:16–19).
5:7 you: The Hebrew text says “I,” presenting Deborah both as speaker (Judg 5:1) and as the addressed. Hebrew poetry often changes voices suddenly for dramatic effect.

Then the LORD's people marched down to the city gates.

Arise, Barak! Capture your prisoners, Abinoam's son!"

5:8 then war came to the city gates is a reasonable guess for translating an obscure Hebrew phrase.

5:10 saddle blankets: has also been translated "judges clothes," "Midian," or "clattering sounds."

5:11 instruments: The Hebrew word occurs only here in the OT and has sometimes been translated "archers" or "singers."

5:14-18 Compare with the reference to the participation of only two tribes in Judges 4:10.

5:15-17 The text may indicate that the tribes of Reuben, Gad, Dan, and Asher refused to participate (see also Meroz in Judg 5:23), but the Hebrew is unclear.

5:20-21 The Lord is here presented as the divine warrior who uses stars and flash floods to defeat Israel's enemies. Using elements of nature as divine weapons is common in some of the divine warrior traditions in the OT (e.g., Ps 18:12-19; Ps 68:7-10). Such violent language (cf. Judg 5:31) stands in tension with other biblical perspectives (e.g., Lev 19:34; Isa 2:1-11; Matt 5:38-48).

- 22 Then the horses' hooves pounded with the galloping, galloping of their stallions.
- 23 "Curse Meroz," says the LORD's messenger,
"curse its inhabitants bitterly, because they didn't come to the LORD's aid, to the LORD's aid against the warriors."
- 24 May Jael be blessed above all women; may the wife of Heber the Kenite be blessed above all tent-dwelling women.
- 25 He asked for water, and she provided milk;
she presented him cream in a majestic bowl.
- 26 She reached out her hand for the stake, her strong hand for the worker's hammer.
She struck Sisera;
she crushed his head;
she shattered and pierced his skull.
- 27 At her feet he sank, fell, and lay flat;
at her feet he sank, he fell;
where he sank, there he fell—dead.
- 28 Through the window she watched,
Sisera's mother looked longingly<sup>4</sup> through the lattice.
"Why is his chariot taking so long to come?
Why are the hoofbeats of his chariot horses delayed?"
- 29 Her wisest attendants answer;
indeed, she replies to herself:
- 30 "Wouldn't they be finding and dividing the loot?
A girl or two for each warrior;
loot of colored cloths for Sisera;
loot of colored, embroidered cloths;
two colored, embroidered cloths as loot for every neck."
- 31 May all your enemies perish like this, LORD!
But may your allies be like the sun, rising in its strength.
- And the land was peaceful for forty years.

Songs in Stories Biblical stories sometimes include whole songs or poems: e.g. the Song of the Sea (Exod 15), the Song and Blessing of Moses (Deut 32, 33), the Song of Deborah (Judg 5), Hannah's Song (1 Sam 2), David's Thanksgiving and Last Words (2 Sam 22, 23), the Levites' medley of psalms (1 Chron 16:8-36), Hezekiah's Psalm (Isa 38), Daniel's Praise (Dan 2:20-23), Mary's Song of Praise (Luke 1:46-55), and Zechariah's Blessing (Luke 1:67-79). These songs show their speakers as devout worshippers of God. They emphasize God's control over the events narrated in the surrounding stories. Songs of victory tend to appear in the mouths of women characters (Miriam, Deborah, Hannah, Mary) and may reflect a typical women's literary form in ancient Israel (see 1 Sam 18:6-9). So Deborah's Song not only emphasizes the role of Deborah and Jael, like the story in Judges 4, but also expresses ancient women's experiences, both positive ("a mother in Israel," 5:7) and negative ("a girl or two for each warrior," 5:30).

5:28-30 The scene of a woman looking out of a window is known from the art and literature of the ancient Near East and elsewhere in the OT (e.g., 2 Sam 6:16; 2 Kgs 9:30). It is used here in an ironic way: what Sisera's mother imagines him doing to other women has instead been done to him by a woman. The text reflects the terrible experience of the kidnapping and raping of women in times of war (see Judg 21:15-24).

5:28 looked longingly follows the Greek translation of the OT (LXX) for a better parallel to she watched than the Hebrew text, which says, "she called" or "she cried."

5:30 girl: Hebrew "womb" ("a womb or two for each warrior"), a sexually explicit and crude statement.

Oppression by the Midianites

6 The Israelites did things that the LORD saw as evil, and the LORD handed them over to the Midianites for seven years. 2 The power of the Midianites prevailed over Israel, and because of the Midianites, the Israelites used crevices and caves in the mountains as hidden strongholds. 3 Whenever the Israelites planted seeds, the Midianites, Amalekites, and other easterners would invade. 4 They would set up camp against the Israelites and destroy the land's crops as far as Gaza, leaving nothing to keep Israel alive, not even sheep, oxen, or donkeys. 5 They would invade with their herds and tents, coming like a swarm of locusts, so that no one could count them or their camels. They came into the land to destroy it. 6 So Israel became very weak on account of Midian, and the Israelites cried out to the LORD.

7 This time when the Israelites cried out to the LORD because of Midian, 8 the LORD sent them a prophet, who said to them, "The LORD, Israel's God, proclaims: I myself brought you up from Egypt, and I led you out of the house of slavery. 9 I delivered you from the power of the Egyptians and from the power of all your oppressors. I drove them out before you and gave you their land. 10 I told you, 'I am the LORD your God; you must not worship the gods of the Amorites, in whose land you are living.' But you have not obeyed me."

Gideon's commissioning

11 Then the LORD's messenger came and sat under the oak at Ophrah that belonged to Joash the Abiezrite. His son Gideon was threshing wheat in a winepress to hide it from the Midianites. 12 The LORD's messenger appeared to him and said, "The LORD is with you, mighty warrior!"

13 But Gideon replied to him, "With all due respect, my Lord, if the LORD is with us, why has all this happened to us? Where are all his amazing works that our ancestors recounted to us, saying, 'Didn't the LORD bring us up from Egypt?' But now the LORD has abandoned us and allowed Midian to overpower us."

14 Then the LORD turned to him and said, "You have strength, so go and rescue Israel from the power of Midian. Am I not personally sending you?"

15 But again Gideon said to him, "With all due respect, my Lord, how can I rescue Israel? My clan is the weakest in Manasseh, and I'm the youngest in my household."

6:1–9:57 The stories of Gideon and his son Abimelech form the second section of Israel's downward slide into disobedience, failure, and violence in the tribal leaders' era. The story describes the people's wrongdoing in more detail (6:10; 8:24–27, 33), introducing elements of idolatry, selfish ambition, and personal vengeance in the lives of the leaders themselves. Gideon is presented as a conflicted character who is often fearful, reluctant, and doubtful. Abimelech accomplishes nearly the exact opposite of the leaders who have gone before him by creating conflict and violence among his own people by making a grab for royal power. These two stories criticize royal leadership sharply but don't totally reject it (see the note on Judg 3:10; cf. Judg 11:4–40, 29; 16:28–31 for possible critiques of spirit-led, nonroyal leadership).

6:1–8:35 The story of Gideon's defeat of the Midianites and their allies contains a number of parallels with other biblical persons and events: the call of Moses (Exod 3–4), the exodus from Egypt (Exod 14), Israel's idolatry with the gold calf (Exod 32), God's visit to Abraham and Sarah (Gen 18), and Elijah's contest with the prophets of Baal (1 Kgs 18:20–40). Yet these parallels cast Gideon in a negative light, almost as an antihero whose actions lead Israel further away from faithfulness to the Lord. The end of his story (8:22–35) is the book's first sustained exploration of the idea of rule by kings (see also Judg 9:7–15). As with other types of leadership examined in the book (e.g., spirit-led leadership; see Judg 11:4–40, 29; 16:28–31), it presents both positive and negative aspects of royal rule, perhaps for the reflections of the Judean exiles about what kind of leadership God wanted for their future.

6:1–10 The passage begins with the familiar story line that describes the people's sin and resulting oppression by an enemy (see Judg 2:11–19) who destroys Israel's food supplies (crops and animals). The conflict involves Manasseh and the Galilean tribes against groups of raiders from the eastern desert region. Unlike the normal pattern up to this point, however, God does not respond immediately and positively to Israel's cry but first sends a prophet to condemn the people for their lack of loyalty to the Lord (6:7–10; cf. Judg 2:1–5). Like Judges 2:11–19, these verses resemble the language of Deuteronomy.

6:1 Midianites: from the desert region in northwestern Arabia. They often appear as Israel's enemies in the OT but also as closely related to Moses by family and marriage (Num 25: 31).

6:11–27 The call of Gideon contains a number of similarities to the call of Moses (Exod 3–4), which give the reader high expectations for this character. But some of the similarities contain satirical and ironic elements that already raise questions about Gideon. Overall, Gideon is reluctant to believe and self-centered in his concerns.

6:11–12 The messenger's address to Gideon as mighty warrior is ironic since we first meet him while he is hiding from the enemy. This tension between fear and courage will persist throughout Gideon's story (e.g., Judg 8:18–21). Abiezrite: one of the clans in the tribe of Manasseh (cf. Josh 17:2).

6:13 Although the messenger's statement had been singular (you), Gideon speaks instead of the whole people (us) and of the Lord's lack of action.

<sup>17</sup>Then Gideon said to him, "If I've gained your approval, please show me a sign that it's really you speaking with me. <sup>18</sup>Don't leave here until I return, bring out my offering, and set it in front of you."

The Lord replied, "I'll stay until you return."

<sup>19</sup>So Gideon went and prepared a young goat and used an ephah<sup>v</sup> of flour for unleavened bread. He put the meat in a basket and the broth in a pot and brought them out to him under the oak and presented them. <sup>20</sup>Then God's messenger said to him, "Take the meat and the unleavened bread and set them on this rock, then pour out the broth." And he did so. <sup>21</sup>The LORD's messenger reached out the tip of the staff that was in his hand and touched the meat and the unleavened bread. Fire came up from the rock and devoured the meat and the unleavened bread; and the LORD's messenger vanished before his eyes. <sup>22</sup>Then Gideon realized that it had been the LORD's messenger. Gideon exclaimed, "Oh no, LORD God! I have seen the LORD's messenger face-to-face!"

<sup>24</sup>So Gideon built an altar there to the LORD and called it "The LORD makes peace." It still stands today in Ophrah of the Abiezrites.

<sup>25</sup>That night the LORD said to him, "Take your father's bull and a second bull seven years old. Break down your father's altar to Baal and cut down the Asherah<sup>w</sup> that is beside it. <sup>26</sup>Build an altar to the LORD your God in the proper way on top of this high ground. Then take the second bull and offer it as an entirely burned offering with the wood of the Asherah that you cut down." <sup>27</sup>So Gideon took ten of his servants and did just as the LORD had told him. But because he was too afraid of his household and the townspeople to do it during the day, he did it at night.

<sup>28</sup>When the townspeople got up early in the morning, there was the altar to Baal broken down, with the asherah image that had been beside it cut down, and the second bull offered on the newly built altar! <sup>29</sup>They asked each other, "Who did this?" They searched and investigated, and finally they concluded, "Gideon, Joash's son, did this!" <sup>30</sup>The townspeople said to Joash, "Bring out your son for execution because he tore down the altar to Baal and cut down the Asherah that was beside it."

<sup>31</sup>But Joash replied to all who were lined up against him, "Will you make Baal's complaint for him? Will you come to his rescue? Anyone who argues for him will be killed before morning. If he is a god, let him argue for himself, because it was his altar that was torn down."

Gideon seeks a sign

<sup>33</sup>Some time later, all the Midianites, Amalekites, and other easterners joined together, came over, and set up camp in the Jezreel Valley. <sup>34</sup>Then the LORD's spirit came over Gideon, and he sounded the horn and summoned the Abiezrites to follow him. <sup>35</sup>He sent messengers

6:16 I'm with you: Compare with the divine assurance at Moses's call in Exodus 3:12.
6:17 Gideon has been assured of the Lord's presence and his own victory (Judg 6:16), but he asks for a sign to verify the message. This act furthers the reader's impression of Gideon's flaws as a leader, but the Lord provides a sign to reassure him anyway (Judg 6:19-24). Other biblical stories also describe divine-fire burning offerings to show God's approval (Lev 9:24; 1 Kgs 18:38; 1 Chron 21:26; 2 Chron 7:1).
6:25-27 Gideon's first task is to destroy his father's altar to Baal. The story displays a further stage in Israel's religious decline, as the general statements about the people's unfaithfulness in previous stories now give way to showing a site for the worship of other gods in Israel. In an ironic contrast to Elijah in 1 Kings 18:20-40, Gideon is too afraid to act alone or by day.

6:25 Asherah: See note on Judges 3:7.
6:28-35 The story of Gideon's destruction of the Baal altar uses a different name for Gideon: Jerubbaal, "let Baal argue" (6:32). In the present story, the name Jerubbaal typically occurs in references connecting Gideon to his family's home (e.g., Judg 6:32; 8:29; 9:16) and emerges from his destruction of its altar to Baal.
6:33 Jezreel Valley: a fertile valley and important travel route located between Galilee and Samaria.
6:34 The Lord's spirit came over Gideon: See Judges 3:10 and note.
6:35 Asher, Zebulun, and Naphtali: three northern tribes in the Galilee area.

into all of Manasseh, and they were also summoned to follow him. Then he sent messengers into Asher, Zebulun, and Naphtali too, and they marched up to meet them.

<sup>36</sup>But then Gideon said to God, "To see if you really intend to rescue Israel through me as you have declared, <sup>37</sup>I'm now putting a wool fleece on the threshing floor. If there is dew only on the fleece but all the ground is dry, then I'll know that you are going to rescue Israel through me, as you have declared." <sup>38</sup>And that is what happened. When he got up early the next morning and squeezed the fleece, he wrung out enough dew from the fleece to fill a bowl with water.

<sup>39</sup>Then Gideon said to God, "Don't be angry with me, but let me speak just one more time. Please let me make just one more test with the fleece: now let only the fleece be dry and let dew be on all the ground." <sup>40</sup>And God did so that night. Only the fleece was dry, but there was dew on all the ground.

Battle with Midian

7Then Jerubbaal, that is, Gideon, and all of the people with him rose early and set up camp beside the Harod spring; Midian's camp was north of theirs, in the valley by the Moreh hill. <sup>2</sup>The LORD said to Gideon: "You have too many people on your side. If I were to hand Midian over to them, the Israelites might claim credit for themselves rather than for me, thinking, We saved ourselves. <sup>3</sup>So now, announce in the people's hearing, 'Anyone who is afraid or unsteady may return home from Gideon's mountain.'"<sup>a</sup> At this, twenty-two thousand people went home, and ten thousand were left.

<sup>4</sup>The LORD said to Gideon, "There are still too many people. Take them down to the water, and I will weed them out for you there. Whenever I tell you, 'This one will go with you,' he should go with you; but whenever I tell you, 'This one won't go with you,' he should not go." <sup>5</sup>So he took the people down to the water. And the LORD said to Gideon, "Set aside those who lap the water with their tongues, as a dog laps, from those who bend down on their knees to drink." <sup>6</sup>The number of men who lapped was three hundred, and all the rest of the people bent down on their knees to drink water, with their hands to their mouths. <sup>7</sup>Then the LORD said to Gideon, "With the three hundred men who lapped I will rescue you and hand over the Midianites to you. Let everyone else go home." <sup>8</sup>So the people gathered their supplies and trumpets,<sup>a</sup> and Gideon sent all the Israelites home, but kept the three hundred.

Now Midian's camp was below Gideon in the valley. <sup>9</sup>That night the LORD said to him, "Get up and attack the camp, because I've handed it over to you." <sup>10</sup>But if you're afraid to attack, go down to the camp with your servant Purah, <sup>11</sup>and you'll hear what they are saying. May you then get the courage to attack the camp." So he went down with his servant Purah to the outpost of the armies that were in the camp. <sup>12</sup>The Midianites, Amalekites, and other easterners were spread across the valley like a swarm of locusts; their camels were too many to count, like the grains of sand on the seashore.

6:36-40 The spirit had already come upon Gideon (Judg 6:34), an event that indicates in this book that victory is certain (see Othniel in Judg 3:10). Nevertheless, he asks for an additional sign that he will be successful. While sometimes read as a positive example of the need to seek God's will, the narrative's overall context presents this as another example of Gideon's lack of faith. The Hebrew in this text switches from the use of the personal divine name, Yahweh ("the LORD"), in the preceding verses to the general term for God, perhaps indicating distance between Gideon and Yahweh and hinting at divine disapproval.

7:1-25 The battle with Midian and its allies.

7:1-8 God reduces Gideon's forces so that the Israelites will not be tempted to claim credit for themselves (7:2). That concern anticipates the self-centeredness Gideon will show later in the story (Judg 8:4-28).

7:1 Jerubbaal: See Judges 6:32. The scene is the Jezreel Valley (see note on Judg 6:33).

7:2-3 The Lord provides Gideon with the reason for reducing his troops. The reduction begins by letting those who are afraid return home, leaving ten thousand. See the similar allowance in Deuteronomy 20:8. A unique Hebrew word leads some to emend and translate from Gideon's mountain as "from Mount Gilead" or "Gideon sifted them."

7:4-8 lap the water with their tongues: It's not clear whether the Lord chooses the more- or less-prepared soldiers, but the final number is reduced to three hundred.

7:8 It's not clear whether the people or the soldiers who lapped water are the subject of the verb.

7:9-14 An enemy soldier's dream foreshadows Gideon's victory.

7:10-11 went down with his servant: subtly indicates that Gideon remains afraid to attack (see 7:10), even after multiple divine assurances.

7:13 loaf of barley bread: represents Israel's agricultural society.

"Get this! I had a dream that a loaf of barley bread was rolling into the Midianite camp. It came to a tent and hit it, and the tent collapsed. In fact, it rolled the tent over upside down, so it fell flat."

<sup>14</sup>His friend replied, "Can this be anything other than the sword of the Israelite Gideon, Joash's son? God has handed over Midian and its entire camp to him!"

<sup>15</sup>When Gideon heard the telling of the dream and its meaning, he worshipped. Then he returned to the Israelite camp and said, "Get up! The LORD has handed over the Midianite camp to you." <sup>16</sup>He divided the three hundred men into three units and equipped every man with a trumpet and an empty jar, with a torch inside each jar. <sup>17</sup>"Now watch me," he ordered them, "and do what I do. When I get to the outpost of the camp, do just what I do. <sup>18</sup>When I blow the trumpet, along with all who are with me, then you blow the trumpets, all of you surrounding the whole camp. And then shout, 'For the LORD and for Gideon!'"

<sup>19</sup>Gideon and one hundred of his men moved to the outpost of the camp at the middle watch of the night, when they had just changed the guards. Then they blew the trumpets and smashed the jars that were in their hands. <sup>20</sup>So the three units blew their trumpets and broke their jars, holding the torches with their left hands and blowing the trumpets in their right hands. And they called out, "A sword for the LORD and for Gideon!" <sup>21</sup>Each man stood fast in his position around the camp, and the entire camp took off running, shouting, and fleeing. <sup>22</sup>When the three hundred trumpets sounded, the LORD turned the swords of fellow soldiers against each other throughout the whole camp. The camp fled as far as Beth-shittah toward Zererah, to the border of Abel-meholah, beside Tabbath.

<sup>23</sup>The Israelites from Naphtali, Asher, and all of Manasseh were called out, and they chased after the Midianites. <sup>24</sup>Then Gideon sent messengers into all of the Ephraim highlands, saying, "Go down to meet the Midianites and take control of the Jordan's waters as far as Beth-barah." So all the Ephraimite men were called out, and they took control of the Jordan's waters as far as Beth-barah. <sup>25</sup>They also captured two Midianite officers, Oreb and Zeeb. They killed Oreb at Oreb's Rock, and killed Zeeb at Zeeb's Winepress. Then they went on chasing the Midianites, and they brought the heads of Oreb and Zeeb to Gideon on the other side of the Jordan.

8 Then the Ephraimites said to him, "Why did you offend us this way by not calling us when you went to fight the Midianites?" And they argued with him fiercely.

<sup>2</sup>But he said to them, "What have I done now, compared to you? Aren't Ephraim's leftovers better than Abiezer's main harvest? <sup>3</sup>God handed you the Midianite officers Oreb and Zeeb. What have I been able to do compared to you?" When he said this, their anger against him passed.

<sup>4</sup>Then Gideon came to the Jordan. As he and the three hundred men with him crossed over, they were exhausted but still giving chase. <sup>5</sup>So he said to the people of Succoth, "Please give some loaves of bread to those who are on foot, because they're exhausted, but I'm chasing Zebah and Zalmunna, the kings of Midian."

<sup>6</sup>But the officials of Succoth replied, "Haven't you already almost gotten your hands on Zebah and Zalmunna? Why should we give food to your army now?"

7:14 Once again, a non-Israelite makes a correct theological confession about the power of Israel's God (cf. Adonibezek in Judg 1:7).

7:15-25 The account of the battle features ritual behavior and trickery and banditry to achieve surprise.

7:18 Gideon's instruction for the people to shout and for Gideon is ironic in light of the Lord's previous concern that the people would claim credit for themselves (see Judg 7:2). Although this story parallels that of Joshua at Jericho, Joshua includes no such self-reference in his instructions (see Josh 6:16).

7:22-23 The victory comes as the Lord turns the Midianites against each other in panic—a common feature of the divine warrior fighting for Israel (cf. Judg 4:15). The Midianites flee into the Transjordan, and Gideon musters the tribes he had earlier alerted (see Judg 6:35) to pursue them.

7:24 Gideon only now asks the Ephraimites to help (cf. Judg 6:35), about which they complain in Judges 8:1.

8:1-3 Gideon addresses the Ephraimites' anger over not being called out earlier, most probably so that they could share fully in the victory spoils.

8:4-21 Crossing the Jordan marks an unexpected shift in Gideon's story. According to the typical pattern in Judges, Gideon's story should have ended in Judges 8:1-3 after his defeat of Midian and liberation of Israel. The Lord doesn't command the campaign to capture the two kings of Midian, and it has no clear relationship to Gideon's original commission to deliver Israel (Judg 6:11-18). Verses 18-19 ultimately reveal Gideon's motive to be personal vengeance.

8:5 Succoth is a town east of the Jordan near Shechem, but the precise location is debated (perhaps Tell Deir Alla).

8:6 gotten your hands on: The officials ask Gideon if he

7“Just for that,” Gideon said, “when the LORD has handed over Zebah and Zalmunna to me, I’m going to beat your skin with desert thorns and briars!”<sup>a</sup> From there he went up to Penuel and made the same request. And the people of Penuel responded in the same way the people of Succoth had.<sup>b</sup> So he also told the people of Penuel, “When I return in victory,<sup>c</sup> I’ll break down this tower!”

<sup>13</sup>Then Gideon, Joash’s son, returned from the battle by the Heres Pass. <sup>14</sup>He captured a young man from the people of Succoth and interrogated him. He listed for Gideon the seventy-seven officials and elders of Succoth. <sup>15</sup>So Gideon went to the people of Succoth and said, “Here are Zebah and Zalmunna! You made fun of me because of them by saying, ‘Haven’t you already almost gotten your hands on Zebah and Zalmunna? Why should we give food to your exhausted men now?’” <sup>16</sup>Then he seized the city’s elders, and he beat<sup>c</sup> the people of Succoth with desert thorns and briars. <sup>17</sup>He also broke down Penuel’s tower, and killed the city’s people.

They replied, “They were just like you; each one looked like a king’s son.”

<sup>19</sup>“They were my brothers,” Gideon said, “my own mother’s sons. As surely as the LORD lives, I promise that if you had let them live, I wouldn’t kill you!” <sup>20</sup>So he ordered his oldest son Jether, “Stand up and kill them.” But the young man didn’t draw his sword because he was afraid, since he was still young.

<sup>21</sup>So Zebah and Zalmunna said, “You stand up and strike us yourself, because as they say, ‘A man is measured by his strength!’” So Gideon stood up and killed Zebah and Zalmunna, and took the crescents that were on their camels’ necks.

Gideon’s request

<sup>22</sup>Then the Israelites said to Gideon, “Rule over us, you and then your son and then your grandson, because you’ve rescued us from Midian’s power.”

<sup>23</sup>Gideon replied to them, “I’m not the one who will rule over you, and my son won’t rule over you either. The LORD rules over you.” <sup>24</sup>But Gideon said to them, “May I make one request of you? Everyone give me the earrings from their loot”; the Midianites had worn gold earrings because they were Ishmaelites.

possesses the cut-off “hands” of the Midianite kings as trophies of their capture (cf. Judg 1:6-7).

8:8 Penuel is a town further east of the Jordan from Succoth, but the exact location is uncertain.

8:9 in victory: Hebrew “in peace,” i.e., when Gideon has restored peace by winning the war. The irony is that his victory will bring destruction, not peace, to Penuel (Judg 8:17).

8:11 caravan road: or “road of the tent dwellers,” the main trade route.

8:20 Gideon’s attempt to have his son kill the kings may be another expression of the text’s hesitation about his character (see Judg 8:21).

8:22-28 Gideon’s response to the people’s invitation to become their ruler is a clear rejection of royal rule (see also Judg 9:7-15), which stands in tension with other parts of the book that seem to support the need for kings (cf. Judg 17:6; 18:1; 19:1; 21:25).

8:22-23 Although the people’s language uses the Hebrew term for rule (rather than “reign as king”), they clearly expect a dynasty. The reason they give—that you’ve rescued us—is ironic in light of God’s concern in Judges 7:2.

8:24-28 Gideon seems to reject the people’s offer appropriately, yet he proceeds to make a priestly vest with which the people commit idolatry (8:27; cf. Aaron’s gold calf in Exod 32). priestly vest (Heb. “ephod”) appears elsewhere as <sup>28</sup>So Midian was brought down before the Israelites and no longer raised its head. The land was peaceful for forty years during Gideon's time.

Gideon's death

<sup>29</sup>Jerubbaal, Joash's son, went home to live with his own household. <sup>30</sup>Gideon had seventy sons of his own because he had many wives. <sup>31</sup>His secondary wife who was in Shechem also bore him a son, and he named him Abimelech. <sup>32</sup>Gideon, Joash's son, died at a good old age and was buried in the tomb of his father Joash in Ophrah of the Abiezrites.

GAbimelech, Jerubbaal's son, went to his mother's brothers in Shechem. He spoke to them and to the entire clan of the household to which his mother belonged: <sup>2</sup>"Ask all the leaders of Shechem, 'Which do you think is better to have ruling over you: seventy men—all of Jerubbaal's sons—or one man?' And remember that I'm your flesh and blood!"

<sup>7</sup>When Jotham was told about this, he went and stood on the top of Mount Gerizim. He raised his voice and called out, "Listen to me, you leaders of Shechem, so that God may listen to you!"

<sup>8</sup>"Once the trees went out to anoint a king over themselves. So they said to the olive tree, 'Be our king!'

<sup>9</sup>"But the olive tree replied to them, 'Should I stop producing my oil, which is how gods and humans are honored, so that I can go to sway over the trees?'

<sup>10</sup>"So the trees said to the fig tree, 'You come and be king over us!'

<sup>11</sup>"The fig tree replied to them, 'Should I stop producing my sweetness and my delicious fruit, so that I can go to sway over the trees?'

8:29-32 Gideon amasses numerous wives for himself (8:30), one of the acts of kings condemned in Deuteronomy 17:17 (see 1 Kgs 11:3), and names his son Abimelech, which means "My father is a king" (8:31).

8:33-35 The final verses provide a partial version of the book's typical story line as an introduction to the story of Abimelech in Judges 9.

9:1-57 Abimelech, a son of Gideon by a secondary wife (see note on Judg 19:1), is first rejected by his relatives and then becomes king of the city-state of Shechem. This first attempt at kingship in Israel is the logical result of Gideon's story. Gideon operated like a king even though he clearly rejected an offer to rule (Judg 8:22-31). Abimelech declares himself king. This chapter is the most sustained examination of the problems of kingship in Judges and contains the most direct critique of royal leadership, "Jotham's Fable" (9:7-15). The story is strikingly different from most in Judges, as it features no external enemies, contains no references to God, and describes the career of a leader that begins and ends in murder and tragedy (see 9:5-6, 52-54).

9:1-6 Abimelech ("my father is a king") becomes king of the city-state of Shechem (in the north-central highlands about 40 miles north of Jerusalem) by brutally eliminating rivals from his own family.

9:4 Baal-berith: See Judges 8:33.

9:7-15 Jotham, the only son of Gideon to escape Abimelech's massacre (Judg 9:5), uses a fable about trees to proclaim the low quality of those who seek to be king. He stands on Mount Gerizim, the location associated with the blessings of the covenant ceremony in Deuteronomy 27:12, but ironically proclaims a curse on Abimelech and his allies (see Judg 9:20). His speech is a satire that

<sup>15</sup>And the thornbush replied to the trees, 'If you're acting faithfully in anointing me king over you, come and take shelter in my shade; but if not, let fire come out of the thornbush and burn up the cedars of Lebanon.'

<sup>16</sup>So now, if you acted faithfully and innocently when you made Abimelech king, and if you've done right by Jerubbaal and his household, and have treated him as his actions deserve—<sup>17</sup>my father fought for you and risked his life to rescue you from Midian's power, <sup>18</sup>but today you've risen up against my father's household, killed his seventy sons on a single stone, and made Abimelech, his female servant's son, king over the leaders of Shechem, because he's your relative—<sup>19</sup>so if you've acted faithfully and innocently toward Jerubbaal and his household today, then be happy with Abimelech and let him be happy with you. <sup>20</sup>But if not, let fire come out from Abimelech and burn up the leaders of Shechem and Beth-millo; and let fire come out from the leaders of Shechem and Beth-millo and burn up Abimelech.'

<sup>21</sup>Then Jotham ran away. He fled to Beer and stayed there for fear of his brother Abimelech.

Abimelech's monarchy fails

<sup>22</sup>Abimelech ruled over Israel for three years. <sup>23</sup>Then God stirred up ill will between Abimelech and the leaders of Shechem, and they acted like traitors toward Abimelech. <sup>24</sup>This occurred because of the violence done to Jerubbaal's seventy sons. Their blood came back on their brother Abimelech, who killed them, and on the leaders of Shechem, who supported him when he killed his brothers. <sup>25</sup>As an act against him, the leaders of Shechem set ambushes on the hilltops that robbed everyone who passed by them on the road. This was reported to Abimelech.

<sup>26</sup>Then Gaal, Ebed's son, and his relatives came passing through Shechem, and the leaders of Shechem shifted their allegiance to him. <sup>27</sup>They went out into the field, cut off clusters from their vineyards, trampled them out, and had a celebration. They entered their god's temple and ate, drank, and made fun of Abimelech. <sup>28</sup>Gaal, Ebed's son, said, "Who is Abimelech, and who are we of Shechem that we ought to serve him? Didn't this son of Jerubbaal and his deputy Zebul once serve the men of Hamor, Shechem's father? Why should we of all people describes the negative character and motives of those who want to be king. The thornbush is the only plant that yields no benefit to humans and yet is the only one that seeks power among the trees.

serve him?<sup>29</sup>If only this people were under my command! I would push Abimelech aside! I would tell Abimelech, 'Build up your army and march out for battle.'

Zebul replied to him, "The shadows on the hills just look like persons to you."

<sup>38</sup>Then Zebul replied to him, "Where's all your talk now, you who said, 'Who is Abimelech that we ought to serve him?' Aren't these the men you despised? Now march out and fight them!" <sup>39</sup>So Gaal marched out at the head of the leaders of Shechem and fought with Abimelech. <sup>40</sup>Abimelech routed him, and he ran away. Many fell wounded, all the way up to the entrance of the gate. <sup>41</sup>Afterward, Abimelech stayed in Arumah, and Zebul drove away Gaal and his relatives so they couldn't stay in Shechem.

<sup>46</sup>When all the leaders in the Tower of Shechem heard about this, they entered the side rooms in the El-berith temple. <sup>47</sup>It was reported to Abimelech that all the leaders from the Tower of Shechem had gathered in one place. <sup>48</sup>So Abimelech and all the men who were with him went up on Mount Zalmon. He grabbed an ax, cut off a bundle of branches, and hoisted them onto his shoulder. Then he ordered the men who were with him, "Hurry up and do what you've seen me do!" <sup>49</sup>Each one of the men cut off a bundle as well and followed Abimelech. They piled them up against the side rooms and set fire to the side rooms above them. So all the people in the Tower of Shechem died too, about one thousand men and women.

<sup>50</sup>Then Abimelech moved on to Thebez, set up camp against it, and captured it. <sup>51</sup>But there was a strong tower inside the city. All the men and women and all the city's leaders had fled there, shut themselves inside, and climbed to the tower's roof. <sup>52</sup>Abimelech came to the tower to storm it. But when he approached the tower's entrance to set it on fire, <sup>53</sup>a woman dropped an upper millstone on Abimelech's head and cracked his skull. <sup>54</sup>He quickly cried out to the servant who carried his armor, "Draw your sword and kill me. Don't let it be said of me, 'A woman killed him.'" So his servant stabbed him, and he died. <sup>55</sup>When the Israelites saw that Abimelech was dead, they all went home.

<sup>56</sup>Thus God paid back Abimelech for the evil he had done to his father by killing his seventy brothers. <sup>57</sup>God also paid back the people of Shechem for their evil. The curse of Jotham, Jerubbaal's son, had come upon them.

9:50-54 When Abimelech attacks a second city, another of the book's female characters plays a key role: an anonymous woman kills the would-be king with a relatively small (handheld) household instrument (an upper millstone) used for grinding grain at home but deadly when dropped from a height (cf. Jael in Judg 4:21; Judg 5:26). The story of this shameful death (see 9:54) is a stinging critique of those who hunger for royal power.

9:56-57 The conclusion to Abimelech's story reflects the strong sense of divine justice in the books of the

Tola and Jair

10 After Abimelech, Tola son of Puah and grandson of Dodo, a man of Issachar, arose to rescue Israel. He lived in Shamir in the Ephraim highlands. <sup>2</sup>For twenty-three years he led Israel; then he died and was buried in Shamir.

<sup>3</sup>After Tola, Jair from Gilead arose, and he led Israel for twenty-two years. <sup>4</sup>He had thirty sons who were mounted on thirty donkeys and controlled thirty towns in the land of Gilead—these are still known as Havvoth-jair today. <sup>5</sup>When Jair died, he was buried in Kamon.

Israel's unfaithfulness and oppression by the Ammonites

<sup>6</sup>Then the Israelites again did things that the LORD saw as evil. They served the Baals and the Astartes, as well as the gods of Aram, Sidon, Moab, the Ammonites, and the Philistines. They went away from the LORD and didn't serve him. <sup>7</sup>The LORD became angry with Israel and handed them over to the Philistines and the Ammonites. <sup>8</sup>Starting that year and for the next eighteen years, they beat and bullied the Israelites, especially all the Israelites who lived on the east side of Jordan in the territory of the Ammonites in Gilead. <sup>9</sup>The Ammonites also crossed the Jordan to make raids into Judah, Benjamin, and the households of Ephraim. So Israel was greatly distressed.

<sup>10</sup>Then the Israelites cried out to the LORD, "We've sinned against you, for we went away from our God and served the Baals."

<sup>15</sup>The Israelites responded to the LORD, "We've sinned. Do to us whatever you see as right, but please save us this time." <sup>16</sup>They put away the foreign gods from among them and served the LORD. And the LORD could no longer stand to see Israel suffer.

<sup>17</sup>The Ammonites called out their army and made camp in Gilead, while the Israelites gathered and set up their camp at Mizpah. <sup>18</sup>Gilead's rulers said to each other, "Whoever is willing to launch the attack against the Ammonites will become the leader over all those living in Gilead."

Deuteronomistic History (Joshua to Kings): God punishes disobedience. It identifies the judgment on Abimelech and Shechem as fulfilling Jotham's curse (Judg 9:7-20).

10:1-5 Summaries of five minor leaders in 10:1-5 and Judges 12:8-15 (cf. Judg 3:31) form a frame around the story of Jephthah. They show God's continued provision for the people and provide a contrast to the Lord's reluctant participation in the course of Jephthah's actions that follow (see Judg 10:13-16). The stability and peacefulness of the rule of the tribal leaders in 10:1-5 and Judges 12:8-15 may be intended as a contrast to the instability and violence in the stories of Jephthah and Samson.

10:1 Shamir: possibly Samaria in the central highlands.

10:3 Gilead: an important town in the northern Transjordan, but not a tribal name. Jair: See 1 Chronicles 2:22.

10:6-12:7 The story of Jephthah's defeat of the Ammonites in the area around Gilead. Although Jephthah secures deliverance for Israel, his story shows a further decline from the ideal of Othniel (see Judg 3:7-11) and another example of Israel's downward spiral into failure and unfaithfulness. At times Jephthah shows religious devotion and military success, and at other times he is doubtful and shrewd. Ultimately, his behavior leads to violence between Israelites and personal tragedy.

10:6-18 The reappearance of Israel's unfaithfulness leads to oppression by the Ammonites and Philistines. The story contains several elements of the typical pattern of sin, oppression, and changed hearts (see Judg 2:11-19). But here the storyline differs in key aspects from the typical pattern to highlight the ongoing decline of Israel's social and religious life (see 10:6, 13-14) and set the stage for the story of Jephthah in Judges 11:1-12:7.

10:6 The verse specifies the people's unfaithfulness by stating that Israel worshipped the gods of five nations. The list reminds readers of the nations that the Lord promised to drive out before the Israelites (cf. Deut 7:1), but the kingdoms listed do not precisely match the historical realities of the early Iron Age. Baals and the Astartes: See notes on Judges 2:11-13.

10:7-8 Ammonites: See note on Judges 3:13. The events are set in the north-central Transjordan area of Gilead near Ammon, but the Ammonites also made raids across the Jordan into Israelite territory in the central highlands (Judg 10:8-9).

10:11-14 The hardening of God's position is a further sign of the people's failing relationship with the Lord (cf. Judg 3:9; Judg 6:7-10).

10:15-16 In response to the Lord's surprising rejection of their prayer, the people turn from their divided loyalties. The language and action resemble Joshua 24:23-24. Verse 16 gives a personal tone to the people's relationship with the Lord and may indicate that a change of heart and life moved God to soften the rejection. could no longer stand to see Israel suffer: This translation implies that Israel's sufferings stirred the Lord's deep compassion, but the Hebrew is unclear (or "the Lord's soul/life became short/impatient with Israel's trouble").

Rise of Jephthah

11 Now Jephthah the Gileadite was a mighty warrior. Gilead was his father, but he was a prostitute's son. <sup>2</sup>Gilead's wife gave birth to other sons for him, and when his wife's sons grew up, they drove Jephthah away. They told him, "You won't get an inheritance in our father's household because you're a different woman's son." <sup>3</sup>So Jephthah ran away from his brothers and lived in the land of Tob. Worthless men gathered around Jephthah and became his posse.

<sup>4</sup>Sometime afterward, the Ammonites made war against Israel. <sup>5</sup>And when the Ammonites attacked Israel, Gilead's elders went to bring Jephthah back from the land of Tob. <sup>6</sup>They said to him, "Come be our commander so we can fight against the Ammonites."

<sup>7</sup>But Jephthah replied to Gilead's elders, "Aren't you the ones who hated me and drove me away from my father's household? Why are you coming to me now when you're in trouble?"

<sup>8</sup>Gilead's elders answered Jephthah, "That may be, but now we're turning back to you, so come with us and fight the Ammonites. Then you'll become the leader over us and everyone who lives in Gilead."

<sup>9</sup>And Jephthah said to Gilead's elders, "If you bring me back to fight the Ammonites and the LORD gives them over to me, I alone will be your leader."

<sup>10</sup>Gilead's elders replied to him, "The LORD is our witness; we will surely do what you've said." <sup>11</sup>So Jephthah went with Gilead's elders, and the people made him leader and commander over them. At Mizpah before the LORD, Jephthah repeated everything he had said.

<sup>12</sup>Then Jephthah sent messengers to the Ammonite king, saying, "What is the problem between us that you've come against me to make war in my land?"

<sup>13</sup>The Ammonite king responded to Jephthah's messengers, "When the Israelites were coming up from Egypt, they seized my land from the Arnon to the Jabbok and all the way to the Jordan. Now give it back peacefully!"

resembles the book's opening question in Judges 1:1. leader (Heb. "head"): The term is not the root for "leader" used elsewhere in Judges but has hints of royal rule.

11:1-12:7 Jephthah's defeat of the Ammonites ends in personal tragedy and civil war. The story of Jephthah focuses more on his personal life and ambition than on his defeat of Israel's oppressors, which is related in only two verses (11:32-33). Jephthah's ambition for personal status illustrates Israel's shift away from a focus on God's purposes as the tribal leaders' era unfolds. It results in tragic violence in his own family.

11:1-3 The book's theme that God calls and uses unexpected people (cf. the left-handed Ehud in Judg 3:12-30 and the women Deborah and Jael in Judg 4:4-22) continues by introducing Jephthah as a prostitute's son, a suspect parentage within Israel's social system. The book has used a verb from the same Hebrew root as "prostitute" to describe Israel's "unfaithfulness" to the Lord (Judg 8:27, 33), so it carries those overtones too. Several parallels with the introduction of Abimelech in Judges 9 create doubts about Jephthah's character: Abimelech was the son of a secondary wife (Judg 8:31), the chief of a band of outlaws (Judg 9:4), and he came to power through conflict with his brothers (Judg 9:5).

11:2 Jephthah's rejection by his half brothers over the issue of inheritance reflects concerns over lineage in kinship-based societies.

11:3 Tob: See 2 Samuel 10:6-8.

11:4-11 The first of three attempts by Jephthah to promote or preserve himself by making deals (see Judg 11:12-28, 30-31). Unlike previous stories of tribal leaders, the text doesn't say that the Lord raised up Jephthah as a deliverer, and Jephthah's first move is to make a deal for his own position with the elders of Gilead. This tendency toward self-interest creates more doubt about Jephthah's character.

11:6 commander: The elders' first offer is to make Jephthah a leading officer (cf. Judg 11:8-9).

11:8-9 leader ("head," see Judg 10:18): The elders try to persuade Jephthah by offering a more powerful position than "commander" in Judges 11:6 (cf. Judg 10:18). Jephthah makes a deal for sole leadership in verse 9 (alone). The position is not designated by the Hebrew word for "king," but does indicate a more permanent office than "commander" in Judges 11:6. As with the Abimelech story in Judges 9, this one raises concerns about royal leadership (cf. Judg 17:6; 18:1; 19:1; 21:25).

11:12-28 The dispute is over territory. Although negotiation may be a normal diplomatic procedure, this is the only place in the book where a leader tries to make a deal with a foreign oppressor. The text does not present Jephthah's negotiation as all bad, however, since he is then able to make a case for a just war.

11:12-13 First attempt at making a deal.

11:14-28 The second attempt at making a deal appeals to Israel's journey out of Egypt (cf. Num 20-22) and claims that the territory given to Israel was not taken from Moab or Ammon.

'Please allow us to pass through your land'; but the Edomite king refused. They sent the same request to the king of Moab, and he was unwilling. So the Israelites stayed at Kadesh.

<sup>18</sup>Later they journeyed into the desert but went around the lands of Edom and Moab, arriving on the east side of the land of Moab and setting up camp on the other side of the Arnon. They never entered Moabite territory, because the Arnon was the boundary of Moab. <sup>19</sup>Then the Israelites sent messengers to Sihon king of the Amorites and king of Heshbon and said to him, 'Please allow us to pass through your land to our own place.' <sup>20</sup>Yet Sihon didn't trust the Israelites to pass through his territory. He assembled his entire army, set up camp at Jahaz, and went to war with the Israelites. <sup>21</sup>The LORD, Israel's God, handed over Sihon and his entire army to the Israelites, and they defeated Sihon. So the Israelites took possession of all the land of the Amorites who were living in that area. <sup>22</sup>They took possession of all the Amorite territory from the Arnon to the Jabbok and from the desert to the Jordan.

<sup>23</sup>So now that the LORD, Israel's God, has driven out the Amorites before his people Israel, will you take possession of their land? <sup>24</sup>Shouldn't you possess what Chemosh your god has given you to possess? And shouldn't we possess everything that the LORD our God has given us to possess? <sup>25</sup>Do you now have a better case than Moab's King Balak, Zippor's son? Did he make an accusation against the Israelites or go to war with them? <sup>26</sup>Why didn't you take back this territory while the Israelites lived in Heshbon and its villages, in Aroer and its villages, and in all the towns along the branches of the Arnon for three hundred years? <sup>27</sup>I haven't sinned against you, but you're doing me wrong by making war against me. Let the LORD, who is the judge, decide today between the Israelites and the Ammonites!

Jephthah's promise

<sup>29</sup>Then the LORD's spirit came on Jephthah. He passed through Gilead and Manasseh, then through Mizpah in Gilead, and from there he crossed over to the Ammonites. <sup>30</sup>Jephthah made a solemn promise to the LORD: "If you will decisively hand over the Ammonites to me, <sup>31</sup>then whatever comes out the doors of my house to meet me when I return victorious from the Ammonites will be given over to the LORD. I will sacrifice it as an entirely burned offering." <sup>32</sup>Jephthah crossed over to fight the Ammonites, and the LORD handed them over to him. <sup>33</sup>It was an exceptionally great defeat; he defeated twenty towns from Aroer to the area of Minnith, and on as far as Abel-keramim. So the Ammonites were brought down before the Israelites.

<sup>34</sup>But when Jephthah came to his house in Mizpah, it was his daughter who came out to meet him with tambourines and dancing! She was an only child; he had no other son or daughter except her. <sup>35</sup>When he saw her, he tore his clothes and said, "Oh no! My daughter! You have brought me to my knees! You are my agony! For I opened my mouth to the LORD, and I can't take it back."

11:19 Heshbon: a town in the central Transjordan, but there is no archaeological evidence that the town was occupied in the 13th–12th centuries BCE.

11:20 Jahaz: precise location is unknown.

11:24 Chemosh was actually the chief god of the Moabites, not the Ammonites (cf. Num 21:29; 2 Kgs 23:13). Jephthah's "error" may be a deliberate attempt by the narrator to portray him as inept, even in his frequent attempts at deal-making.

11:25 King Balak: See Numbers 22–24.

11:29–40 Jephthah's rash promise and sacrifice of his daughter. When the time for battle arrives, the narrative focuses instead on Jephthah's solemn pledge and its tragic consequences.

11:29–30 In the context of the other tribal leaders' stories (see, e.g., Judg 3:7–11), the coming of the LORD's spirit on Jephthah guarantees victory. Jephthah's promise is unexpected and unnecessary, indicating a lack of faith and a desire to assure his own success.

11:31 The wording of Jephthah's solemn promise is unclear in Hebrew (whatever or whoever), and he may have intended an animal. Typical houses in Iron Age Israel had animal stalls on the first level.

11:34 The fact that his daughter emerges first from the house, most probably to celebrate his victory, shows just how rash Jephthah was to make this unnecessary promise. Interpretations of this story have ranged from condemning Jephthah for male-centered violence to praising him and his daughter for being willing to fulfill their costly promise. Still, the unnamed daughter is one of the most tragic female characters in the book. She represents one way that women suffer increasing levels of violence at the hands of men as Israel's social and religious failure continues toward the end of the book. See sidebar, "Women, Gender, and Violence in Judges."

11:35 Jephthah even blames his daughter for causing him pain. Although OT instruction sees solemn promises as irrevocable (Num 30:3–5; Deut 23:21–23), child sacrifice is strongly prohibited (Lev 18:21). Jephthah's previous tendency toward deal-making might lead us to expect that he will try to negotiate with the Lord on his daughter's behalf, but he doesn't (cf. Abraham in Gen 18:23–33; Gen 22:1–19).

Women, Gender, and Violence in Judges Judges features an unusually high percentage of women characters, nearly 20 in all—both named and unnamed, Israelite and non-Israelite (e.g., Achsah; Deborah; Jael; Jephthah's daughter; Samson's mother, fiancée, and prostitute; Delilah; and the Levite's secondary wife). The activity and fate of these women constitute major elements in the book's evaluation of the various tribal leaders as positive or negative, and women often appear as trophies of war or items of property. Readers have often admired the tribal leaders as heroes, but this view overlooks the book's disturbing instances of violence, rape, and killing, many of which happen to women. Such stories serve the writer's purpose of casting the tribal leaders' era as a time of gradual decline in Israel's social, moral, and religious life. As Israel's faithfulness declines from the beginning to the end of the book, the status and condition of women also declines, and they appear less and less as independent actors and more and more as victims of violence. In this way, women and the violence done to them represent Israelite social and religious life and the violence being done to it.

<sup>36</sup>But she replied to him, "My father, you've opened your mouth to the LORD, so you should do to me just what you've promised. After all, the LORD has carried out just punishment for you on your enemies the Ammonites." <sup>37</sup>Then she said to her father, "Let this one thing be done for me: hold off for two months and let me and my friends wander the hills in sadness, crying over the fact that I never had children."

<sup>38</sup>"Go," he responded, and he sent her away for two months. She and her friends walked on the hills and cried because she would never have children.

<sup>39</sup>When two months had passed, she returned to her father, and he did to her what he had promised. She had not known a man intimately. But she gave rise to a tradition in Israel where <sup>40</sup>for four days every year Israelite daughters would go away to recount the story of the Gileadite Jephthah's daughter.

Jephthah defeats the Ephraimites

12The Ephraimites were called up for battle and crossed over to Zaphon. They said to Jephthah, "Why did you cross over to fight the Ammonites and not call us to go with you? We're going to burn down your house over you!"

<sup>2</sup>Jephthah replied to them, "My people and I were in a great conflict with the Ammonites. But when I cried out to you, you didn't rescue me from their power. <sup>3</sup>When I saw that you weren't going to rescue me, I risked my own life and crossed over against the Ammonites, and the LORD handed them over to me. So why have you marched against me today to fight me?"

<sup>4</sup>So Jephthah gathered all the men of Gilead and fought the Ephraimites. The Gileadites defeated the Ephraimites, because they had said, "You are fugitives from Ephraim! Gilead stands within Ephraim and Manasseh."

<sup>5</sup>The Gileadites took control of the Jordan's crossing points into Ephraim. Whenever one of the Ephraimite fugitives said, "Let me cross," the Gileadites would ask him, "Are you an Ephraimite?" If he said, "No," <sup>6</sup>they would tell him, "Then say shibboleth." But he would say, "sibboleth," because he couldn't pronounce it correctly. So they would seize him and kill him at the Jordan's crossing points. Forty-two thousand of the Ephraimites fell at that time.

<sup>7</sup>Jephthah led Israel for six years. Then Jephthah the Gileadite died and was buried in one of the towns in Gilead.

11:36-37 Although she remains an anonymous and passive victim of male violence, Jephthah's daughter accepts her fate and so provides a sharp contrast with her self-promoting father.

12:1-7 Jephthah's independent leadership style results in conflict with the Ephraimites (see Gideon in Judg 8:1-3), this time resulting in civil war (cf. Judg 19-21).

12:1-4 As with Gideon (Judg 8:1-3), the Ephraimites complain that they were not called to participate in the first battle. Jephthah, however, doesn't appease them as Gideon did, but claims that they refused to respond to his call for aid. He then musters the Gileadites to attack them.
 12:4 The Ephraimites' taunt against the Gileadites provoked them, but its meaning is no longer clear. It may have to do with Gilead's not being a separate tribe in Israel.

 12:5 took control of the Jordan's crossing points: a common battle strategy in the judges' stories (see Judg 3:28; Judg 7:24). Unlike previous instances, however, Jephthah takes this action not against foreigners but against fellow Israelites.

12:6 shibboleth . . . sibboleth: The difference in pronunciation reveals differences in regional dialects.

12:7 The conclusion of Jephthah's story in the style of the typical outline of these stories in Judges links the narrative in Judges 11:1-12:6 to the lists of minor leaders that follows in Judges 12:8-15 (see also Judg 10:1-5).

<sup>8</sup>After Jephthah, Ibzan from Bethlehem led Israel. <sup>9</sup>He had thirty sons and thirty daughters. He married his thirty daughters to those outside his clan, and brought in thirty young women from outside for his sons. He led Israel for seven years. <sup>10</sup>Then Ibzan died and was buried in Bethlehem.

He led Israel for eight years. <sup>15</sup>Then Abdon, Hillel's son from Pirathon, died and was buried in Pirathon in the land of Ephraim, in the Amalekite highlands.

13 The Israelites again did things that the LORD saw as evil, and he handed them over to the Philistines for forty years.

<sup>2</sup>Now there was a certain man from Zorah, from the Danite clan, whose name was Manoah. His wife was unable to become pregnant and had not given birth to any children.

<sup>6</sup>Then the woman went and told her husband, "A man of God came to me, and he looked like God's messenger—very scary! I didn't ask him where he was from, and he didn't tell me his name. <sup>7</sup>He said to me, 'You are pregnant and will give birth to a son, so don't drink wine or brandy or eat anything that is ritually unclean, because the boy is going to be a nazirite for God from birth until the day he dies.'"

12:8-15 The summaries of three minor leaders, which perhaps originally formed a single list with the two minor leaders in Judges 10:1-5. The text presents the view that they led all of Israel, and their high numbers of children and ability to provide marriages for them indicate their power and status. Yet these leaders also represent further decline for Israel, because they don't deliver the people from any enemies and their rule produces benefits only for themselves and their families.

12:8 Bethlehem: The name here may designate a northern town in lower Galilee (see Josh 19:15), not the town near Jerusalem, since the other leaders in the list are from the north.

13:1-16:31 The stories of Samson read like well-told folk narratives. They feature mostly personal conflicts, but Samson nevertheless unintentionally brings about Israel's deliverance from the Philistines. The book's overall plan depicting Israel's decline from ideal success and obedience reaches a low point in Samson, the last of the major tribal leaders. The failure and tragedy of his story will only be surpassed by the book's two appendixes (Judg 17-21). Samson represents the opposite of all of the book's ideals: he leads no Israelite tribes in battle, he breaks his solemn promises to the Lord, he intermarries with Israel's enemies, and finally he seeks personal vengeance. In these ways, the book uses Samson to represent Israel itself, with its religious disobedience, experience of capture and destruction, and then hope for God's rescue even in the midst of human failure.

13:1-25 Samson is the only leader in the book with a birth story (cf. Samuel in 1 Sam 1). The chapter recalls many other biblical texts (e.g., compare 13:17-18 with Gen 32:29), but focuses on Samson's unnamed mother. She is one of the most positive female characters in Judges (see similar birth announcements to women in Gen 16:7-12; 18:9-15; 25:22-23). She represents qualities of trust and obedience that are lacking in her husband and many of the book's male characters. The Lord's messenger appears to her on both occasions, even when summoned by Manoah (13:3, 9), and her faith reassures her fearful husband (13:23). The key element in the story is the "nazirite promise" imposed on Samson (13:5; see Num 6:1-21). The remainder of the stories in Judges 14-16 show his unfaithfulness to this promise.

13:1 The typical story line (see Judg 2:11-19) introduces the Philistines as the primary enemy and indicate Israel's worsening condition by giving an exceptionally long period of oppression (40 years; cf. 18 years in Judg 10:8). Philistines: a group of the sea peoples who moved into the coastal area west of Israel in the 12th century BCE.

13:2 Danite clan: Dan is portrayed as a clan (rather than a tribe) located in the foothills south of Judah (see note on Judg 1:9 and Dan's movement northward in Judg 17-18).

13:4-5 nazirite means "consecrated or dedicated one" and designated a group of people who lived according to promises like those in Numbers 6:1-21. Samson violates these solemn promises by drinking wine or produce of vineyards (Judg 14:5), having contact with a corpse (Judg 14:8-9), and cutting his hair (Judg 16:19).

13:5 begins Israel's rescue: hints that Samson will not be as successful as Othniel, Ehud, and Deborah, who completed their tasks, and may point toward the coming of kingship, since only Saul and David will liberate Israel from the Philistines.

13:6 The woman immediately recognizes the messenger as divine, but her husband doesn't.

<sup>8</sup>Manoah asked the LORD, "Please, my Lord," he said, "let the man of God whom you sent come back to us once more, so he can teach us how we should treat the boy who is to be born."

<sup>9</sup>God listened to Manoah, and God's messenger came once more to the woman. She was sitting in the field, but her husband Manoah wasn't with her. <sup>10</sup>So the woman hurriedly ran and informed her husband. She said to him, "The man who came to me the other day has just appeared to me."

<sup>11</sup>Manoah got up and followed his wife. He came to the man and said to him, "Are you the man who spoke to this woman?"

"I am," he replied.

<sup>12</sup>Manoah said, "Now when your words come true, what should be the rules for the boy and how he should act?"

<sup>13</sup>The LORD's messenger answered Manoah, "The woman should be careful to do everything that I told her. <sup>14</sup>She must not consume anything that comes from the grapevine, drink wine or brandy, or eat anything that is ritually unclean. She must be careful to do everything I have commanded her."

<sup>15</sup>Manoah said to the LORD's messenger, "Please let us persuade you to stay so we can prepare a young goat for you."

<sup>16</sup>But the LORD's messenger replied to Manoah, "If you persuaded me to stay, I wouldn't eat your food. If you prepare an entirely burned offering, offer it to the LORD." Indeed, Manoah didn't know that he was the LORD's messenger. <sup>17</sup>Manoah said to the LORD's messenger, "What's your name, so that we may honor you when your words come true?"

<sup>19</sup>So Manoah took a young goat and a grain offering and offered them on a rock to the LORD. While Manoah and his wife were looking, an amazing thing happened: <sup>20</sup>as the flame from the altar went up toward the sky, the LORD's messenger went up in the altar's flame. When Manoah and his wife saw this, they fell facedown on the ground. <sup>21</sup>The LORD's messenger didn't reappear to Manoah or his wife, and Manoah then realized that it had been the LORD's messenger. <sup>22</sup>Manoah said to his wife, "We are certainly going to die, because we've seen God!"

<sup>23</sup>But his wife replied to him, "If the LORD wanted to kill us, he wouldn't have accepted the entirely burned offering and grain offering from our hands. He wouldn't have shown us all these things or told us all of this now."

<sup>24</sup>The woman gave birth to a son and named him Samson. The boy grew up, and the LORD blessed him. <sup>25</sup>The LORD's spirit began to move him when he was in Mahaneh-dan, between Zorah and Eshtaol.

Samson's marriage to a Philistine woman

14 Samson traveled down to Timnah. While he was in Timnah, a Philistine woman caught his eye. <sup>2</sup>He went back home and told his father and mother, "A Philistine woman in Timnah caught my eye; now get her for me as a wife!"

13:8-14 Manoah asks for the messenger to appear once more, but he comes to the woman (13:9), reversing the expectations of a male-centered culture. Perhaps not believing his wife's report, Manoah asks to hear the instructions concerning the child.

13:13-14 See notes on Judges 13:4-5.

13:15-22 See Gideon's similar use of a meal offering in Judges 6:19-24.

13:23 The unnamed woman, not her husband, expresses faith rather than fear.

13:24 The name Samson is related to the Hebrew term for "sun."

13:25 The spirit's moving of Samson leads us to expect that his saving activities will start soon (cf. Judg 3:10; 11:29-33), but they are delayed by his personal conflicts that follow. Zorah and Eshtaol locate the story in the area south of Jerusalem and just east of the Philistines.

14:1-15:20 Samson's ill-fated marriage to a Philistine woman and its violent consequences represent Israel's religious and social decline. The Lord remains active in unexpected and seemingly contradictory ways (see 14:4, 19), but the story focuses on Samson's hasty actions and personal revenge. Some interpreters see Samson as a foolish antihero, while others understand him as a traditional epic hero with typical flaws. Very little theological commentary appears in the story.

14:1-20 Samson marries a Philistine. Deuteronomy prohibits intermarriage with seven peoples living in Canaan (Deut 7:3-4), and Judges elsewhere says such intermarriage was the cause of Israel's unfaithfulness to God (Judg 3:5-6). The Philistines don't appear in either list, but they were Israel's most dangerous neighbor until King David contained their military power (2 Sam 5:17-25).

14:1 Samson's geographical movement (traveled down, instead of the expected "went up" to battle) represents Israel's "going down" from the ideals of the book's model

<sup>3</sup>But his father and mother replied to him, "Is there no woman among your own relatives or among all our people that you have to go get a wife from the uncircumcised Philistines?"

Yet Samson said to his father, "Get her for me, because she's the one I want!" <sup>4</sup>His father and mother didn't know that the LORD was behind this. He was looking for an opening with the Philistines, because they were ruling over Israel at that time.

<sup>10</sup>His father traveled down to the woman, and Samson put on a feast there, as was the custom for young men. <sup>11</sup>When the townspeople saw him, they selected thirty companions to be with him. <sup>12</sup>Then Samson said to them, "Let me tell you a riddle. If you can figure it out and tell me the answer within the seven days of the feast, I'll give you thirty linen robes and thirty sets of clothes. <sup>13</sup>But if you can't tell me the answer, then it's you who have to give me thirty linen robes and thirty sets of clothes."

So they replied to him, "Tell your riddle; let's hear it."

<sup>14</sup>He said to them,

"Out of the eater there came something to eat.

Out of the strong there came something sweet."

For three days they couldn't tell the answer to the riddle. <sup>15</sup>On the fourth<sup>1</sup> day they said to Samson's wife, "Seduce your husband so he'll tell us the answer to the riddle, or else we'll set fire to you and your household. Were we invited here just to become poor?"

<sup>16</sup>So Samson's wife cried on his shoulder and said, "You hate me! You don't love me! You told a riddle to my people but didn't tell me the answer."

He replied to her, "Look, I haven't even told the answer to my father and mother. Why should I tell it to you?" <sup>17</sup>But she cried on his shoulder for the rest of the seven days of the feast. Finally, on the seventh day, he told her the answer, for she had nagged him. And she told her people the answer to the riddle. <sup>18</sup>So on the seventh day, before the sun set, the townspeople said to him, leaders (see Judg 3:7-11). Timnah: The exact location is uncertain but likely a town north of Beth-shemesh on the border of Judah and Philistia (see Josh 15:10; Josh 19:43). Samson's desire to marry a Philistine woman is ironic in light of the statement in Judges 13:5 that the Lord has appointed him to begin Israel's rescue from the Philistines (cf. his parents' objection in Judg 14:3).

14:3 she's the one I want: "she is right in my eyes," is the language of the chorus that will be repeated throughout the final chapters as a symptom of the religious and social breakdown of the tribal leaders' era (see Judg 17:6; 18:1; 19:1; 21:25).

14:4 This verse attributes Samson's desire to marry to divine direction. Throughout Samson's failures and tragedies, the Lord seems willing to work through the sinful actions of people for the sake of larger redemptive purposes (see Judg 16:28-31). Yet the verse's statement doesn't necessarily support Samson's actions, since it leaves open the possibility that God was looking for an opening to use the Philistines to bring judgment on Samson.

14:5-9 Samson violates two of the three primary nazirite promises, leaving only the solemn promise to let one's hair grow long (cf. Judg 13:4-5; Num 6:3-8). The setting in a vineyard alludes to the ban against drinking wine or anything from the grapevine (see also Samson's "feast," which translates a Hebrew term that indicates a "drinking festival," in Judg 14:10). The eating of honey is positive in other contexts (1 Sam 14:24-30), but the honeycomb's position in the carcass leads Samson to disobey the nazirite ban on touching a corpse. Eating the honey from the lion also foreshadows the riddle in Judges 14:14.

14:5 lone young lion: The Hebrew phrase means a young male lion separated from its pride.

14:6 The Lord's spirit: See Judges 3:10 and notes.

14:9 Samson causes his parents to defile themselves by eating food that is ritually unclean because of contact with a dead animal (cf. Lev 11:24-25, 39).

14:10 feast ("drinking festival")... as was the custom for young men: This phrase suggests that a feast was a typical part of a marriage between two kinship groups.

14:14 Samson's riddle refers back to the scene with the lion carcass in the vineyard.

14:15-18 The motif of a woman who discovers and then reveals a secret foreshadows Delilah's role in Samson's downfall in Judges 16:4-22.

14:15 Seduce: "open up" (see also Judg 16:5).

14:18 plowed with my heifer: a sexually suggestive insult to the woman.

"What's sweeter than honey?
What's stronger than a lion?"

He replied to them,

"If you hadn't plowed with my heifer, you wouldn't have figured out my riddle!"

<sup>19</sup>Then the LORD's spirit rushed over him, and he went down to Ashkelon. He killed thirty of their men, stripped them of their gear, and gave the sets of clothes to the ones who had told the answer to the riddle. In anger, he went back up to his father's household. <sup>20</sup>And Samson's wife married one of those who had been his companions.

Samson attacks the Philistines

15 Later on, at the time of the wheat harvest, Samson went to visit his wife, bringing along a young goat. He said, "Let me go into my wife's bedroom."

But her father wouldn't allow him to go in. <sup>2</sup>Her father said, "I was so sure that you had completely rejected her that I gave her in marriage to one of your companions. Don't you think her younger sister is even better? Let her be your wife instead."

<sup>3</sup>Samson replied, "No one can blame me now for being ready to bring down trouble on the Philistines!"

<sup>4</sup>Then Samson went and caught three hundred foxes. He took torches, turned the foxes tail to tail, and put a torch between each pair of tails. <sup>5</sup>He lit the torches and released the foxes into the Philistines' grain fields. So he burned the stacked grain, standing grain, vineyards, and olive orchards.

So it was reported, "Samson the Timnite's son-in-law did it, because his father-in-law gave his wife in marriage to one of his companions." So the Philistines went up and burned her and her father to death.

14:19-20 Once again, the spirit is active (cf. Judg 14:6), but Samson uses the divine power for a purpose other than rescuing Israel. Verses 19-20 provide the battle report that the reader has been expecting since the divine statement in Judges 13:5, but the battle is only for Samson's personal benefit.

14:19 Ashkelon: one of the main Philistine cities west of Judah (cf. Judg 1:18).

14:20 Samson's abandonment of his new wife constitutes a technical divorce, although Samson fails to see it as such (cf. Judg 15:1).

15:1-20 The consequences of Samson's failed marriage is a cycle of violence and vengeance between Samson and the Philistines that unfolds in four main scenes: 15:4-5, 6, 7-8, 9-15.

15:1-3 Samson assumes the woman is still his wife and that he can return later as if he had not left her (cf. Judg 14:20).

15:2 completely rejected: appears in ancient Near Eastern marriage agreements as a technical term for a legal divorce without cause (see note on Judg 14:20). In response to her father's rejection and counteroffer (15:1-2), Samson's language ("no one can blame me now," Judg 15:3) implies that his previous slaughter of the Philistines at Ashkelon (Judg 14:19) was wrong.

15:4-5 Samson exacts personal vengeance for a perceived wrong, even though the father has acted legally and appropriately. Similar use of animals as unusual weapons appears in traditional folk stories from the ancient Mediterranean world. The list of harvested grains, vineyards, and orchards represents a total destruction of the food crops in the area (cf. the Midianites' actions against Israel in Judg 6:1-6).

15:6 Although the Philistine woman's cunning saved herself and her family from the initial danger of being associated with Samson (Judg 14:15), she and her father meet that very fate (burning with fire) because of Samson's actions.

15:7 Samson's words are a solemn pledge.

15:8 he struck them hard: The Philistines' revenge was limited to those previously associated with Samson, but he increases the conflict with more extensive and severe violence. legs right out from under them: The Hebrew ("he struck them hip and thigh") indicates a complete defeat.

15:9-20 Samson's acts of personal revenge draw the people of Judah into his troubles and violence. The people of Judah give Samson over to the Philistines bound as a prisoner (15:9-13), and he defeats the Philistines like an epic warrior using a donkey's jawbone as a weapon (15:14-20).

15:9 Lehi: "jawbone." The chapter contains several etiologies (i.e., origin stories that give folk explanations of ancient place names; see also Judg 15:17, 19). released their forces: Compare with how Samson "released the foxes" against the Philistines in Judges 15:5.

"We've marched up to take Samson prisoner," they replied, "and to do to him just what he did to us."

<sup>11</sup>So three thousand people from Judah traveled down to the cave in the rock at Etam and said to Samson, "Don't you realize that the Philistines rule over us? What have you done to us?"

But he told them, "I did to them just what they did to me."

<sup>12</sup>Then the people of Judah said to him, "We've come down to take you prisoner so we can turn you over to the Philistines."

Samson responded to them, "Just promise that you won't attack me yourselves."

<sup>13</sup>"We won't," they said to him. "We'll only take you prisoner so we can turn you over to them. We won't kill you." Then they tied him up with two new ropes, and brought him up from the rock.

"With a donkey's jawbone,
stacks on stacks!
With a donkey's jawbone,
I've killed one thousand men."

<sup>17</sup>When he finished speaking, he tossed away the jawbone. So that place became known as Ramath-lehi.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>18</sup>Now Samson was very thirsty, so he called out to the LORD, "You are the one who allowed this great victory to be accomplished by your servant's hands. Am I now going to die of thirst and fall into the hands of the uncircumcised?" <sup>19</sup>So God split open the hollow rock in Lehi, and water flowed out of it. When Samson drank, his energy returned and he was recharged. Thus that place is still called by the name En-hakkore<sup>m</sup> in Lehi today.

Samson and the prostitute

16 One day Samson traveled to Gaza. While there, he saw a prostitute and had sex with her. <sup>2</sup>The word spread<sup>a</sup> among the people of Gaza, "Samson has come here!" So they circled around and waited in ambush for him all night at the city gate. They kept quiet all night long, thinking, "We'll kill him at the first light in the morning." <sup>3</sup>But Samson slept only half the night. He got up in the middle of the night, grabbed the doors of the city gate and the two gateposts, and pulled them up with the bar still across them. He put them on his shoulders and carried them up to the top of the hill that is beside Hebron.

15:11 just what they did to me: Samson clearly identifies the basis of his actions as personal revenge.

15:13 tied him up with two new ropes: shadows Samson's dialogue with Delilah in Judges 16:10-12.

15:14 The Lord's spirit rushed over him: See Judges 14:6 and notes on Judges 3:10.

15:16 The poem features a play on the Hebrew root that can mean both donkey and stack. Samson's boast parallels that of Lamech in Genesis 4:23-24, who overreacts to personal injury with excessive violence. Unlike other victory songs (cf. Miriam's in Exod 15:21 and Deborah's in Judg 5), Samson's never mentions the Lord.

15:18-20 True to his character throughout the stories, Samson demands that his immediate desires be met. Despite Samson's disobedience and violence, the Lord responds to his cry. So Samson stands as a symbol of Israel itself, representing both the people's decline because of religious unfaithfulness and their hope for divine mercy.

16:1-31 The final chapter of Samson's story presents the result of his disobedience, impulsiveness, and selfishness, but also shows the continued activity of divine grace in the midst of human failure. The story has three episodes: Samson and the Philistine prostitute (16:1-3), Samson and Delilah (16:4-22), and Samson's capture and death (16:23-31). As throughout Samson's story, his reckless behavior and desire for foreign women lead to his downfall, highlighting the recurring motif of the seductive foreign woman (see sidebar, "Women, Gender, and Violence in Judges" at Judg 11).

16:1-3 Samson again seeks out a woman from a Philistine city (cf. Judg 14:1-4). The reference to a prostitute recalls the introduction of Jephthah in Judges 11:1 as well as the Lord's condemnation of Israel for "prostituting" itself with other gods (Judg 8:2, 33).

16:1 Gaza: the southernmost of the main Philistine cities west of Judah (cf. Judg 1:18; 6:4). Samson appears as a type of traditional folk hero who performs an extraordinary display of strength, carrying the doors of Gaza's gate some 40 miles uphill to Hebron.

Samson and Delilah

<sup>4</sup>Some time after this, in the Sorek Valley, Samson fell in love with a woman whose name was Delilah. <sup>5</sup>The rulers of the Philistines confronted her and said to her, “Seduce him and find out what gives him such great strength and what we can do to overpower him, so that we can tie him up and make him weak. Then we’ll each pay you eleven hundred pieces of silver.”

<sup>6</sup>So Delilah said to Samson, “Please tell me what gives you such great strength and how you can be tied up and made weak.”

<sup>7</sup>Samson replied to her, “If someone ties me up with seven fresh bowstrings that aren’t dried out, I’ll become weak. I’ll be like any other person.” <sup>8</sup>So the rulers of the Philistines brought her seven fresh bowstrings that weren’t dried out, and she tied him up with them.

<sup>9</sup>While an ambush was waiting for her signal in an inner room, she called out to him, “Samson, the Philistines are on you!” And he snapped the bowstrings like a thread of fiber snaps when it touches a flame. So the secret of his strength remained unknown.

<sup>10</sup>Then Delilah said to Samson, “You made a fool out of me and lied to me. Now please tell me how you can really be tied up!”

<sup>11</sup>He replied to her, “If someone ties me up with new ropes that haven’t been used for work, I’ll become weak. I’ll be like any other person.”

<sup>12</sup>So Delilah took new ropes and tied him up with them. Then she called out to him, “Samson, the Philistines are on you!” Once again, an ambush was waiting in an inner room. Yet he snapped them from his arms like thread.

<sup>13</sup>And Delilah said to Samson, “Up to now, you’ve made a fool out of me and lied to me. Tell me how you can be tied up!”

He responded to her, “If you weave the seven braids of my hair into the fabric on a loom and pull it tight with a pin, then I’ll become weak. I’ll be like any other person.”<sup>o</sup>

<sup>14</sup>So she got him to fall asleep, wove the seven braids of his hair into the fabric on a loom,<sup>p</sup> and pulled it tight with a pin. Then she called out to him, “Samson, the Philistines are on you!” He woke up from his sleep and pulled loose the pin, the loom, and the fabric.

<sup>15</sup>Delilah said to him, “How can you say, ‘I love you,’ when you won’t trust me? Three times now you’ve made a fool out of me and not told me what gives you such great strength!” <sup>16</sup>She nagged him with her words day after day and begged him until he became worn out to the point of death.

<sup>17</sup>So he told her his whole secret. He said to her, “No razor has ever touched my head, because I’ve been a nazirite for God from the time I was born. If my head is shaved, my strength will leave me, and I’ll become weak. I’ll be like every other person.”

<sup>18</sup>When Delilah realized that he had told her his whole secret, she sent word to the rulers of the Philistines, “Come one more time, for he has told me his whole secret.” The rulers of the Philistines came up to her and brought the silver with them.

16:4-22 The long story about Delilah resembles the one about Samson’s wife in Judges 14. It consists of four scenes in which Delilah persuades Samson to reveal the secret of his strength, each of which is introduced by a form of then Delilah said (16:6-9, 10-12, 13-14, 15-21). Suspense builds as Samson’s lies inch closer to the truth (see esp. 16:13-14). His trust in Delilah may be caused by lust or by an inflated sense of his own strength and failure to recognize danger. The story makes clear that the real danger is Samson’s careless attitude toward the signs of the Lord’s presence with him, especially as represented by his Nazirite vows (see 16:20).

16:4 Delilah: It isn’t clear whether she is a Philistine or Israelite. Her name has several possible meanings, including “small/light,” “night,” and “flirt.” Sorek Valley: The area between Judah and Philistia, southwest of Jerusalem. Sorek means “vineyard,” again echoing Samson’s careless treatment of his nazirite promises (see Judg 13:4-5; 14:5-9; Num 6:3-8). fell in love: The text shows a greater emotional attachment than in Samson’s previous relationships with women, perhaps generating sympathy for him in this episode.

16:5 Seduce him: “open him up” (see also Judg 14:15).

16:11 new ropes: Compare with Judges 15:13.

16:13 Samson’s reference to braiding his hair moves close to the actual secret of his strength.

16:16 Compare with Judges 14:17.

16:17 On Samson’s nazirite status, see Judges 13:4-5 and notes. whole secret: “told her his heart” (see also Judg 16:18).

16:19 By revealing his secret, Samson breaks the last of his solemn nazirite promises not to cut his hair (see 14:5-9; Num 6:3-20).

He woke up from his sleep and thought, I'll escape just like the other times and shake myself free. But he didn't realize that the LORD had left him. <sup>21</sup>So the Philistines captured him, put out his eyes, and took him down to Gaza. They bound him with bronze chains, and he worked the grinding mill in the prison.

<sup>22</sup>But the hair on his head began to grow again right after it had been shaved.

Samson's death

<sup>23</sup>The rulers of the Philistines gathered together to make a great sacrifice to their god Dagon and to hold a celebration. They cheered, "Our god has handed us Samson our enemy!" <sup>24</sup>When the people saw him, they praised their god, for they said, "Our god has handed us our enemy, the very one who devastated our land and killed so many of our people." <sup>25</sup>At the height of the celebration, they said, "Call for Samson so he can perform for us!" So they called Samson from the prison, and he performed in front of them. Then they had him stand between the pillars.

<sup>26</sup>Samson said to the young man who led him by the hand, "Put me where I can feel the pillars that hold up the temple, so I can lean on them." <sup>27</sup>Now the temple was filled with men and women. All the rulers of the Philistines were there, and about three thousand more men and women were on the roof watching as Samson performed. <sup>28</sup>Then Samson called out to the LORD, "LORD God, please remember me! Make me strong just this once more, God, so I can have revenge on the Philistines, just one act of revenge for my two eyes." <sup>29</sup>Samson grabbed the two central pillars that held up the temple. He leaned against one with his right hand and the other with his left. <sup>30</sup>And Samson said, "Let me die with the Philistines!" He strained with all his might, and the temple collapsed on the rulers and all the people who were in it. So it turned out that he killed more people in his death than he did during his life.

<sup>31</sup>His brothers and his father's entire household traveled down, carried him back up, and buried him between Zorah and Eshtaol in the tomb of his father Manoah. He had led Israel for twenty years.

Micah's sanctuary and the Levite priest

17Once there was a man named Micah who lived in the Ephraim highlands. <sup>2</sup>He said to his mother, "The eleven hundred pieces of silver that were taken from you led you to declare a curse and even to repeat it when I could hear. I have that silver. I'm the one who took it, and now I'll give it back to you."<sup>a</sup> that the Lord's spirit had rushed on him to give him power (cf. Judg 13:25; 14:6; 15:14). The text claims that Samson's fall was God's doing.

16:21 Samson undergoes an ironic change from a mighty warrior to a domestic servant. Readers in the Babylonian exile would recognize their own experiences here: Judah's last king was blinded and put in bronze chains (2 Kgs 25:7), and exiled young men were forced to work the mill (Lam 5:13).

16:22 A subtle sign of hope in the midst of despair.

16:23-31 Samson's humiliation creates the opportunity for a final act of revenge against the Philistines.

16:23 Dagon: a god associated with grain and fertility. He is the father of Baal in some texts outside the Bible, but the OT associates him with the Philistines (e.g. 1 Sam 5:2-5, 7).

16:28-31 so I can have revenge: Samson's goal remains personal vengeance (16:28). Yet, just as the Lord responded to Samson's cry after numerous acts of vengeance in Judges 15:18-19, so the Lord grants Samson's prayer for strength and uses his act to rescue Israel from the Philistines.

17:1-21:25 Two appendices to the main deliverer stories (Judg 3:7-16:31) describe the tragic result of Israel's unfaithfulness (17:1-18:31) and social breakup (19:1-21:25). These chapters parallel the book's two-part introduction, which focuses on social and military failure (Judg 1:1-2:5) and covenant disobedience (Judg 2:6-3:6), but they don't include any elements of the typical story line (cf. Judg 2:11-19). They focus instead on conflicts between Israelites, seemingly without God's involvement, and mark the low point of Israel's progressive decline that has unfolded throughout the book. References to the lack of a king (17:6; 18:1; 19:1; 21:25) show the need for a monarchy. Yet the book's earlier critiques of attempts to be king (see Judg 8:22-27; 9:7-15), as well as the context of the whole Deuteronomistic History (Joshua to Kings) that shows the ultimate failure of royal rule, indicate that these chapters are part of a larger reflection on the possibilities and problems of all forms of human leadership for the people of God (see intro).

17:1-18:31 The establishment of an unlawful worship site in the northern territory (17:1-13) provides the context for the story of the northward movement of the tribe of Dan (18:1-31). Judges 17-18 likely served as an explanation for Dan's northern location and a criticism of sanctuaries outside of Jerusalem in the later northern kingdom. In a number of instances, Israelite persons and tribes twist and/or take advantage of their own sacred traditions, such as the priesthood and holy war, for personal gain.

17:1-5 Micah, an Ephraimite, after stealing from his mother, establishes for her a personal shrine to the Lord, containing idols of various sorts; and he installs one of

His mother replied, "May the LORD bless you, my son!"<sup>3</sup> When he gave the eleven hundred pieces of silver back to his mother, she said, "I wholeheartedly devote this silver to the LORD, to be made into a sculpted image and a molded image for my son." <sup>4</sup>So he gave the silver back to his mother, and she took two hundred pieces of silver and gave them to a silversmith, who used it for a sculpted image and a molded image. And they were placed in Micah's house. <sup>5</sup>This man Micah had his own sanctuary. <sup>6</sup>He made a priestly vest<sup>7</sup> and divine images<sup>8</sup> and appointed one of his sons to be his personal priest. <sup>9</sup>In those days there was no king in Israel; each person did what they thought to be right.

<sup>7</sup>Now there was a young man from Bethlehem in Judah, from the area of the Judahite clan. He was a Levite residing there as an immigrant. <sup>8</sup>The man left the town of Bethlehem in Judah to settle as an immigrant wherever he could find a place. He came to Micah's house in the Ephraim highlands while he was making his way.<sup>9</sup>

He replied, "I'm a Levite from Bethlehem in Judah, and I'm looking to settle as an immigrant anywhere I can find a place."

<sup>10</sup>So Micah said to him, "Stay with me and be a father and a priest to me, and I'll give you ten pieces of silver a year, a set of clothes, and your basic needs."<sup>11</sup> The Levite agreed to stay with him; and the young man became like one of his own sons. <sup>12</sup>Micah appointed the Levite so that the young man became his personal priest and lived in Micah's sanctuary. <sup>13</sup>And Micah said to himself, Now I know that the LORD will give me good things, because a Levite has become my priest.

Dan's search for a land

18 In those days there was no king in Israel. Also in those days the tribe of Dan was searching for a territory of their own to live in, since no permanent territory had his sons as a priest for the shrine. The text presents Micah as morally questionable from the beginning. He sees his actions as an attempt to worship Israel's God (17:3), but they violate prohibitions on making images (Exod 20:4-6; Deut 5:8-10), as well as God's appointment of Levites as the proper priests (Deut 18:1-8). So Micah's actions are wrong by Deuteronomistic standards, but may also show a growing concern for a connection with the Lord because of Israel's poor religious condition.

17:1 The Ephraim highlands are also the location for the activities of Ehud (Judg 3:27), Deborah (Judg 4:5), and Tola (Judg 10:1).

17:2 eleven hundred pieces of silver: the same amount that each Philistine ruler promised to Delilah in exchange for Samson's secret (Judg 16:5). I'll give it back to you stands in Hebrew at the end of Judges 17:3. In that case, the mother gives back the money in the form of the image to her son.

17:3 sculpted image . . . molded image: If there are two different images, the first appears to be carved in wood and the other cast in metal.

17:5 Gideon also made a priestly vest, which previously led Israel to be unfaithful toward the Lord (Judg 8:27). divine images: elsewhere described as figurines or household gods (see Gen 31:19; 1 Sam 19:13; 2 Kgs 23:24). Although keeping a divine image in a household shrine conflicts with Deuteronomistic theology (see intro.), it reflects common practices in popular religion throughout Israel's history as shown by the archaeological record.

17:6 In those days there was no king in Israel: the first appearance of a refrain that will be repeated three more times throughout the appendixes to show Israel's moral and social breakdown (Judg 18:1; 19:1; 21:25). The statement's immediate context, following Micah's unsuitable actions, gives the expression a negative undertone from its first use. It implies that such chaos resulted from the lack of royal leadership (but cf. Judg 8:22-27; 9:7-15). The language of each person doing what they thought to be right (Heb., "what was right in their eyes") appears elsewhere as an indication of pride and rebellion against God (e.g., Deut 12:8). The appearance of this statement here and at the conclusion of the book (Judg 21:25) brackets the negative events of the two appendixes in Judges 17:1-21:25.

17:7-13 Micah replaces his son as the priest of his shrine (Judg 17:5) with a Levite from Judah. Levites were the divinely designated priestly tribe that received no territory of their own (Deut 18:1-8). Micah secures for his personal shrine a member of Israel's legitimate priestly line, but does so for his personal benefit (17:13). Although perhaps sincere in his desire to seek blessing from the Lord, Micah's actions show the fragmented and individualistic condition into which Israel's religious practice and devotion have fallen (cf. Judg 17:6). The Levite's intentions may have been just to stop on his journey or to find a patron for his priestly work.

18:1-31 The tribe of Dan migrates to a northern territory (cf. Judg 1:34), continuing the story of Micah's priest and shrine from Judges 17. The Danites prey upon an unsuspecting town and establish their own shrine with a priest and worship-oriented items. Israel's downward slide continues as the episode ends with an opportunistic conquest and religious unfaithfulness.

18:1-10 The story of the Danite spies echoes that of the spies at Jericho in Joshua 2:1-24, but here failure to possess their allotted territory (see Judg 1:34) motivates the Danites' actions. They don't ask for the Lord's direction in the beginning (see 18:5).

18:1 The story of Dan's northward movement begins by been assigned to them among the tribes of Israel up to that point. <sup>2</sup>The Danites sent five men from their whole clan, strong men from Zorah and Eshtaol, to spy on the land and explore it. They told them, "Go explore the land." So they went into the Ephraim highland as far as Micah's house, and they spent the night there. <sup>3</sup>When they were in the area of Micah's house, they recognized the accent of the young Levite. They turned in there and said to him, "Who brought you here? What are you doing in these parts? What is there for you here?"

<sup>4</sup>"Micah has done a lot for me," he replied to them. "He hired me to be his personal priest."

<sup>5</sup>They said to him, "Ask for an answer from God so we can know whether we'll be successful on this trip we've taken."

<sup>7</sup>So the five men journeyed on until they reached Laish. There they saw that its people were living without worry in the same way as the Sidonians, undisturbed and secure. Nobody held back anything in the land, so no one had to hoard.<sup>8</sup> Yet they lived far away from the Sidonians and had no dealings with anyone else.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>9</sup>"Come on," they replied, "let's march up against them! Indeed, we've seen the land, and it's very good. Right now you're doing nothing! Don't hold back from going and taking possession of the land. <sup>10</sup>When you arrive, you'll come upon a secure people and a wide-open land, because God has given to you a place where nothing on earth is lacking." <sup>11</sup>At this, six hundred men from the Danite clan at Zorah and Eshtaol set out armed for battle. <sup>12</sup>They marched up and made camp at Kiriath-jearim in Judah. This is why the place west of Kiriath-jearim is still known as Dan's Camp today. <sup>13</sup>From there they crossed into the Ephraim highlands and came to Micah's house.

Dan acquires a levitical priest

<sup>14</sup>Then the five men who had gone to spy on the land around Laish reported to their relatives, "Did you know that there is a priestly vest, divine images, a sculpted image, and a molded image in these buildings? Now think about what you should do!" <sup>15</sup>So they turned in there and went to the young Levite's house in Micah's compound and greeted him. <sup>16</sup>While the six hundred Danites armed for battle stood at the entrance of the gate, <sup>17</sup>the five men who had gone to spy on the land moved up, went inside, and took the sculpted image, the priestly vest, the divine images, and the molded image. The priest was standing at the entrance of the gate with the six hundred men armed for battle <sup>18</sup>when these five entered Micah's sanctuary and took the sculpted image, the priestly vest, the divine images, and the molded image.

The priest said to them, "What are you doing?"

<sup>19</sup>"Shut up!" they said to him. "Put your hand over your mouth! Come with us and be a father and a priest for us. Would you rather be a priest for one man's household or a priest repeating the theme verse of Judges 17–21 (see Judg 17:6; 19:1; 21:25). The refrain's association with idolatry in Judges 17:6 casts a warning shadow over the events that follow. no permanent territory: because of Dan's military failure (see Judg 1:34 and notes).

18:2 Zorah and Eshtaol: the southwestern location of the tribe of Dan in the Samson stories (cf. Judg 13:25 and notes).

18:3–6 On their first visit to Micah's compound in the Ephraim highlands, the Danite spies recognize the Levite priest as one from the south (see Judg 17:7–8) and seek a prophetic word confirming their task.

18:3 accent Compare the differences in the pronunciation of "shibboleth" in Judges 12:6.

18:7–13 In an act of senseless violence (see the reference to the Danites as "hotheaded men" in Judges 18:25; cf. Gen 49:17; Deut 33:22), the spies target the peaceful people of Laish (see the parallel version of this story in Josh 19:47).

18:7 Laish: 25 miles north of the Galilee Sea. Nobody held back . . . no one had to hoard: The narrator portrays Laish as an ideal society of shared resources and cooperative well-being. The description of Laish as prosperous and secure from surrounding enemies is ironically similar to the Lord's desires for Israel (see Judg 2:18–22; Josh 23:1–16).

18:12 Kiriath-jearim: northwest of Jerusalem in the tribal areas of Judah and Benjamin.

18:14–20 On their second visit to Micah's house, the spies take Micah's sacred objects and convince his priest to come with them and establish a new shrine.

18:14 The descriptions of the items in Micah's shrine vary throughout Judges 17–18 (cf. Judg 17:4, 5; Judg 18:14, 17, 18, 20, 24, 30).

18:19 be a father and a priest: See Judges 17:10.

for a tribe and a clan in Israel?"<sup>20</sup>The priest was convinced, so he took the priestly vest, the divine images, and the sculpted image and went along with the people.

<sup>24</sup>Micah replied, "You've taken my gods that I made, and the priest, and have gone off! What do I have left? How can you ask me what is wrong?"

<sup>25</sup>But the Danites said to him, "Don't raise your voice with us or else hotheaded men will attack you, and you and your household will lose your lives." <sup>26</sup>Then the Danites went on their way. When Micah realized that they were too strong for him, he turned around and went home.

The Danites take possession of Laish

<sup>27</sup>The Danites took along the things that Micah had made, as well as the priest who had been with him, and came to Laish, to a people who were undisturbed and secure. They killed the people and burned down the city. <sup>28</sup>No one was there to rescue them because the city was far away from Sidon and had no dealings with anyone else.<sup>b</sup> It was in the Beth-rehob Valley.

They rebuilt the city and settled in it. <sup>29</sup>They renamed the city Dan, after their ancestor Dan who had been one of Israel's sons; but in fact, the original name of the city was Laish. <sup>30</sup>The Danites set up the sculpted image for themselves, and Jonathan son of Gershom and grandson of Moses,<sup>c</sup> and his sons became priests for the Danite tribe until the land went into exile. <sup>31</sup>They kept for themselves the sculpted image that Micah had made throughout the whole time that God's sanctuary was in Shiloh.

A Levite, a woman, and her father

18:21-26 Micah's chase of the Danite army (see Judg 18:11) represents the social breakup of Israelite society. The Danites put their families and possessions at the front (cf. Jacob in Gen 32:13-21), anticipating an attack by Micah from behind.

18:27-29 Dan's conquest of Laish is an ironic misrepresentation of Israel's holy war pattern, which normally emphasizes Israel's weakness, the enemy's aggression, and the Lord's deliverance (see Deut 7:1-11; Josh 6:1-21). Here, the Danites prey upon a people living in peace in order to make up for their own failures (cf. Judg 1:34). Note that the text is silent about the Lord's involvement.

18:29 but in fact, the original name of the city was Laish: The narrator's desire to record the original name is a subtle criticism of the Danites' unprovoked attack.

18:30-31 Jonathan son of Gershom and grandson of Moses: The priest from Micah's household is identified as a Levite from Moses's family (cf. Exod 2:22; Exod 18:3), but some manuscripts include the later addition of a letter to read, grandson of Manasseh, to avoid associating these priests with Moses. The cities of Dan (formerly Laish) and Bethel later became the two major worship places for the northern kingdom of Israel, designed to rival the Jerusalem temple (1 Kgs 12:25-33). For the writer of Kings, these sanctuaries and their idols represent the great sin of the northern kingdom. the land went into exile: a clear indication that the book's intended audience had lived through the experience of the exile (see intro.). The reference to Shiloh and its sanctuary may be a critique of Dan's shrine, since the Deuteronomistic writers (Joshua to Kings) accepted only Shiloh as a legitimate sanctuary before the establishment of Jerusalem as the capital (see 1 Sam 1:3). 19:1-30 The story of rape and murder committed by the Benjaminites in Gibeah leads to civil war among the Israelite tribes in Judges 20-21. The entire series of events reflects notions of honor, shame, and blood vengeance in ancient tribal societies. Actions by members of one tribe against a member of another demand a response to restore the honor of those who have been offended. Like the preceding two chapters, Judges 19 doesn't include a tribal leader or elements of the book's typical story line (cf. Judg 2:11-19). The story again features a Levite, this time moving from north to south (cf. Judg 17-18), and shows the worsening treatment of women characters that has been a symbol of Israel's decline throughout the book (see sidebar, "Women, Gender, and Violence in Judges" at Judg 11). That movement reaches its low point here in the rape and dismemberment of the Levite's secondary wife, who remains nameless and voiceless. The story is one of the most disturbing portrayals of physical and sexual violence against a woman in the OT; yet the woman's body, cut into 12 pieces, is a tragically appropriate symbol for the collapse of Israel's society.

19:1 In those days when there was no king in Israel: the primary refrain of the book's two appendixes (see Judg 17:6; 18:1; 21:25) highlights Israel's social and moral decline. The appearance of this refrain in the context of the negative events in Judges 17-18 cast a shadow over the present chapter. secondary wife: The Hebrew term is often translated "concubine," but in the ancient context the term from Bethlehem in Judah. <sup>2</sup>In an act of unfaithfulness toward him, his secondary wife left him and went back to her father's household at Bethlehem in Judah. She stayed there four full months. <sup>3</sup>Then her husband set out after her to convince her to come back. He had his servant and a couple of donkeys with him. She took him into her father's house, and when the young woman's father saw him, he was happy to welcome him. <sup>4</sup>Since his father-in-law, the young woman's father, insisted, he stayed with him three days, eating, drinking, and spending the night there.

<sup>5</sup>On the fourth day, they got up early in the morning, and he got ready to set out. But the young woman's father said to his son-in-law, "Eat a little food to give you strength, and then you can go." <sup>6</sup>So the two of them sat down and ate and drank together. The young woman's father said to the man, "Why not spend the night and enjoy yourself?" <sup>7</sup>When the man got ready to set out, his father-in-law persuaded him, and he spent the night there again. <sup>8</sup>On the fifth day, he got up early in the morning to set out, and the young woman's father said, "Have some food for strength." So the two of them ate, sitting around until late in the day. <sup>9</sup>When the man got ready to set out with his secondary wife and servant, his father-in-law, the young woman's father, said, "Look, the day has turned to evening, so spend the night. Seriously, the day is over. Spend the night here and enjoy yourself. Then you can get up early tomorrow for your journey, and you can head home."

<sup>10</sup>But the man was unwilling to spend another night. He got up, set out, and went as far as the area of Jebus, that is, Jerusalem. He had a couple of saddled donkeys and his secondary wife with him. <sup>11</sup>When they were near Jebus, the day was totally gone. The servant said to his master, "Come on, let's turn into this Jebusite city and spend the night in it."

<sup>12</sup>But his master replied to him, "We won't turn into a city of foreigners who aren't Israelites. We'll travel on to Gibeah. <sup>13</sup>"Come on," he said to his servant, "let's reach Gibeah or Ramah and spend the night in one of those places." <sup>14</sup>So they traveled on, and the sun set when they were near Gibeah in Benjamin. <sup>15</sup>They turned in to enter there, so they could spend the night in Gibeah, and he went and sat down in the city square. But no one offered to take them home to spend the night.

Rape and murder at Gibeah

<sup>18</sup>"We're traveling from Bethlehem in Judah to the far corners of the Ephraim highlands," he replied to the old man. "That's where I'm from. I went to Bethlehem in Judah, and I'm heading to my home." <sup>4</sup> But no one has offered to take me in tonight. <sup>19</sup>We've got our own describes a wife of secondary rank below the primary wife who oversees the household (cf. Gen 22:24; 25:6; 36:12). 19:2 The text isn't clear about the reason for the secondary wife's departure. The Hebrew says "his secondary wife prostituted herself," suggesting adulterous behavior (see note on Judg 8:27), but other ancient versions say, "his secondary wife became angry with him" (LXX, Vulgate), suggesting the Levite had wronged her. The OT laws don't explicitly allow for a woman to initiate divorce, so the text may describe her as unfaithful for leaving her husband under any circumstances. 19:3-9 Both of the chapter's major scenes (Judg 19:4-21, 22-30) revolve around the ancient custom of hospitality, especially the duty to provide for strangers (see Exod 22:21; 23:9; Lev 19:33-34; Deut 26:12). In 19:3-9, the husband travels south from the Ephraim highlands to Bethlehem in Judah to try to bring back his secondary wife. The woman's father models the proper practice of hospitality, even in excessive measure day after day (see 19:4, 6, 8), providing a contrast to the violations of hospitality by the citizens of Gibeah (Judg 19:22-26). The woman, however, doesn't participate and remains an object of male control and exchange.

19:10-21 After five days in Bethlehem, the Levite sets out to the north. The woman doesn't speak in the text, being merely an object taken along. The scene is ironic. The Levite resists stopping in Jebus because it is a city of foreigners (19:12) who are likely to withhold traditional hospitality and may attack strangers (cf. his treatment at the hands of fellow Israelites in Judg 19:15-25).

19:10 On Jebus as Jerusalem, see Judges 1:21. Other texts also identify Jerusalem as a Jebusite city until the time of David (2 Sam 5:6-9).

19:12 Gibeah: an Israelite town just north of Jerusalem that would later be Saul's royal residence (1 Sam 15:34).

19:16-21 The only one among the Levite's fellow Israelites in Gibeah who offers hospitality is himself an immigrant in the town (see the description of the Levite as an "immigrant" in Judg 19:1).

19:18 my home: This is what the Greek translation of the OT (the LXX) says. The Hebrew Bible (the MT) says, "the LORD's house," which could mean the sanctuary at Shiloh. 19:19 the woman: "your maidservant." The Levite portrays the woman as his host's property to be given away should he choose to do so (see Judg 19:24-25).

straw and feed for our donkeys, plus food and wine to provide for me, the woman, and my servant with us. We don't need anything."

<sup>20</sup>The old man answered, "You're welcome to stay with me,* but let me take care of all your needs. Just don't spend the night in the square." <sup>21</sup>And he took him into his house. He mixed feed for the donkeys, and they washed their feet, ate, and drank.

<sup>22</sup>While they were relaxing, suddenly the men of the city, a perverse bunch, surrounded the house and started pounding on the door. They said to the old man, the owner of the house, "Send out the man who came to your house, so we can have sex with him!"

<sup>23</sup>The owner of the house went outside and said to them, "No, my friends, please don't commit such an evil act, given that this man has come to my home as a guest. Don't do this disgraceful thing! <sup>24</sup>Here's my daughter, the young woman, and his secondary wife. Let me send them out, and you can abuse them and do whatever you want to them. But don't do such a disgraceful thing to this man!" <sup>25</sup>But the men refused to listen to him.

So the Levite grabbed his secondary wife and sent her outside to them. They raped her and abused her all night long until morning. They finally let her go as dawn was breaking.

<sup>26</sup>At daybreak, the woman came and collapsed at the door of the man's house where her husband was staying, where she lay until it was daylight. <sup>27</sup>When her husband got up in the morning, he opened the doors of the house and went outside to set out on his journey. And there was his secondary wife, lying at the entrance of the house, with her hands clutching the doorframe. <sup>28</sup>"Get up," he said to her, "let's go." But there was no response. So he laid her across a donkey, and the man set out for home. <sup>29</sup>When he got home, he picked up a knife, took his secondary wife, and chopped her, limb by limb, into twelve pieces. Then he sent them into all the areas of Israel. <sup>30</sup>Everyone who saw it said, "Has such a thing ever happened or been seen since the time when the Israelites came up from the land of Egypt until today? Think about it, decide what to do, and speak out!"

Civil war between the Benjaminites and the Israelites

20Then all the Israelites from Dan to Beer-sheba, as well as from the area of Gilead, marched out, and the group assembled as one body in the LORD's presence at Mizpah. <sup>2</sup>The commanders of the people and of all the tribes of Israel took their place in the assembly of God's people, four hundred thousand foot soldiers armed with swords. <sup>3</sup>And the Benjaminites got word that the Israelites had marched up to Mizpah.

*Or Peace be with you

19:22-26 What the Levite had feared from the non-Israelites in Jebus occurs at the hands of his fellow Israelites in Gibeah. This scene has several parallels with the story of Lot and his daughters in Sodom (Gen 19). The issue both here and in Genesis 19 doesn't seem to be homosexual behavior but the extreme violation of hospitality and mistreatment of the stranger that is represented by sexual assault (note that the men of Gibeah are willing to rape the wife). At Sodom, two divine messengers intervene to protect Lot's daughters from rape. The wife here receives neither divine nor human rescue.

19:22 have sex with him: Compare with Genesis 4:1, 17; 24:16. In the context of an honor-shame culture, sexual assault is a means of treating men as though they were women and asserting dominance over a male.

19:23 as a guest: The host makes his objection in terms of the expected practice of hospitality to strangers.

19:24-25 The old man offers both his own daughter and the Levite's secondary wife to satisfy the mob (see note on Judg 19:19). The Levite then forcibly (grabbed... and sent) throws his secondary wife to the men. Here, the worsening treatment of women in Israel reaches a low point: She is treated as disposable property.

19:27 The woman's grip on the doorframe recalls the image of grasping the horns of the altar in an appeal for sanctuary (see 1 Kgs 1:50-51; 2:28).

19:28 Get up... let's go: The only words that the Levite speaks to his secondary wife in the story are uncaring. The Hebrew doesn't say whether the woman is already dead in 19:28, but the LXX adds "because she was dead."

19:29-30 The Levite's motive for calling for revenge isn't clear, since he gave his secondary wife to the mob. Cutting up the woman's body not only shows the increasing violence against women in the book but also represents the breakdown of Israel's society. twelve pieces: See similar actions with animals and clothing in 1 Samuel 11:7; 1 Kings 11:30-40.

20:1-21:25 Continuing the story of Judges 19, these chapters describe Israel's social collapse at the end of the tribal leaders' era. As with the preceding story, the events revolve around notions of honor, shame, and retribution in ancient tribal cultures (see notes on Judg 19:1-30).

20:1-48 Desire for retribution against the tribe of Benjamin for the violence of Judges 19 leads to civil war within Israel. The Israelites are driven to act by the Levite's misleading account of the events at Gibeah (see 20:4-5), and their actions ironically compound the tragedy by nearly destroying one of the tribes (see Judg 21:3).

20:1-11 For the first time since their assembly before the Lord at Bochim in Judges 2:1-5 and their unfaithfulness at Ophrah in Judges 8:27, all the Israelites are successfully united (cf. as one in 20:8, 11).

20:1 Dan to Beer-sheba: a phrase that designates the traditional northern and southern boundaries of Israel. Gilead:

The Israelites inquired, "Tell us how this evil act happened."

<sup>4</sup>So the Levite, the husband of the murdered woman, answered, "My secondary wife and I came to Gibeah of Benjamin to spend the night, <sup>5</sup>and the leading citizens of Gibeah tried to attack me. They surrounded me in the house at night and were determined to kill me. They abused my secondary wife until she died. <sup>6</sup>I took her, chopped her up, and sent her pieces into every part of Israel's territory, because they had committed a disgraceful act in Israel. <sup>7</sup>All you Israelites, say what you think should be done here and now!"

<sup>8</sup>At this, all the people stood as one to say, "Not a single one of us is going home or returning to our house! <sup>9</sup>This is what we're now going to do to Gibeah: We'll march <sup>10</sup>against it as the lot determines. <sup>10</sup>From all the tribes of Israel, we'll get ten men for every hundred, one hundred for every thousand, and one thousand for every ten thousand to take supplies for the troops who are going to pay back <sup>11</sup>Gibeah of Benjamin for the disgraceful act they've done in Israel." <sup>11</sup>So all the Israelites joined together and were united as one against the city.

<sup>12</sup>The Israelite tribes sent men throughout the whole tribe of Benjamin with this message: "What about this evil act that happened among you? <sup>13</sup>Now hand over those perverse men in Gibeah so that we can execute them and remove the evil from Israel." But the Benjaminites refused to comply with the demand of their own relatives the Israelites. <sup>14</sup>Instead, the Benjaminites from all the cities came together at Gibeah to march out for battle against the Israelites. <sup>15</sup>On that day, the Benjaminites called up from their cities twenty-six thousand men armed with swords, not counting those living in Gibeah. <sup>16</sup>Out of this entire army, seven hundred specially chosen men were left-handed, and every one of them could sling a stone at a hair and not miss. <sup>17</sup>Not counting Benjamin, the Israelites called up four hundred thousand men armed with swords, and every one of them was a trained warrior.

<sup>18</sup>Then the Israelites marched up to Bethel to ask for direction from God. They inquired, "Who should go up first to fight against the Benjaminites for us?"

And the LORD said, "Let the tribe of Judah be first."

<sup>19</sup>So the next morning, the Israelites got up and camped near Gibeah. <sup>20</sup>They marched out to fight against the Benjaminites, lining up in battle formation against them at Gibeah. <sup>21</sup>But the Benjaminites marched out from Gibeah and cut down twenty-two thousand Israelite men that day.

<sup>22</sup>So the Israelites went back up and wept before the LORD until evening. They asked the LORD, "Should we move in again to fight our relatives the Benjaminites?"

Israelite territory east of the Jordan River. Mizpah: Tell en-Nasbeh, eight miles north of Jerusalem. Like Gibeah, Mizpah was an Israelite town in the territory of the tribe of Benjamin.

20:4-7 The Levite's description of the events of Judges 19 is not entirely accurate: The men of Gibeah did not say they would "kill" him (Judg 19:22) and he himself threw his secondary wife out to them (Judg 19:25).

20:5 leading citizens: This phrase also means "lords, masters, owners". The preceding chapter described the rapists simply as "men of the city" (Judg 19:22), but the Levite gives them a higher status to make their behavior more shameful.

20:8-11 Here and in 20:18, the Israelites don't ask God whether to attack Gibeah, but only in what order to fight (cf. Judg 1:1-4; 20:23, 28). Does the Lord's answer in Judges 20:18 simply allow them to follow the ill-conceived path they have chosen?

20:9 For similar use of the lot to assign groups and tasks, see Joshua 18:10; 1 Chronicles 24:5, 7; Nehemiah 11:1.

20:10 The text presents the people as wanting to avenge a shameful act in order to restore honor within their community (see notes on Judg 19:1-30).

20:11 united as one: Such unity last occurred at Ophrah in an act of religious unfaithfulness (Judg 8:27).

20:12-18 The Benjaminites refuse to turn over those who committed the crime in Gibeah to the larger tribal assembly. Instead, they draw up their own force for battle.

20:15 twenty-six thousand men: The Benjaminites force is very small compared with that of the rest of the tribes (four hundred thousand; cf. Judg 20:2, 17).

20:18 Bethel: "house of God." The site would later be one of the main national sanctuaries of the northern kingdom (cf. 1 Kgs 12:25-33). Who should go up first?: repeats the question in Judges 1:1 that marked the beginning of Israel's conquest of the promised land. The question now marks the beginning of civil war.

20:19-35 After two failed attempts to defeat the much smaller Benjaminites force and capture Gibeah (20:19-21, 24-26), the tribes capture the city through trickery (cf. the ambush at Ai in Josh 8:1-29).

<sup>22</sup>The Israelite troops regrouped and lined up in battle formation again in the same place they had lined up the first day. <sup>24</sup>The Israelites moved in against the Benjaminites the second day. <sup>25</sup>But the Benjaminites marched out of Gibeah to meet them on that second day and cut down another eighteen thousand Israelite men, all of whom were armed with swords.

<sup>26</sup>Then all the Israelite troops went back up to Bethel and wept, just sitting there in the LORD's presence. They fasted that whole day until evening. Then they offered entirely burned offerings and well-being sacrifices to the LORD. <sup>27</sup>Now in those days the chest containing God's covenant was there, <sup>28</sup>and Phinehas, Eleazar's son and Aaron's grandson, was in charge of ministering before it. The Israelites asked the LORD, "Should we march out once again to fight our relatives the Benjaminites or should we give up?"

<sup>29</sup>So the Israelites set ambushes around Gibeah. <sup>30</sup>Three days later, the Israelites marched out against the Benjaminites. They lined up for battle against Gibeah as before. <sup>31</sup>When the Benjaminites came out to meet them, they were drawn away from the city. They began to strike down some of the troops just like the last time, about thirty Israelites along the main roads, one of which goes up to Bethel and one to Gibeah, as well as in the open fields. <sup>32</sup>The Benjaminites thought, "They're being wiped out before us like the first time. But the Israelites had planned, 'We'll retreat and draw them away from the city toward the main roads.'" <sup>33</sup>The Israelites moved from their position and reformed their battle lines at Baal-tamar. Then the Israelites who had been set in ambush charged out from their positions west of Gibeah. <sup>34</sup>Ten thousand specially chosen men from all the Israelites came against Gibeah. The fighting was fierce, and the Benjaminites didn't realize that disaster was almost on them. <sup>35</sup>The LORD wiped out the Benjaminites before Israel. The Israelites slaughtered twenty-five thousand one hundred Benjaminites men that day, all of them armed with swords. <sup>36</sup>Then the Benjaminites saw that they had been defeated.

The Israelites had given ground to the Benjaminites because they relied on the ambush that they had set around Gibeah. <sup>37</sup>Indeed, those in the ambush had dashed swiftly into Gibeah and killed all the people in the city with their swords. <sup>38</sup>The plan between the main force of the Israelites and those in the ambush was that when they sent up a big cloud of smoke from the city, <sup>39</sup>the Israelites would turn around in battle. The Benjaminites had begun to defeat some of the Israelites and had killed about thirty men, thinking, "They are definitely going to be wiped out before us, as in the first battle!" <sup>40</sup>But then the column of smoke began to rise from the city. When the Benjaminites looked back, there was the entire city going up in smoke to the sky. <sup>41</sup>The main force of the Israelites turned around, and the Benjaminites lost heart, because they recognized that disaster had fallen on them. <sup>42</sup>They turned back before the Israelites in the direction of the desert, but the fighting caught up with them, and those from the towns were slaughtering them there. <sup>43</sup>They encircled the Benjaminites, chased them from Nohah,<sup>1</sup> and trampled them to the east of Gibeah. <sup>44</sup>Eighteen thousand Benjaminites fell, all of whom were strong warriors. <sup>45</sup>When they turned back and fled toward the desert to the rock of Rimmon, the Israelites picked off another five thousand men on the main roads. And when they caught up with them at Gidom, they struck down two thousand more.

20:33 The location of Baal-tamar is unknown, but the text assumes a location near Gibeah.

20:35 Despite the unforgiving nature of the Israelites' actions, the text credits their success to the Lord (see Judg 21:15), perhaps suggesting that God allowed them the freedom and ability to follow the ill-fated path that they had charted (see notes on Judg 20:8-11).

20:37 killed all the people in the city: The language of this verse (see also Judg 20:48) reflects the practice of holy war against the Canaanites, but the Israelites twist it into the destruction of one of their own cities (cf. Judg 18:27-28).

20:45 Rimmon: approximately five miles east of Bethel in the area of Gibeah.

20:46-48 The tribes kill all the Benjaminites, with the exception of 600 men who flee into hiding. The 600 male survivors present the problem that will lead the Israelites to further violence in the following story (Judg 21:1-25).

Benjaminites and massacred them entirely—the city, the people, even the animals, and everything else they found. They also burned down every city they came across.

Wives for the Benjaminites

21 The Israelites had made a pledge at Mizpah, declaring, “None of us will allow his daughter to marry a Benjaminite.”<sup>2</sup> But the people came to Bethel and sat there until evening before God, raising their voices and crying bitterly.<sup>3</sup> “LORD, God of Israel,” they said, “why has this happened among us that as of today one tribe will be missing from Israel?”<sup>4</sup> And the next day, the people got up early and built an altar there. They offered entirely burned offerings and well-being sacrifices.

<sup>5</sup> Then the Israelites asked, “Were there any out of all the tribes of Israel who didn’t march up to the assembly before the LORD?” Indeed, they had made a solemn pledge that anyone who didn’t march up before the LORD at Mizpah would be put to death.<sup>6</sup> The Israelites had a change of heart concerning their relatives the Benjaminites. They said, “Today one tribe has been cut off from Israel.<sup>7</sup> What can we do to provide wives for the ones who are left, since we ourselves have made a pledge before the LORD not to allow our daughters to marry them?”<sup>8</sup> So they asked, “Is there anyone from the tribes of Israel who didn’t march up before the LORD at Mizpah?” There was! No one from Jabesh-gilead had come to the assembly at the camp.<sup>9</sup> When the people’s attendance was taken, not one of those who lived in Jabesh-gilead had been there.

<sup>15</sup> Since the people had a change of heart concerning the Benjaminites because the LORD had caused a rupture in the tribes of Israel,<sup>16</sup> the community elders said, “What can we do to provide wives for the ones who are left, seeing that the Benjaminite women have been

21:1-25 The tribes’ vengeful actions against the Benjaminites in Judges 20 have compounded the violence of Judges 19 by leaving one tribe in danger of destruction (see 21:3, 6-7). Only 600 male Benjaminites survived (Judg 20:47), now with no way to repopulate the tribe (see 21:1). The tribes attempt to get wives for the surviving Benjaminites with an attack on Jabesh-gilead (21:1-14) and the kidnapping of women from Shiloh (21:15-24).

21:1-4 The rash promise made by the Israelites at Mizpah has not appeared previously and reminds readers of Jephthah’s solemn promise (Judg 11:29-40). Judges 21:18 will provide the content of the promise.

21:2-3 The Israelites return to Bethel, where they sought divine guidance before the attack against Gibeah (Judg 20:18). But now they go to show regret over the very victory they had requested.

21:4 burned offerings and well-being sacrifices: The same offerings were made at the beginning of the war against Gibeah in Judges 20:26.

21:5-9 The reference to another pledge not mentioned previously provides a solution to the need for wives for the Benjaminites. No divine role is mentioned. Ironically, although the Israelites mourn the possible end of the Benjaminite tribe, they reflect positively on their previous determination to eliminate any group that failed to participate in the war.

21:8 Jabesh-gilead: a town in the northern Transjordan within the tribal area of Manasseh. Since this town later supports King Saul (see 1 Sam 11; 1 Sam 31:11-13), this story may serve as an argument against Saul’s rule.

21:10-14 In the first of two attempts to repopulate Benjamin (cf. Judg 21:15-24), the Israelites attack Jabesh-gilead to capture virgins for the 600 surviving Benjaminite men (see Judg 20:47). To make up for their holy war against the Benjaminites (Judg 20:37, 48), the Israelites fight holy war against Jabesh-gilead. See sidebar, “Holy War and Violence.”

21:11 Exterminate: another example of the Israelites twisting the institution of holy war into an act against their own relatives (see Judg 20:37; sidebar, “Holy War and Violence”).

21:12 Shiloh: approximately 10 miles north of Bethel (see Judg 21:19).

21:14 there weren’t enough: The 400 virgins leave 200 surviving Benjaminites without wives.

21:15-24 The second attempt to repopulate Benjamin involves kidnapping women during a religious festival to Israel’s own God at Shiloh. Representing the negative climax of Israel’s moral collapse, the tribes are less concerned about kidnapping and rape than they are about breaking their rash vow (see Judg 21:1, 18 and compare Jephthah’s vow in Judg 11:29-40). Here, the Israelites support the same taking of women for which they had condemned the Benjaminites in Judges 20:4-11.

destroyed? <sup>17</sup>There must be a surviving line for those who remain from Benjamin,” they continued, “so that a tribe won’t be erased from Israel. <sup>18</sup>But we can’t allow our daughters to marry them, for we Israelites have made this pledge: ‘Let anyone who provides a wife for Benjamin be cursed!’ <sup>19</sup>However,” they said, “the annual festival of the LORD is under way in Shiloh, which is north of Bethel, east of the main road that goes up from Bethel to Shechem, and south of Lebonah.” <sup>20</sup>So they instructed the Benjaminites, “Go and hide like an ambush in the vineyards <sup>21</sup>and watch. At the moment the women of Shiloh come out to participate in the dances, rush out from the vineyards. Each one of you, capture a wife for yourself from the women of Shiloh and go back to the land of Benjamin. <sup>22</sup>When their fathers or brothers come to us to object, we’ll tell them, ‘Do us a favor for their sake. We didn’t capture enough women for every man during the battle, and this way you are not guilty because you didn’t give them anything willingly.’” <sup>23</sup>And that is what the Benjaminites did. They took wives for their whole group from the dancers whom they abducted. They returned to their territory, rebuilt the cities, and lived in them. <sup>24</sup>Likewise, the Israelites set out from there at that time, heading home to their respective tribes and clans. They all left there for their own territories.

<sup>25</sup>In those days there was no king in Israel; each person did what they thought to be right.

Holy War and Violence The book of Judges contains some stories of the type of “holy war” described in the book of Joshua (see Judg 1:25; Judg 21:5-11). This warfare involves wiping out all men, women, children, and animals in some cases of conquest. It represents the belief that God directs the war and demands the utter devotion of all spoils as an offering. Similar references in other ancient Near Eastern texts show that this idea was widespread in the region. Contemporary readers struggle with the moral and ethical dimensions of such divinely sanctioned violence, especially since the text doesn’t evaluate the morality of these actions. Even the writer of Judges, however, views such warfare as part of the distant past within an ancient culture, and doesn’t offer the practice as a model for the book’s readers. These ways of talking about holy war can develop among defenseless and oppressed groups (not unlike the 6th-century Judean exiles) whose expressions are shaped by severe trauma and who need an outlet for hope. Other biblical texts encourage readers to act out of concern and mutual support for other peoples (see, e.g., Lev 19:18, 34; Matt 5:38-48; Rom 12:14-21).

<sup>21:25</sup> did what they thought to be right: The book ends with a haunting repetition of the refrain that has been repeated throughout Judges 17–21 (Judg 17:6; 18:1; 19:1) again signaling the low point of Israel’s social and moral decline. Its claim that these tragic events were due to the absence of kings supports the need for royal leadership. In later sections of the Deuteronomistic History (Joshua to Kings), however, Israel’s first king, Saul, comes from the same tribe of Benjamin that was responsible for the violence of Judges 19 (1 Sam 9:1; 10:20-24) and establishes his capital at Gibeah (1 Sam 15:34). These later texts show the dangers of kingly leadership that the book of Judges also highlights in earlier critiques of kings in Judges 8:22-32 and Judges 9:1-57.

RUTH

The book of Ruth is a beautiful story. Though only four chapters long, it's filled with dramatic moments, likable characters, and important themes. On the surface, Ruth seems simple. Yet a closer look reveals that the story is artistically crafted with repetition of key phrases, wordplay, meaningful dialogue, and careful organization.

The three main characters are Naomi, Ruth, and Boaz. Other individuals and the local community also enter the story at key moments, reminding us how important the community was for people in the ancient world. Although the book is named for Ruth, it begins and ends with Naomi, a woman from Bethlehem. The story opens with Naomi and her small family traveling to Moab to escape famine. The men die off, and Naomi is left without her family in a foreign land. When Naomi decides to return home, her daughter-in-law Ruth insists on coming along. Back in Bethlehem, Ruth works to get food for the two of them by collecting leftover grain in what turns out to be Boaz's field. The two women think up a plan for their long-term security. Boaz cooperates and marries Ruth. The story's final scene shows their newborn son in Naomi's arms.

Unlike much of the rest of the Bible, this isn't a story about national or international affairs. It is set in a village of farmers. Action revolves around family relationships. The book assumes certain customs mentioned elsewhere in the OT: permitting the poor to collect leftover grain at harvesttime (gleaning); requiring men to marry their brothers' widows in order to provide them children (levirate marriage); and giving a near relative (redeemer) the right to purchase land to keep it in the family. But here, things get done mainly through human decision and action rather than God's command. God is in the wings, and humans are on center stage in the story.

The story moves from emptiness to fullness, from barrenness to fertility, and from death to life. We see redemption on many levels. Famine and empty fields are replaced with grain harvests and enough food for everyone. Naomi, who has lost everything, gains a loving daughter-in-law and a grandson. Her emotions shift from bitterness and anger to fullness and joy. The primary characters fill each other's needs and become "family" for each other in important ways, and the baby Obed brings hope for the future.

The book raises significant ethnic, class, and gender issues. The storyteller often reminds us that Ruth is Moabite. The people of Moab were ancient enemies of the people of Israel, so Ruth's willingness to live in Bethlehem, and the Bethlehemites' acceptance of her, are unexpected and remarkable. It's also surprising that the narrator chooses to tell the story from the perspective of two widows rather than that of the wealthy Boaz. Ancient Israelite women were economically dependent on their husbands and sons, so Naomi and Ruth (both childless and widowed) are at the lowest level of poverty. They show great courage and resourcefulness by making their way in a man's world. This book pictures an ideal society where those who are different are welcomed and valued, where there is help for the poor so that no one goes hungry, and where the elderly are cared for. People act as they should toward each other.

We don't have a good sense of when the book was written or who might have written it. The story's final verse mentions King David, so it may have been written during the time when David's family ruled Judah (10th to 7th centuries BCE). But the story also shows Israelites marrying foreigners, a practice that was much discussed during the post-exilic period (5th to 4th centuries BCE), so it is also possible, and probably more likely, that the story was written then.

There are two options about where the book of Ruth fits in the order of the books of the Bible. The Christian sequence, which is followed by the CEB, reflects ancient Greek and Latin manuscripts. It places the book between Judges and 1 Samuel. This locates the story at the end of the time of Israel's tribal leaders (see Ruth 1:1), and looking forward to the time of the kings (see Ruth 4:18-22). The Jewish tradition, going back to ancient Hebrew manuscripts, places Ruth with the five scrolls in the Writings section of the Hebrew Bible. This is because each scroll is read on a particular Jewish holiday. Ruth is read on Shavuot, also called the Festival of Weeks (Exod 34:22; Num 28:26; Deut 16:10-12), which occurs at the end of the harvest season. Both the Christian and Jewish ordering provide insight into the meaning of the book of Ruth and demonstrate its ongoing theological significance. They highlight the themes of royal covenant and divine providence that have been important in faith traditions throughout the centuries.

The family in Moab

1 During the days when the judges ruled, there was a famine in the land. A man with his wife and two sons went from Bethlehem of Judah to dwell in the territory of Moab. <sup>2</sup>The name of that man was Elimelech, the name of his wife was Naomi, and the names of his two sons were Mahlon and Chilion. They were Ephrathites from Bethlehem in Judah. They entered the territory of Moab and settled there.

<sup>6</sup>Then she arose along with her daughters-in-law to return from the field of Moab, because while in the territory of Moab she had heard that the LORD had paid attention to his people by providing food for them. <sup>7</sup>She left the place where she had been, and her two daughters-in-law went with her. They went along the road to return to the land of Judah.

<sup>8</sup>Naomi said to her daughters-in-law, "Go, turn back, each of you to the household of your mother. May the LORD deal faithfully with you, just as you have done with the dead and with me. <sup>9</sup>May the LORD provide for you so that you may find security, each woman in the household of her husband." Then she kissed them, and they lifted up their voices and wept.

<sup>11</sup>Naomi replied, "Turn back, my daughters. Why would you go with me? Will there again be sons in my womb, that they would be husbands for you? <sup>12</sup>Turn back, my daughters. Go. I am too old for a husband. If I were to say that I have hope, even if I had a husband tonight, and even more, if I were to bear sons—<sup>13</sup>would you wait until they grew up? Would you refrain from having a husband? No, my daughters. This is more bitter for me than for you, since the LORD's will has come out against me."

<sup>16</sup>But Ruth replied, "Don't urge me to abandon you, to turn back from following after you. Wherever you go, I will go; and wherever you stay, I will stay. Your people will be my people, and your God will be my God. <sup>17</sup>Wherever you die, I will die, and there I will be buried. May the LORD do this to me and more so if even death separates me from you." <sup>18</sup>When Naomi saw that Ruth was determined to go with her, she stopped speaking to her about it.

Gn 31:55;
Dt 10:20; Ru 1:4
1:5-6 Ru 2:11;
Ps 45:10

1:1-2 The story opens with a family migrating to a foreign land because of famine, recalling the journeys of Sarai and Abram (Gen 12:10) and Jacob's sons (Gen 42:1-2).

1:1 when the judges ruled: the time after Israel settled in Canaan and before it became a kingdom. Moab: a country east of the Dead Sea. It is often presented negatively, as an enemy of Israel (e.g., Deut 23:3-6; Isa 15-16).

1:2 Names are symbolic in the story. Elimelech means "my God is king," and Naomi means "pleasant." The names of Mahlon ("sickly") and Chilion ("frail") hint at their upcoming deaths (Ruth 1:5). It is ironic that in Bethlehem, which means "house of food," there is no food. Ephrathites: Ephrathah is another name for either Bethlehem or a nearby village and is associated with King David (see Ruth 4:11).

1:6-7 return: The theme of returning or turning back appears throughout Ruth (10 times in Ruth 1, all from the same Hebrew word). Here the word refers to physical movement but also hints at changing one's mind and loyalties.

1:6 Here is the first of two places in the book where God acts directly (the other is Ruth 4:13). God's providing food is a common image in the Bible (e.g., Ezek 47:8-12; Jer 31:12-14; Ps 104:13-15) and gives Naomi a reason to return home after the many years in Moab. Food and fertility are themes in the book.

1:8-9 The first of several blessings in the story (cf. Ruth 2:4, 12, 19-20; 3:10; 4:11-12, 14). Naomi shows concern for the well-being of her daughters-in-law and recognizes their loyalty to her and her sons. Their emotional response suggests the affection the women have for each other. the household of your mother: This is an unexpected phrase, since men were the traditional heads of households. The phrase adds to the focus on women in this story. Mothers' houses are mentioned only a few times in the OT, usually in connection with marriage (Gen 24:28; Song 3:4; 8:2). the household of her husband: In this male-focused ancient culture, young widows would be able to find financial security only by remarrying.

1:11-13 Naomi's speech reflects, though doesn't follow exactly, the rule that if a man dies, his brother is required to marry his widow to provide her a son (Deut 25:5-10). Her reply shows a bit of humor, but she also sounds frustrated and discouraged by what looks like a hopeless situation.

1:16-17 Ruth not only pledges to move to Bethlehem with Naomi but to join a new culture and take on a new identity.

1:20 Job 6:4
2:2 Lv 19:9-10,
Lv 23:22;

<sup>19</sup>So both of them went along until they arrived at Bethlehem. When they arrived at Bethlehem, the whole town was excited on account of them, and the women of the town asked, "Can this be Naomi?"

<sup>20</sup>She replied to them, "Don't call me Naomi,<sup>a</sup> but call me Mara,<sup>b</sup> for the Almighty<sup>c</sup> has made me very bitter. <sup>21</sup>I went away full, but the LORD has returned me empty. Why would you call me Naomi, when the LORD has testified against me, and the Almighty has deemed me guilty?"

Gleaning in Bethlehem

2Now Naomi had a respected relative, a man of worth, through her husband from the family of Elimelech. His name was Boaz. <sup>2</sup>Ruth the Moabite said to Naomi, "Let me go to the field so that I may glean among the ears of grain behind someone in whose eyes I might find favor."

Naomi replied to her, "Go, my daughter." <sup>3</sup>So she went; she arrived and she gleaned in the field behind the harvesters. By chance, it happened to be the portion of the field that belonged to Boaz, who was from the family of Elimelech.

<sup>4</sup>Just then Boaz arrived from Bethlehem. He said to the harvesters, "May the LORD be with you."

And they said to him, "May the LORD bless you."

<sup>6</sup>The young man who was overseeing the harvesters answered, "She's a young Moabite woman, the one who returned with Naomi from the territory of Moab. <sup>7</sup>She said, 'Please let me glean so that I might gather up grain from among the bundles behind the harvesters.' She arrived and has been on her feet from the morning until now, and has sat down for only a moment."<sup>d</sup>

<sup>8</sup>Boaz said to Ruth, "Haven't you understood, my daughter? Don't go glean in another field; don't go anywhere else. Instead, stay here with my young women. <sup>9</sup>Keep your eyes on the field that they are harvesting and go along after them. I've ordered the young men not to assault you. Whenever you are thirsty, go to the jugs and drink from what the young men have filled."

<sup>10</sup>Then she bowed down, face to the ground, and replied to him, "How is it that I've found favor in your eyes, that you notice me? I'm an immigrant." <sup>11</sup>Boaz responded to her,

1:19 the women of the town haven't seen Naomi for so long that they barely recognize her and are most likely surprised to see her coming back. Later these women will celebrate with her (Ruth 4:14-15).

1:20-21 Naomi ("pleasant") argues that her name should be Mara ("bitter") because of her great loss. In keeping with the biblical tradition of lamenting and praying for help, she places responsibility for misfortune on God.

1:22 The barley harvest occurs in late spring (April and May). This detail hints that there will be relief from the famine. Ruth the Moabite: The roles of the two women are now reversed, and Ruth is the immigrant in a foreign land. 2:1 Boaz's name probably means "strength is in him," which is a hint of his ability to take decisive action. of worth: Boaz will later use these same words to describe Ruth (Ruth 3:11).

2:2 Landowners were required to leave part of the harvest in the fields for widows, immigrants, and the poor (Deut 24:19-22; Lev 19:9-10; 23:22; notice that Ruth fits all three categories). By suggesting that she go to glean (collect what is left in the fields), Ruth takes initiative to provide for the two women. my daughter: This reference shows Naomi's growing sense of connection with and responsibility for Ruth.

2:3 Is it sheer luck or God's direction that takes Ruth to Boaz's field? Notice the contrast between Boaz's wealth and status as a landowner and the poverty of the two widows.

2:4-5 The words of Boaz and his workers show their respect for God. Blessings occur also in Ruth 2:12, 20.

2:5 "To whom does this young woman belong?" In ancient male-focused societies, women were not full individuals in their own right but belonged to their fathers or husbands. Ruth, however, has neither!

2:6-7 Like Boaz (Ruth 2:11), the overseer has heard positive things about Ruth. Though the Hebrew phrase translated as has been on her feet . . . sat down for only a moment allows various understandings, it basically suggests Ruth's stamina and persistence.

2:8 my daughter: The same phrase used by Naomi in Ruth 2:2. The difference in age between Boaz and Ruth will become significant later (Ruth 3:10).

2:9 assault: Male harvesters might try to rape a single woman working in the fields, especially a poor foreign woman.

2:11-13 Like Abram (Gen 12:1-3), Ruth left her country and her family, but she has done it without any promise of blessing from God. Boaz has apparently heard good "Everything that you did for your mother-in-law after your husband's death has been reported fully to me: how you left behind your father, your mother, and the land of your birth, and came to a people you hadn't known beforehand. <sup>12</sup>May the LORD reward you* for your deed. May you receive a rich reward from the LORD, the God of Israel, under whose wings you've come to seek refuge." <sup>13</sup>She said, "May I continue to find favor in your eyes, sir, because you've comforted me and because you've spoken kindly to your female servant—even though I'm not one of your female servants."

<sup>14</sup>At mealtime Boaz said to her, "Come over here, eat some of the bread, and dip your piece in the vinegar." She sat alongside the harvesters, and he served roasted grain to her. She ate, was satisfied, and had leftovers. <sup>15</sup>Then she got up to glean.

Boaz ordered his young men, "Let her glean between the bundles, and don't humiliate her. <sup>16</sup>Also, pull out some from the bales for her and leave them behind for her to glean. And don't scold her."

She told her mother-in-law with whom she had worked and said, "The name of the man with whom I worked today is Boaz."

<sup>20</sup>Naomi replied to her daughter-in-law, "May he be blessed by the LORD, who hasn't abandoned his faithfulness with the living or with the dead." Naomi said to her, "The man is one of our close relatives; he's one of our redeemers."

<sup>21</sup>Ruth the Moabite replied, "Furthermore, he said to me, 'Stay with my workers until they've finished all of my harvest.'"

Encounter at the threshing floor

3 Naomi her mother-in-law said to her, "My daughter, shouldn't I seek security for you, so that things might go well for you? <sup>2</sup>Now isn't Boaz, whose young women you were with, our relative? Tonight he will be winnowing barley at the threshing floor. <sup>3</sup>You should bathe, put on some perfume, wear nice clothes, and then go down to the threshing floor. Don't make yourself known to the man until he has finished eating and drinking. <sup>4</sup>When he lies things about Ruth's character. To his wish that she be treated well by God, she replies somewhat boldly that she also hopes to find favor from Boaz himself. She is calling on him to take responsibility (see sidebar, "Loyal Living").

2:14-16 Boaz shows his generosity by providing Ruth a big lunch and instructing his workers to pull out grain for her from the already-harvested bales. This goes beyond what was required and expected of landowners.

2:17 An ephah, about two-thirds of a bushel, is quite a large yield for one day's work.

2:18 At Ruth's return from the fields with food, Naomi starts to become more hopeful and engaged. She recognizes Boaz's faithfulness to her husband through his actions toward Ruth that day (see sidebar, "Loyal Living"). Naomi had apparently not told Ruth about the existence of Boaz, nor warned her of the possible dangers of gleaning in the fields (Ruth 2:22).

2:20 Boaz is one of Naomi's redeemers, a close relative who has special obligations to help a family keep or reclaim its property if hard times require that the property be sold (see Lev 25:25-28; Jer 32:6-15).

2:23 This verse sums up Ruth's weeks of working in the fields through the barley and wheat harvests (April through June). She has become the provider for the two women.

3:1 Now Naomi takes the initiative (see note on Ruth 2:2). Gleaning has been a temporary fix for their situation. Long-term security, which Naomi has wanted for her daughters-in-law since they were still back in Moab (Ruth 1:9), could be achieved for a woman in their society only through marriage.

3:2-4 Naomi decides that for the women it is time for Boaz to take more responsibility than merely to give them leftovers grain. She hatches a bold and risky plan that requires Ruth to dress up and go into a group of drunken men during the middle of the night. feet: sometimes used as a polite term for the genitals (cf. Isa 6:2). lie down: sometimes used as a polite term for sexual intercourse. This language strongly suggests a sexual encounter but doesn't absolutely need to be read that way.

3:2 winnowing barley at the threshing floor: done late in the day, when evening breezes would blow away the chaff. It was apparently an activity carried out by only the men of the community, as Ruth's presence would cause suspicion and gossip (Ruth 3:14).

down, notice the place where he is lying. Then go, uncover his feet, and lie down. And he will tell you what to do.”

<sup>7</sup>Boaz ate and drank, and he was in a good mood. He went over to lie down by the edge of the grain pile. Then she quietly approached, uncovered his legs, and lay down. <sup>8</sup>During the middle of the night, the man shuddered and turned over—and there was a woman lying at his feet. <sup>9</sup>“Who are you?” he asked.

She replied, “I’m Ruth your servant. Spread out your robe<sup>6</sup> over your servant, because you are a redeemer.”

<sup>10</sup>He said, “May you be blessed by the LORD, my daughter! You have acted even more faithfully than you did at first. You haven’t gone after rich or poor young men. <sup>11</sup>And now, my daughter, don’t be afraid. I’ll do for you everything you are asking. Indeed, my people—all who are at the gate—know that you are a woman of worth. <sup>12</sup>Now, although it’s certainly true that I’m a redeemer, there’s a redeemer who is a closer relative than I am. <sup>13</sup>Stay the night. And in the morning, if he’ll redeem you—good, let him redeem. But if he doesn’t want to redeem you, then—as the LORD lives—I myself will redeem you. Lie down until the morning.”

<sup>14</sup>So she lay at his feet until morning. Then she got up before one person could recognize another, for he had said, “No one should know that the woman came to the threshing floor.”

<sup>15</sup>He said, “Bring the cloak that you have on and hold it out.” She held it out, and he measured out six measures of barley and placed it upon her. Then she<sup>h</sup> went into town.

Loyal Living In the book of Ruth, every character, major and minor, lives loyally (or “faithfully,” Ruth 1:8; 3:10) with each other. Careful readers see that characters act not just for their own personal benefit but to promote the well-being of others. This faithfulness is evident also in the positive comments about Ruth (see Ruth 2:11-12; 3:10-11; 4:15) and about Boaz (see Ruth 2:1, 19-20; 3:17). The OT most often speaks of such “faithfulness” in connection with God’s own care for the people (e.g., Ps 89). In the book of Ruth, however, humans behave in this God-inspired way toward each other. Through the various choices made—Ruth’s caring for a poor and elderly relative, Naomi’s planning for her daughters-in-law, Boaz’s taking a needy immigrant into his own family, the townspeople’s support of others in the community—we see love as not just an emotion but as an action. These persons do far more than they are obligated to do. The story shows what it’s like to live faithfully in community, to watch for someone else’s need and do whatever is possible to meet that need.

3:7-8 a good mood could indicate that Boaz is drunk after the evening celebration or that he is simply relaxed and happy. lay down... feet: See note on Ruth 3:2-4. Boaz seems startled, and perhaps confused about what might have happened, when he wakes up during the middle of the night. Apparently he doesn’t recognize Ruth in the darkness.

3:9 Though Naomi told Ruth that Boaz would tell her what to do (Ruth 3:4), Ruth instead tells him what to do. robe: The same Hebrew word is translated as “wing” in Ruth 2:12. There, Boaz spoke of God’s care for Ruth; now she calls Boaz himself to provide for her, using the language of a marriage proposal (cf. Ezek 16:8). Because the situation in the story does not match the details of Deuteronomy 25:5-10, Boaz is not required to marry Ruth (see notes on Ruth 1:11-13; 2:20). He agrees out of kindness rather than obligation.

3:10 As before, Ruth’s loyalty has been noticed. Her first faithfulness to Naomi (Ruth 2:11) now extends to Boaz. Boaz doesn’t scold her for her bold action on the threshing floor but welcomes her.

3:11 a woman of worth: Compare with the description of Boaz in Ruth 2:1. This phrase, which is also used for the remarkable woman in Proverbs 31, is a strong compliment, especially considering that Boaz is a prominent leader in the community and Ruth is a poor, immigrant widow. Ruth is no longer a “servant” (Ruth 2:13; 3:9) but equal to Boaz in moral character.

3:12-13 We learn for the first time that there is a closer relative to Naomi than Boaz. This man would have first responsibility for acting as a redeemer (see note on Ruth 2:20) for the family. Boaz promises to do so if this other man refuses the responsibility.

3:14 Just as during the harvesting season, Boaz is concerned for both Ruth’s physical safety (Ruth 2:8-9) and her need for food (Ruth 2:14-16). If Ruth is seen on the threshing floor at dawn, it will look as if she came only to get some grain.

3:15 six measures of barley is a huge amount. The image of Ruth carrying the grain in her apron hints at her upcoming pregnancy (Ruth 4:12).

So Ruth told her everything the man had done for her. <sup>17</sup>She said, "He gave me these six measures of barley, for he said to me, 'Don't go away empty-handed to your mother-in-law.'"

<sup>18</sup>"Sit tight, my daughter," Naomi replied, "until you know how it turns out. The man won't rest until he resolves the matter today."

A new family brings fulfillment

4 Meanwhile, Boaz went up to the gate and sat down there. Just then, the redeemer about whom Boaz had spoken was passing by. He said, "Sir, come over here and sit down." So he turned aside and sat down. <sup>2</sup>Then he took ten men from the town's elders and said, "Sit down here." And they sat down.

<sup>3</sup>Boaz said to the redeemer, "Naomi, who has returned from the field of Moab, is selling the portion of the field that belonged to our brother Elimelech. <sup>4</sup>I thought that I should let you know and say, 'Buy it, in the presence of those sitting here and in the presence of the elders of my people.' If you will redeem it, redeem it; but if you<sup>1</sup> won't redeem it, tell me so that I may know. There isn't anyone to redeem it except you, and I'm next in line after you."

He replied, "I will redeem it."

<sup>6</sup>But the redeemer replied, "Then I can't redeem it for myself, without risking damage to my own inheritance. Redeem it for yourself. You can have my right of redemption, because I'm unable to act as redeemer."

<sup>7</sup>In Israel, in former times, this was the practice regarding redemption and exchange to confirm any such matter: a man would take off his sandal and give it to the other person. This was the process of making a transaction binding in Israel. <sup>8</sup>Then the redeemer said to Boaz, "Buy it for yourself," and he took off his sandal.

<sup>9</sup>Boaz announced to the elders and all the people, "Today you are witnesses that I've bought from the hand of Naomi all that belonged to Elimelech and all that belonged to Chilion and Mahlon. <sup>10</sup>And also Ruth the Moabite, the wife of Mahlon, I've bought to be my wife, to preserve the dead man's name for his inheritance so that the name of the dead man might not be cut off from his brothers or from the gate of his hometown—today you are witnesses."

<sup>11</sup>Then all the people who were at the gate and the elders said, "We are witnesses. May the LORD grant that the woman who is coming into your household be like Rachel and like Leah,

3:17 Don't go away empty-handed to your mother-in-law. So far as we know, Boaz didn't mention Naomi at all. By placing these words in his mouth, Ruth extends his care and concern for herself to Naomi as well. Naomi's emptiness (Ruth 1:21) is now replaced by great physical abundance. Ruth has acted as her redeemer to bring about this change in circumstances.

3:18 After all the women's work and activity, their future is out of their hands. They can only wait.

4:1-2 A town's gate served as its legal, commercial, and judicial center. elders were important men in the community, called on here to witness the transaction.

4:3 This is the first mention of the fact that Naomi owns property. Apparently the field isn't currently being farmed and able to provide grain. A woman most likely wouldn't be able to sell family land on her own, and thus Boaz is representing her in this sale.

4:3-6 The concern is to keep the land in the family, which selling to a redeemer, a close relative, will do (see note on Ruth 2:20). Boaz doesn't tell the other man up front that marriage to Ruth, which would include supporting her and their future children, is part of the arrangement of the sale. In backing out, the other man isn't acting irresponsibly or necessarily objecting to having a wife who is Moabite, but only acknowledging that he can't financially afford to help.

4:7 Taking off a sandal is also mentioned in Deuteronomy 25:9, though the details are different. The fact that the narrator explains this custom suggests that it was no longer practiced at the time of the writing of the book.

4:9-10 By beginning and ending his speech with the phrase Today you are witnesses, Boaz highlights how important the townspeople are to this new arrangement. The individuals in this story act with the support of the local community. preserve the dead man's name: In his speech to the men at the gate, Boaz emphasizes that the marriage will maintain the heritage of Ruth's dead husband. But it also, of course, meets the pressing needs of two women who are still alive. Ultimately, the child is remembered as Boaz's own child (Ruth 4:21).

4:11-12 The entire community offers a blessing for the marriage, repeating their hopes that there will be many children from it. Rachel and Leah were wives of Israel's ancestor Jacob (Gen 29-35). Tamar, daughter-in-law to Boaz's tribal ancestor Judah, was a foreigner and childless widow who took risky action to preserve herself and her both of whom built up the house of Israel. May you be fertile in Ephrathah and may you preserve a name in Bethlehem. <sup>12</sup>And may your household be like the household of Perez, whom Tamar bore to Judah—through the children that the LORD will give you from this young woman.”

He was intimate with her, the LORD let her become pregnant, and she gave birth to a son. <sup>14</sup>The women said to Naomi, “May the LORD be blessed, who today hasn’t left you without a redeemer. May his name be proclaimed in Israel. <sup>15</sup>He will restore your life and sustain you in your old age. Your daughter-in-law who loves you has given birth to him. She’s better for you than seven sons.” <sup>16</sup>Naomi took the child and held him to her breast, and she became his guardian. <sup>17</sup>The neighborhood women gave him a name, saying, “A son has been born to Naomi.” They called his name Obed.<sup>k</sup> He became Jesse’s father and David’s grandfather.

4:13 the LORD let her become pregnant: This is God’s second direct action in the story (cf. Ruth 1:6). The food and children provided by God solve the two problems with which the book began, famine and the death of a family.

4:14-16 The townswomen who greeted Naomi on her return home (Ruth 1:19) now bless her. To consider Ruth better . . . than seven sons is very high praise in a culture that values men and sons over women and daughters. The newborn Obed acts as Naomi’s redeemer who will restore her. He brings her back to life again. Naomi’s loss and emptiness are reversed with the arrival of this grandson.

4:17 It is unusual for neighborhood women to name a child. This task is typically performed by parents or other family members. Referring to Obed as Naomi’s, and not Ruth’s, son emphasizes how he is replacing the family Naomi has lost.

4:18-22 The book ends with a family history, or genealogy, that points forward to David. (This may be a later addition to the story.) How surprising that the future king of Israel has a Moabite great-grandmother! By pointing toward David, Israel’s ideal king, these verses link the story of this small family to the nation’s story.

1 SAMUEL

In the oldest Hebrew manuscripts, 1 and 2 Samuel were one book, often written on a single scroll. Greek translations, followed by Latin, divided 1 and 2 Samuel and 1 and 2 Kings into four books called "1–4 Kingdoms," and this practice continued in Roman Catholic Bibles well into the 20th century. Protestant Bibles began to divide the book of Samuel into two books in the 16th century.

The books of Samuel are part of a great history work stretching from Joshua through 2 Kings (Ruth wasn't a part of this, but was placed after Judges in English Bibles). This work was influenced by the book of Deuteronomy, and so the collection is usually called the Deuteronomistic History. Looking back from the experience of Babylonian exile, this history work tried to understand how Israel's story in the land of promise came to an end in destruction and exile.

This historian included in his large history many smaller pieces focused on events or persons important to Israel's story. In the books of Samuel, the focus is on a time of change when circumstances led to the establishment of kingship in Israel to replace the loose tribal alliance found in the book of Judges. This change began due to internal failures of the tribal system, including the corruption of the sons of Eli at the Shiloh sanctuary where the Lord's covenant chest was kept (1 Sam 2); and the external threat of a more sustained enemy pressure from the Philistines (1 Sam 4). In 1 Samuel 8 the elders of Israel insist that the prophet Samuel set a king over them. Almost every episode in the books of Samuel prepares us for and takes us through the challenges and opportunities that come from the transition to kingship. Three key persons dominate the events of this period: the prophet Samuel; Israel's first king, Saul; and Israel's second king, David. Through these persons and events in the stories of 1 and 2 Samuel, we also see the working of God's providence. In these books, God doesn't work around the leaders and events of the day but through them.

Some of the traditions reflected in the stories may originate near the time of these events (ca. 1020–960 BCE), and they don't have a single consistent point of view. Some stories clearly see the request for a king as sinful, while others see kingship as God's new gift to Israel. Saul's story is, in the end, a story of tragic failure, while David is considered a man following the Lord's own heart (1 Sam 13:14). Even David experiences a time of failure and judgment (2 Sam 11–12). The uncertainties of the time are no doubt reflected in the varied viewpoints of the stories. The historian may have found some parts of 1 and 2 Samuel already existing as smaller collections. Therefore, as we will see below, he may have simply included these smaller collections with a more focused viewpoint in his larger work.

While the literary history of 1 and 2 Samuel may be complex, scholars generally agree that the books of Samuel fall into seven distinct segments:

1. Samuel the prophet and the corruption of the House of Eli (1 Sam 1–3; 7). The books of Samuel don't begin with dramatic events on a national stage, but with God's response to the prayer of a barren woman, Hannah. Her son becomes the prophet Samuel, through whom God will respond to the prayers of a troubled Israel. Samuel grows up at the sanctuary at Shiloh, where we are introduced to the corruption of the sons of Eli, the priest of Shiloh. Israel is in need of new leadership for a new future.
2. The story of the Lord's covenant chest (1 Sam 4–6). Israel also faces an external threat in the form of the Philistines, who desire to expand their influence and control into Israelite territory. The Philistines defeat Israel in a decisive battle, and the Lord's covenant chest (traditionally known as the "ark") is captured. This chest is the sacred sign of God's presence, which was thought to protect Israel. The Philistines occupy much of the land as Israelite human leaders disappear from the stories of these chapters. Nevertheless, the Lord's hand strikes the Philistines and their god, Dagon. The Philistines send the Lord's covenant chest back into Israel. Israel needs new leaders, but the power for change comes from God.
3. The establishment of kingship and the choosing of Saul (1 Sam 8–15). The elders of Israel demand from Samuel a king "like all the other nations," and Samuel considers this a sinful rejection of God's kingship (1 Sam 8). The very next story tells of God's choice of Saul as Israel's first king to deliver them from the Philistines. Samuel anoints Saul, who receives God's spirit (1 Sam 9:1–10:15). The viewpoint of these stories appears to be very favorable toward kingship. This section includes three stories of Saul becoming king and two stories of Saul's rejection as king by God through the prophet Samuel. The text presents both kingship and Saul ambiguously, perhaps reflecting varied opinions of kingship that arose throughout the history of Israel in light of later kings. Saul's story is one of promise and tragedy.

The rise of David (1 Sam 16:1–2 Sam 5:10). Many believe this material on David's early career shows the marks of an early collection of stories now included in the larger history work. The stories not only introduce David but present the traits that make him worthy to be God's anointed king. A recurring motif is "The LORD is with him" (1 Sam 16:18; 17:37; 18:12, 14, 28; 20:13; 2 Sam 5:10). As the story progresses, individuals and groups in Israel declare their love for David and acknowledge him as God's coming king for Israel. By contrast, Saul becomes increasingly driven by his own folly, jealousy, and anger. He commits senseless acts of violence, pursues David rather than opposing the Philistines, and finally takes his own life in the face of Philistine defeat. We come to know David as a great warrior, but also a man of prayer and a leader with wisdom and compassion. First, Judah makes him king. Later, the northern tribes of Israel will do so, but not before David sings the praises of Saul and his son Jonathan (2 Sam 1).

David on the throne (2 Sam 5:11–10:19). Unlike Saul, David brings the kingdom together and makes it stable. New royal realities displace tribal realities, but not without respecting earlier traditions of the tribal league. Jerusalem becomes David's new capital, located neither in northern nor southern tribal territory. David brings the Lord's covenant chest to Jerusalem, giving it a place of honor. The prophet Nathan declares a new covenant featuring God's eternal promise to David's dynasty. This new king defeats Israel's enemies, including the Philistines, drawing them into the wider Davidic kingdom. These stories picture movement from a loose tribal alliance to David's firm leadership over an infant royal state.

The court history of David (2 Sam 11–20). Recent interpreters see in this section a tragic family story illustrating David's use of power for his own self-centered ends, which leads to tragic consequences for his own family. David's adultery with Bathsheba, the killing of her husband, Uriah, and the confrontation and judgment by the prophet Nathan (2 Sam 11–12) mark the division of David's story into two parts: blessing/curse or gift/grasp. A tragic story unfolds in David's family, one in which his own children use power in self-serving ways. Rape, murder, exile, rebellion, civil war, and grief dominate this narrative. Only in David's retreat from Jerusalem do we see again the David who trusts his future to God as he depends on divine mercy (2 Sam 15:25–26; 16:12). David nears the end of his kingship still on the throne but chastened by the consequences of his own sin.

7. Final Davidic traditions (2 Sam 21–24). Until recently these chapters were seen as miscellaneous materials added to the narrative, which interrupt the flow of David's story. Scholars now treat these chapters as a more purposeful ending to the books of Samuel. This group of symmetrically arranged units reminds us that God's sovereignty, even under kings, exceeds human sovereignty. Two great poetic songs stand together at the heart of this section, a thanksgiving by David for God's deliverance (2 Sam 22; paralleling Ps 18) and a hymn in celebration of God's promise to David (2 Sam 23:1–7). These songs are surrounded by notices concerning David's mighty men (2 Sam 21:15–22; 23:8–39). The section begins with a narrative focused on dealing with Saul's guilt (2 Sam 21:1–14) and ends with an episode dealing with David's guilt (2 Sam 24). Taken together, these closing sections remind readers of the tragic story of David's misuse of power, and that David was never the sole focus of Israel's future. At the heart of these events were always God's promise and direction, and God's willingness to look beyond human failures to find a future for Israel and its leadership. This section therefore identifies the heroes, warriors, and mighty men surrounding David as also part of God's plan.

The conclusion to the books of Samuel suggests an important observation. Even beyond the great figures of Samuel, Saul, and David, the stories of the books of Samuel present a lively cast of secondary characters who make unique contributions to the story of what God is doing in Israel at this time: Hannah, Eli, Jonathan, Michal, Joab, Abigail, Abner, Nathan, Mephibosheth, Bathsheba, Absalom, Tamar.

Clearly the books of Samuel present the contributions of distinctive leaders and personalities to the story of Israel's future in this time of change. The books of Samuel, however, also witness to the fact that power doesn't rise from the force of human personality alone. Behind and beyond human events and political power, God acts to create a future for Israel. Hannah's song near the beginning (1 Sam 2:1-10) and David's song near the end (2 Sam 22:2-51) declare that God overturns the world's usual power arrangements. God can initiate, judge, renew, and empower, but chooses to do so through human leaders and their gifts. Nevertheless, in the end the books of Samuel remind us that God's providence will create the future.

1 Now there was a certain man from Ramathaim, a Zuphite* from the highlands of Ephraim, whose name was Elkanah. He was from the tribe of Ephraim, and he was the son of Jeroham son of Elihu son of Tohu son of Zuph. 2Elkanah had two wives, one named Hannah and the other named Peninnah. Peninnah had children, but Hannah didn't.

3Every year this man would leave his town to worship and sacrifice to the LORD of heavenly forces in Shiloh, where Eli's two sons Hophni and Phinehas were the LORD's priests. 4Whenever he sacrificed, Elkanah would give parts of the sacrifice to his wife Peninnah and to all her sons and daughters. 5But he would give only one part of it to Hannah, though he loved her, because the LORD had kept her from conceiving.<sup>b</sup> 6And because the LORD had kept Hannah from conceiving, her rival would make fun of her mercilessly, just to bother her. 7So that is what took place year after year. Whenever Hannah went to the Lord's house, Peninnah would make fun of her. Then she would cry and wouldn't eat anything.

8"Hannah, why are you crying?" her husband Elkanah would say to her. "Why won't you eat? Why are you<sup>c</sup> so sad? Aren't I worth more to you than ten sons?"

9One time, after eating and drinking in Shiloh, Hannah got up and presented herself before the LORD.<sup>d</sup> (Now Eli the priest was sitting in the chair by the doorpost of the LORD's temple.) 10Hannah was very upset and couldn't stop crying as she prayed to the LORD. 11Then she made this promise: "LORD of heavenly forces, just look at your servant's pain and remember me! Don't forget your servant! Give her a boy! Then I'll give him to the LORD for his entire life. No razor will ever touch his head."

12As she kept praying before the LORD, Eli watched her mouth. 13Now Hannah was praying in her heart; her lips were moving, but her voice was silent, so Eli thought she was drunk.

14"How long will you act like a drunk? Sober up!" Eli told her.

15"No sir!" Hannah replied. "I'm just a very sad woman. I haven't had any wine or beer but have been pouring out my heart to the LORD. 16Don't think your servant is some good-for-nothing woman. This whole time I've been praying out of my great worry and trouble!"

17Eli responded, "Then go in peace. And may the God of Israel give you what you've asked from him."

18"Please think well of me, your servant," Hannah said. Then the woman went on her way, ate some food, and wasn't sad any longer.<sup>e</sup>

19They got up early the next morning and worshipped the LORD. Then they went back home to Ramah. Elkanah had sex with his wife Hannah, and the LORD remembered her.

1:1-4:1a The books of Samuel open in a time of crisis demanding change. These first chapters introduce the internal crisis caused by the corruption of the sons of Eli, the chief priest at the Israelite sanctuary at Shiloh. The story of the establishment of kingship in Israel begins with God's response to the prayer of a childless woman, Hannah, and the birth of her son, Samuel, destined to be God's prophet during this time of change.

1:1 Ephraim . . . from the tribe of Ephraim: Samuel and also Saul will come from the territory of the northern Israelite tribes. Later, David will arise from the southern tribe of Judah. Tensions between northern and southern tribes play a role in the events leading to kingship in Israel.

1:2 A barren woman, Hannah, ridiculed by her rival (1 Sam 1:6), is God's instrument to begin the transition to kingship in Israel. God's use of barren women to advance the story of Israel is also displayed in the stories of Sarah (Gen 18) and Samson's mother (Judg 13).

1:3 Lord of heavenly forces in Shiloh: The Israelite tribal league maintained a central sanctuary at Shiloh in the central highlands. God's presence was enthroned there above a gold-covered chest (see sidebar, "The Lord's Covenant Chest" at 1 Sam 5). The "Lord of heavenly forces" is the most common title for Israel's God, present above the chest. It symbolized the hope that God would fight for them against their enemies. Pious Israelites would make pilgrimages to sacrifice at Shiloh, as seen here in the annual practice of Elkanah along with his two wives.

1:11 Hannah prays to the Lord for a son, making a solemn promise to dedicate any son to the Lord's service. Because this promise includes the sign of never cutting his hair, it is often identified with the promise taken by Samson's mother (Judg 13:7). Such a person is described in Numbers 6:1-21 as a nazirite, which means "one made holy or separate." The term "nazirite" actually appears as an addition in the Dead Sea Scrolls to 1 Samuel 1:22, when Hannah declares her intention for the boy Samuel.

1:12-18 The chief priest Eli mistakes Hannah's silent prayer for drunkenness. When Hannah corrects him, she pleads with him not to consider her a good-for-nothing woman (1:16). Ironically, this is the same word in Hebrew used to describe Eli's corrupt sons as "despicable" in 1 Samuel 2:12. After realizing his mistake, Eli adds his blessing to Hannah's prayer.

<sup>20</sup>So in the course of time, Hannah conceived and gave birth to a son. She named him Samuel, which means “I asked the LORD for him.”<sup>f</sup>

Samuel's dedication

“I'll bring the boy when he is weaned,” she told her husband, “so he can be presented to the LORD and stay there permanently. I will offer him as a nazirite forever.”<sup>g</sup>

<sup>23</sup>“Do what seems best to you,” said her husband Elkanah. “Stay here until you've weaned him. But may the LORD bring to pass what you've<sup>h</sup> promised.” So the woman stayed home and nursed her son until she had weaned him.

<sup>26</sup>“Excuse me, sir!” Hannah said. “As surely as you live, sir, I am the woman who stood here next to you, praying to the LORD. <sup>27</sup>I prayed for this boy, and the LORD gave me what I asked from him. <sup>28</sup>So now I give this boy back to the LORD. As long as he lives, he is given to the LORD.”

Then they worshipped there before the LORD.<sup>l</sup>

Hannah's song

2 Then Hannah prayed:

My heart rejoices in the LORD.

My strength<sup>m</sup> rises up in the LORD!

My mouth mocks my enemies because I rejoice in your deliverance.

no, no one except you!

There is no rock like our God!

<sup>3</sup>Don't go on and on, talking so proudly, spouting arrogance from your mouth, because the LORD is the God who knows, and he weighs every act.

but those who were stumbling now dress themselves in power!

but the ones who were starving are now fat from food!
The woman who was barren has birthed seven children, but the mother with many sons has lost them all!

1:20 Samuel: This name means “God has heard,” but the text relates it to the Hebrew verb for “to ask,” which appears seven times in this chapter. It is the name Saul that is closely related to “ask,” possibly pointing the reader to the close connection between the lives and fates of Samuel and Saul.

1:24-28 The boy Samuel is very young, only just weaned, when Hannah leaves him with Eli to serve the Lord at Shiloh in fulfillment of her promise. Israelites understood that one is obligated to give back from whatever the Lord gives to them (1:28).

2:1-10 Hannah's song: This poetic piece is both a prayer and a hymn of praise and thanksgiving. Its theme is that God can use the powerless to break the power of the mighty. Just as God has used Hannah, a barren woman, to give birth to Samuel, God is at work transforming Israel's future. Hannah's song is similar in theme and language to Mary's Magnificat in Luke 1:46-55.

2:1 Hannah begins with a celebration of the reversal God brought to her own personal situation. The word translated strength here is the Hebrew word commonly translated “horn,” used often as an image for the strength of great leaders (Ps 132:17). Her song ends with this very same word (1 Sam 2:10), there used for the strength God will give “his king” and “his anointed one.” Hannah's song celebrates a work of God begun in her son Samuel that will end in the first kings of Israel, anointed by Samuel.

2:2-3 Hannah begins her song in general praise of the Lord. 2:4-9 The main body of Hannah's song celebrates how God reverses the fortunes of the weak, the poor, and the powerless while overturning the might of the powerful.

- <sup>6</sup>The LORD! He brings death, gives life, takes down to the grave,<sup>a</sup> and raises up!
- <sup>7</sup>The LORD! He makes poor, gives wealth, brings low, but also lifts up high!
- <sup>8</sup>God raises the poor from the dust, lifts up the needy from the garbage pile.
God sits them with officials, gives them the seat of honor!
The pillars of the earth belong to the LORD;
he set the world on top of them!
- <sup>9</sup>God guards the feet of his faithful ones, but the wicked die in darkness because no one succeeds by strength alone.
- <sup>10</sup>The LORD! His enemies are terrified!
God thunders against them from heaven!
The LORD! He judges the far corners of the earth!

May God give strength to his king and raise high the strength of his anointed one.

<sup>11</sup>Then Elkanah went home to Ramah, but the boy served the LORD under Eli the priest.

Corruption of Eli's sons

2:10 Hannah's song ends by linking God's power to the strength and power of God's king, God's anointed one. Since Israel doesn't yet have kings, this song anticipates the story that will unfold in the books of Samuel. Kings will rule Israel, and they will be chosen and anointed through Hannah's son and God's prophet, Samuel.

2:11-17 Eli's two sons, Hophni and Phinehas (1 Sam 1:3), are corrupt, and their misdeeds are recounted here in detail. Worshipers who came to offer sacrifices to the Lord were prescribed ritual practices that required meat offerings to be first boiled and then burned. Following the entirely burned offering, roasted meat was eaten in communal meals, in which the priests might participate. Eli's sons were seizing raw meat before any sacrifice because it could, of course, be roasted in a more palatable manner. This greed, however, deprived worshippers of the ability to offer their best to the Lord.

2:18-21 In contrast to Eli's corrupt sons, the boy Samuel was growing up in harmony with God's purposes (2:21b). The Lord rewarded Hannah's faithfulness with additional children.

wanted to kill them. <sup>26</sup>Meanwhile, the boy Samuel kept growing up and was more and more liked by both the LORD and the people.

<sup>27</sup>Now a man of God came to Eli and said, "This is what the LORD says: I revealed myself very clearly to your father's household when they were slaves<sup>a</sup> in Egypt to the house of Pharaoh. <sup>28</sup>I chose your father from all of Israel's tribes to be my priest, to go up onto my altar, to burn incense, and to wear the priestly vest<sup>b</sup> in my presence. I also gave all of the Israelites' food offerings to your father's household. <sup>29</sup>Why then do you kick my sacrifices and my offerings—the very ones I commanded for my dwelling place? Why do you respect your sons more than me, getting fat off the best parts of every offering from my people Israel? <sup>30</sup>Because of all that, this is what the LORD, the God of Israel, declares: I had promised that your household and your father's household would serve me forever. But now—this is what the LORD declares: I'll do no such thing! No. I honor those who honor me, and whoever despises me will be cursed. <sup>31</sup>The days are coming soon when I will eliminate both your children<sup>c</sup> and the children of your father's household. There won't be an old person left in your family tree. <sup>32</sup>You'll see trouble in my dwelling place, though all will go well for Israel.<sup>d</sup> But there will never be an old person in your family tree. <sup>33</sup>One of your descendants whom I don't eliminate from serving at my altar will cry his<sup>e</sup> eyes out and be full of grief. Any descendants in your household will die by the sword.<sup>f</sup> <sup>34</sup>And what happens to your two sons Hophni and Phinehas will be a sign for you: they will both die on the same day. <sup>35</sup>Then I will establish for myself a trustworthy priest who will act in accordance with my thoughts and desires. I will build a trustworthy household for him, and he will serve before my anointed one forever. <sup>36</sup>Anyone left from your household will come and beg him for a bit of silver or a loaf of bread, saying: 'Please appoint me to some priestly duty so I can have a scrap of bread to eat.'"

Samuel's call

3 Now the boy Samuel was serving the LORD under Eli. The LORD's word was rare at that time, and visions weren't widely known. <sup>2</sup>One day Eli, whose eyes had grown so weak he was unable to see, was lying down in his room. <sup>3</sup>God's lamp hadn't gone out yet, and Samuel was lying down in the LORD's temple, where God's chest<sup>g</sup> was.

offerings, Eli's sons were engaging in illicit sexual practices, even with those women who served the sanctuary. Eli tried to plead with them, but to no avail.

2:26 Samuel, in further contrast to Eli's sons, continues to grow in God's favor.

2:27-36 A man of God comes to pronounce judgment on Eli, his sons, and his entire household. The text doesn't name this person as God's prophet, perhaps reserving that term for its first use for Samuel in 1 Samuel 3:20 (see also 1 Sam 9:9). This holy man, however, uses the patterns of prophetic speech and announces God's word of judgment on the house of Eli. The announcement of God's resolve to kill the sons at the end of 1 Samuel 2:25 foreshadows God's harsh judgment on Eli's household here in 2:27-36. The speech by this man of God judges Eli worthy to be cut off from the promise of God to Aaron that his descendants would serve forever as God's priests (2:28), because Eli's family members have used their office to exploit others (2:29). Eli and his descendants will die before their time (2:31); and the deaths of Hophni and Phinehas on the same day will be the sign that this judgment is beginning (2:34). This is fulfilled in the battle with the Philistines (1 Sam 4:11).

2:33, 35 There are two exceptions to the judgment against the house of Eli. Many translate 2:33 to indicate that "one" will be spared when all the remaining members of the house of Eli are slaughtered by the sword. This "one" would be Abiathar, who escapes when Saul massacres the remaining priests of Eli's line at Nob (1 Sam 22:6-23). The trustworthy priest from whom an eternal line of priests will come is Zadok, whose family will become the hereditary priests for Solomon's temple. Both Abiathar and Zadok were trusted members of David's inner circle, but Solomon banished Abiathar when he took the throne (1 Kgs 2:27).

3:1-4:1a This chapter on the call of Samuel marks a dramatic new initiative by God to alter Israel's future. Although the chapter focuses on the boy Samuel, the larger issue is God's use of the prophet to act for God in the events that bring Israel through crisis to a new future with kings.

3:1 The LORD's word was rare: This chapter opens by noting the absence of God's word in Israel, and ends by revealing the Lord's "trustworthy" prophet (1 Sam 3:20). The subject of this development is Samuel, who is a boy at the beginning of the chapter and a fully recognized prophetic leader of Israel by the end.

3:3 the LORD's temple: not a building but a tent sanctuary. The boy Samuel may have had some duties of service in the sanctuary since he was sleeping there. God's chest: traditionally known as the "ark" (see sidebar, "The Lord's Covenant Chest" at 1 Sam 5), this was the most holy object in the temple and symbolized God's presence there.

3:4-9 Although God is calling Samuel, it is Eli, the elderly priest, who recognizes God's call and instructs the boy Samuel. The irony here is powerful, since Samuel's initial task will spell disaster for Eli and his family.

"I didn't call you," Eli replied. "Go lie down." So he did.

<sup>6</sup>Again the LORD called Samuel, so Samuel got up, went to Eli, and said, "I'm here. You called me?"

"I didn't call, my son," Eli replied. "Go and lie down."

<sup>8</sup>A third time the LORD called Samuel. He got up, went to Eli, and said, "I'm here. You called me?"

Then Eli realized that it was the LORD who was calling the boy. <sup>9</sup>So Eli said to Samuel, "Go and lie down. If he calls you, say, 'Speak, LORD. Your servant is listening.'" So Samuel went and lay down where he'd been.

Samuel said, "Speak. Your servant is listening."

<sup>11</sup>The LORD said to Samuel, "I am about to do something in Israel that will make the ears of all who hear it tingle! <sup>12</sup>On that day, I will bring to pass against Eli everything I said about his household—every last bit of it!<sup>b</sup> <sup>13</sup>I told him that I would punish his family forever because of the wrongdoing he knew about—how his sons were cursing God,<sup>c</sup> but he wouldn't stop them. <sup>14</sup>Because of that I swore about Eli's household that his family's wrongdoing will never be reconciled by sacrifice or by offering."

<sup>15</sup>Samuel lay there until morning, then opened the doors of the LORD's house. Samuel was afraid to tell the vision to Eli. <sup>16</sup>But Eli called Samuel, saying: "Samuel, my son!"

"I'm here," Samuel said.

<sup>17</sup>"What did he say to you?" Eli asked. "Don't hide anything from me. May God deal harshly with you and worse still if you hide from me a single word from everything he said to you." <sup>18</sup>So Samuel told him everything and hid nothing from him.

"He is the LORD," Eli said. "He will do as he pleases."

<sup>19</sup>So Samuel grew up, and the LORD was with him, not allowing any of his words to fail. <sup>20</sup>All Israel from Dan to Beer-sheba knew that Samuel was trustworthy as the LORD's prophet. <sup>21</sup>The LORD continued to appear at Shiloh because the LORD revealed himself to Samuel at Shiloh through the LORD's own word. <sup>1</sup>And Samuel's word went out to all Israel.

The Philistines capture God's chest

In those days the Philistines gathered for war against Israel,<sup>d</sup> so Israel went out to engage the Philistines in war. Israel camped at Ebenezer, while the Philistines camped at Aphek.

3:10-14 Samuel is called by God, not just as a general religious experience but so that he might hear and then announce the judgment God has for the corrupt house of Eli. Samuel is to play the role of God's prophet, a role he himself will help refine in Israel.

3:15-18 To his credit, Eli doesn't resist hearing the harsh words of God's judgment and accepts God's will.

3:19-4:1a This introduces Samuel in what will unfold as a fully developed portrait of a prophet as the bearer of God's word to the people. All of Israel seems to recognize Samuel in this role. We should note that it is God's word that comes to Samuel, but Samuel's word that goes out to all Israel. While the prophet declares God's word, he must boldly speak to the people in his own words.

4:1b-7:2 These chapters have long been recognized as a separate narrative focused not on any of the many strong characters in the stories of 1 Samuel but instead on the Lord's covenant chest (traditionally called the "ark"). The prophet Samuel doesn't appear in these chapters, and Eli appears only in the story of his death (4:12-18). These chapters seem to serve two purposes. First, they document the external crisis that grips Israel in this time, namely, the threat that an enemy, the Philistines (see sidebar, "The Philistines"), will permanently conquer Israel and incorporate their tribal territories into a growing Philistine empire. Thus the books of Samuel open as Israel is struggling with internal and external crises that threaten Israel's very existence. Second, these narratives make clear that it is God's power that will determine Israel's future. The books of Samuel will be filled with stories of the dramatic deeds of men and women in this time of transition to kingship. The stories of God's covenant chest among the Philistines make clear that it is the hand of the Lord (5:6, 7, 9, 11) that makes the difference in Israel's future.

4:1b The Philistines (see sidebar) occupy the coastal plain to the southeast of Israelite tribal territory. They were the enemies of Samson and the tribe of Dan in Judges 13-16. The war that the Philistines begin here seems to be aimed at acquiring new territory. The Philistines are building a small empire at the expense of the weaker Israelite tribes on their eastern border.

<sup>2</sup>The Philistines readied themselves to fight Israel. When the battle was joined, Israel was defeated by the Philistines, who killed about four thousand men on the battlefield. <sup>3</sup>When the troops returned to the camp, Israel's elders said, "Why did the LORD defeat us today before the Philistines? Let's bring the chest containing the LORD's covenant from Shiloh so it can go with us and save us from our enemies' power." <sup>4</sup>So the people sent to Shiloh and brought from there the chest containing the covenant of the LORD of heavenly forces, who sits enthroned on the winged heavenly creatures. <sup>5</sup>Eli's two sons Hophni and Phinehas were there with the chest containing God's covenant.

<sup>5</sup>When the chest containing the LORD's covenant entered the camp, all Israel let out such a loud shout that the ground shook. <sup>6</sup>When the Philistines heard the sound of that shout, they asked, "What is that loud shouting in the Hebrew camp about?" When they learned that the LORD's chest had come into the camp, <sup>7</sup>the Philistines were afraid and said, "A god has come into that camp! We're doomed," they said, "because nothing like this has ever happened before. <sup>8</sup>We're doomed! Who will deliver us from the grip of these powerful deities? They are the same gods who struck the Egyptians in the desert with every kind of wound. <sup>9</sup>Pull yourselves together and act like men, Philistines! Otherwise, you'll serve the Hebrews like they've been serving you. Act like men and fight!"

<sup>10</sup>So the Philistines fought. Israel was defeated, and everyone fled to their homes. It was a massive defeat: thirty thousand Israelite foot soldiers fell, <sup>11</sup>God's chest was taken, and Eli's two sons Hophni and Phinehas died.

<sup>12</sup>That very day, a Benjaminite ran from the battle to Shiloh. His clothes were torn, and dirt was on his head. <sup>13</sup>When he got there, Eli was sitting in a chair beside the road, waiting because he was nervous about God's chest. The man arrived and gave the news to the city, and the whole city cried out.

The man hurriedly went and told Eli the news. (<sup>15</sup>Now Eli was 98 years old, and his eyes stared straight ahead, unable to see.) <sup>16</sup>The man told Eli, "I'm the one who just came from the battle. I fled from the battle today."

"What's the report, my son?" Eli asked.

<sup>17</sup>The messenger answered, "Israel has fled from the Philistines. The army has suffered a massive defeat. Also, your own two sons Hophni and Phinehas have died, and God's chest has been taken!" <sup>18</sup>At the mention of God's chest, Eli fell backward off the chair beside the gate. His neck broke, and he died because he was an old man and overweight. Eli had judged Israel for forty years.

<sup>19</sup>Now Eli's daughter-in-law, Phinehas' wife, was pregnant and about to give birth. When she heard the news that God's chest had been captured and that her father-in-law and her the Israelites lose 4,000 men. To ensure future victory, the elders of Israel decide to bring the chest containing the LORD's covenant (4:3, traditionally called "the ark of the covenant") onto the field of battle. The sons of Eli carried the chest (4:4b). It may be that the initial battle was fought by local tribal groups in Israel, perhaps primarily Ephraim. To bring the chest into the field suggests a summons to all Israel to engage in war. Thus the coming battle will be with the largest army the federation of Israelite tribes can manage, facing the combined professional soldiers of the Philistine cities. The hope is that the presence of the Lord on the field of battle will make the difference. 4:4a the chest containing the covenant of the LORD of heavenly forces, who sits enthroned on the winged heavenly creatures: This is the fullest and most descriptive title used for God's chest in the OT (see sidebar, "The Lord's Covenant Chest" at 1 Sam 5). The winged heavenly creatures on top of the chest are traditionally known by the Hebrew word cherubim (which don't look like our contemporary images of angels) and are thought to support the invisibly enthroned Lord, the God of Israel who reigns as heavenly king over Israel.

4:5-9 The Philistines panic at the arrival of God's chest in Israel's camp, assuming that this means Israel's God will fight for them. They even seem to know of the Israelite tradition of deliverance from Egypt (4:8). In spite of this fear, they decide they must fight in a battle that results in the total defeat of Israel, who lose 30,000 men. The Philistines capture the chest and kill the two sons of Eli (1 Sam 4:10-11).

4:12-18 These verses narrate a dramatic scene in some detail as Eli waits for news of the battle. He receives word of the great defeat and of the deaths of his sons, Hophni and Phinehas, but it is the news that the covenant chest has been captured that shocks Eli so that he falls backward and dies of a broken neck.

4:19-22 The shock of the tragic news from the battlefield sends the pregnant wife of Phinehas into premature labor. As she is dying in childbirth, she ironically names her newborn son Ichabod, meaning "Where is the glory?" because with the capture of the chest, "The glory has left Israel" (4:22). This refers not to the chest as an object but to the enthroned presence of God it represents. The word "left" is from the Hebrew verb also used for going

The Philistines The Philistines established themselves in five cities on the southeastern coastal plain adjacent to central and southern Israel sometime in the 12th century BCE. The names of these cities were Ashdod, Ashkelon, Ekron, Gath, and Gaza. Most authorities agree that the origin of the Philistines lies in an immigration of people with Aegean cultural roots, evidenced by their pottery and other material remains. Rameses III (1184–1163) claims to have defeated them as they attempted to invade Egypt, and to have forced them to settle in fortresses in what came to be called Philistia in Canaan.

The Philistines emerge as a major enemy of Israel in the biblical story during the time of Samson (Judg 13–16). They are a terrifying enemy because they possess iron weapons and are organized, with kings and professional military forces. The books of Samuel present the Philistines and their desire to expand their territory eastward as a major factor in the people's desire to have a king to govern them and lead them into battle (1 Sam 8–9). The battle described in 1 Samuel 4 leads to the loss of the Lord's covenant chest (traditionally called the "ark") and the Philistine occupation of Israelite tribal territory west of the Jordan River. Tensions and conflicts with the Philistines form the backdrop of stories throughout 1 Samuel and into 2 Samuel, until David finally defeats them and forces them back into the territory of the five cities (2 Sam 8:1).

husband had died, she doubled over and gave birth because her labor pains overwhelmed her. <sup>20</sup>As she was about to die, the women standing by helping her said, "Don't be afraid. You've given birth to a son!" But she didn't answer or pay them any attention. <sup>21</sup>She named the boy Ichabod,<sup>f</sup> saying, "The glory has left Israel," referring to the capture of God's chest and the death of her father-in-law and her husband. <sup>22</sup>"The glory has left Israel because God's chest has been taken," she said.

God's chest among the Philistines

5 After the Philistines took God's chest, they brought it from Ebenezer to Ashdod. <sup>2</sup>Then the Philistines took God's chest and brought it into Dagon's temple and set it next to Dagon. <sup>3</sup>But when the citizens of Ashdod got up early the next morning, there was Dagon, fallen facedown on the ground before the LORD's chest! So they took Dagon and set him back up where he belonged. <sup>4</sup>But when they got up early the next morning, there was Dagon again, fallen facedown on the ground before the LORD's chest—and this time Dagon's head along with both his hands were cut off and lying on the doorstep! Only Dagon's body<sup>g</sup> was left intact. <sup>5</sup>That's why to this day Dagon's priests or anyone else who enters his temple in Ashdod doesn't step on the threshold.

<sup>8</sup>So they summoned all the Philistine rulers to a meeting and asked, "What should we do with the chest of Israel's God?" The people of Gath said, "Let the chest of Israel's God be moved to us." So they moved the chest of Israel's God to Gath.<sup>i</sup> <sup>9</sup>But once they moved it, the into exile (Jer 1:3). This is similar to the departure of God's glory from the temple in Ezekiel's vision at the time of the Babylonian exile (Ezek 10:18).

Victorious armies in the ancient world commonly paraded the sacred objects of a defeated enemy before their gods. Thus, the Lord's covenant chest was taken to the Philistine city of Ashdod and placed in the temple of the Philistines' chief god, Dagon, an act intended to humiliate Israel's God. But the next morning the idol of Dagon was humiliated, having fallen on its face. The following morning, Dagon had again fallen; his head and hands had broken off.

5:6, 7, 9, 11 The LORD's hand: Here is the major theological statement of these chapters on the adventures of the Lord's covenant chest. In human terms Israel is defeated, but in God's terms the LORD's hand is victorious. Israel experiences divine judgment through defeat because of its corruption and unfaithfulness. But God's purposes still go forward. Dagon has no hands, and the LORD's hand strikes terror into the Philistines throughout this chapter. On the eve of the establishment of kingship in Israel, this story reminds the reader that even the greatest human (Philistine) or divine (Dagon) power will be secondary to the power of the Lord.

5:6–12 The Philistines experience the power of The LORD's hand in the form of a disease that plagues every Philistine city that hosts the Lord's covenant chest. The word translated tumors is uncertain (see Deut 28:27) and has received alternative translations, but the narrative makes clear that some sort of bodily plague breaks out among the Philistines in the cities where the covenant chest lies. The Philistines shuttle the chest from Ashdod to Ekron to

The Lord's Covenant Chest The Hebrew word translated here as “chest” (traditionally translated as “ark”) appears over 200 times in the Bible, and all but a handful refer to a gold-covered box symbolizing the presence of God in the midst of Israel. One-third of these references appear in the books of Samuel, where the Lord's chest containing the covenant plays an important role in the story.

Israelite tradition observed that the chest was built under the direction of Moses in the time of the wilderness. From that time throughout the biblical story, the chest symbolized the presence of Israel's God, Yahweh (translated as “LORD” in this and most translations). The chest is said to contain the tablets that record the commandments (Deut 10:1-5). Later Jewish tradition believed the chest also contained a jar of manna and the rod of Aaron (Heb 9:4). The chest has many extended titles, but the most complete is in 1 Samuel 4:4: “the chest containing the covenant of the LORD of heavenly forces, who sits enthroned on the winged heavenly creatures” (traditionally referred to by the Hebrew word cherubim). The concept here is that Yahweh (the LORD), who is Israel's king, sits invisibly enthroned above the winged heavenly creatures on the top of the gold chest. This enthroned God is also the commander of heavenly forces (traditionally translated as “hosts”). Thus, when the Israelites bring the covenant chest onto the field of battle, they carry the hope that heavenly forces will do battle with and for them. In 1 Samuel 4-6, the chest is captured by the Philistines as God's judgment on the sin of Israel, but the chest also brings trouble on the Philistines. David will eventually restore the chest to a place of honor (2 Sam 6). The Lord's covenant chest is lost and presumably destroyed in the Babylonian capture and destruction of Jerusalem in 587 BCE.

LORD's hand came against the city, causing a huge panic. God struck the city's inhabitants, both young and old, and tumors broke out on them.

<sup>10</sup>Then they sent God's chest to Ekron, but as soon as God's chest entered Ekron, the inhabitants cried out, “Why have you moved the chest of Israel's God to us? In order to kill us and our people?”<sup>1</sup>

<sup>11</sup>So they summoned all the Philistine rulers to a meeting and said, “Send the chest of Israel's God away! Let it go back to its own home so it doesn't kill us and our people,” because there was a deadly panic throughout the whole city. The hand of God was very heavy there.

<sup>12</sup>The people who didn't die were struck with tumors, and the screams of the city went all the way up to heaven.

God's chest is returned

6 THE LORD's chest was in Philistine territory for seven months. <sup>2</sup>The Philistines called for the priests and the diviners. “What should we do with the LORD's chest?” they asked. “Tell us how we should send it back to its own home.”

<sup>3</sup>They replied, “If you are returning the chest of Israel's God, don't send it back empty, but be sure to return a guilt offering to him.” <sup>4</sup>Then you will be healed, and it will become clear to you why God's hand hasn't left you alone.”

The priests and diviners replied: “Five gold tumors<sup>1</sup> and five gold mice,<sup>2</sup> matching the number of the Philistine rulers, because the same plague came on all of you and your rulers.

<sup>5</sup>You must make images of your tumors and the mice that have devastated the land. Honor Israel's God. Perhaps he will lighten the weight of his hand on you, your gods, and your land.

Gath, three of the five great Philistine cities, before finally having had enough. The people cry to their rulers to return the chest to Israel. The Lord defeats the Philistines without any human battle.

6:1-12 The Philistines can no longer risk having the Lord's covenant chest in their territory and resolve to send it back to Israelite territory. They determine, however, that they must send with it an offering to appease Israel's God. The meaning of the words used to describe this offering in 6:4-5, 11 is uncertain. The objects are tumors, the same term used for the disease that afflicted the Philistines; and mice, perhaps suggesting the manner in which the disease was spread, similar to bubonic plague. The number five corresponds to the five principal Philistine cities (1 Sam 6:17-18). It's clear that the objects for the offering were made of gold, a very valuable gift intended to appease an angry God. They place these objects with the chest of Israel's God in a cart pulled by two nursing cows and set it loose on the road. The cows pull the cart straight to Israelite territory near Beth-shemesh, confirming to the Philistines that it is Israel's God who has done this to them (6:9).

6:3, 5, 9 The Philistines now also acknowledge that it is God's hand that has afflicted them and won the final victory.

<sup>17</sup>These are the gold tumors that the Philistines returned as a compensation offering to the LORD: one for Ashdod, one for Gaza, one for Ashkelon, one for Gath, and one for Ekron. <sup>18</sup>The gold mice matched the number of Philistine cities belonging to the five rulers, from fortified cities to country villages. And the large stone<sup>p</sup> they set the LORD's chest on is a witness even now in the field that belongs to Joshua of Beth-shemesh.

<sup>19</sup>But God struck down some of the people from Beth-shemesh because they looked into the LORD's chest. God struck seventy people,<sup>q</sup> and the community grieved because the LORD had struck them so severely. <sup>20</sup>The people of Beth-shemesh said, "Who can stand before the LORD, this holy God? Where can he go that is away from us here?" <sup>21</sup>You sent messengers to the inhabitants of Kiriath-jearim. "The Philistines returned the LORD's chest!" they said.

7 "Come down and take it back with you." <sup>1</sup>So the people of Kiriath-jearim came and took the LORD's chest. They brought it to Abinadab's house, which was on the hill. Then they dedicated Eleazar, Abinadab's son, to care for the LORD's chest.

Samuel leads Israel

<sup>2</sup>Now a long time passed—a total of twenty years—after the chest came to stay in Kiriath-jearim, and the whole house of Israel yearned for<sup>r</sup> the LORD.

<sup>3</sup>Then Samuel said to the whole house of Israel, "If you are turning to the LORD with all your heart, then get rid of all the foreign gods and the Astartes you have. Set your heart on 6:6 Once again, the Philistines testify to the central Israelite story of deliverance out of Egypt (cf. 1 Sam 4:8). They are determined not to be as stubborn as the Egyptian pharaoh.

6:13-18 The people of Beth-shemesh recognize the Lord's chest and, in contrast to the Philistines, greet it with great joy. Levites among them handle it with the care due holy objects (6:15), and the two cows are sacrificed as entirely burned offerings to the Lord. The large stone used as the altar and support for the Lord's chest is said to remain there as a witness to these events (6:18).

6:19-7:2 The story takes a grim turn when God strikes down 70 people. A reading from the Greek OT (LXX) explains more fully that those people were the sons of Jeconiah, who treated God's covenant chest with disrespect.

From a Hebrew perspective, holiness is a dangerous thing and not to be treated lightly. Fearful of having this holy object in their midst, the people of Beth-shemesh ask the inhabitants of Kiriath-jearim, non-Israelite Gibeonites, to take the covenant chest into their keeping. The Lord's covenant chest won't return to the center of Israel's life until David finds it and brings it to Jerusalem (2 Sam 6). Much later the Gibeonites are rewarded for their faithfulness by becoming those who serve the needs of the priests in Solomon's temple.

7:3-17 In this chapter the prophet Samuel provides leadership for the people, guiding them in worship rituals and offering sacrifices, summoning the Lord's power to deliver them from an attack by the Philistines, and administering justice for a circuit of towns. It may be that the LORD! Worship him only! Then he will deliver you from the Philistines' power." <sup>4</sup>So the Israelites got rid of the Baals and the Astartes and worshipped the LORD only.

<sup>6</sup>So they assembled at Mizpah, and they drew water and poured it out in the LORD's presence. They fasted that same day and confessed, "We have sinned against the LORD." Samuel served as judge of the Israelites at Mizpah.

<sup>7</sup>When the Philistines heard that the Israelites had assembled at Mizpah, the Philistine rulers went up to attack Israel. When the Israelites learned of this, they were afraid of the Philistines. <sup>8</sup>The Israelites said to Samuel, "Please don't stop praying to the LORD our God for us, so God will save us from the Philistines' power!" <sup>9</sup>So Samuel took a suckling lamb and offered it as an entirely burned offering to the LORD. Samuel cried out in prayer to the LORD for Israel, and the LORD answered him.

<sup>10</sup>While Samuel was offering the entirely burned offering, the Philistines advanced to attack Israel. But the LORD thundered against the Philistines with a great blast on that very day, throwing the Philistines into such a panic that they were defeated by Israel. <sup>11</sup>The Israelite soldiers came out of Mizpah and pursued the Philistines. They struck them down until they reached a place just below Beth-car. <sup>12</sup>Then Samuel took a stone and set it up between Mizpah and Jeshanah. <sup>13</sup>He named it Ebenezer,<sup>4</sup> explaining, "The LORD helped us to this very point."

<sup>13</sup>So the Philistines were defeated, and they stopped coming into Israelite territory. The LORD's hand was against the Philistines throughout Samuel's life. <sup>14</sup>The towns the Philistines had captured from Israel, from Ekron to Gath, were returned to Israel. Israel also recovered the territory around those two cities from the Philistines. And there was peace between Israel and the Amorites.

<sup>15</sup>Samuel served as Israel's judge his whole life. <sup>16</sup>Each year he traveled between Bethel, Gilgal, and Mizpah, serving as Israel's judge in each of those locations. <sup>17</sup>Then he would return to Ramah because that's where his home was. In Ramah too he served as Israel's judge, and that is also where he built an altar to the LORD.

Israel demands a king

O Now when Samuel got old, he appointed his sons to serve as Israel's judges. <sup>2</sup>The name of his oldest son was Joel; the name of the second was Abijah. They served as judges in this chapter is placed here, just before the demand of the Israelite elders for a king (1 Sam 8), to suggest that Israel doesn't really need a king. God raised up Samuel to give leadership. Indeed, 7:6 uses the same formula for Samuel's leadership as the book of Judges: Samuel served as judge of the Israelites.

7:3-4 Samuel directs the people to put away their foreign gods. The language here expresses the concern for idolatry used regularly in the large Deuteronomistic History (from Joshua to 2 Kings) in which the books of Samuel are found. 7:5-11 Samuel provides the leadership often given by priests: offering prayers and fasting, leading in confession of sin, sacrificing entirely burned offerings to the Lord. While Samuel and the people gather at Mizpah for these worship activities, the Philistines threaten them, and Samuel prays to the Lord on behalf of his people. The Lord incites panic in the Philistines with a blast of thunder, and the Israelites pursue them to win a victory. This is the language of holy war, strikingly similar to the way the Lord fought for Israel in the stories of the judges. Samuel erects a stone and names it Ebenezer ("stone of help") to commemorate the victory.

7:12-14 The claims of these verses are greatly exaggerated and immediately contradicted by the stories that follow in the books of Samuel. Until well into the reign of David as king, the land is occupied by the Philistines. Saul and his son Jonathan fight many battles with the Philistines, and both finally lose their lives at the hands of the Philistines. David will be the one who finally recovers lost territory and removes the Philistines as a threat (2 Sam 8:1). These verses seem intended to undermine the claim of the people in 1 Samuel 8 that they need a king.

7:15-17 Samuel keeps Israelite traditions alive by traveling a circuit of small towns to serve as Israel's judge, perhaps to administer justice according to the Israelite covenant with God. All these towns, including his hometown of Ramah, lie in the central territory of the tribe of Benjamin, from which the first king, Saul, will also come.

8:1-22 The elders of Israel approach Samuel and demand a king. This chapter treats this demand as sinful and opposed to God's kingship over Israel, but God instructs Samuel to grant the request. There is some tension between this story and other stories about how Saul became king. The next chapter depicts Saul as one chosen by God to deliver Israel from the Philistines and anointed by God's prophet. These tensions may reflect differing theological perspectives on kingship at that time, giving the impression that Saul becomes king several times, with each story providing a slightly different theological view of kingship.

8:1-3 Unfortunately, Samuel's sons seem to be as corrupt as Eli's sons, taking bribes and perverting justice for their own gain. However, Samuel has apparently appointed Beer-sheba. <sup>3</sup>But Samuel's sons didn't follow in his footsteps. They tried to turn a profit, they accepted bribes, and they perverted justice.

<sup>4</sup>So all the Israelite elders got together and went to Samuel at Ramah. <sup>5</sup>They said to him, "Listen. You are old now, and your sons don't follow in your footsteps. So appoint us a king to judge us like all the other nations have." <sup>6</sup>It seemed very bad to Samuel when they said, "Give us a king to judge us," so he prayed to the LORD.

<sup>7</sup>The LORD answered Samuel, "Comply with the people's request—everything they ask of you—because they haven't rejected you. No, they've rejected me as king over them. <sup>8</sup>They are doing to you only what they've been doing to me" from the day I brought them out of Egypt to this very minute, abandoning me and worshipping other gods. <sup>9</sup>So comply with their request, but give them a clear warning, telling them how the king will rule over them."<sup>v</sup>

<sup>10</sup>Then Samuel explained everything the LORD had said to the people who were asking for a king. <sup>11</sup>"This is how the king will rule over you," Samuel said:

"He will take your sons, and will use them for his chariots and his cavalry and as runners for his chariot. <sup>12</sup>He will use them as his commanders of troops of one thousand and troops of fifty, or to do his plowing and his harvesting, or to make his weapons or parts for his chariots. <sup>13</sup>He will take your daughters to be perfumers, cooks, or bakers. <sup>14</sup>He will take your best fields, vineyards, and olive groves and give them to his servants. <sup>15</sup>He will give one-tenth of your grain and your vineyards to his officials and servants. <sup>16</sup>He will take your male and female servants, along with the best of your cattle<sup>w</sup> and donkeys, and make them do his work. <sup>17</sup>He will take one-tenth of your flocks, and then you yourselves will become his slaves! <sup>18</sup>When that day comes, you will cry out because of the king you chose for yourselves, but on that day the LORD won't answer you."

<sup>19</sup>But the people refused to listen to Samuel and said, "No! There must be a king over us <sup>20</sup>so we can be like all the other nations. Our king will judge us and lead us and fight our battles."

Samuel then told the Israelite people, "Go back, each of you, to your own hometown."

8:4-5 The elders of Israel approach Samuel to complain that Samuel's sons are unacceptable. They demand that Samuel give them a king. The key phrase is that they want a king like all the other nations (8:5). Indeed, kings rule the small nations surrounding Israel. Israel itself is presently occupied by the Philistines, whose five cities each have a king, and all five are in an alliance. The people seem to treat kingship as a system of centralized political governance preferable to their present loose tribal organization. The word "judge" in 1 Samuel 8:5, 20 has the sense of "govern." While 8:5 focuses on the internal value of kingship (governance), 8:20 focuses on its external value as a system to enable the people to "fight our battles." This would seem to highlight the inability of the tribal coalition to meet the Philistine threat.

8:6-9 Samuel immediately reacts negatively and prays to the Lord. The people have ignored the theological issue, but God's response goes to the heart of the matter. God's response implies a rebuke of the people. The problem is that the people have rejected God, not that they have rejected the prophet (or his sons). This rejection is part of a rebellious pattern that has recurred since God brought them out of Egypt (8:8). God is the true ruler of Israel, so the main issue is how a king in Israel relates to the kingship of God. This issue resonates throughout the books of Samuel. Nevertheless, God instructs Samuel to comply with the people's request while giving them a warning about how kings operate.

8:10-18 Samuel's speech on the ways of kings consists of a long list of privileges that kings will demand. Four times the speech uses the verb "take" and twice a verb that means "confiscate one-tenth." Kings are authorities who "take" from the people. The result is that you yourselves will become his slaves (8:17). This warning will come back to mind when King David "takes" Bathsheba (2 Sam 11:4) and later when Solomon's abusive policies lead to the division of the kingdom. Interestingly, the negative outcome foreseen by Samuel is linked to the king you chose for yourselves (8:18), foreshadowing the difficult fate of Saul as Israel's first king. In contrast, when God sends Samuel to anoint Jesse's son David as the next king, he tells Samuel, "I have found my next king" (1 Sam 16:1).

8:19-20 Even after Samuel's warning, the people still insist that they want a king like all the other nations.

8:21-22 God instructs Samuel to comply with the people's demands. Significantly, God instructs Samuel to Give them a king, but God doesn't agree that kingship in Israel should be "like all the other nations." The people disperse to their homes, and we are left to wonder how this will come to pass.

Saul chosen to lead Israel

9 There was a wealthy man from the tribe of Benjamin named Kish. He was the son of Abiel son of Zeror son of Becorath son of Aphiah, a Benjaminite. <sup>2</sup>He had a son named Saul, who was a handsome young man. No one in Israel was more handsome than Saul, and he stood head and shoulders above everyone else.

<sup>3</sup>When the donkeys belonging to Saul's father Kish were lost, Kish said to his son Saul, "Take one of the servant boys with you and go look for the donkeys." <sup>4</sup>So he traveled through the highlands of Ephraim and the land of Shalishah, but they didn't find anything. They traveled through the land of Shaalim, but still found nothing, so they crossed back into the land of Benjamin, but they still couldn't find the donkeys. <sup>5</sup>When they came to the territory of Zuph, Saul said to the boy who was with him, "Let's go back before my father stops worrying about the donkeys and starts worrying about us."

<sup>6</sup>But the boy said to him, "Listen, there's a man of God in this town. He's famous—everything he says actually happens! So let's go there. Maybe he'll be able to tell us which way we should go."

<sup>7</sup>Saul said to his young boy, "But if we go, what should we bring to the man? The food in our bags is all gone. We don't have any gift to offer the man of God. Do we have anything?"

<sup>8</sup>"Here," the boy answered Saul, "I've got a quarter-shekel of silver. I'll give that to the man of God so he tells us which way to go." (<sup>9</sup>Earlier in Israel, someone going to consult with God would say, "Let's go to the seer," because the people who are called prophets today were previously called seers.)

<sup>10</sup>Saul said to the boy, "Great idea! Let's go." So they went into the town where the man of God lived. <sup>11</sup>They were going up the hill to the town when they met some young women coming out to draw water. "Is the seer here?" they asked them.

<sup>12</sup>"He's just ahead of you," they answered. "Hurry up! He has just come to town because there is a sacrifice today for the people at the shrine. <sup>13</sup>You'll find him as soon as you enter the town, before he goes up to the shrine to eat. The people won't eat until he gets there, because he must bless the sacrifice. Only after that can the invited guests eat. Now get going because you'll find him momentarily."

<sup>14</sup>So Saul and the boy went up to the town, and as they entered it, suddenly Samuel came toward them on his way up to the shrine. <sup>15</sup>Now the day before Saul came, the LORD had revealed the following to Samuel: <sup>16</sup>"About this time tomorrow I will send you a man from the Benjaminite territory. You will anoint him as leader of my people Israel. He will save my people from the Philistines' power because I have seen the suffering of<sup>a</sup> my people, and their

9:1–10:16 This passage is the first of three accounts of how Saul came to be Israel's first king. A later editor may have tried to smooth over the differences, but they still stand out as different descriptions of Saul's path to the throne. This first passage pictures Saul and his kingship positively, depicting how God raised up a leader to deliver them from the Philistines. Saul is selected by God, anointed by the prophet Samuel, and empowered by God's spirit (see sidebar, "Call and Anointing")

9:1–2 Saul is introduced to us as a handsome and physically imposing young man, perhaps a teenager, from a wealthy family in Benjamin, a northern Israelite tribe.

9:3–5 Saul and a young servant set out on an errand for Saul's father to find some donkeys that have strayed from their territory. They don't expect that anything out of the ordinary will happen to them.

9:6–14 The story proceeds at an almost leisurely pace, providing many small details. The narrative has all the marks of folk storytelling. The young men decide to consult a local holy man (man of God, 9:6, 7, 8, 10; see 1 Sam 2:27), who has a reputation for revealing unknown things. They debate what to bring him as a gift or payment (9:7–8). By asking directions of local girls, they learn that the man has just arrived in town for a sacrifice and banquet (9:11–13).

Then, much to the reader's surprise, the man who comes out to meet them is the prophet Samuel. Saul isn't surprised, because he doesn't yet know Samuel.

9:9 This verse appears to be an attempt by the editor to explain to the readers that in early Israel prophets were known as seers. Indeed, Saul later inquires of the holy man using the term "seer" (1 Sam 9:11), and Samuel calls himself a "seer" in 1 Samuel 9:19. We are dealing here with the earliest emergence of the role of prophet in ancient Israel. Prophets were perhaps less proclaimers of God's word in early times than those who were consulted for guidance in God's will. That is, they were more like guides than preachers. Later in this chapter we will have our first view of such prophets living in communities and engaging in ecstatic behavior (1 Sam 10:10–13).

9:15–17 The scene shifts backward to Samuel's experience on the previous day. God reveals that he is sending a Benjaminite man to him, and Samuel is to anoint him as the one who will deliver Israel from the Philistines and rule over them. I have seen the suffering of my people, and their cry for help has reached me: The language recalls the story of God's deliverance of Israel out of Egypt through the hand of Moses (cf. Exod 3:7). As Saul approaches, the Lord indicates to Samuel that he is the one.

Call and Anointing The stories of God's call to important leaders in Israel follow a pattern that emphasizes their vocation as God's representatives. The pattern seen for Moses, Gideon, Isaiah, Jeremiah, and Ezekiel can also be seen in the story of Saul. It is somewhat altered by the presence of a third party, the prophet Samuel, as a mediator of God's call.

This "divine call story" includes the following elements:

1. The divine initiative. Instead of contacting Saul directly, God speaks to the prophet Samuel (1 Sam 9:15).
2. The need for a leader. In this case, God wants to raise up someone to deliver Israel from the Philistines (1 Sam 9:16-17).
3. The objection. Saul objects that he is from an unimportant tribe and family, and is therefore unworthy of being singled out (1 Sam 9:21).
4. The commission. Saul's commission is delivered by the prophet Samuel, who announces it as a word from God (1 Sam 9:27). Saul is to deliver Israel from its enemies. Unlike other call stories, this one is accompanied by an act of commissioning reserved for kings. Samuel anoints Saul to this role as Israel's king (1 Sam 10:1). The Hebrew verb for "anoint" is closely associated with the word "messiah" (Gk. "Christ"), which refers to God's anointed one. David is also anointed by the prophet Samuel as God's future king, the "anointed" one (1 Sam 16:13).
5. The sign. Although Samuel speaks to Saul of signs (1 Sam 10:1, 7, 9-10) and speaks of three events, two of these relate to the lost donkeys and only the third to his call and anointing as king. God's spirit will come upon him, and this indeed takes place (1 Sam 10:6, 10). Likewise, David receives God's spirit after his anointing (1 Sam 16:13).
6. The reassurance. In some call stories this comes before mentioning the sign in the form of God's statement "I will be with you." Here Samuel mediates this by saying, "God is with you" (1 Sam 10:7b).

cry for help has reached me." <sup>17</sup>When Samuel saw Saul, the LORD told him, "That's the man I told you about. That's the one who will rule<sup>y</sup> my people."

<sup>18</sup>Saul approached Samuel in the city gate and said, "Please tell me where the seer's house is."

<sup>19</sup>"I'm the seer," Samuel told Saul. "Go on ahead of me to the shrine. You can eat with me today. In the morning I'll send you on your way, and I will tell you everything you want to know. <sup>20</sup>As for the donkeys you lost three days ago, don't be worried about them because they've been found. Who owns all of Israel's treasures, anyway? Isn't it you and your whole family?"<sup>z</sup>

<sup>21</sup>"I'm a Benjamite," Saul responded, "from the smallest Israelite tribe, and my family is the littlest of the families in the tribe of Benjamin. Why would you say something like that to me?"

<sup>22</sup>Then Samuel took Saul and his young servant and brought them to the banquet room. He gave them an honored place among the invited guests. There were about thirty total.

<sup>26</sup>Near dawn, Samuel called to Saul on the roof, "Wake up! I will send you on your way." So Saul got up, and the two of them, he and Samuel, went outside. <sup>27</sup>As they were nearing the edge of town Samuel said, "Tell the boy to go on ahead of us" (the servant did so) "but you stop for a bit so I can tell you God's word."

9:18-21 Samuel identifies himself to Saul as the seer and invites the young man to dine with him. He also declares that the lost donkeys have been found. The final phrase of 1 Samuel 9:20 is difficult to translate, but the reading in the translation note z indicates a larger destiny in store for Saul and his family. This makes sense of Saul's objection that he comes from a humble family in the smallest tribe of Israel (9:21). Such objections are common in biblical call stories (see sidebar, "Call and Anointing").

9:22-27 The account provides some details of the meal that Saul shares with Samuel at the local shrine. Afterward, Saul is given accommodation for the night. Samuel rouses Saul early and sends Saul's servant on ahead. This sets the stage for Samuel to communicate God's word to Saul (9:27).

Samuel anoints Saul as king

10 Samuel took a small jar of oil and poured it over Saul's head and kissed him. "The LORD hereby anoints you leader of his people Israel," Samuel said. "You will rule the LORD's people and save them from the power of the enemies who surround them. And this will be the sign for you that the LORD has anointed you as leader of his very own possession:<sup>4</sup> <sup>2</sup>When you leave me today, you will meet two men near Rachel's tomb at Zelzah on the border of Benjamin. They will tell you, "The donkeys you went looking for have been found. Now your father has stopped thinking about the donkeys and is worried about you. He's asking: What should I do about my son?" <sup>3</sup>Then, when you've gone on a bit farther, you will come to the oak at Tabor. Three men who are going to consult God at Bethel will meet up with you there, one carrying three young goats, one carrying three loaves of bread, and one carrying a jar of wine. <sup>4</sup>They will ask how you're doing and will offer you sacrificial bread,<sup>5</sup> which you should accept. <sup>5</sup>After that, you will come to Gibeath-elohim, which is a Philistine fort. When you enter the town, you will encounter a group of prophets coming down from the shrine preceded by harps, tambourines, flutes, and lyres. They will be caught up in a prophetic frenzy. <sup>6</sup>Then the LORD's spirit will come over you, and you will be caught up in a prophetic frenzy right along with them; it will be like you've become a completely different person. <sup>7</sup>Once these signs have happened to you, do whatever you would like to do, because God is with you. <sup>8</sup>Then go down to Gilgal ahead of me. I'll come down to meet you to offer entirely burned offerings and to make well-being sacrifices. Wait seven days until I get to you, then I'll tell you what you should do next."

<sup>9</sup>And just as Saul turned to leave Samuel's side, God gave him a different heart, and all these signs happened that very same day. <sup>10</sup>When Saul and the boy got to Gibeah, there was a group of prophets coming to meet him. God's spirit came over Saul, and he was caught up in a prophetic frenzy right along with them. <sup>11</sup>When all the people who had known Saul saw him prophesying with the prophets, they said to each other, "What's happened to Kish's son? Is Saul also one of the prophets?" <sup>12</sup>One of the locals then asked, "And who is their leader?"<sup>6</sup> So it became a proverb: "Is Saul also one of the prophets?" <sup>13</sup>When the prophetic frenzy was over, Saul went home.<sup>8</sup>

10:1 David is also anointed by Samuel (1 Sam 16:13). Anointing by a prophet is a standard practice for authorizing kings as the Lord's anointed. It becomes a way of referring to those God has chosen to rule God's people. The Hebrew verb for "anointed" shares common Hebrew letters with the word "messiah," a title that is closely associated with the later hope of the Jews in Jesus' time for a new king. Here Saul is commissioned both to rule and to save. Samuel promises him signs, a standard part of call narratives (see sidebar "Call and Anointing" at 1 Sam 9). 10:2-8 Samuel describes three events that will serve as signs to Saul, confirming the authenticity of his anointing. First, he will meet men who confirm that the donkeys have been found (10:2). Second, he will meet men who offer him bread (10:3-4). While the fulfillment of these events isn't narrated later in the chapter, the fulfillment of the third sign is told through his encounter with a band of prophets. In 10:8 Samuel tells Saul to go to Gilgal and wait seven days until the prophet arrives to offer sacrifices. In 1 Samuel 13:8-10, Saul waits at Gilgal for Samuel to make sacrifices before battle, and when Samuel is late he offers them himself. This creates Saul's first conflict with Samuel, leading to the rejection of Israel's first king. But these waiting periods at Gilgal can't refer to the same event. In 1 Samuel 10, Saul is a youth, while in 1 Samuel 13 he is a king with a grown son, and many events have taken place between the time of his anointing and the events of chapter 13. Perhaps the symmetry is simply to suggest that Saul was expected always to wait for sacrifice and advice from Samuel.

10:9 As a prelude to the signs, we are told that Saul is given a different heart. The theme of the heart seems important to understanding God's actions. When David is chosen for anointing, Samuel is told that while some may look on outward appearances "the LORD sees into the heart" (1 Sam 16:7). David is anticipated in 1 Samuel 13:14 as "a man following the Lord's own heart." The suggestion is that the heart of God and the heart of God's king should be aligned.

10:10-13 Saul meets a group of prophets probably playing all the musical instruments foretold by Samuel in 1 Samuel 10:5 and caught up in an ecstatic frenzy. Saul receives God's spirit and is caught up with them in this ecstasy. In the Hebrew this prophetic frenzy is suggested merely by the verb "prophesying." This makes clear the connection between early prophetic activity in Israel and the ecstatic behavior of communities of prophets. We will later see the prophet Samuel leading such a community (1 Sam 19:18-24). This unusual scene prompts a saying about Saul among the Israelites: "Is Saul also one of the prophets?" When this happens to Saul again, the same saying is referenced (1 Sam 19:23-24). The element of God's spirit following anointing appears also in the appointment of David in 1 Samuel 16:13.

<sup>14</sup>Saul's uncle said to him and to his young servant, "Where did you go?"

"To look for the donkeys," Saul replied, "but when we couldn't find anything, we went to Samuel."

<sup>16</sup>"He reassured us that the donkeys had been found," Saul answered. But Saul didn't tell his uncle what Samuel had said about the kingship.

Saul selected as king

<sup>17</sup>Samuel summoned the people to the LORD at Mizpah. <sup>18</sup>Then he told the Israelites: "This is what the LORD God of Israel says: I brought Israel up out of Egypt, and I delivered you from the Egyptians' power and from the power of all the kingdoms that oppressed you. <sup>19</sup>But today you've rejected your God who saved you from all your troubles and difficulties by saying, 'No! Appoint a king over us!' So now assemble yourselves before the LORD by your tribes and clans."

<sup>20</sup>Then Samuel brought all the Israelite tribes forward, and the tribe of Benjamin was selected. <sup>21</sup>Next Samuel brought the tribe of Benjamin forward by its families, and the family of Matri was selected. Samuel then brought the family of Matri forward, person by person,<sup>h</sup> and Saul, Kish's son, was selected. But when they looked for him, he wasn't to be found. <sup>22</sup>So they asked another question of the LORD: "Has the man come here yet?"

The LORD said, "Yes, he's hiding among the supplies."<sup>i</sup> <sup>23</sup>They ran and retrieved Saul from there, and when he stood up in the middle of the people, he was head and shoulders taller than anyone else.

<sup>24</sup>"Can you see the one the LORD has chosen?" Samuel asked all the people. "He has no equal among the people."

Then the people shouted, "Long live the king!"

<sup>25</sup>Samuel then explained to the people how the monarchy should operate<sup>1</sup> and wrote it in a scroll and placed it in the LORD's presence. Then Samuel sent every person back to their homes. <sup>26</sup>Saul also went back to his home in Gibeah. Along with him went courageous men whose hearts God had touched. <sup>27</sup>But some despicable people said, "How can this man save us?" They despised Saul and didn't bring him gifts, but Saul didn't say anything.

<sup>h</sup>LXX; MT lacks Samuel then brought the family of Matri forward, person by person. <sup>i</sup>Or the lawful practices of the monarchy

10:14-16 Saul's uncle questions his nephew about his meeting with Samuel. The purpose here is to let the reader know that Saul keeps his anointing as Israel's king a secret at first, even from his own family. This helps explain why he must be chosen again in the next episode.

10:17-27a This is the second story about how Saul became king, making no mention of the story of Saul's anointing by Samuel in the preceding chapter. In the present arrangement of the book of Samuel, this story serves as Saul's public debut.

10:17 Samuel also assembled the people at Mizpah in 1 Samuel 7.

10:18-19 Samuel's speech to the people is very similar in perspective to the one delivered by the prophet in 1 Samuel 8. The speech treats the people's request for a king as sinful and a rejection of the God who had delivered them out of bondage in Egypt. Samuel implies that God could have brought them through the present difficulties as well. The selection process that follows can only be described as reluctant on Samuel's part.

10:20-24 The process for choosing a king in this narrative is strange. This probably refers to a process of casting lots. Tribes, then families, and then individuals are brought forward and selected (or "taken") in a way that is very similar to Joshua 7:14-18, when Achan is identified as the offender who violated God's command. The drama has two parts because when the lots finally select Kish's son Saul, he is nowhere to be found, requiring that the Lord reveal that Saul is hiding among the supplies (10:22), which is hardly a confident and auspicious beginning for a king. Yet when Saul finally arrives and stands among them he is taller than all others, and this is taken as a sign confirming God's choice (cf. 1 Sam 9:2). The people then acclaim him with their shouts, acknowledging him as king (10:24).

10:25 Samuel reads to them from a document placed as a scroll in a holy place before the Lord, probably a shrine or sanctuary. The alternative reading in the translation note i, "lawful practices of the monarchy," clarifies that this isn't simply Samuel's explanation but rather a formal document. The Hebrew phrase here includes the term for "justice," indicating legal or just practices expected of kings. The phrase is similar to the one used to describe Samuel's warning from God to the people in 1 Samuel 8:9, with the alternative translation in note v, "lawful practice of the king." At stake in this document about a king's behavior is something formal, to be kept for future reference.

10:26-27a As Saul returns to Gibeah, we are reminded that Israel remains divided. Some of the people were courageous men whose hearts God had touched, but Saul also has detractors who despised Saul and are characterized as despicable. For now, Saul holds his peace.

10:27b-11:15 This is the third account of how Saul became the first king of Israel. Saul is in the field with his oxen when word comes that the people of Jabesh-gilead are

11 About a month later,<sup>k</sup> Nahash the Ammonite went up and laid siege to Jabesh-gilead. All the men of Jabesh said to Nahash, "Make a treaty with us, and we'll be your servants."

<sup>3</sup>The elders of Jabesh replied to him, "Leave us alone for seven days so we can send messengers throughout Israel's territory. If there's no one to save us, then we'll surrender to you."

<sup>4</sup>When the messengers reached Gibeah where Saul lived, they reported the news directly to the people there. Then they all wept aloud. <sup>5</sup>At just that moment, Saul was coming back from keeping the cattle in the fields. "What's wrong with everybody?" he asked. "Why are they crying?" Saul was then told what the men from Jabesh had said.

<sup>6</sup>God's spirit came over Saul when he heard those words, and he burned with anger. <sup>7</sup>He took two oxen, cut them into pieces, and sent them by messengers throughout Israel's territory. "This is exactly what will be done to the oxen of anyone who doesn't come to the aid of Saul and Samuel," he said. Great fear of the LORD came over the people, and they came to Saul completely unified. <sup>8</sup>When Saul counted them at Bezek, the soldiers from Israel totaled three hundred thousand and those from Judah thirty thousand.

<sup>9</sup>The messengers who had come were then told, "Say this to the people of Jabesh-gilead: Tomorrow by the time the sun is hot, you will be saved." When the messengers returned and reported this to the people of Jabesh, they were overjoyed.

besieged by the Ammonites. In much the same fashion as the charismatic leaders in the book of Judges, the Spirit comes upon Saul. He summons the tribes to war, and brings deliverance to the people of Jabesh-gilead. After this, "at Gilgal they made Saul king in the Lord's presence" (1 Sam 11:15).

10:27b None of this detailed material about the atrocities committed by Nahash, king of the Ammonites, is in the Masoretic Hebrew text. It appears, however, in the Dead Sea Scrolls texts, and the Jewish historian Josephus clearly knows about it. The recovery of this material gives us important details that explain the plight of the people in Jabesh-gilead, an important Israelite city in the Transjordan. Ammon is the small kingdom to the north and east of the Israelite tribes of Gad and Reuben. The Philistine occupation of Israelite territory didn't extend beyond the Jordan River. With most of Israel under the Philistines, the remaining Israelite tribes in the Transjordan were left vulnerable to kings like Nahash of the Ammonites, who sought to take advantage of Israel's weakened condition by co-opting Israelite territory for their own gain. Nahash's method of subjugating the Israelites in their region was particularly brutal, blinding them in one eye and thus marking them as slaves and limiting their ability to resist. Additional material from a Dead Sea Scroll manuscript explains that 7,000 Israelites had taken refuge in Jabesh-gilead in resistance to the cruelty of Nahash.

11:1-3 Nahash lays siege to Jabesh-gilead, and the Israelites there offer to make a treaty to serve Nahash, but he insists he will do this only on the condition of gouging out everyone's right eye. The people of Jabesh-gilead ask for seven days to consider, giving them time to send out urgent requests for help.

11:4-5 When word of the plight of Jabesh-gilead reaches Saul in his hometown of Gibeah, he is simply coming in from the fields with his oxen. There is no suggestion that he is acting already as a king there.

11:6-9 When Saul hears the news, the Lord's spirit comes upon him, and he grows angry. He summons the Israelites to war by cutting two oxen into pieces and sending these pieces throughout Israel, suggesting that a similar fate would befall the oxen of any who failed to respond. This method of summoning Israel echoes the actions of the Levite in Judges 19:29-30 who called for vengeance for the killing of his concubine. The raising up of a charismatic leader by the power of God's spirit recalls the stories of Othniel, Gideon, Jephthah, and Samson in the book of Judges. Like them, Saul becomes the agent of God's deliverance. There is no suggestion in this chapter that Saul is regarded as king. However, in the present arrangement of chapters this episode serves as a public demonstration of the power of God's spirit that had already come upon him as a young man following his anointing by Samuel (1 Sam 10:10), which is a pattern similar to that found for David in 1 Samuel 16-17. The response to Saul's summons is overwhelming, and Saul leads a great force to rescue Jabesh-gilead. The numbers in 11:8 seem incredible, although it is helpful to remember that the Hebrew word for a "thousand" can also mean a "military unit," which would make the numbers more realistic.

11:9-11 The people of Jabesh-gilead feign surrender to Nahash, but Saul and his force attack in three companies

<sup>10</sup>Then the people of Jabesh told the Ammonites, "We will surrender to you tomorrow. Then you can do whatever you want to us."

<sup>11</sup>The next day Saul organized his troops into three formations. They attacked the Ammonite camp during the morning watch and slaughtered them until the heat of the day. The survivors were so scattered that not even two of them could be found together.

<sup>12</sup>Then people asked Samuel, "Who was it who said, 'Will Saul rule over us?' Give us those people; we'll kill them!"

<sup>13</sup>But Saul said, "No one will be executed because today the LORD has saved Israel."

<sup>14</sup>"Let's go to Gilgal," Samuel told the people, "and renew the monarchy there." <sup>15</sup>So everyone went to Gilgal, and there at Gilgal they made Saul king in the LORD's presence. They offered well-being sacrifices in the LORD's presence, and Saul and all the Israelites held a great celebration there.

Samuel's last speech

12 Samuel said to all Israel: "Listen: I have done everything you asked of me and have placed a king over you. <sup>2</sup>The king will lead you now. I am old and gray, though my sons are still with you, and I've been your leader since I was young until now. <sup>3</sup>So I'm here: Tell the truth about me in the presence of the LORD and his anointed. Have I ever stolen someone's ox? Have I ever taken someone's donkey? Have I ever oppressed or mistreated anyone? Have I ever taken bribes from someone and looked the other way about something? Tell me the truth. <sup>4</sup>I will make it right."

"You haven't oppressed or mistreated us, and you've never taken anything from anyone," the people answered.

"Agreed," they said.

<sup>6</sup>Then Samuel told the people: "The witness <sup>a</sup> is indeed the LORD, who appointed Moses and Aaron and brought your ancestors up from the land of Egypt. <sup>7</sup>So now stand here, and I will judge you in the LORD's presence because of all the LORD's righteous acts that he has done for you and your ancestors:

early in the morning of the expected surrender. They win a great victory that includes the slaughter of the Ammonite force.

11:12-13 In an apparent reference back to those who questioned Saul's ability to rule (1 Sam 10:27a), some want to deal harshly with such doubters, but Saul responds with generosity and insists on no vengeance. In doing so, he gives complete credit for the deliverance of Israel to the Lord.

11:14-15 It seems clear that this account understands that they made Saul king in Gilgal after he was acclaimed king at Mizpah (1 Sam 10:24). Verse 14 may be an attempt to harmonize these separate accounts of Saul becoming king. Samuel reenters an episode in which he played no part in order to keep the prophet in the role of kingmaker, even though the following verse says the people made Saul king.

12:1-25 Samuel's farewell address to the people is widely considered to mark the end of the time of charismatic leaders in Israel and the beginning of the time of kings. The tone is one of warning as Samuel gets one last chance to emphasize the dangers ahead for an Israel led by kings. 12:1-5 Samuel seems willing to accept the passing of his leadership over to the new leadership of kings. He acknowledges his old age, but he doesn't acknowledge the unacceptability of his own sons (cf. 1 Sam 12:2; 8:2-3). Samuel does, however, seem greatly concerned that the people acknowledge his integrity as leader. He exacts from the people a solemn pledge before the Lord and his anointed one (i.e., the king) that he has led the people without seeking personal gain or allowing his leadership to oppress others or accept bribes. The people respond that he hasn't engaged in such practices.

12:6-15 This part of Samuel's farewell speech is widely considered to show the concerns of the larger Deuteronomistic History in which the books of Samuel are found. Similar to Joshua 24, the speech focuses on God's demand for covenant obedience. A lengthy recital of God's acts of salvation toward Israel throughout their history to this point begins with Jacob (12:8a) and proceeds to Moses, Aaron, and deliverance out of Egypt (12:8b; cf. 12:6). Samuel continues by detailing God's deliverance in the time of the charismatic leaders, although using a somewhat strange order of events. Then, curiously, Samuel treats the threat of Nahash and the Ammonites as the immediate threat motivating the people's request for a king (12:12). This threat isn't at all the impression given by earlier chapters in 1 Samuel, where the Philistine threat is the most urgent and comprehensive. Samuel continues to view kingship as sinful and conflicting with God's rule over Israel (12:12-13, cf. 1 Sam 8:6-7; 10:19). Nevertheless, Samuel insists that the future of Israel and its king depends on covenant obedience: If you will fear the Lord, worship him, obey him, and not rebel against the Lord's command... you and the king... follow the Lord... all will be well (12:14). But if you don't obey the Lord and rebel against the Lord's command, <sup>8</sup>"When Jacob entered Egypt, the Egyptians oppressed them.<sup>8</sup> So your ancestors cried out to the LORD. The LORD then sent Moses and Aaron, who brought your ancestors out of Egypt and settled them here. <sup>9</sup>But your ancestors forgot the LORD their God, so he handed them over to Sisera the commander of Hazor's army, and to the Philistines, and to the Moabite king, all of whom fought against them. <sup>10</sup>Then your ancestors cried out to the LORD and said: 'We have sinned because we have abandoned the LORD and have worshipped the Baals and the Astartes. But now deliver us from the power of our enemies, and we will worship you.' <sup>11</sup>So the LORD sent Jerubbaal, Barak,<sup>9</sup> Jephthah, and Samson,<sup>4</sup> and he delivered you from the power of your enemies on every side. And you lived safe and secure. <sup>12</sup>But when you saw that Nahash the Ammonite king was coming against you, you said to me, 'No! There must be a king to rule over us.' But the LORD your God was already your king!

<sup>13</sup>"So now, here is the king you chose, the one you asked for. Yes, the LORD has put a king over you! <sup>14</sup>If you will fear the LORD, worship him, obey him, and not rebel against the LORD's command, and if both you and the king who rules over you follow the LORD your God—all will be well. <sup>15</sup>But if you don't obey the LORD and rebel against the LORD's command, then the LORD's power will go against you and your king to destroy you.<sup>5</sup>

<sup>18</sup>Samuel called upon the LORD, and God sent thunder and rain on that very day. Then all the people were in awe of the LORD and Samuel.

<sup>19</sup>All of them said to Samuel, "Please pray for us, your servants, to the LORD your God so we don't die because we have added to our many sins the evil of asking for a king."

Samuel rejects Saul's dynasty

then the LORD's power will go against you and your king to destroy you (12:15). As is always the case with covenant, obedience or disobedience is the choice set before Israel, but now the fates of Israel and its kings are intertwined. LORD's power: or "the LORD's hand" is a phrase used frequently in the story of the capture of God's covenant chest (1 Sam 4-6) to show God's power against the Philistines.

12:16-18 Samuel calls on God to send a sign to Israel in the form of thunder and rain. When the sign takes place, the people are in awe of Samuel and the Lord.

12:19 The people ask Samuel to intercede for them with God, and confess that asking for a king was evil.

12:20-25 Samuel's final speech to the people is both encouraging and ominous. In themes and words that recall Deuteronomistic interests, the people are urged to Serve the LORD with all your heart. Don't turn aside to follow useless idols (12:20-21). Samuel affirms that God won't abandon Israel, and God has chosen them as God's people (12:22). Samuel himself pledges not to turn his back on Israel but to continue to pray for them and teach them. He may hand over leadership now to the king, but he will continue to pray and instruct (12:23). In a final word, the people can choose faithfulness (12:24), but if they choose evil, then they and their king will be destroyed (12:25). Since these chapters in 1 Samuel are part of a larger history work that ends with Babylonian exile at the end of 2 Kings, it is hard not to imagine that this final word from Samuel shows the editor's knowledge of the disastrous end to Israel's experience with kingship.

13:1 This same formula appears frequently in the books of Kings to introduce the reigns of kings. The writer of Samuel also used it for the accounts of Ishbaal (2 Sam 2:10) and David (2 Sam 5:4). This formula usually states the king's age at accession and the number of years he reigned. In almost all manuscripts this formula is incomplete. Three manuscripts of the OT Greek translation (LXX) give Saul's age as 30, an impossibility given that he has a grown warrior son only two verses later. All Hebrew and Greek manuscripts have only the number two for the length of his reign, but many scholars think that an accompanying number has fallen out. This explains why the CEB supplies the number forty-two, borrowing from Acts 13:21 and the writings of Josephus. Forty is a common number in biblical texts to indicate a generation when the number is unknown.

at Michmash in the hills near Bethel, and one thousand were with Jonathan at Gibeah in Benjamin. He sent the remaining men home. <sup>3</sup>Jonathan attacked the Philistine fort at Geba, and the Philistines heard about it. So Saul sounded the alarm<sup>a</sup> throughout the land and said, "Hebrews! Listen up!" <sup>4</sup>When all Israel heard that Saul had attacked the Philistine fort and that Israel was hated by the Philistines, the troops were called to Saul's side at Gilgal. <sup>5</sup>The Philistines also were gathered to fight against Israel. They brought thirty thousand chariots with them, six thousand cavalry, and as many soldiers as there is sand on the seashore to fight Israel. <sup>6</sup>They marched up and camped at Michmash, east of Beth-aven. <sup>7</sup>When the Israelites saw that they were in trouble and that their troops were threatened, they hid in caves, in thickets, among rocks, in tunnels, and in cisterns. <sup>8</sup>Some Hebrews even crossed the Jordan River, going into the land of Gad and Gilead.

Saul stayed at Gilgal, and the troops followed him anxiously. <sup>9</sup>He waited seven days, the time appointed by Samuel, but Samuel didn't come to Gilgal, and his troops began to desert. <sup>10</sup>So Saul ordered, "Bring me the entirely burned offering and the well-being sacrifices." Then he offered the entirely burned offering.

<sup>11</sup>The very moment Saul finished offering up the entirely burned offering, Samuel arrived. Saul went out to meet him and welcome him. <sup>12</sup>But Samuel said, "What have you done?"

"I saw that my troops were deserting," Saul replied. "You hadn't arrived by the appointed time, and the Philistines were gathering at Michmash. <sup>13</sup>I thought, The Philistines are about to march against me at Gilgal and I haven't yet sought the LORD's favor. So I took control of myself<sup>b</sup> and offered the entirely burned offering."

<sup>14</sup>"How stupid of you to have broken the commands the LORD your God gave you!" Samuel told Saul. "The LORD would have established your rule over Israel forever, <sup>15</sup>but now your rule won't last. The LORD will search for a man following the LORD's own heart,<sup>c</sup> and the LORD will commission him as leader over God's people, because you didn't keep the LORD's command."

13:2-7a These verses detail hostilities between the forces of Israel, led by Saul and his son Jonathan, and the Philistines. There is little story or character development. The account focuses on deployment of forces, strategic maneuvering, and strength of numbers. The skirmishes detailed take place near Saul's hometown and headquarters at Gibeah in the central highlands near Bethel. The Philistine opponents seem to be military patrols occupying the country rather than an organized army. Jonathan seems to initiate conflict (13:3), as he does in 1 Samuel 14. Then Saul sounds the alarm (or "blows the shofar"). The Philistines gather a larger regional force (13:5), and in the face of this show of strength, most of the Israelites retreat and hide (13:6). Saul and his military unit stand ready at Gilgal.

13:7b-14 Inserted into the details of Israelite confrontation with Philistines is an episode of conflict between Saul and Samuel, the first of two accounts that end in a rejection of Saul by the prophet (cf. 1 Sam 15).

13:8-9 Saul waits seven days for the arrival of Samuel to offer the sacrifices customary before battle. It's best not to identify this time of waiting with the seven days mentioned by Samuel when he instructed Saul to wait until he came to offer sacrifices (1 Sam 10:8). In 1 Samuel 10, Saul is still a boy. Now Saul has gone through a series of dramatic events resulting in his coronation as king, and he has a grown son who proves to be a capable warrior. Here Saul becomes impatient. Hoping to seize a moment of military advantage by engaging the enemy, he rashly offers the entirely burned offerings himself.

13:10-14 As soon as Saul offers the sacrifice himself, the prophet Samuel appears and scolds the king. Saul tries to justify his action in military terms (13:11b-12), but for Samuel this isn't a matter of battle strategy. It's an issue of sacred authority, and it violates God's commandment. Saul has exerted political authority over religious authority in Samuel's eyes. His judgment is immediate and harsh. God won't establish Saul's rule. That is, God won't give him a dynasty with his sons succeeding him. Instead, God will search for a man suitable according to God's terms. This points forward to David, who is chosen from among Jesse's sons after God reminds Samuel that God looks not at externals but on the heart (1 Sam 16:7). God's own heart must align with the heart of any future anointed king. It won't be from the line of Saul.

13:15-18 Saul, Jonathan, and 600 men move from Gilgal to Gibeah to Geba, all close together in the central highlands near Bethel. The Philistines encamp at Michmash, and this sets the stage for the battle described in 1 Samuel 14.

14 One day Jonathan, Saul's son, said to his young armor-bearer, "Come on! Let's go over to the Philistine fort on the opposite side." But he didn't tell his father.<sup>2</sup>Saul was sitting on the outskirts of Gibeah under the pomegranate tree at Migron. He had about six hundred men with him,<sup>3</sup>including Ahijah, the son of Ahitub, who was Ichabod's brother and the son of Phinehas the son of Eli, who was the LORD's priest at Shiloh. He was wearing a priestly vest.<sup>4</sup>None of the troops knew that Jonathan had gone.

<sup>8</sup>"All right then," Jonathan said. "We'll go over to the men and show ourselves.<sup>9</sup>If they say to us, 'Stay there until we get to you,' then we'll stay where we are and won't go up to them.<sup>10</sup>But if they say, 'Come on up,' then we'll go up because that will be the sign that the LORD has handed them over to us."

<sup>11</sup>So they showed themselves to the Philistine fort, and the Philistines said, "Look, the Hebrews are coming out of the holes they've been hiding in!"<sup>12</sup>Then the troops in the fort yelled to Jonathan and his armor-bearer, "Come on up! We'll teach you a lesson!"

So Jonathan said to his armor-bearer, "Follow me, because the LORD has handed them over to Israel!"<sup>13</sup>So Jonathan scrambled up on his hands and feet with his armor-bearer right behind him. The Philistines fell before Jonathan. His armor-bearer, coming behind him, would then finish them off.<sup>14</sup>In the first attack, Jonathan and his armor-bearer killed about twenty men in an area of about half an acre.<sup>15</sup>Panic broke out in the camp, in the field, and among all the troops. Even those in the fort and the raiders shook with fear. The very ground shook! It was a terror from God.

13:19-22 A brief note intrudes into the flow of the narrative to inform us that the Philistines have established a monopoly on metalworking as a part of their occupation of Israelite territory. Hebrews aren't allowed to make swords or spears, and must even obtain and sharpen metal farm implements from the Philistines at a cost.

13:23-14:46 This story provides our most detailed account of an Israelite battle against the Philistines. It's also a story that contrasts the bold and confident initiative of Jonathan with the cautious and untrusting actions of his father, Saul, almost with disastrous results.

14:1-3 Jonathan and his friend set out alone to cross over the ravine at Michmash to the Philistine camp. Saul is encamped at Gibeah, sitting under a tree, surrounded by his troops, and consulting with a priest.

14:4-15 Jonathan enlists his armor-bearer for a surprise attack on the Philistine garrison. He constantly bases his confidence in the Lord and then takes bold action. Three times he expresses this trust in the Lord's power to aid them against the Philistines (14:6, 10, 12). With Jonathan taking the lead, they advance into the Philistine camp, battling with such success that a panic ensues among the remaining Philistines (14:15). The phrase terror from God is similar to the panic from God in other accounts of holy war, and the belief that God aids the righteous in battle (see Gen 35:5; Exod 23:27; Isa 2:10, 19).

14:16-19 Saul and his camp see the confusion created by Jonathan's attack on the Philistine camp. Instead of rushing to aid Jonathan, Saul first calls on his priest Ahijah to bring the priestly vest (Hebrew ephod, the name of this priestly garment). The phrase "Withdraw your hand" (14:19) should be taken to indicate the withdrawal of the counted, and Jonathan and his armor-bearer were gone. <sup>18</sup>Saul said to Ahijah, "Bring the priestly vest!" because at that time, Ahijah wore the priestly vest in Israel's presence. <sup>f</sup><sup>19</sup>As Saul was talking to the priest, the confusion in the Philistine camp continued to grow. Saul said to the priest, "Withdraw your hand."<sup>g</sup>

<sup>20</sup>Then Saul called all his troops together, and they went into battle. The Philistines were completely confused; every soldier's sword was turned against his fellow soldier. <sup>21</sup>Even those Hebrews who had earlier joined up with the Philistines and moved into their camp changed sides to be with the Israelites who were with Saul and Jonathan. <sup>22</sup>Similarly, when all the Israelites who had been hiding in the highlands of Ephraim heard that the Philistines were on the run, they also joined the battle in hot pursuit of the Philistines. <sup>23</sup>The LORD saved Israel that day, and the fighting carried on beyond Beth-aven.

<sup>29</sup>Jonathan said, "My father has brought trouble to the land. Look how my eyes lit up when I tasted just a bit of that honey! <sup>30</sup>It would have been even better if the troops had eaten some of their enemies' plunder today when they found it! But now the Philistine defeat isn't as thorough as it might have been."

"Do whatever you think is best," the troops replied.

But the priest said, "Let's ask God first."

<sup>37</sup>So Saul questioned God: "Should I go after the Philistines? Will you hand them over to Israel?" But God did not answer him that day.

<sup>g</sup>LXX ephod <sup>f</sup>LXX; MT "Bring out God's chest!" because at that time God's chest was with the Israelites; cf 14:3.

Urim and Thummim, the sacred lots thrown to determine whether God's favor is with them. This caution on the part of Saul contrasts with Jonathan's boldness.

14:20-23 When Saul and his forces join the fray, great victory seems under way. The Philistines are confused and retreating. Hebrews who had hidden or even yielded to the Philistines come out of hiding and join the Israelite forces to pursue the retreating Philistines. The Lord is given credit for Israel's salvation on this day (14:23).

14:24-30 We now learn that at the beginning of the battle Saul has sworn an oath that anyone who eats food before the end of the battle will doom the revenge on the Philistines. This rash pledge places an unnecessary demand on troops in a protracted battle, a point voiced later by Jonathan (14:30). The Israelite troops become exhausted and famished to the point they can't continue the pursuit of the Philistines, blunting the outcome of the victory. However, in an event with later terrible consequences, Jonathan, who wasn't present to hear Saul's solemn pledge, comes upon a honeycomb and immediately eats honey from it (14:26-27). The effect on him is energizing, until others inform him of his father's oath.

14:31-35 At the end of the day of battle, a second negative effect comes from Saul's rash pledge. The famished troops fall upon the livestock looted from the Philistines, and begin eating the bloody meat. Israelite teaching forbids eating meat with the blood, and Saul quickly acts to forestall this sinful feasting by creating an impromptu altar for properly sacrificing animals and draining their blood. This allows the troops to eat without sin.

14:36-46 In a dramatic episode, the result of Saul's ill-advised pledge comes to a near-tragic end. Saul wants to

<sup>38</sup>Then Saul said, "All you officers in the army, come forward! Let's find out what sin was committed today. <sup>39</sup>As surely as the LORD lives—the one who has saved Israel—even if it's my own son Jonathan, that person will be executed." Not one of the soldiers answered him. <sup>40</sup>So Saul said to all Israel, "You be on one side, and my son Jonathan and I will be on the other."

"Do whatever you think is best," the troops said.

<sup>41</sup>Then Saul asked the LORD God of Israel, "Why haven't you answered your servant today? If the wrongdoing is mine or my son Jonathan's, respond with Urim, but if the wrongdoing belongs to your people Israel, respond with Thummim."<sup>1</sup> Jonathan and Saul were taken by lot, and the troops were cleared.

So Jonathan told him. "I only took a very small taste of honey on the end of my staff," he said. "And now I'm supposed to die?"

<sup>45</sup>But the troops said to Saul, "Why should Jonathan die when he has won this great victory for Israel? No way! As surely as the LORD lives, not one hair off his head will fall to the ground, because he did this today with God's help." So the troops rescued Jonathan, and he wasn't executed.

Saul's wars

<sup>52</sup>There was fierce warfare against the Philistines throughout Saul's lifetime. So whenever Saul saw any strong or heroic man, he would add him to his troops.

Samuel rejects Saul's kingship

15 Samuel said to Saul, "The LORD sent me to anoint you king over his people Israel. Listen now to the LORD's words! <sup>2</sup>This is what the LORD of heavenly forces says: I am follow up his battle advantage and pursue the Philistines, and his troops are willing, but his priest counsels inquiry of God (14:36). This and all of the following inquiries of God most likely involve the use of the Urim and the Thummim, especially since they are referenced in 14:41. These sacred lots (an implement like dice) can respond yes or no or have no result, so these attempts to discern the divine will are posed as yes and no questions or either/or choices (Num 27:21). The first result provides no direction for whether Saul should pursue his enemies, and this silence from God leads to the assumption that someone has sinned (14:37). The lots consulted separate out Saul and Jonathan from the rest, and finally single out Jonathan (14:42). When Jonathan confesses that he ate a bit of honey because he hadn't heard the pledge, Saul is ready to take the life of his son, the hero of the battle (14:44). Saul's own troops intervene to prevent this tragic outcome, but in the meantime the opportunity to pursue the Philistines slips away (14:45-46). An account that began in the bold heroism of Jonathan ends in the folly and caution of Saul.

14:47-48 This summary note gives Saul credit for military victory over many enemies that plagued Israel in this period. We should probably take this to mean that he succeeded in establishing a small area of temporary independence in the central highlands near Gibeah, his hometown.

14:49-52 We are given some family information on Saul. Three sons and two daughters are named. Not named is the son Ishbaal, who will later play a key role in the story, ruling the northern tribes of Israel after Saul's death (2 Sam 2:8). Saul's wife, Ahinoam, and his general Abner, as well as his uncle, are named. Abner plays a crucial role in events after Saul's death.

15:1-35 This second story of conflict between Samuel and Saul results in God's rejecting Saul as the legitimate king. This is a turning point in the story. The future of Israel can't lie with Saul. The next chapter will turn to David.

15:1-3 The prophet brings a command to Saul described as the Lord's words. He is to undertake a campaign against the Amalekites, one of Israel's frequent and traditional going to punish the Amalekites for what they did to Israel: how they attacked the Israelites as they came up from Egypt. <sup>3</sup>So go! Attack the Amalekites; put everything that belongs to them under the ban.<sup>o</sup> Spare no one. Kill men and women, children and infants, oxen and sheep, camels and donkeys.”

<sup>10</sup>Then the LORD’s word came to Samuel: <sup>11</sup>“I regret making Saul king because he has turned away from following me and hasn’t done what I said.” Samuel was upset at this, and he prayed to the LORD all night long.

<sup>15</sup>“They were taken from the Amalekites,” Saul said, “because the troops spared the best sheep and cattle in order to sacrifice them to the LORD your God. The rest was placed under the ban.”

<sup>16</sup>Samuel then said to Saul, “Enough! Let me tell you what the LORD said to me last night.” “Tell me,” Saul replied.

<sup>20</sup>“But I did obey the LORD!” Saul protested to Samuel. “I went on the mission the LORD sent me on. I captured Agag the Amalekite king, and I put the Amalekites under the ban.

enemies. Samuel even references the Amalekite opposition against Israel as they came from bondage in Egypt (cf. Exod 17:8-16). God commands Saul to subject the Amalekites to the ban, a custom of holy war that dedicates all lives, human and animal, to God by destroying them. Such technique may well have been intended to limit the use of war as an instrument of gain, but the practice seems revolting to modern readers. It’s important to remember that Saul’s violation of this command isn’t related to his moral principles but to his desire for material gain for himself and his army.

15:4-9 Saul carries out a successful campaign against the Amalekites. He allows Kenites, a people friendly and possibly related to Israel, a chance to escape, and then attacks and pursues the Amalekites. Although fulfilling much of the command to place all people, animals, and plunder under the ban (see note on 1 Sam 15:1-3) and destroy them, Saul makes some exceptions. He captures the Amalekite king, Agag, alive and preserves all the choicest livestock (15:8-9).

15:10-11 The Lord reports to Samuel that Saul hasn’t done all that was commanded. God’s statement is remarkable: I regret making Saul king. Such an expression of divine regret is extremely rare in the Bible, appearing only one other time in the verses leading up to the flood in Genesis 6:6, where the same verb is used as in this statement.

15:12-26 Samuel travels to meet Saul at Gilgal, and finds him making entirely burned offerings. Saul first responds that he has obeyed God’s word (15:13), but Samuel notes the sound of livestock (15:14). In the back-and-forth confrontation, Saul insists that he has spared only the best of the livestock for sacrifice to the Lord, although he consistently says it was his troops who spared the choice livestock (15:15, 21), and later indicates that he was fearful of his troops and obeyed them (15:24). Samuel insists that the ban commanded by God was to be total (on the “ban,” see note on 1 Sam 15:1-3). In a rare glimpse of prophetic speech in these early stories, Samuel pronounces an oracle indicating that God prefers obedience to sacrifice (15:22-23). This oracle ends by announcing the

“Does the LORD want entirely burned offerings and sacrifices as much as obedience to the LORD?

Listen to this: obeying is better than sacrificing, paying attention is better than fat from rams, <sup>23</sup>because rebellion is as bad as the sin of divination; arrogance is like the evil of idolatry.”

Because you have rejected what the LORD said, he has rejected you as king.”

<sup>24</sup>Saul said to Samuel, “I have sinned because I disobeyed the LORD’s command and your instructions. I was afraid of the troops and obeyed them. <sup>25</sup>But now please forgive my sin! Come back with me, so I can worship the LORD.”

<sup>26</sup>But Samuel said to Saul, “I can’t<sup>t</sup> return with you because you have rejected what the LORD said, and the LORD has rejected you from being king over Israel.”

<sup>30</sup>“I have sinned,” Saul said, “but please honor me in front of my people’s elders and before Israel, and come back with me so I can worship the LORD your God.” <sup>31</sup>So Samuel went back with Saul, and Saul worshipped the LORD.

Agag came to him in chains, asking, “Would death have been as bitter as this is?”<sup>a</sup>

The Rejection of Saul Many readers find this moment in Saul’s story disturbing. First, how is the tradition of holy war described here morally defensible? There are no circumstances in which most modern readers can believe that God would require the deaths of men, women, and children for any cause. Second, we might wonder whether Saul has been given a fair chance before being utterly rejected as king.

Many would understand the ancient concept of holy war as an effort to keep war from being used as an instrument of gain: territory, slaves, and goods. If all is dedicated to God, then war should be used only in defense and not in efforts to profit. To modern moral sensibilities, though, this treats persons as merely disposable property, and we wouldn’t regard this as morally acceptable.

It is important in this story to note that Saul hasn’t spared King Agag and considerable livestock because he objected morally to Samuel’s statement of God’s demand, but because he desired honor and gain. If we set aside the difficult issue of holy war, Saul simply altered what God required to suit his own needs. It might be acceptable to seek fuller discernment of what God actually demands of us, but not to simply do as we please and hope it will be overlooked.

Saul doesn’t seem oriented to interaction and communication with God. Unlike his son Jonathan, and later his son-in-law David, Saul doesn’t pray or seek God’s will. Especially in 1 Samuel 18, qualities of anger, envy, and violence emerge in Saul. We haven’t seen all of this by the time Saul is rejected, but his disobedience in favor of his own needs may be pointing to flaws in his character, and God already regrets making Saul king (1 Sam 15:11, 35).

rejection of Saul as king (15:23b). Saul’s response turns to confession of sin (15:24-25); and he begs for forgiveness and a show of unity between prophet and king before the people. But Samuel only announces his rejection in harsher terms (15:26).

15:27-33 A series of symbolic actions underline Saul’s rejection. Saul tries to prevent Samuel’s departure and tears his robe, only to have Samuel use this symbolically to reinforce his rejection of Saul as king: The Lord has ripped the kingdom of Israel from you today. Further, the entry of David into the story is foreshadowed, because the one to whom God will entrust the kingdom is identified as a friend of yours . . . more worthy than you (15:28). In the chapters that follow, Saul and David do indeed become close before Saul turns on him. Samuel seems to agree to Saul’s request to honor him before the people and join him in worship of the Lord, but it results in only a final symbolic act of rejection. Saul had preserved the life of the Amalekites’ King Agag. Saul couldn’t justify this act as he had with the livestock, which were preserved for sacrifice to the Lord. Such taking of kings is usually to parade them in triumph and gain honor before the people. Now Samuel <sup>34</sup>Then Samuel went to Ramah, but Saul went up to his home in Gibeah. <sup>35</sup>Samuel never saw Saul again before he died, but he grieved over Saul. However, the LORD regretted making Saul king over Israel.

Samuel anoints David

16 The LORD said to Samuel, "How long are you going to grieve over Saul? I have rejected him as king over Israel. Fill your horn with oil and get going. I'm sending you to Jesse of Bethlehem because I have found<sup>v</sup> my next king among his sons."

"Take a heifer with you," the LORD replied, "and say, 'I have come to make a sacrifice to the LORD.' <sup>3</sup>Invite Jesse to the sacrifice, and I will make clear to you what you should do. You will anoint for me the person I point out to you."

<sup>4</sup>Samuel did what the LORD instructed. When he came to Bethlehem, the city elders came to meet him. They were shaking with fear. "Do you come in peace?" they asked.

<sup>5</sup>"Yes," Samuel answered. "I've come to make a sacrifice to the LORD. Now make yourselves holy, then come with me to the sacrifice." Samuel made Jesse and his sons holy and invited them to the sacrifice as well.

<sup>7</sup>But the LORD said to Samuel, "Have no regard for his appearance or stature, because I haven't selected him. God<sup>w</sup> doesn't look at things like humans do. Humans see only what is visible to the eyes, but the LORD sees into the heart."

<sup>8</sup>Next Jesse called for Abinadab, who presented himself to Samuel, but he said, "The LORD hasn't chosen this one either." <sup>9</sup>So Jesse presented Shammah, but Samuel said, "No, the LORD hasn't chosen this one." <sup>10</sup>Jesse presented seven of his sons to Samuel, but Samuel said to Jesse, "The LORD hasn't picked any of these." <sup>11</sup>Then Samuel asked Jesse, "Is that all of your boys?"

"There is still the youngest one," Jesse answered, "but he's out keeping the sheep."

"Send for him," Samuel told Jesse, "because we can't proceed until he gets here."<sup>w</sup>

<sup>12</sup>So Jesse sent and brought him in. He was reddish brown, had beautiful eyes, and was good-looking. The LORD said, "That's the one. Go anoint him." <sup>13</sup>So Samuel took the horn of oil and anointed him right there in front of his brothers. The LORD's spirit came over David from that point forward.

demands that Saul bring Agag forward. He announces that Agag is guilty of crimes against Israel, and executes him with a sword (15:33).

15:34-35 Samuel never sees Saul again in his life, although 1 Samuel 28 provides a remarkable account of Saul's encounter with Samuel's ghost. But Samuel does grieve over Saul (and continues to do so; see 1 Sam 16:1). Once more the text announces that the LORD regretted making Saul king (see note on 1 Sam 15:10-11).

16:1-13 David is introduced into the story, and becomes the main focus of the narrative, even while Saul is yet alive. He is the man following the Lord's own heart (see note on 1 Sam 13:14).

16:1-3 Given the harshness of the conflicts between Samuel and Saul, it is somewhat surprising to find Samuel so consumed with grief over Saul that God must urge him to move ahead. Saul's era is over; he is rejected. God now wants Samuel to anoint a new king from among the sons of Jesse. Clearly Samuel doesn't regard this as wise or safe. Saul may not tolerate the anointing of a rival. God agrees to participate in Samuel's cover story by suggesting he just come to Jesse on the pretext of making a sacrifice. God will indicate the one chosen.

16:4-7 Samuel's arrival in Bethlehem clearly arouses some fear, but the prophet carries through with the pretext of his visit by sacrificing. Jesse's oldest son, Eliab, is so striking that Samuel assumes he must be the one. This affords a prime opportunity for God to instruct both Samuel and the reader. God doesn't look on appearance but on the heart. If the goal is a "man following the Lord's own heart" (1 Sam 13:14), then God's examination of the heart of those to be chosen becomes an alignment of the heart of God with the heart of God's anointed one.

16:8-11 Seven sons of Jesse are presented, but none are God's chosen. Samuel learns that an eighth son, the youngest, is away watching the sheep, and he sends for him.

16:12-13 When David arrives, God indicates he is the one. Samuel anoints him, and, just as happened following Saul's anointing (1 Sam 10:1, 10), God's spirit comes upon David. The Hebrew term for "anointed one" is the source of

David Is Introduced to Saul

<sup>14</sup>Now the LORD's spirit had departed from Saul, and an evil spirit from the LORD tormented him. <sup>15</sup>Saul's servants said to him, "Look, an evil spirit from God is tormenting you. <sup>16</sup>If our master just says the word, your servants will search for someone who knows how to play the lyre. The musician can play whenever the evil spirit from God is affecting you, and then you'll feel better."

the title "Messiah" or, following Greek usage, "Christ." When Jesus is baptized by John, God's Spirit descends upon him in the same way.

16:14 While God's spirit has now come upon David as God's anointed, it departs from Saul. It would seem that Saul's rejection and David's anointing make it impossible for two persons to carry the simultaneous status of God's anointed king. Although Saul holds the human political office for some time yet, he is no longer the legitimate king. In fact, an evil spirit from the LORD plagues Saul, which explains why Saul will appear in the narratives ahead to be increasingly unbalanced and dangerous. Perhaps such an injurious spirit is intended as punishment to Saul. In any case, the biblical narrative views all events as originating from God, even the dangerous mental states of Saul. It wasn't what God desired; indeed, God regrets it (cf. 1 Sam 15:35). As will become clear in the stories that follow, the notion of an evil spirit possessing Saul isn't intended to relieve him of moral responsibility.

16:15-19 One of Saul's servants suggests that a musician skilled in the lyre might bring Saul comfort in times when he falls into his tormented states, and Saul agrees to send for one. Another servant seems to know David, the son of Jesse, as just such a skilled musician. Significantly, though, David is also described as a strong man and heroic, a warrior who speaks well and is good-looking (16:18). David brings qualities that will make him more valuable than a musician in the court of Saul, and more likely as Israel's future king. It's ironic that Saul is the first to utter the name of David in the story. The declaration that The LORD is with him is the first of seven times that this testimony to God's presence with David is given in 1 and 2 Samuel (cf. 1 Sam 17:37; 18:12, 14, 28; 20:13; 2 Sam 5:10).

16:20-23 David arrives at Saul's court with gifts, and Saul immediately likes him. David is taken into Saul's service permanently (a request to his father, Jesse; 16:22) as Saul's armor-bearer. When Saul would become troubled and tormented, David would play the lyre to calm him (16:23). This entry into Saul's service creates problems for the flow of the story because in the next chapter David arrives in time to hear the challenge of Goliath, and Saul clearly doesn't know him (1 Sam 17:55-56).

17:1-58 This is a second story on how David was introduced to the court of Saul (cf. 1 Sam 16:18). David seems younger here, and he hasn't previously been a part of Saul's court or even known by him. These two introduction stories for David can't be completely harmonized or reconciled. This story of David's defeat of Goliath is one of the best-known stories of David, and defines him in the tradition down to the present (cf. Sir 47:4-5). In the present order of episodes, however, this story serves as the mighty deed that follows the anointing by a prophet and the receiving of God's spirit. This repeats the pattern seen for Saul (1 Sam 9-11). It's the pattern that legitimates God's anointed one as Israel's king.

17:1-3 The armies of Israel and the Philistines face each other on opposing hilltops with a valley between. A battle is expected.

17:4-11 A Philistine champion named Goliath comes out daily to challenge Israel to send their own champion to face scimitar hung on his back. <sup>7</sup>His spear shaft<sup>c</sup> was as strong as the bar on a weaver's loom, and its iron head weighed fifteen pounds.<sup>d</sup> His shield-bearer walked in front of him.

<sup>8</sup>He stopped and shouted to the Israelite troops, "Why have you come and taken up battle formations? I am the Philistine champion,"<sup>e</sup> and you are Saul's servants. Isn't that right? Select one of your men, and let him come down against me. <sup>9</sup>If he is able to fight me and kill me, then we will become your slaves, but if I overcome him and kill him, then you will become our slaves and you will serve us. <sup>10</sup>I insult Israel's troops today!" the Philistine continued, "Give me an opponent, and we'll fight!" <sup>11</sup>When Saul and all Israel heard what the Philistine said, they were distressed and terrified.<sup>f</sup>

<sup>26</sup>David asked the soldiers standing by him, "What will be done for the person who kills that Philistine over there and removes this insult from Israel? Who is that uncircumcised Philistine, anyway, that he can get away with insulting the army of the living God?"

<sup>27</sup>Then the troops repeated to him what they had been saying. "So that's what will be done for the man who kills him," they said.

<sup>28</sup>When David's oldest brother Eliab heard him talking to the soldiers, he got very mad at David. "Why did you come down here?" he said. "Who is watching those few sheep for you in the wilderness? I know how arrogant you are and your devious plan: you came down just to see the battle!"

<sup>30</sup>So David turned to someone else and asked the same thing, and the people said the

him in battle. The practice of deciding conflicts through individual combat is known elsewhere in the ancient world and might have served to stop more widespread loss of life. The description of Goliath is daunting: nine feet tall ... armor weighing one hundred twenty-five pounds ... a bronze scimitar ... spear shaft ... its iron head weighed fifteen pounds (17:4-7). Further, he taunted and insulted the men of Israel (17:10), but no one would face him.

17:12-19 David's three oldest brothers were serving in Saul's army. David's elderly father uses his youngest son to send provisions to them and bring back news of their welfare.

17:20-27 David arrives at Saul's camp just as Israelite and Philistine forces are taking their battle positions, and just as Goliath comes out to hurl his daily challenge to Israel. No one dared face him, but David hears talk of the rewards that would go to the man who could kill Goliath: riches, the king's daughter, and exemption from taxes (17:25). David eagerly seeks to confirm this while expressing shock that a Philistine can insult the army of God's people (17:26-27). 17:28-30 David and his older brother Eliab get into a typical family squabble as Eliab accuses David of coming down merely as a curious onlooker, instead of taking care of his father's sheep.

same thing in reply. <sup>31</sup>The things David had said were overheard and reported to Saul, who sent for him.

<sup>33</sup>"You can't go out and fight this Philistine," Saul answered David. "You are still a boy. But he's been a warrior since he was a boy!"

<sup>34</sup>"Your servant has kept his father's sheep," David replied to Saul, "and if ever a lion or a bear came and carried off one of the flock, <sup>35</sup>I would go after it, strike it, and rescue the animal from its mouth. If it turned on me, I would grab it at its jaw, strike it, and kill it. <sup>36</sup>Your servant has fought both lions and bears. This uncircumcised Philistine will be just like one of them because he has insulted the army of the living God.

<sup>37</sup>"The LORD," David added, "who rescued me from the power of both lions and bears, will rescue me from the power of this Philistine."

"Go!" Saul replied to David. "And may the LORD be with you!"

<sup>43</sup>The Philistine asked David, "Am I some sort of dog that you come at me with sticks?" And he cursed David by his gods. <sup>44</sup>"Come here," he said to David, "and I'll feed your flesh to the wild birds and the wild animals!"

<sup>45</sup>But David told the Philistine, "You are coming against me with sword, spear, and scimitar, but I come against you in the name of the LORD of heavenly forces, the God of Israel's army, the one you've insulted. <sup>46</sup>Today the LORD will hand you over to me. I will strike you down and cut off your head! Today I will feed your dead body and the dead bodies of the entire Philistine camp<sup>a</sup> to the wild birds and the wild animals. Then the whole world will know that there is a God on Israel's side. <sup>47</sup>And all those gathered here will know that the LORD doesn't save by means of sword and spear. The LORD owns this war, and he will hand all of you over to us."

17:31-37 David's inquiries are made known to Saul, and when brought before the king, David almost blurts out that he will go down and face the Philistine champion. Saul dismisses this, noting to David that You are still a boy (17:33). David boldly responds that in defending his father's sheep he has killed lions and bears, and so he can kill the Philistine. Further, David says that he did this through the Lord's power, and that same divine power will deliver him from the Philistine (17:37). Saul gives permission for him to go.

17:38-40 Saul tries to equip David with the traditional armor and weapons of a warrior by using his own gear, but it proves much too large and cumbersome. Instead, David goes out to meet Goliath with his shepherd staff, five stones, and a sling (17:40).

17:41-47 Goliath can't imagine that Israel has sent a mere boy to meet him, and the two opponents exchange speeches. Goliath dismisses David and his paltry weapons, curses him, and promises to leave his body for birds and beasts (17:43-44). But David's speech is a testimony of faith. He sees the conflict as the Lord's response to Philistine insults, and suggests that the Lord's power is mightier than sword or spear. He makes a solemn promise to strike you down and cut off your head as a response to Philistine insults toward God (17:45-47).

17:48-54 The actual conflict is told briefly, offering few details. As the two figures advance toward each other, David takes a stone and hurls it with his sling, striking the Philistine in the forehead (17:48-49). He cuts off the Philistine's head with his own sword. The Philistine army is panicked, and Israel's army pursues them to win a great victory (17:51-53).

When the Philistines saw that their hero was dead, they fled. <sup>52</sup>The soldiers from Israel and Judah jumped up with a shout and chased the Philistines all the way to Gath<sup>1</sup> and the gates of Ekron. The dead Philistines were littered along the Shaarim road all the way to Gath and Ekron. <sup>53</sup>When the Israelites came back from chasing the Philistines, they plundered their camp. <sup>54</sup>David took the head of the Philistine and brought it to Jerusalem, but he put the Philistine's weapons in his own tent.

<sup>55</sup>Now when Saul saw David go out to meet the Philistine, he asked Abner the army general, "Abner, whose son is that boy?"

"As surely as you live, Your Majesty, I don't know," Abner answered.

<sup>57</sup>So when David came back from killing the Philistine, Abner sent for him and presented him to Saul. The Philistine's head was still in David's hand. <sup>58</sup>Saul said to him, "Whose son are you, my boy?"

"I'm the son of your servant Jesse from Bethlehem," David answered.

Jonathan and David

Saul jealous of David

"Saul has killed his thousands,
but David has killed his tens of thousands!"

<sup>8</sup>Saul burned with anger. This song annoyed him. "They've credited David with tens of thousands," he said, "but only credit me with thousands. What's next for him—the kingdom itself?" <sup>9</sup>So Saul kept a close eye on David from that point on.

<sup>10</sup>The next day an evil spirit from God came over Saul,<sup>q</sup> and he acted like he was in a prophetic frenzy in his house. So David played the lyre as he usually did. Saul had a spear in his

17:55-58 In a curious epilogue, it becomes clear that in this story Saul has no idea who David is or what family he is from. The story ends with Saul's general Abner presenting David to Saul, and David introduces himself in a dramatic final line of the story: I'm the son of your servant Jesse. 18:1-30 This chapter is a story of contrasts. On the one hand, David seems to inspire love from all those around him. Six times the narrative speaks of love for David: from Saul's own children Jonathan (18:1, 3) and Michal (18:20, 28); from Saul's servants (18:22); and from all of Israel and Judah (18:16). Previously, we were told that Saul also loved David (1 Sam 16:21), but now Saul is possessed by darker emotions: anger (18:8); jealousy (18:9); and fear (18:12, 29). No wonder he is described as possessed by an evil spirit (18:10). These contrasts produce a dramatic story in which Saul rejects options that would have made David a powerful ally and member of his own family, in order to plot against David and seek to kill him. This rivalry between David and Saul dominates the remainder of 1 Samuel.

18:1-4 These verses begin the story of a great friendship between Jonathan and David that reaches its high point in the touching dialogue of 1 Samuel 20, and even extends to David's generous treatment of Jonathan's son in 2 Samuel 9. Almost immediately following David's victory over the Philistine champion, Jonathan is drawn to David. Love for David is one of the central themes of this chapter. Jonathan makes a covenant with David, sealed by sharing tokens that represent the sharing of royal authority (robe, armor, sword, bow, and belt). This foreshadows David's ultimate rise to the throne instead of Jonathan. Jonathan, as we will see, is at peace with this.

18:5 David immediately becomes a successful military commander in Saul's army. This means that we should imagine the David who kills Goliath as a young man, not a boy.

18:6-9 David proves a successful military commander, but Saul can't celebrate this. When the women's song gives David greater credit than Saul, the king responds with jealousy and suspicion that David is after his kingdom (18:8).

18:10-11 Saul's first attempt to kill David comes at a time when David is playing music to calm him. Attributing this action to an evil spirit from God, the chapter suggests that hand, <sup>11</sup>and he threw it, thinking, I'll pin David to the wall. But David escaped from him two different times.

<sup>17</sup>Saul said to David, "Look, here is my oldest daughter Merab. I will give her to you in marriage on this condition: you must be my warrior and fight the LORD's battles." I won't raise my hand against him, Saul thought; let the Philistines do that!

<sup>18</sup>"I'm not worthy," David replied to Saul, "and neither is my family or my father's clan in Israel, to become the king's son-in-law." <sup>19</sup>And so when the time came for Saul's daughter Merab to be married to David, she was given to Adriel from Meholah instead.

<sup>20</sup>Now Saul's younger daughter Michal loved David. When this was reported to Saul, he was happy about it. <sup>21</sup>I'll give her to him, Saul thought; she'll cause him problems, and the Philistines will be against him.

So Saul said to David a second time, "Become my son-in-law now."

<sup>22</sup>Saul instructed his servants, "Tell David in private: 'Look, the king likes you, and all his servants love you. You should become the king's son-in-law.'"

<sup>23</sup>Saul's servants whispered these things in David's ear. But David said, "Do you think it's a simple matter to become the king's son-in-law? I don't! I'm poor and insignificant."

<sup>29</sup>When Saul knew for certain that the LORD was with David and that his daughter Michal loved him, <sup>29</sup>then Saul was even more afraid of David. Saul was David's enemy for the rest of his life. <sup>30</sup>And whenever the Philistine commanders came out for battle, David would have more success than the rest of Saul's officers, so his fame spread widely.

David escapes Saul

19 Saul ordered his son Jonathan and all his servants to kill David, but Jonathan, Saul's son, liked David very much. <sup>2</sup>So Jonathan warned David, "My father Saul is trying

Saul is becoming overpowered by envy, anger, and fear. Although gathered together in the notion of an evil spirit possessing Saul, this doesn't relieve him of responsibility for his own actions. That this is said to be from God reflects the narrative's understanding that all these events are encompassed in the divine will.

18:12-16 Israel loves David (18:16); while Saul fears him (18:12, 15). Saul distances himself from David by removing him from immediate service to the king to become a field commander. In light of later attempts by Saul to cause David to die in battle, this assignment should probably be understood as Saul's hope that the Philistines would eliminate his rival.

18:17-19 Saul had promised marriage to one of his daughters to any man who defeated the Philistine champion, Goliath (1 Sam 17:25). Although some time has passed, it appears that Saul here is following through on this promise by offering his daughter Merab. But Saul's condition is that David become a frontline commander, and the text is clear that Saul's hope is that the Philistines would kill him (18:17). When the time comes, however, Saul offers Merab in marriage to another.

18:20-27 It is unusual for the text to report that Michal loved David (18:20, 28). In the ancient world, marriages were arranged and not based on love. Saul decides to use this to his advantage. Since David was from a poor family compared to Saul, he would be unable to provide a bride price (that is, a gift from the groom to the parents of the bride) and felt unworthy to be the king's son-in-law (18:23). So Saul sent word to David that he would not want a traditional bridal gift but 100 Philistine foreskins. Again, his hope was that David would die in battle (18:25). David not only went into battle and provided this unusual bridal gift, but some manuscripts report that he brought 200. Saul then had no choice but to marry his daughter Michal to David.

18:28-29 The chapter ends with a distressing note that highlights contrasting responses to David. While Michal loves him, Saul fears him and now considers him an enemy, even though David is his best commander.

19:1-8 This small passage represents Saul's changeable

Early Prophets Most people think of prophets as individual messengers from God and proclaimers of God's word, but the earliest appearances of prophets in the Bible associate them with communities or guilds of prophets. Samuel grows to adulthood at Shiloh and emerges as a recognized prophet and source of God's word in Israel (1 Sam 4:20). But in 1 Samuel 19:20 he clearly leads a community of prophets. We shouldn't be surprised. After all, he had sent Saul to encounter such a prophetic group (1 Sam 10:10). In both stories these bands of prophets play musical instruments and enter states of ecstatic frenzy. This state is associated with the Hebrew word for "prophesy" and is brought on by the charismatic behavior and the power of God's spirit. Such communities seem to live together. Persons may have come to consult them for guidance and a word from God. Great individual prophets like Samuel, and later Elijah and Elisha (cf. 2 Kgs 2:1-18), appear as leaders of such communities. In 1 Samuel a prophet anoints Israel's first kings, who then immediately receive God's spirit. This implies that they are then empowered by that spirit just as the prophets are empowered for their role in Israel.

to kill you. Be on guard tomorrow morning. Stay somewhere safe and hide. <sup>3</sup>I'll go out and stand by my father in the field where you'll be. I'll talk to my father about you, and I'll tell you whatever I find out."

<sup>4</sup>So Jonathan spoke highly about David to his father Saul, telling him, "The king shouldn't do anything wrong to his servant David, because he hasn't wronged you. In fact, his actions have helped you greatly. <sup>5</sup>He risked his own life when he killed that Philistine, and the LORD won a great victory for all Israel. You saw it and were happy about it. Why then would you do something wrong to an innocent person by killing David for no reason?"

<sup>6</sup>Saul listened to Jonathan and then swore, "As surely as the LORD lives, David won't be executed." <sup>7</sup>So Jonathan summoned David and told him everything they had talked about. Then Jonathan brought David back to Saul, and David served Saul as he had previously.

Michal said to Saul, "David told me, 'Help me get away or I'll kill you!'"

<sup>19</sup>So David fled and escaped. When he reached Samuel at Ramah, he reported to him everything Saul had done to him. Then he and Samuel went to stay in the camps. <sup>20</sup> moods. It begins with Saul's order to everyone around him that they should kill David, but after the intervention of Jonathan with his father, the order is reversed and David returns to court. Jonathan's argument to his father shows how senseless Saul's anger and jealousy are (19:4-5). Saul has every reason to value David as his most effective warrior (19:8).

<sup>21</sup>When Saul was told that David was in the camps at Ramah, <sup>22</sup>he sent messengers to arrest David. They saw a group of prophets in a prophetic frenzy, with Samuel standing there as their leader. God's spirit came over Saul's messengers, and they also fell into a prophetic

19:9-17 Saul's moods change without reason. While David is playing to calm him, Saul tries to kill him with a spear. Although David escapes, Saul sets a watch on his house to kill him. This time it is Saul's daughter Michal who intervenes to save David. She warns him of the plan to kill him and lowers him out a window to escape (19:11-12). Then Michal goes through elaborate plans to buy David time. She puts a dummy in the bed and says David is sick. When Saul insists David be brought to his own execution while lying on his bed, Saul's messengers discover the plot. To protect herself, Michal claims David forced her to assist him (19:17). Saul's madness and obsession with David are becoming clear.

19:18-24 The chapter closes with a strange episode. David flees north to the hometown of the prophet Samuel frenzy. <sup>21</sup>This was reported to Saul, and he sent different messengers, but they also fell into a prophetic frenzy. So Saul sent a third group of messengers, and they did the very same thing.

<sup>22</sup>At that point, Saul went to Ramah himself. He came to the well at the threshing floor that was on the bare hill there<sup>w</sup> and asked, "Where are Samuel and David?"

"In the camps at Ramah," he was told. <sup>23</sup>So Saul went to the camps at Ramah, and God's spirit came over him too. So as he traveled, he was in a prophetic frenzy until he reached the camps at Ramah. <sup>24</sup>He even took off all his clothes and fell into a prophetic frenzy in front of Samuel. He lay naked that whole day and night. That's why people say, "Is Saul also one of the prophets?"

Jonathan and David's friendship

20 David fled from the camps at Ramah. He came to Jonathan and asked, "What have I done? What is my crime? How have I wronged your father that he wants me dead?"

<sup>2</sup>Jonathan said to him, "No! You are not going to die! Listen: My father doesn't do anything big or small without telling me first. Why would my father hide this from me? It isn't true!"

in Ramah. This seems unlikely since David's home territory was south in Judah, and almost all the stories that follow take place in the south. It may have been important to the flow of the story to give David one more encounter with Samuel to show the approval of the prophets. When Saul's messengers arrive to arrest David, they encounter Samuel leading a group of prophets engaged in ecstatic frenzy, and they become seized by God's spirit as well (see sidebar, "The Early Prophets"). When Saul eventually comes himself, he, too, is seized in a prophetic frenzy, just as he was after Samuel anointed him (1 Sam 10:10). The repeated use of the proverbial question "Is Saul also one of the prophets?" is now ironic (1 Sam 10:12). The divine spirit confirming Saul's place as God's anointed is now protecting David as God's anointed.

20:1-42 This chapter is one of the great stories of friendship in all of literature. The commitment and loyalty of Jonathan and David to each other's well-being is inspiring and remarkable. The word often used to describe God's faithful love, or "covenant love," for Israel is here used between these two friends ("loyal"; 20:8, 14, 15). The word for "love" used to describe Jonathan's relationship to David is also used again here (20:17; cf. 1 Sam 18:1, 3). These testimonies of loyal friendship appear in the context of a

<sup>3</sup>But David solemnly promised in response, “Your father knows full well that you like me. He probably said, ‘Jonathan must not learn about this or he’ll be upset.’”<sup>3</sup> But I promise you—on the LORD’s life and yours!—that I am this close to death!”

<sup>6</sup>If your father takes note of my absence, tell him, ‘David begged my permission to run down to his hometown Bethlehem, because there is an annual sacrifice there for his whole family.’

<sup>7</sup>If Saul says ‘Fine,’ then I, your servant, am safe. But if he loses his temper, then you’ll know for certain that he intends to harm me. <sup>8</sup>So be loyal to your servant, because you’ve brought your servant into a sacred covenant<sup>a</sup> with you. If I’m guilty, then kill me yourself; just don’t take me back to your father.”

<sup>9</sup>“Enough!” Jonathan replied. “If I can determine for certain that my father intends to harm you, of course I’ll tell you!”

<sup>11</sup>“Come on,” Jonathan said to David. “Let’s go into the field.” So both of them went out into the field. <sup>12</sup>Then Jonathan told David, “I pledge by the LORD God of Israel that I will question my father by this time tomorrow or on the third day. If he seems favorable toward David, I will definitely send word and make sure you know. <sup>13</sup>But if my father intends to harm you, then may the LORD deal harshly with me, Jonathan, and worse still if I don’t tell you right away so that you can escape safely. May the LORD be with you as he once was with my father. <sup>14</sup>If I remain alive, be loyal to me. <sup>15</sup>But if I die, <sup>16</sup>don’t ever stop being loyal to my household. Once the LORD has eliminated all of David’s enemies from the earth, <sup>17</sup>if Jonathan’s name is also eliminated, then the LORD will seek retribution from David!”<sup>b</sup>

<sup>18</sup>“Tomorrow is the festival of the new moon,” Jonathan told David. “You will be missed because your seat will be empty. <sup>19</sup>The day after tomorrow, go all the way to the spot where you hid on the day of the incident, and stay close to that mound. <sup>20</sup>On the third day I will shoot an arrow to the side of the mound as if aiming at a target. <sup>21</sup>Then I’ll send the servant boy, saying, ‘Go retrieve the arrow.’ If I yell to the boy, ‘Hey! The arrow is on this side of you. Get it!’ then you can come out because it will be safe for you. There won’t be any trouble—I make a pledge on the LORD’s life. <sup>22</sup>But if I yell to the young man, ‘Hey! The arrow is past you,’ then run for it, because the LORD has sent you away. <sup>23</sup>Either way, the LORD is witness<sup>f</sup> between us forever regarding the promise we made to each other.” <sup>24</sup>So David hid himself in the field.

When the new moon came, the king sat at the feast to eat. <sup>25</sup>He took his customary seat by the wall. Jonathan sat opposite him<sup>g</sup> while Abner sat beside Saul. David’s seat was empty. <sup>26</sup>Saul didn’t say anything that day because he thought, Perhaps David became unclean somehow. That must be it. <sup>27</sup>But on the next day, the second of the new moon, David’s seat was still empty. Saul said to his son Jonathan, “Why hasn’t Jesse’s son come to the table,<sup>h</sup> either yesterday or today?”

<sup>28</sup>Jonathan answered Saul, “David begged my permission to go to Bethlehem. <sup>29</sup>He said, ‘Please let me go because we have a family sacrifice there in town, and my brother has ordered story depicting Saul’s resolve to kill David. This highlights Jonathan’s divided commitments to his friend David and his father, Saul.

20:1-4 When meeting David in secret, Jonathan has trouble believing that his father, Saul, is resolved to kill David.

20:5-17 The two friends agree on a plan to test Saul’s intentions toward David. Jonathan will return to Saul’s court to carry out this plan. The parting of these two friends occasions an exchange of pledges. Jonathan pledges to help David escape with his life, but in return seeks David’s pledge to show loyalty even to Jonathan’s descendants after his death (20:14-16). Many years later David has the opportunity to make good on this pledge when he brings a surviving son of Jonathan, named Mephibosheth, into his household (2 Sam 9).

20:18-34 Jonathan’s plan involves raising the issue of David and his innocence before his father on a feast day. It doesn’t go well, as Saul becomes angry and reveals his fear that David is a threat to Jonathan’s succession and his own dynasty (20:31). The confrontation ends when Saul

<sup>30</sup>At that, Saul got angry at Jonathan. "You son of a stubborn, rebellious woman!" he said. "Do you think I don't know how you've allied yourself with Jesse's son? Shame on you and on the mother who birthed you!" <sup>31</sup>As long as Jesse's son lives on this earth, neither you nor your dynasty will be secure. Now have him brought to me because he's a dead man!"

<sup>41</sup>As soon as the boy was gone, David came out from behind the mound<sup>2</sup> and fell down, face on the ground, bowing low three times. The friends kissed each other, and cried with each other, but David cried hardest. <sup>42</sup>Then Jonathan said to David, "Go in peace because the two of us made a solemn pledge in the LORD's name when we said, 'The LORD is witness between us and between our descendants forever.'" Then David got up and left, but Jonathan went back to town.

David helped at Nob

21<sup>m</sup>David came to Nob where Ahimelech was priest. Ahimelech was shaking in fear when he met David. "Why are you alone? Why is no one with you?" he asked.

<sup>2</sup>David answered Ahimelech the priest, "The king has given me orders, but he instructed me, 'Don't let anyone know anything about the mission I'm sending you on or about your orders.' As for my troops, I told them to meet me at an undisclosed location. <sup>3</sup>Now what do you have here with you? Give me five loaves of bread or whatever you can find."

20:35-42 The final episode in this story of friendship plays out in a complex plan to inform David of his peril from Saul. When the elaborate arrow signal tells David that he may not return to Saul's court without risk of his life, the two friends are allowed a farewell scene. They kiss each other and cry together (20:41). They make a final pledge in the name of the Lord and part in peace ("shalom," 20:42).

21:1-9 From this point forward to the end of 1 Samuel, David is a fugitive from Saul, and this will determine the course of events. Throughout these stories, more and more persons recognize and acknowledge David as the future king of Israel, but he won't be able to claim this role until Saul has met his own tragic end. The first person to give assistance to David as a fugitive is Ahimelech, head of a community of priests at Nob. This is significant since these are the surviving descendants of the priests in the line of Eli who served the Lord and God's covenant chest at Shiloh. The fact that David's first helper ties him to the religious leadership of Israel is significant, since it will eventually be David who restores the covenant chest to a central role in Israel (see sidebar, "The Lord's Covenant Chest" at 1 Sam 5). David becomes bolder as a fugitive. Here he appears alone and asks for bread for himself and his men nearby. When Ahimelech says that only holy bread placed daily before the Lord is available, David boldly lays claim to it. He claims that his men are in a state of holy abstinence

David and the Sacred Bread Although this is the first episode in David's life as a fugitive, this account seems relatively minor. Yet it marks a turning point in recognition of what constitutes the holy, and Jesus refers to this in his own ministry. We don't know if David and his men have kept to a state of ritual holiness, but we do know that technically it isn't appropriate for anyone but priests to eat this bread. David boldly claims the bread for his purpose. He is God's anointed leader, and the future of God's kingdom, and he knows this. Thus holiness received in the sanctuary can make holy the wider struggles that serve God's purposes in the world.

In this vein, Jesus uses the story of David and the holy bread (Mark 2:23-28; cf. Luke 6:1-5; Matt 12:1-8). He is confronted by the Pharisees when he and his disciples pluck heads of grain passing through a field on the Sabbath. He is accused of breaking the sabbath teaching. Jesus, in response, appeals to the example of David using the holy bread for his own purposes. He concludes that human need can set aside ritual demand in the service of God's purposes: "The Sabbath was created for humans; humans weren't created for the Sabbath" (Mark 2:27).

<sup>7</sup>Now one of Saul's servants was there that day, detained in the LORD's presence. His name was Doeg. He was an Edomite and Saul's head shepherd.

<sup>8</sup>David asked Ahimelech, "Do you have a spear or sword on hand? I didn't bring my sword or gear with me because the king's mission was urgent."

<sup>9</sup>The priest said, "The sword of Goliath, the Philistine you killed in the Elah Valley, is here wrapped in a cloth behind a priestly vest.<sup>a</sup> If you want it, take it, because there are no other swords here."

David said, "No sword is as good as that one! Give it to me!"

David pretends to be crazy

<sup>10</sup>So David got up and continued running from Saul. He went to Achish, Gath's king. <sup>11</sup>Achish's servants said to him, "Isn't that David, king of the land? He's the one people sing about in their dances,

'Saul has killed his thousands,
but David has killed his tens of thousands!'"

<sup>14</sup>"Can't you see he's crazy?" Achish asked his servants. "Why bring him to me? <sup>15</sup>Am I short on insane people that you've brought this person to go crazy right in front of me? Do you really think I'm going to let this man enter my house?"

David gathers support

22 David left Gath and escaped to Adullam's fortress.<sup>6</sup> When David's siblings and all his extended family learned of this, they went to join him there. <sup>2</sup>Everyone who was in trouble, in debt, or in desperate circumstances gathered around David, and he became their leader. Approximately four hundred men joined him.

<sup>3</sup>From there David went to Mizpeh in Moab. He said to the Moabite king, "Please let my father and mother stay with you until I know what God will do to me." <sup>4</sup>So David left his parents with the Moabite king, and they stayed with him the whole time David was in the fortress.

from sexual activity. We don't know if this is true or if David simply declares it (see sidebar, "David and the Sacred Bread"). When David asks for weapons, he learns Goliath's sword is kept there, and he claims it for himself. Then he is gone, on the run.

21:7 An ominous verse lies in the midst of this story. A servant of Saul, an Edomite named Doeg, observes David's presence there. He will report it to Saul with fateful consequences (1 Sam 22:6-23).

21:10-15 This strange story adds Achish, the king of the Philistine city of Gath, and his servants to the list of those who recognize David as the king of Israel. They refer to him as such when David, on the run from Saul, shows up in their territory (21:11). This isn't a mistake by the editors but contributes to a key theme of the fugitive stories about David. Everywhere he goes, people acknowledge David as Israel's true king. In this instance, after realizing that he is recognized, David decides it is safest to pretend madness (21:13). In the ancient world, madmen were often considered holy, and many people were reluctant to harm them. Achish lets David go, saying he has enough madmen. Israel may have enjoyed this ironic story as witnessed by two references to it in the superscriptions to Psalms 34; 56. 22:1-5 David gathers his family to him in a safe location, and he places them in security with the king of Moab (22:3-4). Here we can see the beginnings of David's ability

Saul kills the priests of Nob

<sup>6</sup>Saul learned that David and his soldiers had been located. Saul was sitting under the tamarisk tree on the hill at Gibeah, spear in hand, with all his servants waiting on him. <sup>7</sup>He said to them, "Listen up, Benjaminites! Will Jesse's son give fields and vineyards to each and every one of you? Will he make each one of you commanders of units of one thousand men or commanders of units of one hundred? <sup>8</sup>Is that why all of you have conspired against me? No one informed me when my son made a covenant with Jesse's son! Not one of you is concerned about me or informs me when my own son sets my servant against me in an ambush—but that's what has happened today!"

"Yes sir," he replied.

<sup>13</sup>Saul said to him, "Why have you conspired against me—you with Jesse's son—giving him food and a sword and questioning God for him so that he is now against me, waiting in ambush, which is what has happened today?"

<sup>14</sup>Ahimelech answered the king, "Out of all your servants, who is as trustworthy as David? He is the king's son-in-law, does whatever you ask, and is well respected in your house. <sup>15</sup>Was that the first time I questioned God for him? Of course not! But please, the king shouldn't accuse me, his servant, or anyone in my father's household of any wrongdoing, because your servant knew nothing whatsoever about this matter."

But the king's servants were unwilling to lift a hand to attack the LORD's priests.

<sup>22</sup>David told Abiathar, "That day, when Doeg the Edomite was there, I knew that he would tell Saul everything. I am to blame<sup>a</sup> for the deaths in your father's family. <sup>23</sup>Stay with me, and don't be afraid. The one who seeks my life now seeks yours too. But you'll be safe with me."

to draw even surrounding nations into alliance, a skill that will help build his kingdom later. Most surprising is that he draws the discontented people to him (22:2). This is the beginning of a personal military force that serves David through the rest of his life. God's anointed one is a magnet for the dispossessed, and they begin a new life with him. Here we also catch a first glimpse of the prophet Gad (22:5; cf. 1 Sam 24:11), who is apparently in David's company. Later in this chapter he will be joined by a priest (1 Sam 22:20). David seems always concerned to maintain channels for God's guidance.

22:6-8 When Saul learns David's location, he is apparently worried about the loyalty of his own troops. His speech here seems designed to gain their support in his pursuit of David by offering rewards, including both property and promotion.

22:9-19 Only a foreigner, Doeg the Edomite, is willing to betray David. Doeg had been present to see David's interaction with Ahimelech earlier (1 Sam 21:7). Doeg's betrayal of the priest leads to a great act of violence committed by Saul. When Saul questions Ahimelech, the priest tries to argue that David isn't a danger to Saul; he is known as the king's son-in-law. Why shouldn't the priest give him support (22:14-15)? Saul is beyond reason, and determines that Ahimelech and all his household should be executed, but his men won't slaughter priests (22:16-17). Only Doeg, the outsider, will do this tragic deed (22:18-19). Overall, this episode serves as evidence that Saul is increasingly out of control.

22:20-23 When Abiathar the priest escapes the slaughter at Nob, David invites him to become a part of his entourage. Abiathar is with David through all subsequent

23 David was told, “The Philistines are now attacking Keilah and looting the threshing floors!”

<sup>2</sup>David asked the LORD, “Should I go and fight these Philistines?”

<sup>4</sup>So David asked the LORD again, and the LORD reaffirmed, “Yes, go down to Keilah, because I will hand the Philistines over to you.”

<sup>6</sup>Now after Abiathar, Ahimelech’s son, fled to David, he had accompanied David to Keilah,<sup>7</sup> bringing a priestly vest<sup>8</sup> with him. <sup>7</sup>When Saul was told that David had gone to Keilah, he said, “God has handed him over<sup>9</sup> to me now because he has trapped himself by entering a town with gates and bars!” <sup>8</sup>So Saul called up all his troops for war, to go down to Keilah and attack David and his soldiers.

<sup>10</sup>Then David said, “LORD God of Israel, I, your servant, have heard that Saul plans on coming to Keilah and will destroy the town because of me. <sup>11</sup>LORD God of Israel, will Saul come down as your servant has heard?” Please tell your servant.”

“Yes, he will come down,” the LORD answered.

<sup>12</sup>Next David asked, “Will the citizens of Keilah hand me and my soldiers over to Saul?”

“Yes, they will hand you over,” the LORD replied.

events until David is on his deathbed. He then becomes a part of the intrigue related to the choice of a successor to David’s throne. Unfortunately, he backs Solomon’s rival and is banished to his home at Anathoth (1 Kgs 2:26–27). Anathoth is later mentioned as the home of the prophet Jeremiah, who is said to have a priestly family background. 23:1–29 This chapter could be seen merely as additional episodes of Saul chasing and David escaping. The ins and outs of the chase are clearly recounted, with Saul demonstrating his obsession with David, and David showing his resourcefulness at staying just out of Saul’s reach. But in the course of this chapter, additional elements of David’s character become clear. First, David insists on responding to the needs of others, even when it isn’t in his own interests and when his own men oppose getting involved (23:1, 3). Second, in the course of events as he goes to the rescue of Keilah, David consults the Lord three times (23:2, 4, 10–11; see sidebar, “David and Prayer”). The first two instances we should understand as prayer, but the third makes use of the priestly vest (Heb. ephod) worn by Abiathar and probably the priestly lots contained in the vest. The contrast is clear. Saul is driven entirely by self-interest and jealousy, pursuing David when his real enemies, the Philistines, are attacking an Israelite community. It is David who comes to the aid of Keilah, at the risk of being trapped there by Saul, and even when the Lord makes clear that the citizens of Keilah would hand him over to Saul. David does this because it is the Lord’s will and the right thing to do.

23:1 Keilah is a small town in the tribal territory of Judah near the border with the Philistines, and therefore vulnerable to Philistine harassment.

23:10–13 David knows that if Saul comes after him at Keilah, he will be trapped there inside a walled city. Further, he suspects that if faced with the choice of the destruction of their town and giving David up to Saul, the citizens of Keilah will hand David over in spite of David’s aid for them against the Philistines. David confirms this information and the best plan of action in consultation with God through Abiathar the priest, resulting in his hasty retreat from Keilah.

23:15–18 While David seeks refuge at Ziph, Jonathan comes to see David. This will be their last encounter before Jonathan’s death at Mount Gilboa. Here Jonathan

David and Prayer It is characteristic of the books of Samuel that God doesn't intervene directly and dramatically in the course of events. Yet it is clear that human action alone isn't the determiner of outcomes. David has a strong sense of partnership with divine providence. Although an extremely capable warrior and leader, he constantly consults with God, seeking to determine the divine will as he chooses his course of action. David's sense of partnership with God's will (1 Sam 18) contrasts with Saul's self-serving obsession with his own ends. In 1 Samuel 23:2, 4, the Hebrew verb indicates prayer and petition ("ask" or "inquire"). David submits his own decisions in prayer to God. In 1 Samuel 23:10-11 David uses the mediation of Abiathar the priest to help discern God's will. By contrast, Saul is said to search for him constantly, but God didn't hand David over to Saul (1 Sam 23:14). Saul doesn't seek God's will, and divine providence is therefore not aligned with his purposes. David frequently prays to God in his early career. We will see, however, that prayer disappears from his story when he begins to act in self-serving and sinful ways, starting with the Bathsheba story in 2 Samuel 11.

of them made a covenant before the LORD. David stayed at Horesh, but Jonathan went back home.

<sup>19</sup>Some Ziphites came to Saul at Gibeah. "David is hiding among us in the fortresses at Horesh on the hill of Hachilah, south of Jeshimon," they said. <sup>20</sup>"So whenever you want to come down, Your Majesty, do it! Leave it to us to hand him over to the king."

Meanwhile, David and his soldiers were in the Maon wilderness in the desert plain south of Jeshimon. <sup>25</sup>When Saul and his troops went looking for him, David was told about it, so he went down to a certain rock there and stayed in the Maon wilderness. When Saul heard that, he went into the Maon wilderness after David. <sup>26</sup>Saul was going around one side of a hill there while David and his soldiers were going around the other. David was hurrying to get away from Saul while Saul and his troops were trying to surround David and his soldiers in order to capture them. <sup>27</sup>But a messenger suddenly came to Saul. "Come quick!" he said. "The Philistines have invaded the land!" <sup>28</sup>So Saul broke off his pursuit of David and went to fight the Philistines. That's why that place is called Escape Rock. <sup>29</sup>Then David went from there and lived at the En-gedi fortresses.

David spares Saul's life

24 <sup>1</sup>Even as Saul returned from pursuing the Philistines, he was informed that David was in the En-gedi wilderness. <sup>2</sup>So Saul took three thousand men selected from all Israel and went to look for David and his soldiers near the rocks of the wild goats. <sup>3</sup>He came to the sheep pens beside the road where there was a cave. Saul went into the cave to use the restroom. <sup>4</sup>Meanwhile, David and his soldiers were sitting in the very back of the cave.

<sup>4</sup>David's soldiers said to him, "This is the day the LORD spoke of when he promised you, 'I will hand your enemy over to you, and you can do to him whatever you think best.'" So David snuck up and cut off a corner of Saul's robe. <sup>5</sup>But immediately David felt horrible that he had cut off a corner of Saul's robe.<sup>c</sup> definitively declares David's future kingship over Israel and his own willingness to give up that claim to David's leadership. Jonathan declares that his father, Saul, knows this as well.

23:19-24 Danger for David is growing. Even the inhabitants of Ziph in David's own tribal territory of Judah are willing to give him up to Saul.

23:25-29 The chapter ends with Saul and David (along with their men) narrowly missing each other. Only a greater danger from the Philistines causes Saul to break off the game of pursuit. David does, however, leave the area to go down to En-gedi by the Dead Sea.

24:1-7 Although serious in its outcome, this story was surely also told with humorous intent. King Saul and all of his armed forces are pursuing David, and Saul simply pauses to enter a cave to relieve himself. Thus he is alone and quite vulnerable, and that very cave is one where David and some of his men are hiding (24:3). David's men want him to end their fugitive status by killing Saul, but David can't bring himself to do violence to God's anointed

<sup>6</sup>"The LORD forbid," he told his men, "that I should do something like that to my master, the LORD's anointed, or lift my hand against him, because he's the LORD's anointed!" <sup>7</sup>So David held his soldiers in check by what he said,<sup>4</sup> and he wouldn't allow them to attack Saul. Saul then left the cave and went on his way.

<sup>8</sup>Then David also went out of the cave and yelled after Saul, "My master the king!" Saul looked back, and David bowed low out of respect, nose to the ground.

<sup>10</sup>Look! Today your own eyes have seen that the LORD handed you over to me in the cave. But I refused<sup>a</sup> to kill you. I spared you, saying, 'I won't lift a hand against my master because he is the LORD's anointed.'<sup>11</sup>Look here, my protector! See the corner of your robe in my hand? I cut off the corner of your robe but didn't kill you. So know now that I am not guilty of wrongdoing or rebellion. I haven't wronged you, but you are hunting me down, trying to kill me.<sup>12</sup>May the LORD judge between me and you! May the LORD take vengeance on you for me, but I won't lift a hand against you.<sup>13</sup>As the old proverb goes, 'Evil deeds come from evildoers!' but I won't lift a hand against you.<sup>14</sup>So who is Israel's king coming after? Who are you chasing? A dead dog? A single flea? <sup>15</sup>May the LORD be the judge and decide between you and me. May he see what has happened, argue my case, and vindicate me against you!"

<sup>16</sup>As soon as David finished saying all this to Saul, Saul said, "David, my son, is that your voice?" Then he broke down in tears,<sup>17</sup>telling David, "You are more righteous than I am because you have treated me generously, but I have treated you terribly.<sup>18</sup>Today you've told me the good you have done for me—how the LORD handed me over to you, but how you didn't kill me.<sup>19</sup>When someone finds an enemy, do they send the enemy away in peace? May the LORD repay you with good for what you have done for me today.<sup>20</sup>Now even I know that you will definitely become king, and Israel's kingdom will flourish in your hands.<sup>21</sup>Because of that, make a solemn pledge to me by the LORD that you won't kill off my descendants after I'm gone and that you won't destroy my name from my family lineage."

Abigail saves David

25 Now Samuel died, and all Israel gathered to mourn for him. They buried him at his home in Ramah. David then left and went down to the Maon wilderness.<sup>f</sup>

<sup>2</sup>There was a man in Maon who did business in Carmel. He was a very important man and owned three thousand sheep and one thousand goats. At that time, he was shearing his sheep in Carmel. <sup>3</sup>The man's name was Nabal, and his wife's name was Abigail. She was an intelligent and attractive woman, but her husband was a hard man who did evil things. He was a Calebite.

king. Although Saul is his enemy, David must at least respect the office of God's anointed one (24:6). So David merely cuts off a corner of Saul's robe; he is that close.

24:8-15 When Saul leaves the cave, David follows after him to confront him with the piece of robe in his hand. Saul would kill David, but David has spared Saul (24:10-12). David argues that this is proof that David never intended ill for Saul. David ends by appealing to the Lord to judge between them in the matter (24:15).

24:16-22 Perhaps the most remarkable piece of this story is Saul's response. He tearfully acknowledges the truth of David's speech. David has been gracious when Saul intended only harm (24:17). Finally, at the end of his speech, Saul acknowledges that David will become king after him (24:20). Saul becomes the last in a growing list of those who acknowledge David as the next king of Israel. With a final pledge by David not to wipe out Saul's name after he is gone, Saul leaves his pursuit and returns home. We may well treat David's eloquent song of lament after Saul's death as a fulfillment of this pledge (2 Sam 1:17-27).

25:1 Samuel's death is recorded. This means that, as king, David won't have to deal with the clash of authority that brought Saul to grief. Unfortunately, even death doesn't prevent Saul from having one more confrontation with Samuel (1 Sam 28).

25:1-3 We are introduced to two new persons in the story, and they are a contrast in character. Nabal is wealthy but prone to do evil. In fact, his name means "fool" (1 Sam 25:25). Nabal is also identified as a Calebite, the leading clan of Judah with its center in Hebron. His demise at the end of this story foreshadows David's assumption of leadership in Judah with his own capital eventually located in Hebron. Nabal's wife, Abigail, is both intelligent and attractive, and she will prove wise indeed.

25:4-13 When Nabal is shearing sheep in Carmel, David sends men to remind him that David had protected his

<sup>9</sup>When David's young men arrived, they said all this to Nabal on David's behalf. Then they waited. <sup>10</sup>But Nabal answered David's servants, "Who is David? Who is Jesse's son? There are all sorts of slaves running away from their masters these days. <sup>11</sup>Why should I take my bread, my water, and the meat I've butchered for my shearers and give it to people who came here from who knows where?" <sup>12</sup>So David's young servants turned around and went back the way they came. When they arrived, they reported every word of this to David.

<sup>23</sup>When Abigail saw David, she quickly got off her donkey and fell facedown before him, bowing low to the ground. <sup>24</sup>She fell at his feet and said, "Put the blame on me, my master! But please let me, your servant, speak to you directly. Please listen to what your servant has to say. <sup>25</sup>Please, my master, pay no attention to this despicable man Nabal. He's exactly what his name says he is! His name means fool,<sup>f</sup> and he is foolish!<sup>g</sup> But I myself, your servant, didn't see the young men that you, my master, sent. <sup>26</sup>I pledge, my master, as surely as the LORD lives and as you live, that the LORD has held you back from bloodshed and taking vengeance into your own hands! But now let your enemies and those who seek to harm my master be exactly like Nabal! <sup>27</sup>Here is a gift, which your servant has brought to my master.

shepherds and flocks when they were in the desert near where David was hiding. This seems to be a legitimate request for aid in the form of supplies to David, since servants later confirm to Abigail that David did indeed help Nabal's shepherds and flocks (1 Sam 25:15-16). Nabal is a wealthy man, and at shearing time he would have supplies available for his own men and could have responded generously. But in keeping with his name, "fool," he not only refuses but insults David's men by referring to David as a runaway slave (25:10). The story takes a threatening turn as David and 400 men strap on weapons and head for a reckoning with Nabal (25:13).

25:14-35 When Nabal's wife, Abigail, hears of the coming disastrous confrontation with David and his men, she takes immediate and decisive action. While carrying ample supplies for David and his men, she meets him on the road.

The portraits of David and Abigail in this encounter are remarkable. The speech by David (25:21-22) portrays his inner turmoil as a man whose pride has been wounded and who simply wants to lash out in vengeance against his adversary. Abigail's lengthy speech (25:24-31) is a masterpiece of shrewd diplomacy to avert a disaster. She provides the supplies David has requested, and in the same breath exposes her husband for the "fool" his name suggests. At the same time she makes a shrewd argument for David's self-interest in withholding violence. She appeals to the Lord's own providence in keeping David's hands clean of innocent blood (25:26). Indeed, she appeals to the Lord's presence with David throughout her speech, reminding him of the higher purpose he serves. She expresses confidence that the Lord will bring David to his deserved place as Israel's king, and ends with a reminder of her strongest

Power and Violence One of the dangers of power is the temptation to act violently in order to hold on to power. Both Saul and David receive kingship and God's spirit as a gift. When David is introduced into Saul's court, it is Saul who holds the power. David is only a young man and in every way seems loyal to Saul. But as Saul experiences David's growing favor among the people and his own household, he begins to use violence. This is first directed toward David, but eventually he lashes out at his son Jonathan, his daughter Michal, his own servants, and eventually in deadly fashion at the community of priests at Nob (1 Sam 22). However, as Saul's violence increases, his hold on power decreases. David's star is rising.

In 1 Samuel 24–26, the balance of power suddenly shifts. David unexpectedly gains the ability to do violence to Saul. Twice (1 Sam 24; 26), Saul's life is in David's hands. He can rid himself of the threat of Saul and perhaps gain the throne. But twice David refuses to gain power by violence. He chooses to respect the office of God's anointed king even if Saul no longer seems to deserve it. In the episode between these stories of sparing Saul's life is an encounter with a remarkable woman named Abigail (1 Sam 25). When David is insulted by Abigail's husband he is tempted to take violent revenge, but he is met on his way by Abigail as peacemaker. She argues that David can't come to the throne with blood of personal gain on his hands (1 Sam 25:30-31).

Taken together, these chapters represent a path to power that doesn't use violence impulsively or for personal gain. David isn't like Saul. Unfortunately, a day will come when even David gives in to the temptation of violence made all too easy by power (2 Sam 11).

Please let it be given to the young men who follow you, my master. <sup>28</sup>Please forgive any offense by your servant. The LORD will definitely make an enduring dynasty for my master because my master fights the LORD's battles, and nothing evil will be found in you throughout your lifetime. <sup>29</sup>If someone chases after you and tries to kill you, my master, then your life will be bound up securely in the bundle of life<sup>a</sup> by the LORD your God, but he will fling away your enemies' lives as from the pouch of a sling. <sup>30</sup>When the LORD has done for my master all the good things he has promised you, and has installed you as Israel's leader, <sup>31</sup>don't let this be a blot or burden on my master's conscience, that you shed blood needlessly or that my master took vengeance into his own hands. When the LORD has done good things for my master, please remember your servant."

<sup>32</sup>David said to Abigail, "Bless the LORD God of Israel, who sent you to meet me today!

<sup>33</sup>And bless you and your good judgment for preventing me from shedding blood and taking vengeance into my own hands today! <sup>34</sup>Otherwise, as surely as the LORD God of Israel lives—the one who kept me from hurting you—if you hadn't come quickly and met up with me, there wouldn't be one single male left come morning." <sup>35</sup>Then David accepted everything she had brought for him. "Return home in peace," he told her. "Be assured that I've heard your request and have agreed to it."

<sup>36</sup>When Abigail got back home to Nabal, he was throwing a party fit for a king in his house. Nabal was in a great mood and very drunk, so Abigail didn't tell him anything until daybreak. <sup>37</sup>In the morning, when Nabal was sober, his wife told him everything. Nabal's heart failed inside him, and he became like a stone. <sup>38</sup>About ten days later, the LORD struck Nabal, and he died.

<sup>39</sup>When David heard that Nabal was dead, he said, "Bless the LORD, who has rendered a verdict regarding Nabal's insult to me and who kept me, his servant, from doing something evil! The LORD has brought Nabal's evil down on his own head." Then David sent word to Abigail, saying that he would take her as his wife.

argument that David must come to this place with hands clean of innocent bloodshed (25:31). This speech is widely regarded as one of the finest examples of effective argument in the Bible and secures Abigail's place as a wise woman in contrast to her foolish husband. On either side of this story David had resisted the opportunity to take Saul's life (1 Sam 24; 26); and this sequence of chapters is in effect arguing that David comes to the throne with clean hands (see sidebar, "Power and Violence").

25:32-35 David's response immediately focuses on Abigail's argument that he must not come to the throne with blood on his hands from personal vengeance. He accepts her request to take the offered supplies and return in peace. 25:36-42 When Abigail makes the course of events known to Nabal, his heart fails and he soon dies. The story treats this as the will of the Lord, both judging Nabal and restraining David through Abigail. David seeks Abigail as his wife, and she accepts.

<sup>41</sup>She bowed low to the ground and said, "I am your servant, ready to serve and wash the feet of my master's helpers." <sup>42</sup>Then Abigail got up quickly and rode on her donkey, with five of her young women going with her. She followed David's messengers and became his wife.

David spares Saul's life a second time

26 The Ziphites came to Saul at Gibeah. "David is hiding on Hachilah's hill, which faces Jeshimon," they said. <sup>2</sup>So Saul got up and went down to the Ziph wilderness to look for David there. He had three thousand handpicked soldiers from Israel with him. <sup>3</sup>Saul camped on Hachilah's hill opposite Jeshimon beside the road, but David stayed in the wilderness. When David learned that Saul had come after him into the wilderness, <sup>4</sup>he sent spies and discovered that Saul had definitely arrived.

<sup>5</sup>So David got up and went to the place where Saul camped, and saw the place where Saul and Abner, Ner's son and Saul's general, were sleeping. Saul was sleeping inside the camp with the troops camped all around him. <sup>6</sup>David asked Ahimelech the Hittite and Joab's brother Abishai, Zeruiah's son, "Who will go down into the camp with me to Saul?"

"I'll go down with you," Abishai answered.

<sup>7</sup>So David and Abishai approached the troops at night and found Saul lying there, asleep in the camp, with his spear stuck in the ground by his head. Abner and the army were sleeping all around him.

<sup>8</sup>Abishai said to David, "God has handed your enemy over to you today! Let me pin him to the ground with my spear. One stroke is all I need! I won't need a second."

<sup>9</sup>But David said to Abishai, "Don't kill him! No one can lift a hand against the LORD's anointed and go unpunished. <sup>10</sup>As surely as the LORD lives," David continued, "it will be the LORD who will strike him down, or his day will come and he will die, or he'll fall in battle and be destroyed. <sup>11</sup>The LORD forbid that I lift my hand against the LORD's anointed! But go ahead and take the spear by Saul's head and the water jug and let's go!" <sup>12</sup>So David took the spear and the water jug that were by Saul's head, and he and Abishai left. No one saw them, no one knew they were there, and no one woke up. All of them remained asleep because a deep sleep from the LORD had come over them.

<sup>13</sup>David crossed over to the other side and stood on top of a hill with considerable distance between them. <sup>14</sup>Then David shouted to the army and to Abner, Ner's son, "Abner! Aren't you going to answer me?"

"Who are you to shout to the king?" Abner asked.

David said, "Yes it is, my master the king. <sup>18</sup>Why," David continued, "is my master chasing me, his servant? What have I done and what wrong am I guilty of? <sup>19</sup>My master the king, please listen to what your servant has to say. If it is the LORD who has incited you against me, then let him accept an offering! But if human beings have done it, then let them be cursed before the LORD because they have now driven me off, keeping me from sharing in the LORD's inheritance. 'Go!' they tell me. 'Worship other gods!' <sup>20</sup>Don't let my blood spill on 25:43 A brief note reports Ahinoam as another wife taken by David, and the giving of David's first wife, the daughter of Saul, to another man.

26:1-25 This story looks like a parallel version of 1 Samuel 24, where David first spared the life of Saul. The basic event is the same with differences in details. Some of those differences can be highlighted. Upon discovering Saul and his camp asleep, David enlists a companion, Abishai, to go with him into Saul's camp. Even Saul's general Abner is lying there asleep. Once again David restrains Abishai from killing Saul, because he won't lift a hand against God's anointed king. This time, however, David expresses the belief that when the time comes the LORD... will strike him down... or he'll fall in battle and be destroyed (26:10). This foreshadows Saul's death at the hand of the Philistines. In this account David takes Saul's spear and a water jug. After crossing to a nearby hill, David taunts Abner for failing to protect the king (26:14-16) and displays the king's spear. Saul's response to David seems even more regretful (26:21), and he pledges no further harm to David.

the ground apart from the LORD's presence, because the king of Israel has come out looking for a single flea<sup>o</sup> like someone hunting a partridge<sup>p</sup> in the mountains."

<sup>21</sup>Then Saul said, "I have sinned! David, my son, come back! Because you considered my life precious today, I won't harm you again. I have acted foolishly and have made a huge mistake."

<sup>25</sup>Then Saul said to David, "Bless you, David, my son! You will accomplish much and will certainly succeed." Then David went on his way, but Saul went back home.

David serves the Philistine Achish

27 David thought, One day I will be destroyed by Saul's power. The best thing for me to do is to escape to Philistine territory. Then Saul will give up looking for me in Israelite territory, and I will escape his power. <sup>2</sup>So David set out with his six hundred soldiers and went to Achish, Maoch's son and Gath's king. <sup>3</sup>David and his soldiers stayed there at Gath with Achish. Each man had his family with him, and David had his two wives, Ahinoam from Jezreel and Abigail, Nabal's widow from Carmel. <sup>4</sup>When Saul was told that David had fled to Gath, he didn't pursue him anymore.

<sup>5</sup>Then David said to Achish, "If you approve of me, please give me a place in one of the towns in the country so I can live there. Why should I, your servant, live in the capital city with you?" <sup>6</sup>So Achish gave the town of Ziklag to David at that time. That's why Ziklag has belonged to the kings of Judah until now. <sup>7</sup>David lived in the Philistine countryside for a total of one year and four months.

28 At that time, the Philistines gathered their troops for war to fight against Israel. Achish said to David, "Count on you and your soldiers marching out with me in the army."

He even ends by blessing David (26:25). This is Saul's last real appearance in 1 Samuel apart from the details surrounding his death (1 Sam 28; 31). With Saul's acknowledgment and blessing of David as Israel's future king, the reign of Saul is effectively over.

to the town of Ziklag on the border with the Israelite tribe of Judah, where he will serve for a year and four months. 27:8-28:2 David's shrewd policy while serving at Ziklag becomes clear. He raids and secures goods only from those who were the enemies of both the Philistines and the Israelite tribe of Judah. In reporting to Achish, David suggested he was extending Philistine authority over the entire area, including Judah. Thus Achish was certain that David had permanently alienated himself from his own people (27:12). Achish is so confident of David's loyalty that when the Philistines gather a major army to fight against Israel, Achish musters David and his men as his personal bodyguard in the battle (28:1-2).

<sup>3</sup>Now Samuel had died, and all Israel mourned him and buried him in Ramah, his hometown. And Saul had banned all mediums and diviners from the land.

"There is such a medium in En-dor," his servants replied.

<sup>8</sup>So Saul disguised himself, dressing in different clothes. Then he and two men set out, going to the woman at nighttime.

"Please call up a ghost for me! Bring me the one I specify," Saul said.

<sup>9</sup>"Listen," the woman said to him, "you know what Saul has done, how he has banned all mediums and diviners from the land. What are you doing? Trying to get me killed?"

<sup>10</sup>But Saul promised to her by the LORD, "As surely as the LORD lives, you won't get into trouble for this."

<sup>11</sup>So the woman said, "Who do you want me to bring up for you?"

"Bring up Samuel," he said.

<sup>12</sup>When the woman saw Samuel, she screamed at Saul, "Why have you tricked me? You are Saul!"

The woman said to Saul, "I see a god<sup>t</sup> coming up from the ground."

"An old man is coming up," she said. "He's wrapped in a robe." Then Saul knew that it was Samuel, and he bowed low out of respect, nose to the ground.

"I'm in deep trouble!" Saul replied. "The Philistines are at war with me, and God has turned away from me and no longer answers me by prophets or by dreams. So I have called on you to tell me what I should do."

<sup>16</sup>"Why do you ask me," Samuel said, "since the LORD has turned away from you and has become your enemy?" <sup>17</sup>The LORD has done to you<sup>v</sup> exactly what he spoke through me: The LORD has ripped the kingdom out of your hands and has given it to your friend David. <sup>18</sup>The LORD has done this very thing to you today because you didn't listen to the LORD's voice and didn't carry out his fierce anger against the Amalekites. <sup>19</sup>The LORD will now hand over both you and Israel to the Philistines. And come tomorrow, you and your sons will be with me!<sup>w</sup> The LORD will hand Israel's army over to the Philistines."

<sup>20</sup>Saul immediately fell full length on the ground, utterly terrified at what Samuel had said. He was weak because he hadn't eaten anything all day or night. <sup>21</sup>The woman approached Saul, and after seeing how scared he was, she said, "Listen, your servant has obeyed you. I risked my life and did what you told me to do. <sup>22</sup>Now it's your turn to listen to me, your servant. Let me give you a bit of food. Eat it, then you'll have the strength to go on your way."

28:3-25 This story of Saul's consultation with a medium at En-dor provides our final look at Saul before his death. The portrait is of a tragic and depleted man grasping at straws for some sign of hope from the ghost of the prophet Samuel. What he receives is tragically only a further confirmation of his own judgment.

28:3-7 We are given the important information that Saul himself had banned all mediums and diviners from the land (28:3). This makes Saul look desperate and tragic when he seeks guidance from the Lord and, receiving none, seeks out a woman who communicates with ghosts (28:7).

28:8-19 Saul comes in disguise to the woman at En-dor, and she is suspicious from the beginning, although she doesn't recognize Saul until the ghost of Samuel appears (28:12). Although it is against the covenant teaching and the command of the king, the text assumes that the ghosts of the dead can be summoned. In this case, it gives one more occasion for a dramatic encounter between Saul and the prophet Samuel. In death, as in life, Samuel has only a word of judgment and condemnation for Saul (28:16-19). Samuel confirms that Saul is experiencing what was announced in his rejection by the prophet (1 Sam 15), only this time Samuel makes clearer that the kingdom has been given to David (28:17). Samuel's ghost goes on to foresee Israel's loss in the coming battle with the Philistines and the death of Saul and his sons (28:19). 28:20-25 Ironically, the woman of En-dor, who had been deceived by Saul, becomes his strength and compassion. Saul seems completely undone, and he leaves to face his fate in the coming battle with the Philistines.

<sup>23</sup>But Saul refused. "I can't eat!" he said. But his servants and the woman urged him to do so, and so he did. He got up off the ground and sat on a couch. <sup>24</sup>The woman had a fattened calf in the house, and she quickly butchered it.<sup>a</sup> She took flour, kneaded it, and baked unleavened bread. <sup>25</sup>She served this to Saul and his servants, and they ate. They got up and left that very night.

David sent home from fighting Saul

29 The Philistines assembled all their forces at Aphek, and the Israelites camped by the spring in Jezreel. <sup>2</sup>As the Philistine rulers went out marching in units of hundreds and thousands, David and his soldiers were in the rear with Achish.

"That's David," Achish told them, "the servant of Israel's King Saul. He's been with me a year or so now. I haven't found anything wrong with him from the day he defected until now."

<sup>4</sup>But the Philistine commanders were angry with Achish. "Send the man home!" they told Achish. "He can go back to the place you gave him, but he won't go with us into battle. Couldn't he turn against us in the middle of the fight? How better to please his former master than by taking the heads of our soldiers?" <sup>5</sup>After all, this is the same David people sing about in their dances,

'Saul has killed his thousands,

but David has killed his tens of thousands!'"

<sup>6</sup>So Achish summoned David and told him, "As surely as the LORD lives, you are an upstanding individual. I would very much like you to serve with me in the army because I haven't found anything wrong with you from the day you came to me until now. But the rulers don't approve of you. <sup>7</sup>So go back home now, and go in peace. Don't do anything to upset the Philistine rulers."

<sup>8</sup>"But what have I done?" David asked Achish. "What wrong have you found in me, your servant, from the day I came to you until now? Why shouldn't I go and fight the enemies of my master the king?"

<sup>9</sup>"I agree," Achish answered David. "I think you're as good as one of God's own messengers. Despite that, the Philistine commanders have ordered, 'He can't go into battle with us.' <sup>10</sup>So get up early in the morning, both you and your master's servants who came with you, and return to the place I gave you. Don't worry about this negative report, because you've done well before me. <sup>7</sup> Now get up early in the morning and leave as soon as it is light."

<sup>11</sup>So David and his soldiers got up early in the morning to go back to Philistine territory, but the Philistines went up to Jezreel.

The Amalekite raid on Ziklag

30 Three days later, David and his soldiers reached Ziklag. The Amalekites had raided the arid southern plain and Ziklag. They had attacked Ziklag and burned it down, <sup>2</sup>taking the women and everyone in the city prisoner, whether young or old.<sup>a</sup> They hadn't killed anyone but carried them off and went on their way. <sup>3</sup>When David and his soldiers got to the town and found it burned down, and their wives, their sons, and their daughters taken prisoner, <sup>4</sup>David and the troops with him broke into tears and cried until they could cry

29:1-11 Aphek is the same place where the Philistines gathered an army when they captured the Lord's covenant chest and destroyed Shiloh (29:4). David and his men gather as loyal retainers of Achish of Gath, but the Philistine commanders know him, and they even recall the song of the women of Israel celebrating David's prowess as a warrior (29:5). They don't want to risk David's becoming a traitor in the midst of battle. So Achish orders David to return to Ziklag. David either is willing to fight against Saul and Israel or plays the role very well, because his speech pleading to stay and fight sounds convincing (29:8). Nevertheless, Achish can't oppose the Philistine commanders. Before the battle David returns to Ziklag and avoids the shame of going to battle against Israel. This surely serves him well when he is eventually invited to become king over all Israel.

30:1-5 After avoiding fighting against Israel for the Philistines, David returns to find deep trouble in his present hometown of Ziklag. As one of Israel's perennial enemies, the Amalekites have emerged from the southern desert to raid Ziklag, burning the town and taking all the inhabitants remaining there as prisoners. The intent was probably to sell them into slavery. The captives include the families of all David's men and his own two wives and their children. Initially, David and his men can respond only in deep grief and despair (30:4).

no more. <sup>5</sup>David's two wives had been captured as well: Ahinoam from Jezreel and Abigail, Nabal's widow from Carmel.

<sup>6</sup>David was in deep trouble because the troops were talking about stoning him. Each of the soldiers was deeply distressed about their sons and daughters. But David found strength in the LORD his God. <sup>7</sup>David said to the priest Abiathar, Ahimelech's son, "Bring the priestly vest* to me." So Abiathar brought it to David.

<sup>8</sup>Then David asked the LORD, "Should I go after this raiding party? Will I catch them?"

"Yes, go after them!" God answered. "You will definitely catch them and will succeed in the rescue!"

<sup>11</sup>They found an Egyptian in the countryside and brought him to David. They gave him bread, and he ate, and they gave him water to drink. <sup>12</sup>They also gave him a piece of fig cake and two raisin cakes. He ate and regained his strength because he hadn't eaten any food or drunk any water for three days and nights.

"I'm an Egyptian servant boy," he said, "and the slave of an Amalekite. My master abandoned me when I got sick three days ago. <sup>14</sup>We had raided the arid southern plain belonging to the Cherethites, the territory belonging to Judah, and the southern plain of Caleb. We also burned Ziklag down."

<sup>15</sup>"Can you guide me to this raiding party?" David asked him.

"Make a pledge to me by God that you won't kill me or hand me over to my master," the boy said, "and I will guide you to the raiding party."

<sup>16</sup>So the boy led David to them, and he found them scattered all over the countryside, eating, drinking, and celebrating over the large amount of plunder they had taken from Philistine and Judean territory.

<sup>21</sup>David reached the two hundred men who were too exhausted to follow him and had stayed behind at the Besor ravine. They came out to greet him and the troops who were with him. When David approached them, he asked how they were doing. <sup>22</sup>But then all the evil and despicable individuals who had accompanied David said, "We won't share any of the

30:6-8 David faces a leadership challenge. His men actually turn on him, to the point of threatening to stone him in their distress, but David's character shows through once again. His first response is to find strength in the Lord his God (30:6), and then turn to Abiathar his priest to seek God's guidance (30:7-8). This recalls David's approach to leadership in earlier chapters (see sidebar, "David and Prayer" at 1 Sam 23). David has skills as a leader and a warrior, but he never relies on human powers alone. He seeks God's will and support. In this case, God supports the pursuit of the Amalekites.

30:9-10 By starting with 600 men, David reaches a point in the pursuit where he must leave 200 of the most exhausted behind. We learn later that they are also charged with guarding supplies left behind to allow faster pursuit, and this fact becomes significant in later events (cf. 1 Sam 30:24).

30:11-16 Although primarily a story of David's leadership as a warrior, this story demonstrates David's compassion, even in pursuit and battle. When David and his men find an Egyptian boy near death in the wilderness, they could easily have passed him by in the urgency of their pursuit. Instead, David has the boy fed and cared for, only to discover that he was a slave of the Amalekites, abandoned because he became ill. The boy was actually with the Amalekites in their raiding of Ziklag and other southern settlements (30:13-14). The boy can guide them to the Amalekites' camp, where David finds them in drunken celebration of their accomplishments and looting. 30:17-20 David's surprise attack on the Amalekites is quick and effective. He kills all except 400, who escape on camels, and recovers all the families and goods taken from Ziklag. He also captures considerable livestock that the Amalekites left behind.

30:21-25 These verses once again showcase David's compassionate leadership. When David's men return to the 200 men left with the baggage, many in his force angrily refuse to share any of the gain from the raid or to include these men any longer in their number. They want them to take only their wives and children and go (30:22). David plunder we rescued with them because they didn't go with us. Each of them can take his wife and children and go—but that's it."

<sup>23</sup>"Brothers!" David said. "Don't act that way with the things the LORD has given us. He has protected us and handed over to us the raiding party that had attacked us. <sup>24</sup>How could anyone agree with you on this plan? The share of those who went into battle and the share of those who stayed with the supplies will be divided equally." <sup>25</sup>So from that day forward, David made that a regulation and a law in Israel, which remains in place even now.

Saul dies in the battle of Gilboa

31 When the Philistines attacked the Israelites, the Israelites ran away from the Philistines, and many fell dead on Mount Gilboa. <sup>2</sup>The Philistines overtook Saul and his sons, and they killed his sons Jonathan, Abinadab, and Malchishua. <sup>3</sup>The battle was fierce around Saul. When the archers located him, they wounded him badly.<sup>d</sup>

<sup>4</sup>Saul said to his armor-bearer, "Draw your sword and kill me with it! Otherwise, these uncircumcised men will come and kill me or torture me." But his armor-bearer refused because he was terrified. So Saul took the sword and impaled himself on it. <sup>5</sup>When the armor-bearer saw that Saul was dead, he also impaled himself on his sword and died with Saul. <sup>6</sup>So Saul, his three sons, his armor-bearer, and all his soldiers died together that day.

<sup>7</sup>When the Israelites across the valley and across the Jordan learned that the Israelite army had fled and that Saul and his sons were dead, they abandoned their towns and fled. So the Philistines came and occupied the towns.

will have no part of this. He insists that all receive an equal share. Those who guard the supplies are as important as those on the forefront of battle. David even formalized this into policy during his kingship (30:24-25).

30:26-31 This story ends with an action that shows David's shrewd abilities as a politician. He chooses to share the goods taken in the Amalekite raid with the towns of Judah and the southern borderlands. He is making political allies, and so it isn't a surprise when, after Saul's death, it is Judah that first makes him king in Hebron (2 Sam 2:4). 31:1-7 After seeing his sons die on the field of battle at Mount Gilboa, a wounded Saul takes his own life. He falls on his own sword after failing to convince his armor-bearer to end his life. A variant account of Saul's death is recorded at 2 Samuel 1:1-16. Saul's death is technically a suicide, but he is wounded and facing immediate death or torture by the Philistines. He and his sons have discharged their duty to Israel honorably on the field of battle. He doesn't die in shame (as in another suicide recorded in the Bible, Judas; cf. Matt 27:5). It's fitting that the final words about Saul will be in the lament of David, honoring both Saul and Jonathan as mighty men who have fallen (2 Sam 1:17-27).

31:8-10 The Philistines don't treat Saul with respect. However, Saul's death has robbed them of the possibility of parading him in public humiliation. It doesn't seem that they knew he was dead, but came upon his body while stripping the dead on the battlefield. They mutilate his body and hang it in a public place as an act of scorn. But all know that they didn't capture him, and they didn't even kill him. Beth-shan is one of the largest cities under Philistine control outside Philistine home territory. Archaeologists recovered many Philistine artifacts from the site of the city near the northern stretch of the Jordan River. Astarte is one of the chief goddesses of the Canaanites, and Saul's armor is placed there to humiliate Israel's king and to indicate their power over him.

31:11-13 To the people of Jabesh-gilead, Saul was a hero. He rescued them when they were besieged by Nahash, the king of Ammon (1 Sam 11). In an act of courage and resolve, the men of Jabesh-gilead traveled through the night to take the bodies of Saul and his sons (the sons aren't mentioned as hung there earlier) from the walls of Beth-shan. In Jabesh they burn their bodies and give the bones a respectful burial under a tamarisk tree.

1 After Saul's death, when David had returned from defeating the Amalekites, he stayed in Ziklag two days. <sup>2</sup>On the third day, a man showed up from Saul's camp with his clothes torn and dirt on his head. When he reached David, he fell to the ground, bowing low out of respect.

<sup>3</sup>"Where have you come from?" David asked him.

"I've escaped from the Israelite army!" he answered.

The man answered, "The troops fled from the battle! Many of the soldiers have fallen and died. What's more, Saul and his son Jonathan have also died!"

<sup>5</sup>"How do you know," David asked the young man who brought the news, "that Saul and his son Jonathan are dead?"

<sup>6</sup>The young man who brought the news replied, "I just happened to be on Mount Gilboa and Saul was there, leaning on his spear, with chariots and horsemen closing in on him. <sup>7</sup>He turned around and saw me, then he called to me. 'Yes, sir,' I answered. <sup>8</sup>'Who are you?' he asked, and I told him, 'I'm an Amalekite.' <sup>9</sup>He said to me, 'Please come over here and kill me, because convulsions have come over me but I'm still alive.' <sup>10</sup>So I went over to him and killed him, because I knew he couldn't survive after being wounded like that. I took the crown that was on his head and the bracelet that was on his arm, and I've brought them here to you, my master."

<sup>12</sup>They mourned and cried and fasted until evening for Saul, his son Jonathan, the LORD's army, and the whole house of Israel, because they had died by the sword.

"I'm the son of an immigrant," he answered. "An Amalekite."

<sup>14</sup>Then David said to him, "How is it that you weren't afraid to raise your hand and destroy the LORD's anointed?" <sup>15</sup>Then David called for one of the young servants. "Come here!" he said. "Strike him down!" So the servant struck the Amalekite down, and he died.

1:17-18 We read an account of Saul's death in 1 Samuel 31. Now we hear a different version of that story through the testimony of an Amalekite. We are reminded in 1:1 that David has just returned from a deadly encounter with Amalekite raiders who nearly succeeded in kidnapping the families of David and his men (1 Sam 30). The Amalekite claims to have served as a soldier in the Israelite army (1:3). This is a credible claim since both Philistines and Israelites are known to have used mercenaries who weren't members of their own ethnic/cultural group (see the list of David's mighty men in 2 Sam 23:24-39, which includes many foreigners). He brings news that Saul and Jonathan are dead, but Saul is dead by the Amalekite's own hand at Saul's request when he was mortally wounded (1:6-10). The Amalekite brings Saul's crown and bracelet to David, who is overcome with grief (1:11-12). When David has the Amalekite killed for daring to raise your hand and destroy the LORD's anointed (1:14-15), some believe the Amalekite has done nothing to deserve this, or that David is simply distancing himself politically from Saul's death. But David had himself refused to raise his hand against Saul because he was God's anointed king (1 Sam 24; 26). Moreover, as the lament that follows this episode shows, righteous anger and deep grief seem to dominate David's response more than calculating political advantage. David's response doesn't seem to be motivated by self-interest.

1:17-27 David's song of grief over the loss of Saul and Jonathan takes the form of a Hebrew funeral song or lament (1:17). This form honors those who have died and deserve to be remembered. There is no address to or mention of God. David names this funeral song Song of the Bow, and orders all to learn it (1:18). The title is fitting for the loss of warriors. The note that David's song is now preserved in the scroll [of] Jashar (1:18b) offers an interesting glimpse into how some biblical materials are preserved.

David made king in Hebron

2 Some time later, David questioned the LORD, "Should I go to one of the towns in Judah?"
"Yes, go," the LORD told him.

"Which one should I go to?" David asked.

"To Hebron," the LORD replied.

<sup>2</sup>So David went there, along with his two wives: Ahinoam from Jezreel and Abigail, Nabal's widow, from Carmel. <sup>3</sup>David also took the soldiers who were with him, each with his family, and they lived in the towns around Hebron. <sup>4</sup>Then the people of Judah came to Hebron and anointed David king over the house of Judah.

When David was informed that it was the people of Jabesh-gilead who had buried Saul, <sup>5</sup>he sent messengers to the people of Jabesh-gilead. "The LORD bless you," he said to them, "for doing this loyal deed for your master Saul by burying him. <sup>6</sup>May the LORD now show you loyal love and faithfulness. I myself will also reward you because you did this. <sup>7</sup>So now take courage and be brave—yes, your master Saul is dead, but the house of Judah has anointed me king over them."

This ancient source is also mentioned in Joshua 10:12-13. Jashar, meaning "the upright" or "the just," may be a collection of poems (now lost to us) that celebrated heroic deeds in Israel's story. David models in his singing of grief the human experience common to all that rises above politics as usual. Saul had sought to kill him; Jonathan had loved him. But in this moment all have lost a king and a prince in battle with a deadly enemy. Political divisions will reappear soon enough in the story, but Saul and Jonathan are warriors lost in battle for a threatened people. Even David can lead in the singing of loss. His song celebrates not only their courage but the bond that tied them together as father and son (1:23) and caused Jonathan to stay by his father's side even in a losing cause. David gives expression to the deep friendship that bound him to Jonathan, beyond even the love of women (1:26). In a time when marriages were formed by arrangement and not love, deep friendships were more common among men than between men and women.

2:1-7 Characteristically, David prays to the Lord for guidance before he decides what he must do following the death of Saul (2:1). He decides to go to Hebron with all of his family, his men, and their families. In Hebron, one of the chief cities of Judah, he is anointed as king over Judah (2:4a). The major Israelite tribe in the south takes this significant action without consultation or cooperation with the northern tribes of Israel. In his first act as king of Judah, David honors the people of Jabesh-gilead for their courageous act in removing the body of Saul and giving it an honorable burial (2:4b-7).

Israel's King Ishbosheth

Conflict between Judah and Israel

<sup>12</sup>Abner, Ner's son, along with the soldiers of Ishbosheth, Saul's son, left Mahanaim to go to Gibeon. <sup>13</sup>Joab, Zeruiah's son, and David's soldiers also came out and confronted them at the pool of Gibeon. One group sat on one side of the pool; the other sat on the opposite side of the pool. <sup>14</sup>Abner said to Joab, "Let's have the young men fight in a contest<sup>4</sup> before us."

"All right," Joab said, "let's do it." <sup>15</sup>So the men came forward and were counted as they passed by: twelve for Benjamin and Ishbosheth, Saul's son; and twelve of David's soldiers. <sup>16</sup>Each man grabbed his opponent by the head and stuck<sup>1</sup> his sword into his opponent's side so that they both fell dead together. That's why that place is called The Field of Daggers,<sup>2</sup> which is located in Gibeon. <sup>17</sup>A fierce battle took place that day, and Abner and the Israelite troops were defeated by David's soldiers.

<sup>20</sup>Abner looked behind him and said, "Is that you, Asahel?"

"Yes, it's me," Asahel answered.

<sup>22</sup>So Abner repeated himself to Asahel: "Stop chasing me. Why should I kill you? How could I look your brother Joab in the face?" <sup>23</sup>But Asahel wouldn't turn back, so Abner hit him in the stomach with the back end of his spear. But the spear went through Asahel's back. He fell down and died right there.

Everyone who came to the place where Asahel had fallen and died just stood there, <sup>24</sup>but Joab and Abishai went after Abner. The sun was setting when they came to the hill of Ammah, which faces Giah on the road to the Gibeon wilderness. <sup>25</sup>The Benjaminites rallied behind Abner, forming a single unit. Then they took their positions on the top of a hill. <sup>26</sup>Abner yelled down to Joab, "Must the sword keep killing forever? Don't you realize that this will end bitterly? How long before you order the troops to stop chasing their brothers?"

2:8-10 The northern tribes make an effort to keep the house of Saul on the throne of Israel. Saul's General Abner survived the battle of Gilboa, and took a surviving son of Saul across the Jordan River for safety, where he is proclaimed king over all Israel (2:8-9). This son's name is recorded in the text of 2 Samuel as Ishbosheth, which means "man of shame." In 1 Chronicles 8:33; 9:39 this son's name is reported as Eshbaal, which means "Baal exists." Many regard this as more historically likely and believe that the editor of the large history work (Deuteronomy–2 Kings), which includes the books of Samuel, could not enter a name for a king of Israel that included the name of the Canaanite god Baal. They perhaps inserted the word for "shame" instead. Ishbosheth will rule for only two years, and David reigns from Hebron for seven and a half. This means that David's later move to Jerusalem doesn't take place immediately after the northern elders make him king. It is unlikely that Ishbosheth was 40 years old. This would make him older than Jonathan or David. David is only 30 years old in 2 Samuel 5:3.

2:12-32 This is a story about a minor border incident between men of Israel and men of Judah that got out of hand and led to a deadly blood feud with ongoing consequences. Abner, who was Saul's general, brings men into the area around Gibeon close to the border with the tribe of Judah, where David rules now as king. A group of soldiers from Judah, led by Joab, come into the same area, and the two groups end up facing each other across a pool (2:12-13). Joab is David's chief general, the commander of his personal guard, and he will play an important role in the events of 2 Samuel. Joab's two brothers, Abishai and Asahel, are with him. Abishai had gone with David into the camp of Saul in 1 Samuel 26. The commanders agree to an ill-advised contest between 12 men from each group, and the contest turns deadly, with the men killing each other and a full-scale battle breaking out (2:14-17). Asahel, one of the brothers of Joab, pursues Abner after the skirmish. Repeatedly, Abner urges him to give up the chase, implying that he doesn't want to hurt Asahel. When Asahel persists, Abner thrusts his spear backward and fatally impales

3 The war between Saul's house and David's house was long and drawn out. David kept getting stronger, while Saul's house kept getting weaker.

David's family

Joab kills Abner

<sup>6</sup>Throughout the war between Saul's house and David's house, Abner was gaining power in Saul's house. <sup>7</sup>Now Saul had a secondary wife named Rizpah, Aiah's daughter. Ishbosheth<sup>d</sup> said to Abner, "Why have you had sex with my father's secondary wife?"

his pursuer (2:19-23). Joab and Abishai take up the chase after Abner, but Abner gathers a group of his own Benjaminites around him in a strong defensive position, forcing Joab to give up the pursuit (2:24-28). The men of Abner took the worst of the losses in this battle, but Joab won't forget the loss of his brother (cf. 2 Sam 3:6-29).

3:1 The conflict between Judah and the northern tribes of Israel is resolving itself in David's favor.

3:2-5 A brief genealogical note tells us that David now has six wives who have given him six sons.

3:6-11 Things aren't going well in the northern kingdom. Saul's son Ishbosheth may be the heir to Saul's throne, but "Am I some sort of dog's head?" Abner asked. "I've been nothing but loyal to the house of your father Saul and to his brothers and his friends. I haven't handed you over to David, but today you accuse me of doing something wrong with this woman. <sup>9</sup>May God deal harshly with me, Abner, and worse still if I don't do for David exactly what the LORD swore to him— <sup>10</sup>removing the kingdom from Saul's house and securing David's throne over Israel and over Judah, from Dan all the way to Beer-sheba!"

<sup>12</sup>Abner sent messengers to represent him to David and to say, "Who will own the land?" Make a covenant with me, then I'll help bring all Israel over to your side."

<sup>13</sup>"Good!" David replied. "I will make a covenant with you, but on one condition: don't show yourself in my presence unless you bring Saul's daughter Michal when you come to see me."

"Go home!" Abner told him. So he went home.

<sup>17</sup>Abner then sent word to Israel's elders. "You've wanted David to be your king for some time now," he said. <sup>18</sup>"It's time to act because the LORD has said about David: I will rescue my people Israel from the power of the Philistines and all their enemies through my servant David."

<sup>19</sup>Abner also spoke directly to the Benjaminites. He then went to inform David in person at Hebron regarding everything that all Israel and the house of Benjamin were willing to do.

<sup>20</sup>When Abner, along with twenty others, reached David at Hebron, David threw a celebration for Abner and his men. <sup>21</sup>Then Abner said to David, "Please let me get going so I can assemble all Israel for my master the king. Then they can make a covenant with you, and you will rule over everything your heart<sup>a</sup> desires." At that, David sent Abner off in peace.

<sup>24</sup>Joab went to the king and asked, "What have you done? Abner came to you here! Why did you send him off? Now he's gotten away! <sup>25</sup>Don't you know the evil ways of Abner, Ner's son?" He came to trick you, to find out where you come and go, and to learn everything you do!"

<sup>28</sup>When David heard about this later, he said, "I and my kingdom are forever innocent before the LORD concerning the shedding of the blood of Abner, Ner's son. <sup>29</sup>May it fall upon the head of Joab and his entire family tree! May Joab's family never be without someone with a discharge or a skin disease,<sup>w</sup> someone who uses a crutch,<sup>x</sup> someone who dies by the sword, or someone who is hungry!"

it's clear that Abner is the power behind the throne, and Ishbosheth is afraid of him (3:6, 11). Ishbosheth accuses Abner of improperly engaging in sexual relations with one of Saul's wives (3:7-8). Such an act could indeed be interpreted as a violation of royal privilege. This is seen in the later account of Absalom, who used such sexual acts to lay claim to David's throne (2 Sam 16:20-22). In anger Abner threatens to deliver Saul's kingdom to David (3:9-10).

3:12-21 Abner opens negotiations with David to unify the kingdom under his rule, and he consults with the elders of Israel (3:12, 17). David has one condition: Saul's daughter Michal must be returned to him as his wife. Even Ishbosheth participates in ordering that Michal be taken from Paltiel, the husband Saul had arranged for her in opposition to David (3:13-15). With an entourage of 20 men, Abner is welcomed into David's camp as an honored guest, and Abner leaves to arrange an assembly of Israel to form a relationship with David as king (3:20-21).

3:22-30 Three times it's mentioned that David sent Abner away in peace (3:21, 22, 23), and when Joab hears this news he can't believe that David has agreed to deal with Abner. He believes Abner to be evil and treacherous (3:24-25). Without David's knowledge, Joab sends messengers to bring Abner back to Hebron. He then takes Abner aside and kills him with a knife in his stomach as revenge for his brother Asahel (3:27; see 2 Sam 2:12-32). David's reaction

"Should Abner have died like a fool dies?

your feet weren't chained,
but you have fallen like someone falls before the wicked."

Then the troops cried over Abner again.

<sup>35</sup>Then all the soldiers came to urge David to eat something while it was still day, but David swore, "May God deal harshly with me and worse still if I eat bread or anything else before the sun goes down." <sup>36</sup>All the troops took notice of this and were pleased by it. Indeed, everything that the king did pleased them. <sup>37</sup>So on that day all the troops and all Israel knew that it wasn't the king's idea to kill Abner, Ner's son.

<sup>38</sup>The king told his soldiers, "Don't you know that a prince and a great man in Israel has fallen today? <sup>39</sup>And today, though I am the anointed king, I am weak. These men, Zeruiah's sons, are too strong for me.* May the LORD repay the one who does evil according to the evil they did!"

Ishbosheth murdered

4 When Ishbosheth,<sup>a</sup> Saul's son, heard that Abner had died in Hebron, he lost his courage,<sup>b</sup> and all Israel was alarmed. <sup>2</sup>Saul's son had two men who led the raiding parties—one was named Baanah and the other Rechab. Both were sons of Rimmon, a Benjaminite from Beeroth. (Beeroth was considered part of Benjamin. <sup>3</sup>The people of Beeroth had fled to Gittaim and even now live there as immigrants.)

<sup>4</sup>Now Saul's son Jonathan had a boy whose feet were crippled. He was only 5 years old when the news about Saul and Jonathan came from Jezreel, and so his nurse snatched him up and fled. But as she hurried to get away, he fell and was injured. His name was Mephibosheth.<sup>c</sup>

is immediate. He declares his own innocence in Abner's death, and curses Joab and his family (3:28-29).

3:31-39 David clearly has a political problem. He must convince Israel that he is innocent in the death of Abner. David orders elaborate mourning rituals and burial rites, and he joins personally and visibly in the mourning. He even composes a funeral lament for Abner (3:33-34). David refuses to eat, expressing himself very publicly in his grief over and praise of Abner. He even laments his inability to control Joab and his brother (3:36-39). As we will see in later events, he seems to succeed in distancing himself from involvement in these events.

4:1-3, 5-12 Without Abner, Ishbosheth is ineffective in this rule of the northern kingdom. Two Benjaminites, Rechab and Baanah, take advantage of the situation by walking into Ishbosheth's house and assassinating him (4:5-7). They bring Ishbosheth's head to David, hoping for favor from him (4:8), but they have misjudged David. David himself wouldn't take the life of Saul when he had the opportunity (1 Sam 24; 26), and he doesn't desire vengeance against Ishbosheth as a survivor of the house of Saul. David's justice is swift and harsh. They pay for Ishbosheth's life with their own lives (4:11-12).

4:4 In the middle of the story of Ishbosheth's death we find a small note about a son of Jonathan. His name was Mephibosheth, although his name is reported as Meribaal in 1 Chronicles 8:34; 9:40. This is probably another instance where the historian, offended by the element of Baal's name in an Israelite name, has substituted the word for "shame" (see note on 2 Sam 2:8). This brief note prepares

<sup>9</sup>David answered Rechab and his brother Baanah, the sons of Rimmon from Beeroth, "As surely as the LORD lives, who has rescued me<sup>f</sup> from all kinds of trouble," he told them, <sup>10</sup>"when someone told me Saul was dead back in Ziklag, thinking he was bringing good news, I grabbed him and killed him. That was the reward I gave him for his news! <sup>11</sup>What do you think I'll do when evil people kill a righteous person in his own house on his own bed? Why shouldn't I demand his blood from your hands and rid the earth of you both?"

David becomes king of Israel and Judah

5 All the Israelite tribes came to David at Hebron and said, "Listen: We are your very own flesh and bone. <sup>2</sup>In the past, when Saul ruled over us, you were the one who led Israel out to war and back. What's more, the LORD told you, You will shepherd my people Israel, and you will be Israel's leader.

<sup>4</sup>David was 30 years old when he became king, and he ruled for forty years. <sup>5</sup>He ruled over Judah for seven and a half years in Hebron. He ruled thirty-three years over all Israel and Judah in Jerusalem.

us for a later encounter between David and Mephibosheth (2 Sam 9). The note informs us that as a five-year-old child Mephibosheth fell and was permanently injured.

5:1-5 The leaders of the tribes of Israel now come to David. They recall David's military leadership even under Saul, and acknowledge the Lord's intent that David should lead all Israel. In this light they make a covenant with David and anoint him as king. David is 30 years old and will rule for 40 years, seven and a half from Hebron, and 33 years from Jerusalem.

5:6-10 Jerusalem wasn't an Israelite city. It was the city of a Canaanite group known as the Jebusites. With no hint of motivation or preparation, David marches on Jerusalem. We can speculate, however, since Jerusalem isn't the possession of Israel or Judah, but on the border with both, that it makes an attractive neutral capital. The Jebusites are so confident, they boast that even the blind and the lame can defend the city (5:6). David doesn't really conquer the city. He takes it by stealth. Jerusalem becomes literally David's City (5:9), belonging to neither Israel nor Judah. David fortifies the city further, and most believe that David was able to incorporate the Jebusites with their skills in commercial trade into his administration without having violently conquered them. In the last verse we find the final statement that God was with David, in a formula that most believe is the conclusion of a collection of traditions often called the Rise of David (5:10).

5:11-10:19 This section presents traditions from David's reign as king that show his actions and challenges as a ruler. Although David became king separately over north and south in Israel, he now consolidates his kingdom and provides security and prosperity.

5:11-12 Phoenicia's King Hiram, over Tyre, seems to send materials to build David a palace to honor him and establish a strong relationship. In fact, the relationship with the Phoenician kings functions as an important cornerstone of Israel's economic security for many generations to come. David regards this honor from Hiram as further evidence that the Lord is the true power that has established him as king of Israel.

5:13-16 secondary wives: Kings in David's time often had large numbers of wives and other women available to them. David is no exception. Secondary wives, called concubines in old English, are women available to the king sexually, but they aren't legal wives, and their sons would normally have no legal status (e.g., inheritance of

Two Kingdoms The transition from a cooperative alliance of tribes to a kingdom wasn't a smooth one. Even in the stories of Judges the tribes that responded to various military threats seldom included all of Israel's tribes. Saul, Israel's first king, was a Benjamite. His greatest influence and support came from the northern Israelite tribes. David was from the tribe of Judah, which possessed a very large tribal territory and was practically the only southern tribe. Although men from Judah supported and fought with Saul (David's brothers were in Saul's army, 1 Sam 17), when David became a fugitive from Saul he was able to hide and stay ahead of capture by Saul in part because he was on home territory in Judah. The challenge for both of Israel's first two kings was to cultivate a national identity beyond tribal loyalties.

After Saul's death it is clear that a division still exists between north and south. David is immediately proclaimed king in Judah and makes his capital in Hebron. It is only years later, and after some actual conflict, that the elders of the northern tribes of Israel make him king. They have few alternatives.

David simultaneously now rules over two kingdoms, Israel and Judah. By force of his leadership, he will hold Israel and Judah together in a growing Davidic empire that will also include some of the neighboring non-Israelite territories (2 Sam 8). His son Solomon will inherit this unified Israelite kingdom, but his son won't be able to hold it together and the kingdom will divide forever into the northern kingdom of Israel and the southern kingdom of Judah (1 Kgs 12). The seeds for this division are already present in the separate kingships given to David.

David defeats the Philistines

<sup>17</sup>When the Philistines heard that David had been anointed king over Israel, they all marched up to find him, but David heard of it and went down to the fortress. <sup>18</sup>The Philistines arrived and spread out over the Rephaim Valley. <sup>19</sup>David asked the LORD, "Should I attack the Philistines? Will you hand them over to me?"

"Attack them," the LORD replied, "because I will definitely hand the Philistines over to you."

God's chest is brought to Jerusalem

6 Once again David assembled the select warriors of Israel, thirty thousand strong. <sup>2</sup>David and all the troops who were with him set out for Baalah, which is Kiriath-jearim of the throne). At least one of these sons, Solomon, is actually to become David's successor. The text doesn't bother to name these women, and the children named are sons only. Solomon is the only one of these sons who appears later in the story. Solomon, David's successor, will carry even further these practices of polygamy (1 Kgs 11:3).

5:17-21 David will finally give Israel release from the Philistine occupation that has continued for over a generation in Israel. David already had a reputation as an effective military commander for Saul against the Philistines. Upon hearing that he has become king over all Israel, and Saul's successor, the Philistines clearly decide to take the initiative and deal with him immediately (5:17). As is his custom, David prays to God for guidance (5:19), and the Lord approves of an attack on these enemies. David wins a great victory, even capturing Philistine idols in their hasty retreat.

5:22-25 The Philistines don't give up easily. They have dominated this region for a generation. So they mount a second campaign to deal with David (5:22). Again David prays to God. By following God's guidance, he adopts a strategy to circle the Philistines and strike from an unexpected direction (5:23). This effective strategy drives the Philistines back into their home territory in Gezer. There is only one more brief note on David in conflict with the Philistines (2 Sam 8:1). While their territory is never conquered by him, he effectively limits their movements to the coastal plain around their original five cities. They never appear as a serious threat to Israel again.

6:1-19 David now turns his attention to the Lord's

Judah,<sup>m</sup> to bring God's chest up from there—the chest that is called by the name<sup>n</sup> of the LORD of heavenly forces, who sits enthroned on the winged creatures.<sup>3</sup> They loaded God's chest on a new cart and carried it from Abinadab's house, which was on the hill. Uzzah and Ahio, Abinadab's sons, were driving the new cart.<sup>4o</sup> Uzzah was beside God's chest while Ahio was walking in front of it.<sup>5</sup> Meanwhile, David and the entire house of Israel celebrated in the LORD's presence with all their strength, with songs,<sup>p</sup> zithers, harps, tambourines, rattles, and cymbals.

<sup>9</sup>David was frightened by the LORD that day. "How will I ever bring the LORD's chest to me?" he asked.<sup>10</sup> So David didn't take the chest away with him to David's City. Instead, he had it put in the house of Obed-edom, who was from Gath.<sup>11</sup> The LORD's chest stayed with Obed-edom's household in Gath for three months, and the LORD blessed Obed-edom's household and all that he had.

<sup>12</sup>King David was told, "The LORD has blessed Obed-edom's family and everything he has because of God's chest being there."<sup>14</sup> So David went and brought God's chest up from Obed-edom's house to David's City with celebration.<sup>13</sup> Whenever those bearing the chest advanced six steps, David sacrificed an ox and a fatling calf.<sup>14</sup> David, dressed in a linen priestly vest,<sup>15</sup> danced with all his strength before the LORD.<sup>15</sup> This is how David and the entire house of Israel brought up the LORD's chest with shouts and trumpet blasts.

covenant chest that was once lost to the Philistines, who then sent it back into Israelite territory on a cart (1 Sam 6; see sidebar, "The Lord's Covenant Chest" at 1 Sam 5). Although David seems to simply take a large group of men to retrieve the sacred chest, Psalm 132 tells us that he had to make a search for it, finding it in Kiriath-jearim, a Gibeonite town, in the household of Abinadab (6:1-3; 1 Sam 7:1). The longer name for the chest reminds us that it represents the enthroned presence of the Lord in the midst of Israel, with the power of God's heavenly armies (6:2). It is David's intent to bring the Lord's sacred chest to Jerusalem in a procession of honor, with music and dancing and properly accompanied by the priestly sons of Abinadab (6:4). One of these sons, Uzzah, reaches out to keep the chest steady when the oxen stumble, and he touches the chest. He is immediately struck dead (6:6-7). This sacred chest must not be defiled by human touch, which is why it was normally carried on poles. David responds initially with anger (6:8), but perhaps his more genuine response is reported a verse later: He is frightened (6:9).

How can he bring such a dangerous object into Jerusalem? David lodges the chest containing the covenant at the house of Obed-edom for three months. When he sees that Obed-edom's household prospers (6:10-11), David decides he can bring the chest to Jerusalem, but takes careful precautions, sacrificing to God with every advance of the chest. Furthermore, David himself, dressed only in a priestly undergarment, dances before the chest and the Lord as it makes its way into Jerusalem (6:13-15). In a shift of scene we are told that David's wife, Michal, Saul's daughter, observed this scene and disapproved (6:16). With offerings, sacrifices, ritual, and distribution of food to the crowd, David installs the chest in a tent sanctuary (6:17-19). This would be similar to its setting at Shiloh before the Philistine destruction, and is a reminder of its origins in the wilderness with Moses (see sidebar, "Jerusalem"). 6:20-25 The episode involving God's chest being brought to Jerusalem doesn't end with celebration. It ends with a confrontation between David and Michal, Saul's daughter. Her reported disapproval of David's dancing (2 Sam 6:16)

Jerusalem Jerusalem is universally regarded as the central city for the Israelite/Jewish tradition, but most forget that until the time of David, Jerusalem was a Jebusite city and doesn't figure much at all in the biblical tradition. It is perhaps to be identified with the city of Salem and its priestly king Melchizedek, who blesses Abram in Genesis 14:17-24 (cf. Heb 5:5-10). However, it is David who places Jerusalem in the center of Israel's tradition.

When David becomes king, first of Judah, then of Israel, he is faced with a strategic problem. If he keeps his capital in Hebron, he will seem to favor Judah, and geographically it isn't central to the kingdom. If he moves his capital north to Gibeah, which was Saul's capital, or anywhere in northern Israel, he risks alienating the leaders of Judah who first made him king.

Jerusalem is David's brilliant solution to this problem. It is located near the border between northern Israel and the territory of Judah. It already occupies important trading routes through the central highlands and has a population of tradespeople and merchants. By taking the city through stealth rather than violent conquest (2 Sam 5:6-9), David doesn't risk alienating the city. He replaces the Jebusite ruler and becomes himself the king of Jerusalem. It is now quite literally "David's City." There is every reason to believe that David allows, even needs, the life of the city as a trade center to continue relatively unchanged. Now he has available for the development of his kingdom a class of tradespeople, merchants, and scribes. Most important, he has a capital identified with neither northern Israel nor Judah.

Yet Jerusalem has no identification with Israelite history and tradition. In Genesis 14:18-20 a priestly king named Melchizedek of Salem comes out to bring Abram bread and wine and to bless him. Salem may well be Jerusalem, and in Psalm 110:4, in a royal psalm of David, God declares that the king who rules from Zion is "a priest forever in line with Melchizedek." David now takes a brilliant action. He brings Israelite tradition to Jerusalem by searching for the Lord's covenant chest, bringing it with great ceremony to Jerusalem, and installing the chest there in its own tent sanctuary (2 Sam 6). Jerusalem is now both the political and the religious center of the Israelite kingdom. David is king, but also the chief supporter of the religious tradition. He even wants to build a temple for the chest (2 Sam 7:2), but this won't happen until his son Solomon takes the throne. Nevertheless, a new tradition has begun, linking the throne of David and the presence of God on Mount Zion in Jerusalem.

him. "How did Israel's king honor himself today?" she said. "By exposing himself in plain view of the female servants of his subjects like any indecent person would!"

<sup>21</sup>David replied to Michal, "I was celebrating before the LORD, who chose me over your father and his entire family, and who appointed me leader over the LORD's people, over Israel—and I will celebrate before the LORD again! <sup>22</sup>I may humiliate myself even more, and I may be humbled in my own eyes, but I will be honored by the female servants you are talking about!"

God's promise to David

7When the king was settled in his palace,<sup>1</sup> and the LORD had given him rest from all his surrounding enemies, <sup>2</sup>the king said to the prophet Nathan, "Look! I'm living in a cedar palace, but God's chest is housed in a tent!"<sup>3</sup>

<sup>3</sup>Nathan said to the king, "Go ahead and do whatever you are thinking, because the LORD is with you."

is now made clear to David. She regards his dancing as a spectacle unseemly for a king, and indecent because it exposed his nakedness to even the serving women (6:20). David responds forcefully that he was honoring the Lord and will do so again. In passing he reminds her that the Lord chose him over her father and his entire family (6:21-22). The final report of the chapter is that Michal had no children (6:23). This could mean that David set her aside as a wife or that God gave her no children. In any case, the purpose of this account may well be to make clear that Saul's line is ended, and even David won't father any of Saul's descendants who might claim the throne.

7:1-17 This is the most important theological passage in the books of Samuel. God announces through the

with the Israelites, did I ever ask any of Israel's tribal leaders I appointed to shepherd my people: Why haven't you built me a cedar temple?

<sup>9</sup>So then, say this to my servant David: This is what the LORD of heavenly forces says: I took you from the pasture, from following the flock, to be leader over my people Israel. <sup>9</sup>I've been with you wherever you've gone, and I've eliminated all your enemies before you. Now I will make your name great—like the name of the greatest people on earth. <sup>10</sup>I'm going to provide a place for my people Israel, and plant them so that they may live there and no longer be disturbed. Cruel people will no longer trouble them, as they had been earlier, <sup>11</sup>when I appointed leaders over my people Israel. And I will give you rest from all your enemies.

And the LORD declares to you that the LORD will make a dynasty for you. <sup>12</sup>When the time comes for you to die and you lie down with your ancestors, I will raise up your descendant—one of your very own children—to succeed you, and I will establish his kingdom. <sup>13</sup>He will build a temple for my name, and I will establish his royal throne forever. <sup>14</sup>I will be a father to him, and he will be a son to me. Whenever he does wrong, I will discipline him with a human rod, with blows from human beings. <sup>15</sup>But I will never take my faithful love away from him like I took it away from Saul, whom I set aside in favor of you. <sup>16</sup>Your dynasty and your kingdom will be secured forever before me.<sup>7</sup> Your throne will be established forever.

God's Covenant with David In the unfolding biblical story, this promise to David stands alongside God's covenant promises to Noah, Abraham, and Moses. The covenants are key moments in the unfolding story of God's commitment to be engaged in the human historical experience. Like the covenants with Noah and Abraham, the form is of an eternal promise, unlike the conditional character of the covenant with Moses and Israel at Mount Sinai. Through the prophet Nathan, God promises David an everlasting dynasty. In Psalm 132:11-12 this promise to David seems to have a conditional element: "The LORD swore to David a true promise that God won't take back: 'I will put one of your own children on your throne. And if your children keep my covenant and the laws that I will teach them, then their children too will rule on your throne forever.'" But in 2 Samuel 7:14-15 God promises only to chastise unfaithful kings, but not to take the kingdom away from David's dynasty. This notion of an eternal dynasty for David clearly prevails during the time of the later prophets, such as Jeremiah. This is why the destruction of Jerusalem and the end of Davidic kings in Babylonian exile during the time of Jeremiah is such a theological shock.

The "Davidic royal theology" held the belief that God's grace in Israel was now known in the promise of eternal dynasty to David but also in the view that God would dwell forever on Mount Zion (see Ps 132:16-18). Exile not only ended the Davidic kingship but destroyed the temple. Hope in this Davidic theology was projected into the future when God would once again designate an anointed one (Heb. Messiah; Gk. Christos) and bring in his kingdom. Early Christians saw Jesus as born in the line of David and ushering in God's kingdom.

The promise to David highlights the risky commitment God makes to live with us in the tension between faith commitment and political engagement. The pressure is to resolve this tension in either direction: unengaged piety or co-opted ideological religion. We are tempted to hold religion aloof from engagement in the political world or to make religion the servant of ideologies that aren't grounded in faith values. The promise of God to David is now our promise that God will live with us in the tension between God's kingdom and our human kingdoms.

prophet Nathan a covenant commitment to the dynasty of David (see sidebar, "God's Covenant with David"). The entire passage makes creative use of a play on the various possible uses for the Hebrew word meaning "house." David lives in a lavish house (palace) made out of cedar imported from Tyre (7:1; cf. 2 Sam 5:11). He expresses to the prophet Nathan his discomfort that the sacred covenant chest is housed in a tent (7:2). The implication, which Nathan later confirms, is that David wants to build a house (temple) for the Lord. Nathan's first response is that the Lord is with David, so he should go ahead (7:3), but the Lord speaks to Nathan, who returns to David with the word that he won't be the one to build a house (temple) for the Lord (7:5). Nathan's speech to David defends the idea that God has never asked for a temple, but has been content to dwell in a tent sanctuary (7:6-7). This may seem at first like a rebuke to David, except for what follows. God reviews the divine involvement with David from the time he was a shepherd to the present. Through David, God is giving Israel rest from enemies and establishing a secure kingdom (7:8-10), but now God will establish the house (dynasty) of David (2 Sam 6:11). This dynasty and its kingdom will be forever (7:16). Further, God promises that David's son will build the house (temple) of the Lord (7:12-13). This will, of course, be Solomon. The sons who come later in the line of David may be chastised by God, but God

Who am I, LORD God, and of what significance is my family that you have brought me this far? <sup>19</sup>But even this was too small in your eyes, LORD God! Now you have also spoken about your servant's dynasty in the future and the generation to come.<sup>a</sup> LORD God!

<sup>20</sup>What more can David say to you? You know your servant, LORD God. <sup>21</sup>For the sake of your word and according to your own will, you have done this great thing so that your servant would know it.

<sup>22</sup>That is why you are so great, LORD God! No one can compare to you, no god except you, just as we have always heard with our own ears.

<sup>25</sup>Now, LORD God, confirm forever the promise you have made about your servant and his dynasty. Do just as you have promised <sup>26</sup>so that your name will be great forever when people say, "The LORD of heavenly forces is Israel's God!" May your servant David's household be established before you, <sup>27</sup>because you, LORD of heavenly forces, Israel's God, have revealed to your servant that you will build a dynasty for him. <sup>28</sup>LORD God, you are truly God! Your words are trustworthy, and you have promised this good thing to your servant. <sup>29</sup>So now willingly bless your servant's dynasty so that it might continue forever before you, because you, LORD God, have promised. Let your servant's dynasty be blessed forever by your blessing.

O Some time later, David defeated the Philistines and subdued them. David captured OMetheg-ammah from Philistine control.

<sup>2</sup>David also defeated the Moabites and made them lie on the ground, measuring them with a rope. He measured two rope lengths for those who were to be killed and one rope length for those who were to be spared. The Moabites became David's subjects and brought him tribute.

promises not to take either faithful love or the kingdom away as happened with Saul (7:14-15). This eternal promise to the line of David becomes the foundation of what is often referred to as the Davidic royal theology.

7:18-29 It is fitting that David's own prayer follows God's promise to David through Nathan. Many previous accounts portray David as a man who routinely takes matters to God in prayer (see sidebar, "David and Prayer" at 1 Sam 23). These verses constitute one of the longer actual prayers in scripture (apart from the Psalms). The prayer opens in praise of God, particularly in showing favor to David himself (7:18-22). David humbly expresses his own insignificance compared to God. But David also acknowledges what God has done for Israel, rescuing them from Egypt and establishing them as God's own people (7:23-24). This establishes the context for what could be seen as David's arrogant demand of God, because David prays for the confirmation and fulfillment of the promise to establish his dynasty (7:25-28). But this now is understood as a continuation of the gracious work of God toward Israel from the exodus onward.

8:1 A description of David's defeat of the Philistines, reported more fully in 2 Samuel 5:17-25, begins a chapter detailing David's victories over Israel's enemies. The Philistine victory lays the foundation for further advancement in the region.

8:2 David defeats the Moabites to the east of Israel across the Dead Sea, and they become a subject kingdom.

8:3-8 David next encounters King Hadadezer of Zobah, an Aramean territory north of Damascus. This conflict widens into a general Aramean conflict when Damascus itself comes to Hadadezer's aid (8:5). David sets up outposts, exacts tribute, and incorporates Aramean territory into his growing empire (8:6-8). This is the beginning of among the Arameans of Damascus. And the Arameans became David's subjects and brought him tribute. The LORD gave David victory wherever he went. <sup>7</sup>David took the gold shields carried by Hadadezer's servants and brought them to Jerusalem. <sup>8</sup>King David also took a large amount of bronze from Tebah<sup>f</sup> and Berothai, towns that belonged to Hadadezer.

David's administration

David and Mephibosheth

<sup>9</sup>David asked, "Is there anyone from Saul's family still alive that I could show faithful love for Jonathan's sake?" <sup>2</sup>There was a servant from Saul's household named Ziba, and he was summoned before David.

"Are you Ziba?" the king asked him.

"At your service!" he answered.

"Yes," Ziba said to the king, "one of Jonathan's sons, whose feet are crippled."

ongoing hostility between Israel and the Aramean kingdoms centered in Damascus, which will continue for many generations.

<sup>2:9-11</sup> Word of David's success on the battlefield brings him diplomatic victories as well. King Toi of Hamath makes peace with David, and sends his son Joram to pay tribute and pledge loyalty to the growing Davidic kingdom.

<sup>8:15-18</sup> David's reign is characterized by the covenant qualities of justice and righteousness. He establishes leaders around him: military officers, scribes, and priests (including at least some of David's sons). It is noteworthy that while Joab commands David's regular army, David also maintains a personal mercenary force (Cherethites and Pelethites) commanded by Benaiah. This ensures a loyal force guarding the king's own person.

<sup>9:1-20:26</sup> These chapters are part of a continuous narrative now incorporated into a larger history work extending from Joshua through 2 Kings. The section on the consolidation of David's reign as king in 2 Samuel 5:11-8:18 has come to a close, and a more personal narrative begins to unfold in 2 Samuel 9.

<sup>9:1-13</sup> This brief story provides evidence of David's faithfulness to the commitment he made to his friend Jonathan that he would care for Jonathan's descendants (1 Sam 20:14-17). The son of Jonathan in question is Mephibosheth. He is lame, unable to support himself (cf. 2 Sam 4:4), and hardly a threat to David's kingdom. Many have observed that the events of 2 Samuel 21 must precede the story of this chapter. There the surviving sons of Saul are executed to avenge Saul's treatment of the Gibeonites. Although Mephibosheth is Jonathan's son and not Saul's, this chronology would make sense of David's initial question whether anyone survived from the house of Saul (9:1).

<sup>9:1, 3, 7</sup> David uses the term translated in 9:1 and 9:7 as "faithful love" three times (it is translated as "kindness" in 9:3) to describe why he sought out Jonathan's son, Mephibosheth. The "faithful" quality indicates covenant love or committed love. This kind of love is prominent in the story of the friendship of David and Jonathan, and the commitments they make to each other (see notes on 1 Sam 20). That pledge of friendship included care for any of Jonathan's family in the future. Here David fulfills his pledge.

The Two Parts of David's Story Before David was introduced into the story of the books of Samuel, God had looked ahead and named him "a man following the Lord's own heart" (1 Sam 13:14). For the first half of David's story he seems to be all that one could wish for in a gifted and faithful leader. He is frequently in prayer to God; he is a gifted warrior and leader but knows how to show compassion; he is loved by many in spite of Saul's jealousy and hostility.

But David's story takes a radical turn in 2 Samuel 11. He begins to follow the leading of his own desires and no longer consults with God in prayer. He uses his royal power to fulfill his human desires, and this leads to adultery with Bathsheba, an attempt to cover this up, and the murder of Bathsheba's husband, Uriah. The story that unfolds from this point forward isn't of the David in line with God's own heart. It is the story of David living with the consequences of his own sin.

The story of David falls into two parts, and these have been given various names: for example, blessing/curse or gift/grasp. Eventually David makes his way back to God, but not without great suffering in his own family and in the kingdom over which he reigns. There is something to learn from both parts of David's story, and perhaps this makes him more human, more like those who read his story. When the historian who wrote 1 and 2 Chronicles used the books of Samuel to retell David's story, he omitted the negative parts, leaving an idealized David. Fortunately, the OT includes David's entire story in the books of Samuel. David is worthy of our admiration in many respects, but his entire story is a reminder that even the most worthy life can fall from the heights.

"He is at the house of Ammiel's son Machir at Lo-debar," Ziba told the king.

"Mephibosheth?" David said.

"Yes," he replied. "I am at your service!"

<sup>7</sup>"Don't be afraid," David told him, "because I will certainly show you faithful love for the sake of your father Jonathan. I will restore to you all the fields of your grandfather Saul, and you will eat at my table always."

<sup>8</sup>Mephibosheth bowed low out of respect and said, "Who am I, your servant, that you should care about a dead dog like me?"

<sup>9</sup>Then David summoned Saul's servant Ziba and said to him, "I have given your master's grandson everything belonging to Saul and his family. <sup>10</sup>You will work the land for him—you, your sons, and your servants—and you will bring food into your master's house for them to eat. <sup>1</sup>But Mephibosheth, your master's grandson, will always be at my table." (Now Ziba had fifteen sons and twenty servants.)

So Mephibosheth ate at David's <sup>m</sup>table, like one of the king's own sons. <sup>12</sup>Mephibosheth had a young son named Mica. All who lived in Ziba's household became Mephibosheth's servants. <sup>13</sup>Mephibosheth lived in Jerusalem, because he always ate at the king's table. He was crippled in both feet.

<sup>1</sup>LXX: MT You will bring food for your master's son and he will eat it. <sup>m</sup>LXX: MT my servant Ziba, who knows that Jonathon's son has survived, although he is permanently injured.

9:5-8 Mephibosheth (see note at 2 Sam 4:4) is brought to David and can't believe that David would show any regard for him. David reassures him by repeating the pledge he made to Jonathan, and promising to restore land to him and to have him eat at the king's table from that time on.

9:9-13 Ziba reenters the story. He and his 15 sons and 20 servants are appointed by David to serve Mephibosheth and work the lands of Saul restored to Jonathan's son (9:10). Ziba appears to accept this role, but events during the time of Absalom's rebellion, and David's retreat from Jerusalem, will raise questions about the integrity of Ziba's commitment to serve Mephibosheth (cf. 2 Sam 16:1-4; 19:24-30). There will be further chapters in Mephibosheth's story. For now, Mephibosheth and his son Mica come to live in Jerusalem and eat at the king's table. It is a touching acknowledgment of the commitment made by David to Jonathan.

10:1-19 This chapter relates in some detail how David becomes engaged in a difficult war with the Ammonites. Although the account gives us some insight into ancient conflicts, the campaign against the Ammonites becomes the context within which we will read of David's sin with Bathsheba while his men, including Bathsheba's husband, Uriah, are away at the siege of Ammon's capital city, Rabbah.

War with the Ammonites and Arameans

10 Some time later, the king of the Ammonites died, and his son Hanun succeeded him as king. <sup>2</sup>David said, "I'll be loyal to Nahash's son Hanun, just as his father was loyal to me." So David sent his servants with condolences concerning Hanun's father.

But when David's servants arrived in Ammonite territory, <sup>3</sup>the Ammonite officials asked their master Hanun, "Do you really believe David is honoring your father because he has sent you condolences? Of course not! David has sent his servants to you to search the city, spy it out, and overthrow it." <sup>4</sup>So Hanun seized David's servants and shaved off their beards, <sup>5</sup>cut off half their garments, from their buttocks down, and sent them off.

<sup>6</sup>When this was reported to David, he sent men to meet them because they were completely ashamed. The king said, "Stay in Jericho until your beards have grown. Then you can come back."

<sup>10</sup>When Joab saw that the battle would be fought on two fronts, he chose some of Israel's finest warriors and deployed them to meet the Arameans. <sup>11</sup>The rest of the army Joab placed under the command of his brother Abishai. When they took up their positions to meet the Ammonites, Joab said, <sup>12</sup>"If the Arameans prove too strong for me, you must help me, and if the Ammonites prove too strong for you, I'll help you. <sup>13</sup>Be brave! We must be courageous for the sake of our people and the cities of our God. The LORD will do what is good in his eyes."

<sup>14</sup>When Joab and the troops who were with him advanced into battle against the Arameans, they fled from him. <sup>15</sup>When the Ammonites saw that the Arameans had fled, they also fled from Abishai and retreated to the city. Then Joab returned from fighting the Ammonites and went to Jerusalem.

<sup>16</sup>The Arameans saw that they had been defeated by Israel, so they regrouped. <sup>17</sup>Hadadezer sent for Arameans from beyond the Euphrates River. They came to Helam with Shobach leading them as commander of Hadadezer's army. <sup>18</sup>When this was reported to David he gathered all Israel, crossed the Jordan, and went to Helam. The Arameans formed battle lines against David and fought with him. <sup>19</sup>But the Arameans fled before Israel, and David destroyed seven hundred of their chariots and forty thousand horsemen. David wounded their army commander Shobach, and he died there. <sup>20</sup>When all the kings who served Hadadezer

10:1-5 When Ammon's King Nahash dies, David sends condolences to Nahash's son Hanun. David states his intention to be loyal as Nahash was loyal to him. This is the same word for faithful commitment used to describe David's commitment to Jonathan (2 Sam 9:1, 3, 7). Whether it is in personal relationship or in diplomatic relationship, David honors commitments. This loyalty to Nahash may surprise the reader, since this is the cruel king from whom Saul had rescued Jabesh-gilead (1 Sam 11). We can only guess how Ammon under Nahash has become an ally of David. Perhaps they shared a common opposition to Saul, or maybe Saul's defeat of Ammon forced the Ammonites into an inferior relationship. In any case, Hanun's advisors aren't inclined to accept David's condolences at face value. They claim that the servants sent to bring David's message are spies in advance of a campaign against Ammon (10:3). Hanun listens to them. He humiliates the messengers by shaving off half their beards and cutting off the lower half of their garments. David sends word to the messengers at Jericho, urging them to stay until their beards grow back (10:4-5). But he can't ignore such a grave insult from the Ammonites.

10:6-14 When the Ammonites realize that David won't ignore such an offense, they call on their Aramean allies, four kings with a total of 33,000 men (10:6). Perhaps they thought such a show of force would discourage David, but instead he mobilizes his entire army under the command of Joab (10:7). The enemy strategy is to have the Ammonites defending the city (probably their capital, Rabbah) and the Arameans gathered in the countryside, forcing Israel into a battle on two fronts. Joab shrewdly divides his own forces, placing half under the command of his brother Abishai. Joab quickly defeats the Arameans, and the Ammonites retreat into their city. For the moment Joab withdraws Israel's army (10:8-14).

10:15-19 The Arameans won't accept defeat. They call in allied Aramean forces even from beyond the Euphrates River. Hadadezer, of Damascus, places Shobach in command of a great Aramean army (10:15-16), and this time David himself leads his army into the field (10:17). This may be the last battle in which David himself served as a field commander. In the next chapter, David is at the palace while his army is at war (2 Sam 11:1). The Israelite victory is complete, and even the Aramean commander is saw that they were defeated by Israel, they made peace with Israel and became their subjects. Never again would the Arameans come to the aid of the Ammonites.

David and Bathsheba

11 In the spring,<sup>o</sup> when kings<sup>p</sup> go off to war, David sent Joab, along with his servants and all the Israelites, and they destroyed the Ammonites, attacking the city of Rabbah. But David remained in Jerusalem.

<sup>2</sup>One evening, David got up from his couch and was pacing back and forth on the roof of the palace. From the roof he saw a woman bathing; the woman was very beautiful. <sup>3</sup>David sent someone and inquired about the woman. The report came back: "Isn't this Eliam's daughter Bathsheba, the wife of Uriah the Hittite?" <sup>4</sup>So David sent messengers to get her. When she came to him, he had sex with her. (Now she had been purifying herself after her monthly period.) Then she returned home. <sup>5</sup>The woman conceived and sent word to David.

"I'm pregnant," she said.

<sup>6</sup>Then David sent a message to Joab: "Send me Uriah the Hittite." So Joab sent Uriah to David. <sup>7</sup>When Uriah came to him, David asked about the welfare of Joab and the army and how the battle was going. <sup>8</sup>Then David told Uriah, "Go down to your house and wash your feet."

Uriah left the palace, and a gift from the king was sent after him. <sup>9</sup>However, Uriah slept at the palace entrance with all his master's servants. He didn't go down to his own house. <sup>10</sup>David was told, "Uriah didn't go down to his own house," so David asked Uriah, "Haven't you just returned from a journey? Why didn't you go home?"

<sup>14</sup>The next morning David wrote a letter to Joab and sent it with Uriah. <sup>15</sup>He wrote in the letter, "Place Uriah at the front of the fiercest battle, and then pull back from him so that he will be struck down and die."

killed. The Aramean kings, led by Hadadzezer, make peace with David, effectively becoming part of his small empire. The Ammonites remain to be dealt with (10:18-19).

11:1 David sends Joab and his army to lay siege to Rabbah and end the Ammonite war. It is clear that David himself remains in Jerusalem. This location has unfortunate results.

11:2-5 David was pacing on the roof of his palace. Bathsheba was bathing on the roof of her house. Neither one of these activities was unusual in the crowded setting of a walled city. Bathing was often on the roof. There was no drainage system inside a house for bathing. Bathsheba may have been doing ritual cleansing related to her menstrual period (11:4). There is no suggestion that Bathsheba intended to attract David's attention. The text gives no support to the idea that she was a seductress. David's palace would command a view of the rooftops of most of the city, and many people might have been in his view while bathing. The text does tell us that he found her beautiful (11:2), and he inquired about her identity. The report came back that she was married to Uriah the Hittite, one of David's own officers (11:3). This doesn't discourage David, however. He sends messengers to get her, which can also be translated as "he took her" (11:4). The prophet Samuel used the same verb in his warning to the elders about kings who "take" from the people (see note on 1 Sam 8:10-18). David's sex with Bathsheba is adultery under the menace of power. The narrative gives no indication that David would have seen this woman again, except that she sends word that she is pregnant (11:5).

11:6-13 This section of the story could be called "the cover-up" as David tries to escape responsibility for his actions. He sends for Uriah, Bathsheba's husband, to be returned from the front in the siege of Rabbah. He hopes that Uriah will go to his home, sleep with his wife, and the child Bathsheba is carrying can be passed off as Uriah's own. After meeting with Uriah for reports from the battlefield, David tells him to go home and wash your feet, probably a roundabout way of referring to having sex (11:7-8). But Uriah sleeps that night with the palace servants (11:9). Uriah explains to David that he would consider it disloyal to take his ease at home with his wife, when the army and even the sacred covenant chest were in the field. David makes one more effort by getting Uriah drunk, but the faithful soldier still sleeps with the servants at the palace (11:13).

11:14-27 A third and more deadly phase of the story begins. David conspires with his general Joab to murder Uriah. In a painful irony, David sends the order to Joab by Uriah's own hand. Joab should place Uriah in the most heated battle, and his fellow warriors are to leave him there. Joab follows these orders, and Uriah is killed according to plan (11:14-17). The narrative provides a detailed account of the messengers sent back and forth

<sup>16</sup>So as Joab was attacking the city, he put Uriah in the place where he knew there were strong warriors. <sup>17</sup>When the city's soldiers came out and attacked Joab, some of the people from David's army fell. Uriah the Hittite was also killed. <sup>18</sup>Joab sent a complete report of the battle to David.

<sup>23</sup>So the messenger set off, and when he arrived he reported to David everything Joab sent him to say.

<sup>26</sup>David said to the messenger, "Say this to Joab: 'Don't be upset about this because the sword is that way: taking the life of this person or that person. Continue attacking the city and destroy it!' Encourage Joab!"

<sup>27</sup>When Uriah's wife heard that her husband Uriah was dead, she mourned for her husband. <sup>28</sup>After the time of mourning was over, David sent for her and brought her back to his house. She became his wife and bore him a son.

But what David had done was evil in the LORD's eyes.

Judgment and Confession It is important to remember that in the confrontation between David and Nathan, both men have been called and claimed by God. Nathan, as God's prophet, has delivered the message of God's promise to the dynasty of David (2 Sam 7). It was said repeatedly of David that God was with him (e.g., 2 Sam 5:10), and he acknowledged this frequently in prayer. Now, what God demands of these two has shifted. Nathan must speak a word of judgment rather than the word of promise. David is confronted with his own sin by Nathan. What is now demanded of him?

David isn't in a position to petition God. Instead, he responds with confession and changing his heart and life. Nathan has the courage to speak the truth to someone in power, while David has the wisdom to confess his own sin. This opens the possibility of a changed heart and life. In Hebrew this notion of change involves turning in a new direction, away from sin and toward renewed faithfulness. Although David's confession is immediate in the story, his life change doesn't immediately become fully visible. He continues to make poor judgments in relation to his children, and we will see the consequences in the chapters ahead. But in the larger biblical tradition, David's change of heart and life and his willingness to turn from sin is seen most fully in Psalm 51. This remorseful psalm has a heading that relates it to the occasion of Nathan's confrontation over David's adultery with Bathsheba. This psalm has long been treated in Jewish and Christian communities of faith as the expression of the David who, even in his sin, is the "man following the Lord's own heart." David the sinner models a turning away from sin: "Have mercy on me, God, according to your faithful love! Wipe away my wrongdoings according to your great compassion . . . Create a clean heart for me, God; put a new, faithful spirit deep inside me!" (Ps 51:1, 10).

between David and Joab at this point. Apparently Joab is worried that David will be upset that the battle took place so close to the city wall, and men were lost. At this point the messenger is to report that Uriah was killed, and David will know this was part of the plan (11:18-21). The name Abimelech (11:21) refers to the son of Gideon (also called Jerub-besheth) who tried to make himself king but was killed when a woman dropped a millstone on him from the wall (Judg 9:53-54). David seeks to comfort Joab. The phrase Don't be upset puts in English the Hebrew idiom "Don't let this be evil in your eyes" (11:25). David asks his general not to consider the deed evil, but the final word of this story makes the guilt clear: what David had done was evil in the Lord's eyes (11:27b). David wastes no time. After a brief period of mourning, he makes Bathsheba his wife, and she bears a son (11:26-27a).

Nathan pronounces God's judgment

12 So the LORD sent Nathan to David. When Nathan arrived he said, "There were two men in the same city, one rich, one poor. <sup>2</sup>The rich man had a lot of sheep and cattle, <sup>3</sup>but the poor man had nothing—just one small ewe lamb that he had bought. He raised that lamb, and it grew up with him and his children. It would eat from his food and drink from his cup—even sleep in his arms! It was like a daughter to him.

<sup>4</sup>"Now a traveler came to visit the rich man, but he wasn't willing to take anything from his own flock or herd to prepare for the guest who had arrived. Instead, he took the poor man's ewe lamb and prepared it for the visitor."

<sup>5</sup>David got very angry at the man, and he said to Nathan, "As surely as the LORD lives, the one who did this is demonic!" <sup>6</sup>He must restore the ewe lamb seven times over<sup>v</sup> because he did this and because he had no compassion."

<sup>7</sup>"You are that man!" Nathan told David. "This is what the LORD God of Israel says: I anointed you king over Israel and delivered you from Saul's power. <sup>8</sup>I gave your master's house<sup>w</sup> to you, and gave his wives into your embrace. I gave you the house<sup>x</sup> of Israel and Judah. If that was too little, I would have given even more. <sup>9</sup>Why have you despised the LORD's word by doing what is evil in his eyes? You have struck down Uriah the Hittite with the sword and taken his wife as your own. You used the Ammonites to kill him. <sup>10</sup>Because of that, because you despised me and took the wife of Uriah the Hittite as your own, the sword will never leave your own house.

<sup>11</sup>"This is what the LORD says: I am making trouble come against you from inside your own family. Before your very eyes I will take your wives away and give them to your friend, and he will have sex with your wives in broad daylight. <sup>12</sup>You did what you did secretly, but I will do what I am doing before all Israel in the light of day."

"The LORD has removed your sin," Nathan replied to David. "You won't die. <sup>14</sup>However, because you have utterly disrespected the LORD<sup>y</sup> by doing this, the son born to you will definitely die." <sup>15</sup>Then Nathan went home.

Bathsheba's child dies

The LORD struck the child that Uriah's wife had borne for David, and he became very sick. <sup>16</sup>David begged God for the boy. He fasted and spent the night sleeping on the ground.

12:1-6 God not only notices David's sin (2 Sam 11:27b) but sends the prophet Nathan to judge the king (12:1). Nathan pretends to lay a case before David for judgment. After all, this was one of the royal functions, to act as a court of last appeal. We soon learn that this isn't an actual case but a parable. In Nathan's account a rich man with many flocks has taken advantage of a poor man by serving the poor man's one ewe lamb as dinner to a guest (12:1-4). This is such an obvious injustice that David renders an immediate judgment (12:5). He responds first in terms of his feeling. The words rendered demonic can also be translated "he's as good as dead" (see translation note u). The same expression appears with this meaning when Saul says this of David in 1 Samuel 20:31-32. Nathan returns to this verdict of death in 2 Samuel 12:13. In what seems a more formal judicial verdict, David rules that the lamb must be restored sevenfold (12:6).

12:7-15a Nathan abruptly reveals the parable for what it is, a veiled reference to David's sin: "You are that man!" (12:7a). He then delivers a formal oracle of prophetic judgment from the Lord against David. Nathan's judgment is expressed in the first person as if God is speaking directly. It begins with God's review of all the blessings that have been given to David, beginning with his anointing (12:7b-8), and more would have come. The verdict of 2 Samuel 11:27b is repeated (what David has done is evil in God's eyes; 12:9). Specifics are provided: David has killed Uriah, and taken his wife as his own. Then come the consequences: The sword will never leave David's family, trouble will come to David from within his own family, and his wives will be taken from him not in secret but in broad daylight (12:10-12). Indeed, the chapters that lie ahead in 2 Samuel recount the fulfillment of these tragic events in David's own family. In 12:13 David does respond, and it isn't with anger or efforts to escape blame. He confesses his sin against the Lord. Nathan then lifts the death sentence that David pronounced on himself (12:13b; cf. 2 Sam 12:5). But in a harsh final word, Nathan reveals that the son conceived by Bathsheba will die (12:14).

12:15b-25 This story may be difficult for modern readers who don't want to think that God exacts the death of a child in judgment on its father. The text, however, assumes that all things come from God, even the illness of this child, and God can use such circumstances to further the action of God's grace and judgment. There is no general claim here about the deaths of all children. The most important point of this story relates not to the child or to Bathsheba (who aren't even named), but to David. David is centrally important to the tradition of Israel, and here that tradition is honest enough to give us a picture of David

<sup>18</sup>On the seventh day, the child died. David's servants were afraid to tell him that the child had died. "David wouldn't listen to us when we talked to him while the child was still alive," they said. "How can we tell him the child has died? He'll do something terrible!"

"Is the child dead?" David asked his servants.

"Yes," they said, "he is dead."

<sup>20</sup>Then David rose from the ground, bathed, anointed himself, and changed his clothes. He entered the LORD's house and bowed down. Then he entered his own house. He requested food, which was brought to him, and he ate.

<sup>21</sup>"Why are you acting this way?" his servants asked. "When the child was alive, you fasted and cried and kept watch,<sup>b</sup> but now that the child is dead, you get up and eat food!"

<sup>22</sup>David replied, "While the child was alive I fasted and wept because I thought, Who knows? The LORD may have mercy on me and let the child live. <sup>23</sup>But he is dead now. Why should I fast? Can I bring him back again? No. I am going where he is, but he won't come back to me."

Defeat of the Ammonites

in a moment when he learned that even royal power can't control human events. David thought he could manipulate life and death for his own benefit. Now he stands helpless at the death of his own child, whose life can't be controlled by David.

12:15b-17 David totally invested himself in the hope that his prayers and self-denial could influence the fate of his son.

12:18-19 When the child dies, David's servants fear that his grief will be inconsolable, and they are afraid to tell him. David, however, realizes that something has changed, and asks directly if the child has died.

12:20-23 These verses seem to be the focus of this tragic story. David reverses the usual patterns of grief in the ancient world and often in our own. He ends his fasting and outward evidences of grief. Although he seems to acknowledge God, he ceases petitioning (12:20), bathes, and anoints himself. His household is amazed and comments on this reversal of the usual behavior (12:21). David responds by accepting a circumstance he can't change. He himself will eventually die, but he can't reverse the child's death (12:23). Readers often find in David a model of the ability to accept even death as a reality in the midst of life. It certainly fits with the boldness seen elsewhere in David's life. The story does little to prepare the reader, however, for the cautious and indecisive David we will see in the stories just ahead as additional tragedies unfold in David's family.

12:24-25 A second son is born to David and Bathsheba. He is named Solomon. Most significantly, the text reports that the Lord loves him and sends Nathan to give him a special name with the meaning "loved by the Lord." This, of course, foreshadows that it is Solomon who will eventually succeed David on the throne (1 Kgs 1-2).

12:26-31 The reader has almost forgotten that an uncompleted war with Ammon has been going on. This war started in the account of 2 Samuel 10 and was the background to David's listless time remaining in Jerusalem when he saw Bathsheba from the rooftop (2 Sam 11:1). Now, by contrast, when the victory seems assured, David does take the field himself to capture Rabbah and personally take the Ammonite king's crown for himself (12:29-30). The treatment of the Ammonites was harsh compared to other surrounding kingdoms incorporated into the Davidic kingdom (12:31). This is understandable in light of the extreme insult that began the war.

Amnon rapes Tamar

13 Some time later, David's son Amnon fell in love with Tamar the beautiful sister of Absalom, who was also David's son. <sup>2</sup>Amnon was so upset over his half sister that he made himself sick. She was a virgin, and it seemed impossible in Amnon's view to do anything to her. <sup>3</sup>But Amnon had a friend named Jonadab, Shimeah's son, David's brother, who was a very clever man.

<sup>4</sup>"Prince," Jonadab said to him, "why are you so down, morning after morning? Tell me about it."

So Amnon told him, "I'm in love with Tamar, the sister of my brother Absalom."

<sup>5</sup>"Lie down on your bed and pretend to be sick," Jonadab said to him. "When your father comes to see you, tell him, 'Please let my sister Tamar come and give me some food to eat. Let her prepare the food in my sight so I can watch and eat from her own hand.'"

<sup>6</sup>So Amnon lay down and pretended to be sick. The king came to see him, and Amnon told the king, "Please let my sister Tamar come and make a couple of heart-shaped cakes in front of me so I can eat from her hand."

<sup>8</sup>So Tamar went to her brother Amnon's house where he was lying down. She took dough, kneaded it, made heart-shaped cakes in front of him, and then cooked them. <sup>9</sup>She took the pan and served Amnon, but he refused to eat.

"Everyone leave me," Amnon said. So everyone left him. <sup>10</sup>Then Amnon said to Tamar, "Bring the food into the bedroom so I can eat from your hand." So Tamar took the heart-shaped cakes she had made and brought them to her brother Amnon in the bedroom. <sup>11</sup>When she served him the food, he grabbed her and said, "Come have sex with me, my sister."

<sup>12</sup>But she said to him, "No, my brother! Don't rape me. Such a thing shouldn't be done in Israel. Don't do this horrible thing. <sup>13</sup>Think about me—where could I hide my shame? And you—you would become like some fool in Israel! Please, just talk to the king! He won't keep me from marrying you."

<sup>14</sup>But Amnon refused to listen to her. He was stronger than she was, and so he raped her.

But Amnon wouldn't listen to her. <sup>17</sup>He summoned his young servant and said, "Get this woman out of my presence and lock the door after her." (<sup>18</sup>She was wearing a long-sleeved robe because that was what the virgin princesses wore as garments.)<sup>1</sup> So Amnon's servant put her out and locked the door after her.

<sup>19</sup>Tamar put ashes on her head and tore the long-sleeved robe she was wearing. She put her hand on her head and walked away, crying as she went.

<sup>20</sup>Her brother Absalom said to her, "Has your brother Amnon been with you? Keep quiet about it for now, sister; he's your brother. Don't let it bother you." So Tamar, a broken woman, lived in her brother Absalom's house.

13:1-22 This is a dark and tragic episode in David's story, and for that reason it isn't often read, studied, or preached. The story focuses on the unrestrained lust of David's oldest son, Amnon, for his half sister Tamar. This is certainly not a love story. Amnon and his friend Jonadab plot to isolate Tamar with Amnon in his bedroom by pretending to be sick. When David visits Amnon, he asks that Tamar be sent to him with food (13:5-6). When David agrees to this, Tamar prepares food and comes as a caring sister to Amnon, but he sends the servants out, seizes Tamar, and rapes her (13:11-14). She doesn't consent to this but protests, and even proposes that David might allow them to marry instead of shaming her in this way. The account shows great insight into the psychology of such violence, because as soon as the deed is done Amnon's love turns to hatred and disgust, and he forcefully sends her away (13:15-18). In grief and shame, Amnon tears her garment and puts ashes on her head. She encounters her brother Absalom. Although he takes her into his house (permanently as it turns out), he counsels silence and even says, Don't let it bother you (13:20). This won't be Absalom's response. He will take revenge, and a cycle of deadly violence begins in David's house. But when David actually hears of this we don't see the decisive and courageous

Absalom kills Amnon

<sup>23</sup>Two years later, Absalom was shearing sheep at Baal-hazor near Ephraim, and he invited all the king's sons. <sup>24</sup>Absalom approached the king and said, "Your servant is shearing sheep. Would the king and his advisors please join me?"

<sup>25</sup>But the king said to Absalom, "No, my son. We shouldn't all go, or we would be a burden on you." Although Absalom urged him, the king wasn't willing to go, although he gave Absalom a blessing.

<sup>26</sup>Then Absalom said, "If you won't come, then let my brother Amnon go with us."

"Why should he go with you?" they asked him. <sup>27</sup>But Absalom urged him until he sent Amnon and all the other princes. Then Absalom made a banquet fit for a king.<sup>h</sup>

<sup>28</sup>Absalom commanded his servants, "Be on the lookout! When Amnon is happy with wine and I tell you to strike Amnon down, then kill him! Don't be afraid, because I myself am giving you the order. Be brave and strong men." <sup>29</sup>So Absalom's servants did to Amnon just what he had commanded. Then all the princes got up, jumped onto their mules, and fled.

Absalom is restored

14 Now Joab, Zeruiah's son, could see that the king's mind was on Absalom. <sup>2</sup>So Joab sent someone to Tekoa and brought a wise woman from there. He said to her, "Pretend to be in mourning. Dress in mourning clothes. Don't anoint yourself with oil. Act like a woman who has spent a long time mourning over someone who has died. <sup>3</sup>Go to the king and speak to him as follows." Then Joab told her what to say.

"It's terrible!" she said. "I am a widow; my husband is dead. <sup>6</sup>Your servant had two sons, but the two of them fought in the field. No one could separate them, and one struck the other and killed him. <sup>7</sup>Now the entire clan has turned against your servant. They say, 'Hand over the one who killed his brother so we can execute him for murdering his brother, even though we would destroy the heir as well.' So they would snuff out the one ember I have left, leaving my husband without name or descendant on the earth."

David we have come to know. He loves Amnon too much to punish him in any way, so the deed goes unchallenged for the moment (13:21).

<sup>1</sup>3:23-39 Absalom's revenge is calculated and cold-hearted. He doesn't act in impulsive anger. He waits two years and invites the royal court to a sheepshearing celebration some distance from Jerusalem (13:23-24). David refuses to go but allows all of the princes to go to Absalom. Absalom commands his servants to strike Amnon down when he is drunk with wine, and they do so, panicking the other royal sons, who flee back to Jerusalem (13:28-29). The calculated nature of the plot is clear as Absalom flees in the opposite direction, already strategically some distance from David's wrath (13:37-39). He will remain far to the north in Geshur, the home of his mother (cf. 2 Sam 3:3), for three years. David receives a false report that all of his sons have been massacred, and he reacts in uncontrolled grief, only to learn that it is Amnon alone who has been killed by Absalom in revenge for Tamar's rape (13:30-36). 14:1-24 Joab, David's strongman, plays the central role in this story as he tries to reunite David and his son Absalom. He often seems to be looking out after David's interests, although this isn't always to David's benefit (as in the killing of Abner; 2 Sam 3:26-30). In this instance Joab seems

<sup>9</sup>The woman of Tekoa said to the king, "My master and king, let the guilt be on me and on my father's household. The king and his throne are innocent."

<sup>10</sup>"If anyone speaks against you, bring him to me, and he will never trouble you again," the king replied.

<sup>11</sup>She said, "Please let the king remember the LORD your God so that the one seeking revenge doesn't add to the destruction and doesn't kill my son."

"As surely as the LORD lives," David said, "not one of your son's hairs will fall to the ground."

<sup>12</sup>Then the woman said, "May your female servant say something to my master the king?"

"Speak!" he said.

<sup>13</sup>The woman said, "Why have you planned the very same thing against God's people? In giving this order, the king has become guilty because the king hasn't restored his own banished son. <sup>14</sup>We all have to die—we're like water spilled out on the ground that can't be gathered up again. But God doesn't take life away; instead, he makes plans so those banished from him don't stay that way."<sup>a</sup>

<sup>15</sup>"I have come to my master the king to talk about this because people have made me afraid. Your servant thought, I must speak with the king. Maybe the king will act on the request of his servant, <sup>16</sup>because the king will agree to deliver his servant from the power of anyone who would destroy both me and my son from the inheritance God gave. <sup>17</sup>Your servant thought, The word of my master the king will definitely comfort me, because my master the king is like one of God's messengers, understanding good and evil. May the LORD your God be with you!"

<sup>18</sup>The king answered the woman, "I must ask you something—don't hide anything from me!"

The woman said, "Please, my master and king, speak."

<sup>19</sup>So the king said, "Has Joab put you up to this?"

The woman answered, "As surely as you live, my master and king, no one can deviate a bit from whatever my master and king says. Yes, it was your servant Joab who directed me, and it was Joab who told your female servant to say all these things. <sup>20</sup>Your servant Joab did this to change the way things look.<sup>b</sup> But my master's wisdom is like the wisdom of one of God's own messengers—he knows everything that takes place in the land."

<sup>21</sup>So the king said to Joab, "All right then. I will do it. Go and bring back my boy Absalom."

"Today your servant knows that you think well of me, my master and king," Joab said, "because the king has followed up on his servant's recommendation."

<sup>24</sup>The king said, "He must go straight to his own house. He must not see my face." So Absalom went straight to his own house and did not see the king.

to believe that David can't be easily approached directly about Absalom, so he hires a wise woman from Tekoa to play a role before David. The strategy recalls Nathan's parable before David (2 Sam 12:1-4). The wise woman pretends to be a widow whose son has killed his brother in a quarrel. Now the people want to execute him for the murder, leaving her without support or heir. David hears her case and promises to intervene (14:5-7). After David responds positively to her request, she speaks plainly and asks David why he won't restore his own son who lives in exile (14:12-14). At this point David becomes suspicious and asks the woman if Joab put her up to this. She admits that he did (14:18-20). The king gives in and tells Joab that he can bring back Absalom, but he must go straight to his house and can't see David (14:21-24). David misses the opportunity for genuine reconciliation. The restoration is in location only, not in relationship.

14:25-27 These verses help us understand the appeal of Absalom. He was a handsome young man, a quality noted for both Saul and David before they became king. Verse 26 might puzzle us for giving so much attention to the thickness of Absalom's hair, but this information is important knowledge for understanding the role his hair played in his undoing and death (cf. 2 Sam 18:9). Painfully ironic is the revelation that Absalom names his only daughter after his disgraced sister, Tamar (14:27).

<sup>31</sup>So Joab went straight to Absalom's house and said to him, "Why have your servants set my property on fire?"

<sup>32</sup>Absalom answered Joab, "Look, I sent you a message: Come here so I can send you to the king to ask, 'Why have I returned from Geshur? I would be better off if I were still there!' Please let me see the king's face. If I'm guilty, then the king can kill me."

<sup>33</sup>Joab went to the king and reported this to him. Then the king called for Absalom, and Absalom came to the king. He bowed low out of respect, nose to the ground before the king. Then the king kissed Absalom.

Absalom plots rebellion

15 Some time later, Absalom got a chariot and horses for his own use, along with fifty men to run ahead of him. <sup>2</sup>Absalom would get up early and stand by the side of the road that went through the city gate. Whenever anyone had a lawsuit to bring before the king for judgment, Absalom would call to him, "What city are you from?" When the person said, "Your servant is from one of the tribes of Israel," <sup>3</sup>then Absalom would say to him, "No doubt your claims are correct and valid, but the king won't listen to you. <sup>4</sup>If only I were made a judge in the land," Absalom would continue, "then anyone with a lawsuit could come to me, and I would give them justice."

<sup>7</sup>At the end of four<sup>r</sup> years, Absalom said to the king, "Please let me go to Hebron so I can fulfill a promise I made to the LORD. <sup>8</sup>Your servant made this promise when I lived in Geshur, in Aram. I promised that if the LORD would bring me back to Jerusalem, then I would worship the LORD in Hebron."<sup>9</sup>

14:28-33 Joab once again plays a central role between David and Absalom, although he seems to try to avoid it. Two years have passed since Absalom's return to Jerusalem, but he has not yet seen David face-to-face. In knowing Joab's close relationship to the king, Absalom tries to speak with Joab, but Joab won't respond to Absalom's requests to see him (14:28-29). So Absalom has his servants set Joab's field on fire. That gets his attention, and Joab agrees to speak to the king (14:30-32). Finally, David summons Absalom to him, and Absalom bows low in respect. The chapter ends simply by saying the king kissed Absalom (14:33). The kiss comes too late. The time for any genuine reconciliation between father and son has passed.

15:1-20:22 This extended narrative details the rebellion of Absalom against his father, David. It forms the focus of the drama that unfolds in David's family when his own sons become men who take what they want, a pattern David modeled in taking Bathsheba and ending the life of Uriah. The story is told with a lack of historical detail and a wealth of insight into the characters and personal dramas of these events. Much of the action is carried forward in conversations between characters. Even after Absalom's death in 2 Samuel 18, the impact of the rebellion continues to affect David and all those around him.

15:1-12 Absalom tries to undermine loyalties to David in the kingdom. He presents himself as strong and capable, and he makes himself publicly available. Much business took place at the city gate in ancient times. Absalom sits there willing to hear disputes, which suggests that the people will receive no hearing from the king (15:2-4). He especially targets those from the northern tribes of Israel, connections he no doubt had cultivated during his three-year northern stay in Geshur (15:8). He treats everyone with a warmth and familiarity no one would expect of the king (15:5-6). While in Jerusalem, Absalom is still somewhat under David's watchful eye and close to David's loyal military forces as well. So it is a clever strategy when Absalom asks leave to worship God in Hebron, and David foolishly grants the request (15:8-9). After all, Hebron was David's first capital, his original power base and in the very south of the kingdom. But Absalom sends word through the tribes of Israel that when they hear the signal they are to declare that Absalom has become king in Hebron (15:10), the very place from which David first became knew nothing of this matter when they went. <sup>12</sup>While Absalom was offering the sacrifices, he summoned David's advisor Ahithophel, who was from Giloh, to come from his hometown. So the conspiracy grew stronger, and Absalom's following grew.

David flees from Jerusalem

<sup>13</sup>A messenger came to David, reporting, "The hearts of the Israelites have gone over to Absalom." <sup>14</sup>Then David told all the servants who were with him in Jerusalem, "Come on! We have to run for it, or we won't be able to escape Absalom. Hurry, or he will catch up with us in no time, destroy us,<sup>4</sup> and attack the city with the sword."

<sup>21</sup>But Ittai answered the king, "As surely as the LORD lives and as surely as my master the king lives, wherever my master the king may be, facing death or facing life, your servant will be there too."

So Ittai the Gittite and all of his men and all the little children with him marched past. <sup>23</sup>The whole countryside cried loudly as all the troops marched past. The king crossed the Kidron Valley, and all the troops passed by on the Olive road<sup>6</sup> into the wilderness.

<sup>24</sup>Zadok was there too, along with all the Levites carrying the chest containing God's covenant. They set God's chest down, and Abiathar offered sacrifices until all the troops had finished marching out of the city. <sup>25</sup>Then the king said to Zadok, "Carry God's chest back into the city. If the LORD thinks well of me, then he will bring me back and let me see it and its home again. <sup>26</sup>But if God says, 'I'm not pleased with you,' then I am ready. Let him do to me whatever pleases him."

king. Absalom is taking over David's story. In a significant aside, the text also tells us that a key advisor to David, Ahithophel, has been persuaded to join Absalom's plot (15:12). He will play an important role in the later phase of the story.

15:13-31 The report comes to David that Absalom is in open rebellion against him. David swiftly makes the decision that they must leave Jerusalem or be trapped there between Absalom in Hebron and his Israelite tribal allies to the north (15:13-14). This begins a remarkable journey of retreat from Jerusalem. David will have many encounters in this journey, but in the process we begin to see again something of the David we knew before his sin with Bathsheba (see sidebar, "Remorseful Journey"). David left behind 10 secondary wives (perhaps women available for the king's sexual pleasure; their status is unclear), but the rest of his household came with him.

Cherethites, Pelethites are part of David's personal military force, usually commanded by Benaiah. Some of the loyalties are touching. Ittai and his men from Gath march out with David, and David urges him to stay because as a foreigner he need not risk involvement. Ittai responds in loyalty to David, and leaves with his men and their families to share David's fate (15:18-22). The two priests, who have been with David since his wilderness days, come out with the Lord's covenant chest and offer sacrifices. They intend to come with him, but David doesn't believe the sacred chest should be taken from its place in Jerusalem, and he sends them back to the city. David's intention, however, has a political dimension, since he instructs the priests to use their sons, Ahimaaz and Jonathan, to send word to him on Absalom's movements in the city (15:24-29). David continues his journey out of the city, taking the route west over the Mount of Olives, walking barefoot

Remorseful Journey David's retreat from Jerusalem isn't just a strategic move to escape Absalom. In David's story it becomes a journey full of remorse and anguish, and a turning point to reclaim earlier elements of his character that made him the man following God's own heart. With David's sin and God's judgment, the David known from the stories of his early years becomes difficult to see. He takes Bathsheba; he kills Uriah; he deals weakly with his son Amnon; he changes his mind about reconciling with Absalom.

Now David walks barefoot out of Jerusalem, weeping and potentially about to lose everything he has and has become. But remarkably we begin to see qualities we have not seen for some time in David's story. He refuses to treat the covenant chest like a good-luck charm to take with him, but once again relies on trust in God's will. To Zadok he says, "If the Lord thinks well of me, then he will bring me back . . . But if God says, 'I'm not pleased with you,' then I am ready. Let him do to me whatever pleases him" (2 Sam 15:25-26). This expression is remarkably similar to Jesus' prayer on the Mount of Olives, "not my will but your will must be done" (Luke 22:42). In 2 Samuel 15:31 David prays to God for the first time since the death of his infant son. He puts the matter of Ahithophel in God's hands. He later expresses a similar willingness to trust God in the matter of Shimei (2 Sam 16:11-12).

As this journey continues, David still has the capacity to deal wisely and compassionately with others. He journeys away from the danger of his own death to reclaim his life with God. Many years later, Jesus—the son of David—journeys in the other direction over the Mount of Olives to face his own death, but also to claim his life with God.

David and Hushai

<sup>32</sup>When David came to the summit where people used to worship God, Hushai from Erech met him. Hushai's clothes were ripped, and dirt was on his head. <sup>33</sup>David said to him, "If you come with me, you will be a burden to me. <sup>34</sup>But if you return to the city and say to Absalom, 'King, I am your servant!' Please spare my life! I was your father's servant in the past, but now I am your servant," then you can help me by countering Ahithophel's advice. <sup>35</sup>The priests Zadok and Abiathar will be with you there. So report everything you hear in the king's palace to the priests Zadok and Abiathar. <sup>36</sup>Their two sons, Zadok's son Ahimaaz and Abiathar's son Jonathan, are also there. Use them to report to me everything you hear." <sup>37</sup>So David's friend Hushai went into Jerusalem, just as Absalom was entering the city.

David and Ziba

"The donkeys are for the royal family to ride," Ziba explained. "The bread and summer fruit are for the young people to eat, and the wine is for those who get exhausted in the wilderness."

"He is still in Jerusalem," Ziba answered the king, "because he thinks that the Israelites are now going to give his grandfather's kingdom back to him."

Ziba said, "I bow out of respect! Please think well of me, my master and king."

and weeping along with the people (15:30). Here he learns of Ahithophel's treason and prays to the Lord to make his advice foolish (15:31).

15:32-37 In a key encounter David's friend Hushai meets him, already in the trappings of mourning (15:32). But David has other plans for him by sending him back into the city to pledge loyalty to Absalom and, in effect, to become a double agent. David's hope is that Hushai can counter the advice of Ahithophel (15:33-34). David tells Hushai about his arrangements to smuggle word of Absalom's plan out through Ahimaaz and Jonathan (15:35-36), and Hushai reenters Jerusalem just as Absalom enters it (15:37). David has barely escaped.

16:1-4 Suddenly Ziba presents himself to David with gifts of donkeys and provisions for the journey. This is the steward caring for the lands of Saul, which David restored to the lame son of Jonathan, Mephibosheth (2 Sam 9). When David asks about Mephibosheth, Ziba says he has stayed in Jerusalem, hoping the Israelites will restore Saul's kingdom to him (16:3). This seems highly unlikely since Absalom is claiming the kingdom for himself, but it slanders Mephibosheth, and David quickly awards to Ziba

Shimei curses David

<sup>5</sup>When King David came to Bahurim, a man from the same clan as Saul's family came out from there. His name was Shimei; he was Gera's son. He was cursing as he came out. <sup>6</sup>He threw rocks at David and at all of King David's servants, even though the entire army and all the warriors were on either side of him.

<sup>7</sup>This is what Shimei said as he cursed David: "Get out of here! Get out of here! You are a murderer! You are despicable! <sup>8</sup>The LORD has paid you back for all the blood of Saul's family, in whose place you rule, and the LORD has handed the kingdom over to your son Absalom. You are in this trouble because you are a murderer!"

<sup>9</sup>Zeruiah's son Abishai said to the king, "Why should this dead dog curse my master the king? Let me go over and cut his head off!"

<sup>10</sup>But the king said, "My problems aren't yours, you sons of Zeruiah. If he is cursing because the LORD told him to curse David, then who is to question, 'Why are you doing this?'"

<sup>11</sup>Then David addressed Abishai and all his servants: "Listen! My own son, one of my very own children, wants me dead. This Benjaminite can only feel the same—only more! Leave him alone. And let him curse, because the LORD told him to. <sup>12</sup>Perhaps the LORD will see my distress; perhaps the LORD will repay me with good for this cursing today."

<sup>13</sup>So David and his men kept walking, while Shimei went along on the hillside next to him, cursing as he went, throwing rocks and dirt at him. <sup>14</sup>The king and all the people who were with him reached the Jordan River<sup>a</sup> exhausted, and he rested there.

Ahithophel's advice

<sup>16</sup>Then David's friend Hushai, who was from Erek, approached Absalom and said to him, "Long live the king! Long live the king!"

<sup>17</sup>But Absalom said to Hushai, "Is this how you show loyal love to your friend? Why didn't you go with him?"

<sup>18</sup>"No," Hushai replied to Absalom, "I will belong to the one chosen by the LORD, by this people, and by all Israel, and I will stay with him. <sup>19</sup>What's more, whom should I serve if not David's son? I served your father, and so I will serve you in the same way."

<sup>20</sup>Then Absalom said to Ahithophel, "Give your advice then. What should we do?"

<sup>21</sup>"Have sex with your father's secondary wives—the ones he left to take care of the palace," Ahithophel told Absalom. "Then all Israel will hear that you have alienated yourself from your father, and everyone who supports you will be encouraged."

<sup>22</sup>So they set up a tent for Absalom on the roof, and he had sex with his father's secondary wives in plain sight before all Israel. (<sup>23</sup>Now in those days, the advice Ahithophel gave was like asking for a word from God. That's why Ahithophel's advice was valued by both David and Absalom.)

everything that belonged to Mephibosheth (16:4). This isn't the last we will hear of this matter (cf. 2 Sam 19:24-30).

16:5-14 David's sad procession must have looked like defeat to many. So David was met by a man named Shimei, who clearly had been waiting for such a day. He was a Benjaminite from the same clan as Saul's family, and he clearly thought that the day of triumph for those who supported Saul had finally come. He came out throwing dirt and rocks at David and his warriors, and he cursed them, saying that they were getting what they deserved for the blood on their hands from the house of Saul (16:6-8). Naturally, Abishai, the hotheaded brother of Joab, wanted to go over and cut his head off, but David restrained him. Once again, the David of this journey places his trust in God to deal with Shimei. So they travel on to the Jordan River, with Shimei cursing and throwing debris at them (16:9-14).

16:15-23 The scene shifts back to Jerusalem. David's friend Hushai approaches Absalom, who is accompanied by Ahithophel. Absalom is clearly suspicious, but Hushai convincingly argues that he is casting his lot with Absalom as God's chosen one and can serve the son as well as the father. It is an argument designed to flatter Absalom, and he seems to accept it (16:16-19). Absalom then turns to Ahithophel for advice, which, we are told, is like a word from God (16:23). Ahithophel advises a first action by Absalom to make clear to Israel that he has broken with David. He tells him to have sex with all 10 of the secondary wives left behind by David. He does so, in a public manner in a tent set up on the roof of the palace (16:21-22). This brutal and flagrant act fulfills Nathan's judgment on David: What David did secretly (taking another man's wife) would be done to him before all Israel by one from his own family (2 Sam 12:11-12).

17 Then Ahithophel said to Absalom, "Let me pick twelve thousand men, and I will go after David tonight. <sup>2</sup>I will attack him while he is tired and weak, and I will throw him into a panic. All the troops with him will run off. I promise to kill the king alone, <sup>3</sup>and I will bring all the people back to you like a bride comes back to her husband. <sup>4</sup>It's only one man's life you are seeking; everyone else can be at peace."

Hushai's advice

<sup>5</sup>But Absalom said, "Call Hushai from Erech. Let's hear what he has to say as well." <sup>6</sup>When Hushai from Erech arrived, Absalom said to him, "This is what Ahithophel has advised. Should we follow it or not? What do you say?"

<sup>7</sup>Hushai said to Absalom, "This time, the advice Ahithophel has given isn't right. <sup>8</sup>You know that your father and his men are warriors," he continued, "and they are as desperate as a wild bear robbed of her cubs. Your father is a seasoned fighter. He won't spend the night with his troops. <sup>9</sup>Even now he has probably hidden himself in one of the caves or some other place. When some of the troops<sup>c</sup> fall in the first attack, whoever hears it will say, 'The soldiers who follow Absalom have been defeated!'" <sup>10</sup>Then even the bravest soldier, whose heart is like a lion's, will melt in fear because all Israel knows that your father is a warrior and that those who are with him are brave. <sup>11</sup>So I would advise that all the Israelites, from Dan to Beersheba—a group as countless as sand on the seashore—be summoned to join you, and that you yourself go into battle. <sup>12</sup>When we attack him wherever he might be, we will fall on him like dew that falls on the ground. No one will survive—not him and not one of the soldiers who are with him! <sup>13</sup>If he retreats into a city, all Israel will bring ropes to that city, and we will drag it into a valley until not even a pebble of it will be found."

<sup>14</sup>Then Absalom and everyone in Israel agreed, "The advice of Hushai from Erech is better than Ahithophel's advice." This was because the LORD had decided to counter Ahithophel's good advice so that the LORD could bring disaster on Absalom.

Hushai warns David

<sup>15</sup>Hushai told the priests Zadok and Abiathar, "Here is what Ahithophel advised Absalom and the Israelite elders, and here is what I advised. <sup>16</sup>Now send word immediately to David and tell him, 'Don't spend the night in the desert plains. You must cross over immediately. Otherwise, the king and all the troops who are with him will be swallowed up whole!'"

<sup>17</sup>Jonathan and Ahimaaz were standing by at En-rogel. A female servant would come and report to them, and they would then travel and report to King David because they couldn't risk being seen entering the city. <sup>18</sup>But a boy saw them and reported it to Absalom. So the two of them left immediately and came to a man's house at Bahurim. He had a well in his courtyard, and they climbed down into it. <sup>19</sup>The man's wife took a covering and spread it over the well's opening, then scattered grain over it so no one would notice. <sup>20</sup>When Absalom's servants came to the woman at the house they demanded, "Where are Ahimaaz and Jonathan?"

The woman told them, "They crossed over the stream."<sup>d</sup> They looked for them but found nothing, so they returned to Jerusalem.

17:1-14 A tense drama unfolds here, with Ahithophel giving his best advice to Absalom, but with Hushai trying to counter that advice with a plan that will give David an advantage. Ahithophel plans to take 12,000 men and pursue David directly while he and his men are tired and disorganized. Most notably he proposes killing David alone, and allowing others to scatter or return to Jerusalem in peace. This plan would entail minimum bloodshed, and so the plan is well received by Absalom and his elders (17:1-4). But Absalom decides that he would hear Hushai's advice as well. Hushai's advice is shrewd. He plays on David's reputation as a warrior and the known fierceness of those warriors closest to him. He suggests that David is too seasoned a warrior to sleep exposed with his men and leave himself open to Ahithophel's plan. Thus when Absalom's men attack and suffer losses without killing David, the troops would lose heart (17:7-10). Hushai advises assembling a much larger force from throughout Israel. This, of course, gives the hastily retreating David more time. He also advises that Absalom himself should lead this force into battle, no doubt appealing to Absalom's ego (17:11). He ends by grandly suggesting a mighty victory (17:12). Absalom chooses the grander scheme of Hushai, but the text makes an interesting comment. It identifies the Lord as the source of this second plan, and the Lord as the one who would defeat Absalom (17:14).

17:15-23 Hushai now makes use of the network of spies for communication that David had put in place through the priests Zadok and Abiathar. He sends word to David to cross the Jordan immediately so they aren't defenseless against Ahithophel's plan (17:15-16). A small drama is played out in 17:17-22 when Jonathan and Ahimaaz are

<sup>23</sup>Meanwhile, once Ahithophel saw that his advice hadn't been followed, he saddled his donkey and went home to his own town. He gave instructions to his household, then hanged himself and died. He was buried in his father's tomb.

<sup>24</sup>David had reached Mahanaim by the time Absalom and all the Israelites who were with him crossed the Jordan River. <sup>25</sup>Absalom had put Amasa in charge of the army instead of Joab. Amasa was the son of a man named Ithra, an Ishmaelite* who had married Abigail, who was Nahash's daughter and the sister of Zeruah, Joab's mother. <sup>26</sup>Israel and Absalom camped in the territory of Gilead.

Absalom's death

18 Then David gathered the troops who were with him and appointed unit commanders over thousands and hundreds. <sup>2</sup>David sent out the army—a third under Joab's command, a third under the command of Abishai, Zeruah's son, and a third under the command of Ittai the Gittite. The king told the troops, "I will march out with you myself."

<sup>3</sup>But the troops replied, "No! You must not march out! If we flee, they won't care about us. Even if half of us die, they won't care about us. But you are worth ten thousand of us. It is much better if you support us from the city."

<sup>4</sup>The king said to them, "I will do whatever you think is best." So the king stood beside the gate as all the troops marched out by hundreds and thousands. <sup>5</sup>The king gave orders to Joab, Abishai, and Ittai: "For my sake, protect my boy Absalom." All the troops heard what the king ordered regarding Absalom to all the commanders.

discovered and almost captured as they try to take the message to David that he must immediately cross the Jordan River. When Ahithophel realized his advice had been rejected, he traveled to his home and hanged himself (17:23). It is impossible not to consider the parallel with Judas, who hanged himself after he had betrayed Jesus, the son of David. Both men had betrayed God's anointed one (cf. Matt 27:5).

18:1-8 David has time and resources to organize for battle. He divides his force into thirds, two led by the loyal warrior brothers Joab and Abishai, who have been with David from the time of Saul onward. The final third is commanded by Ittai the Gittite, whose loyalty was already seen in the retreat from Jerusalem (18:1-2; cf. 2 Sam 15:19-22). The troops won't let David risk himself in battle; he is the prize and if lost would make all efforts vain. David agrees to stay behind and stands at the gate as the troops march out (18:3-4). A crucial element of this story is the final command David gives publicly to his commanders: "For my sake, protect my boy Absalom" (18:5). The battle is joined, and David has had time to gather strength and pick the terrain. Ephraim forest is probably a wooded area in the Transjordan and likely indicates that David wisely avoided the meeting of forces on an open field. The text claims the forest took victims as well as David's men (18:6, 8). The report of the victory for David, and the slaughter of 20,000 men, is revealing: The army of Israel met David's soldiers (18:7). This might suggest that Absalom's forces were new recruits, a people's army, while David's men were professional soldiers serving the royal household. No matter how many men Absalom mustered, they would have been no match for a professional militia led by the seasoned warriors Joab, Abishai, and Ittai.

<sup>11</sup>Joab said to the man who told him, "You saw this? Why didn't you kill him on the spot? I would have given you ten pieces of silver and a belt."

<sup>12</sup>But the man said to Joab, "Even if I had a thousand pieces of silver in my hand, I wouldn't touch the king's son! We heard what the king commanded you, Abishai, and Ittai—'For my sake, take care of my boy Absalom.'<sup>f</sup> <sup>13</sup>If I had taken Absalom's life behind the king's back then—though nothing is hidden from the king—you would have kept your distance from me."<sup>g</sup>

<sup>14</sup>Joab said, "I won't waste time like this with you!" He took three sticks in his hand and drove them into Absalom's chest while he was still alive in the oak. <sup>15</sup>Then ten young armor-bearers of Joab surrounded Absalom, struck him, and killed him. <sup>16</sup>Then Joab sounded the trumpet, and the troops stopped chasing the Israelites, because Joab held them back.

<sup>17</sup>They took Absalom and threw him into a big pit in the forest. They piled over him a huge heap of stones. Meanwhile, all the Israelites fled to their homes. <sup>18</sup>When he was alive, Absalom had raised a large pillar for himself in the King's Valley because he said, "I have no son to carry on the memory of my name." He named the pillar after himself. It is called Absalom's Monument to this day.

David mourns for Absalom

<sup>19</sup>Then Zadok's son Ahimaaz said, "Please let me run and take the news to the king that the LORD has vindicated him against his enemies' power."

<sup>20</sup>Joab said to him, "You aren't the one to bring the news today. You can bring news on another day, but not today, because the king's son is dead." <sup>21</sup>Then Joab said to a Cushite, "Go tell the king what you have seen." The Cushite bowed low before Joab, then ran off.

<sup>22</sup>But Zadok's son Ahimaaz again said to Joab, "I don't care what happens, just let me run after the Cushite too."

"Why do you want to go, son?" Joab asked. "You'll get no reward for going."<sup>h</sup>

So Joab said to him, "Run off then!"

Ahimaaz ran off, going by way of the plain, and passed the Cushite.

<sup>24</sup>Now David was sitting between the two gates. The watchman on duty went up on the roof of the gate by the wall. He looked out and saw a man running alone. <sup>25</sup>The watchman called out and reported this to the king. The king said, "If he's alone, it's good news."

The man got nearer and nearer, <sup>26</sup>and the watchman saw another man running and called down to the gatekeeper, "There's another man running alone."

The king said, "That one must be bringing good news too."

18:9-18 With the battle lost, Absalom tries to escape, but he is caught up in a tree by the lavish hair mentioned earlier in his story (18:9; cf. 2 Sam 14:26). He is discovered hanging there helplessly, and this is reported to Joab by a soldier. Joab demands to know why the soldier didn't kill Absalom, which becomes the occasion to remember David's command not to harm the young man (18:10-13). Joab, always direct, takes matters into his own hands and thrusts three spears through Absalom. His armor-bearers finish the job (18:14-15). They bury Absalom in the forest, and the Israelite army he raised flees home (18:16-17). An aside mentions a monument Absalom erected for himself in Jerusalem in the King's Valley (probably the Kidron Valley; 18:18). This notice undoubtedly contributed to the designation of a later tomb from the Greek period in the Kidron Valley as Absalom's tomb, which can be seen to this day. The mention that Absalom had no sons is puzzling, since three were mentioned earlier (2 Sam 14:27). Perhaps they hadn't survived.

18:19-33 A small drama unfolds over bringing the news to David. Zadok's son Ahimaaz wants to be the runner, but Joab is fearful of what might happen when David hears Absalom is dead. The messenger bringing news of the death of Saul and Jonathan didn't fare so well (2 Sam 1:15-16). Joab sends a Cushite as messenger instead (18:19-21). But Ahimaaz still presses his case to run as well. It is clear that he thinks he has good news to bring of the victory over David's enemies. Joab allows him to run, and he passes the Cushite (18:22-23). The point of view shifts to David, who is waiting for news. The watchman sees first one and then a second runner. David believes it must be good news, and indeed Ahimaaz announces the victory (18:24-28). When David asks concerning Absalom, Ahimaaz claims he doesn't know

"He's a good man," the king said, "and is coming with good news."

<sup>28</sup>Ahimaaz called out to the king, "Peace!" then bowed low before the king, his nose to the ground. He said, "Bless the LORD your God, who has delivered up the men who raised their hands against my master the king."

<sup>29</sup>The king said, "Is my boy Absalom okay?"

Ahimaaz said, "I saw a large crowd right when Joab, the king's servant, sent your servant off, but I don't know what it was about."

<sup>31</sup>Then the Cushite arrived and said, "My master the king: Listen to this good news! The LORD has vindicated you this day against the power of all who rose up against you."

<sup>32</sup>The king said to the Cushite, "Is my boy Absalom okay?"

The Cushite answered, "May the enemies of my master the king and all who rise up against you to hurt you end up like that young man."

<sup>33</sup>The king trembled. He went up to the room over the gate and cried. As he went, he said, "Oh, my son Absalom! Oh, my son! My son Absalom! If only I had died instead of you! Oh, Absalom, my son! My son!"<sup>k</sup>

19Joab was told that the king was crying and mourning Absalom.<sup>2</sup> So the victory that day was turned into mourning for all the troops because they heard that day that the king was grieving for his son. <sup>3</sup>So that day the troops crept back into the city like soldiers creep back ashamed after they've fled from battle. <sup>4</sup>The king covered his face and cried out in a loud voice, "Oh, my son Absalom! Oh, Absalom, my son! My son!"

<sup>5</sup>Joab came to the king inside and said, "Today you have humiliated all your servants who have saved your life today, not to mention the lives of your sons, your daughters, your wives, and your secondary wives, <sup>6</sup>by loving those who hate you and hating those who love you! Today you have announced that the commanders and their soldiers are nothing to you, because I know that if Absalom were alive today and the rest of us dead, that would be perfectly fine with you! <sup>7</sup>Now get up! Go out and encourage your followers! I swear to the LORD that if you don't go out there, not one man will stick with you tonight—and that will be more trouble for you than all the trouble that you've faced from your youth until now."

<sup>8</sup>So the king went and sat down in the city gate. All the troops were told that the king was sitting in the gate, so they came before the king.

David returns to Jerusalem

Meanwhile, the Israelites had fled to their homes. <sup>9</sup>Everyone was arguing throughout Israel's tribes, saying, "The king delivered us from our enemies' power, and he rescued us from the Philistines' power, but now he has fled from the land and from controlling his own kingdom. <sup>10</sup>And Absalom, the one we anointed over us, is dead in battle. So why do you say nothing about bringing the king back?"

(18:29). This is a clear falsehood, since Joab held him back to keep him from announcing Absalom's death. David turns to the Cushite, and when he is asked of Absalom, the Cushite expresses the hope that all of David's enemies might be as that young man, namely, dead (18:30-32). Verse 33 represents one of the most heart-wrenching expressions of grief in all literature. The love and loss of the father is clear and made more tragic because it came too late to save the son.

19:1-8 Absalom is dead, but his impact hasn't ended. David is so overcome by grief that his victorious troops come back into the city as if they are the defeated, and the king doesn't acknowledge them at all but continues to grieve in a loud voice (19:1-4). Joab must once again take direct action. He confronts David, and says that he is acting as if he would rather all of his family and army were dead and Absalom alive. He is loving those who hate him and hating those who love him (19:5-6). He virtually threatens David that if he can't go out and acknowledge his men, then they will all desert him, and his tragedy will be even greater (19:7). So David finally rises and sits in the gate while his troops march through (19:8).

19:9-40 Now begins the difficult journey back home to Jerusalem. It would appear there was some question whether David would return. Finally David sends word to Zadok and Abiathar with a message for the elders of Judah, David's own tribe, to lead the effort to bring him back (19:9-12). In a remarkable gesture of conciliation, my flesh and bones! Why should you be the last to bring the king back?' <sup>13</sup>And tell Amasa, 'Aren't you my flesh and bones too? May God deal harshly with me and worse still if you don't become commander of my army from now on instead of Joab!'"

<sup>14</sup>So he won over the hearts of everyone in Judah as though they were one person, and they sent word to the king: "Come back—you and all your servants." <sup>15</sup>So the king came back and arrived at the Jordan River. Judah came to Gilgal to meet the king and bring him across the Jordan.

Gera's son Shimei fell down before the king when he crossed the Jordan. <sup>19</sup>He said to the king, "May my master not hold me guilty or remember your servant's wrongdoing that day my master the king left Jerusalem. Please forget about it, Your Majesty,<sup>p</sup> <sup>20</sup>because your servant knows that I have sinned. But look, I am the first person from the entire family of Joseph to come down today and meet my master the king."

<sup>22</sup>But David said, "My problems aren't yours, you sons of Zeruiah. Why are you becoming my enemy today? Should anyone in Israel be put to death today? Don't I know that today I am again king over Israel?"

<sup>26</sup>"My master and king," Mephibosheth answered, "my servant abandoned me! Because your servant is lame, I asked my servant, 'Saddle a donkey for me<sup>q</sup> so I can ride and go to the king.' <sup>27</sup>So Ziba has slandered your servant to my master and king, but my master and king is a messenger of God. So do whatever seems best to you. <sup>28</sup>Even though all the members of my grandfather's family were nothing short of demonic<sup>r</sup> toward my master and king, you still put your servant with those who eat at your table. So what right do I have to beg for still more from the king?"

<sup>29</sup>"You don't need to talk any more about this," the king said to him. "I order you and Ziba to divide the property."

<sup>30</sup>Mephibosheth said to the king, "Let him take all of it, since my master and king has come home safely."

David affirms his distant kinship to Amasa, who commanded Absalom's army, offering to make him commander of David's army in place of Joab (19:13). This may speak to the fragility of the political situation and perhaps to the possibility that David has heard of Joab's role in the death of Absalom. Amasa is persuasive, and the elders of Judah come down to meet David as he crosses the Jordan (19:14-15). There follows a parade of persons trying to win favor or mend fences with David. Shimei is mentioned first. He is eager to make things right for the cursing and stone-throwing with which he greeted David's retreat. He brings a thousand Benjaminites to assist David. Once again Abishai wants to kill him, but David will have no bloodshed on this day, and the king swears to Shimei that he won't die (19:16-17a, 18b-23). But political memories are long. On his deathbed David tells Solomon to deal with Shimei in accordance with his offense (1 Kgs 2:8-9); and Solomon has Shimei put to death (1 Kgs 2:36-46). Ziba, the servant of Saul who met David in his retreat from Jerusalem, comes down with sons and servants to assist David (19:17b-18a); but this time Mephibosheth comes down to speak for himself (19:24-28). He claims that Ziba left him, even though he ordered a donkey saddled for himself to join the king. Since he was lame, he couldn't do this for himself and claims Ziba has slandered him. David won't argue the matter. He divides all the property (which he had given now to Ziba; 2 Sam 16:1-4) between the two (19:29). He won't try to determine innocence or guilt but generously provides for both. In his own act of generosity, Mephibosheth declares that Ziba can take it all, since the

<sup>38</sup>The king said, "Okay. Chimham will cross over with me, and I will treat him as I<sup>a</sup> think best. And I will do for you anything you desire from me."

<sup>41</sup>Then everyone in Israel came and said to the king, "Why did our relatives the people of Judah steal you away, and bring the king and his household across the Jordan River, along with all of his soldiers?"

<sup>42</sup>Then all the people of Judah answered the Israelites, "Because the king is our relative! Why are you angry at us about this? Have we taken any of the king's food? Has he given us any gifts?"

<sup>43</sup>But the Israelites answered the people of Judah, "We have ten shares in the monarchy! What's more, we are the oldest offspring, not you!‡ So why have you disrespected us? Weren't we the first to talk about bringing back our king?"

But the words of the people of Judah were even harsher than the words of the Israelites.¶

Sheba's rebellion

20 Now a despicable man named Sheba, Bichri's son, from Benjamin, was also there. He sounded the trumpet and said:

"We don't care about David!

We have no stake in Jesse's son!

Go back to your homes, Israel!"

<sup>3</sup>When David arrived at his palace in Jerusalem, the king took the ten secondary wives he had left to take care of the palace and put them in a house under guard. He provided for them, but he didn't have sex with them. They were confined until the day they died, and lived like widows.

<sup>4</sup>Then the king said to Amasa, "Call everyone in Judah here to me three days from now. You should be here too." <sup>5</sup>So Amasa went to call Judah together, but he took longer than the allotted time.

<sup>6</sup>David told Abishai, "Bichri's son Sheba will cause more trouble for us than Absalom did. Take your master's servants and chase after him before he finds fortified cities and escapes king has returned safely (19:30). This speaks well for him, and we don't know what happened in the matter. There is a lengthy farewell between David and Barzillai, an old friend and ally of David who aided and provisioned David in the Transjordan (19:31-38). Barzillai refuses David's offer to bring him into the court in Jerusalem and wishes to die in his hometown, but he begs a place with David for Chimham, probably his son.

19:41-43 As David and his escorts cross the Jordan headed for Jerusalem, a dispute breaks out between the men of Israel and the men of Judah. The Israelites dislike the initiative taken by the men of Judah. The men of Judah claim the right of kinship to David. The men of Israel counter that they are 10 tribes, and older among the tribes. There is no result but many harsh words. We are seeing seeds of discord that will eventually divide the kingdom (see 1 Kg 12).

20:1-13 A man named Sheba, described as despicable, decides to take advantage of the discord between the men of Israel and Judah as they cross the Jordan River, and he declares no interest in David. Most of the men of Israel seem to have followed him, although the men of Judah stayed to escort David all the way to Jerusalem (20:1-2). When David arrives in Jerusalem, he sets aside from us.”<sup>7</sup> So Joab’s men marched out after Sheba—this included the Cherethites, the Pelethites, and all the warriors. They marched out of Jerusalem to pursue Bichri’s son Sheba.

<sup>8</sup>When they got to the great stone in Gibeon, Amasa came to meet them. Joab was dressed in his soldier’s uniform. Over the tunic at his waist he wore a sword in its sheath. As Joab went forward it slipped out.

<sup>9</sup>“How are you, my brother?” Joab asked Amasa, and with his right hand he took hold of Amasa’s beard as if to kiss him. <sup>10</sup>But Amasa didn’t notice the sword in Joab’s hand. Joab struck him in the stomach with it so that Amasa’s intestines spilled out on the ground. He died without Joab striking him a second time. Then Joab and his brother Abishai pursued Sheba, Bichri’s son.

<sup>17</sup>So Joab approached her, and the woman said, “Are you Joab?”

“I am,” he answered.

“Pay close attention to the words of your female servant,” she said.

“I’m listening,” Joab replied.

<sup>18</sup>She said, “People used to say long ago: ‘Ask your question at Abel,’ and that settled the matter. <sup>19</sup>I am one of the peaceful and faithful in Israel, but you are trying to kill a city that is one of Israel’s mothers! Why would you annihilate the LORD’s inheritance?”

<sup>20</sup>Joab answered, “I would never, ever annihilate or destroy such a thing! <sup>21</sup>That’s not the issue. A man named Sheba, Bichri’s son, who is from the Ephraim highlands, has rebelled against King David. Just hand him over, and I’ll leave the city alone.”

The woman said to Joab, “His head will be thrown over the wall to you!”

David’s officials

the 10 secondary wives with whom Absalom had sex, and although he provides for them, they live like widows for the rest of their days (20:3). But David now has another rebellion to put down, and as usual, Joab has his own scores to settle. David first asks Amasa (Absalom’s general) to assemble the men of Judah to pursue Sheba, but he is slow arriving with his men, so David sends Joab and his own personal warriors after him (20:4-7). At Gibeon, Amasa catches up with Joab and his men, and Joab goes forward to greet him but drops his sword. When he rises as if to embrace Amasa in greeting, he brings up the sword and slashes open Amasa’s abdomen (20:8-10). Clearly, Joab regards Amasa as a traitor to David, and his way of taking care of the matter parallels how he took care of Abner, Saul’s general (2 Sam 3:27). Amasa’s body in the road distracts the passing troops until they move it and cover it with a robe (20:11-13).

20:14-22 Sheba’s end is shameful and disappointing. He takes refuge in a city called Abel of Beth-maacah, with a reputation as a place to seek wisdom. When Joab and his men begin to lay siege to the city, a wise woman asks to talk with Joab. She refers to the city as one of Israel’s mothers, and appeals to Joab not to destroy it (20:18-19). He in turn makes clear that he seeks only the rebel Sheba, and if Sheba is handed over, that will end the matter (20:20-21). The wise woman goes further and says that Sheba’s head will be thrown over the wall. This grotesque act indeed ends the matter (20:22).

Avenge the Gibeonites

21 There was a famine for three years in a row during David's rule. David asked the LORD about this, and the LORD said, "It is caused by Saul and his household, who are guilty of bloodshed because he killed the people of Gibeon."<sup>2</sup> So the king called for the Gibeonites and spoke to them.

(Now the Gibeonites weren't Israelites but were survivors of the Amorites. The Israelites had sworn a solemn pledge to spare them, but Saul tried to eliminate them in his enthusiasm for the people of Israel and Judah.)

<sup>3</sup>David said to the Gibeonites, "What can I do for you? How can I fix matters so you can benefit from the LORD's inheritance?"

<sup>4</sup>The Gibeonites said to him, "We don't want any silver or gold from Saul or his family, and it isn't our right to have anyone in Israel killed."

"What do you want?"<sup>7</sup> David asked. "I'll do it for you."

<sup>5</sup>"Okay then," they said to the king. "That man who opposed and oppressed<sup>8</sup> us, who planned to destroy us, keeping us from having a place to live anywhere in Israel—<sup>6</sup>hand over seven of his sons to us, and we will hang them before the LORD at Gibeon<sup>9</sup> on the LORD's mountain."

"I will hand them over," the king said.

<sup>7</sup>But the king spared Mephibosheth, Jonathan's son and Saul's grandson, because of the LORD's solemn pledge that was between them—between David and Saul's son Jonathan. <sup>8</sup>So the king took the two sons of Aiah's daughter Rizpah, Armoni and Mephibosheth, whom she had birthed for Saul; and the five sons of Saul's daughter Merab,<sup>b</sup> whom she birthed for Adriel, Barzillai's son, who was from Meholah, <sup>9</sup>and he handed them over to the Gibeonites. They hanged them on the mountain before the LORD. The seven of them died at the same time. They were executed in the first days of the harvest, at the beginning of the barley harvest.

<sup>10</sup>Aiah's daughter Rizpah took funeral clothing and spread it out by herself on a rock. She stayed there from the beginning of the harvest until the rains poured down on the bodies from the sky, and she wouldn't let any birds of prey land on the bodies during the day or let wild animals come at nighttime. <sup>11</sup>When David was told what Aiah's daughter Rizpah, Saul's secondary wife, had done, <sup>12</sup>he went and retrieved the bones of Saul and his son Jonathan from the citizens of Jabesh-gilead, who had stolen the bones from the public square in Bethshan, where the Philistines had hanged them on the day the Philistines killed Saul at Gilboa. <sup>13</sup>David brought the bones of Saul and his son Jonathan from there and collected the bones of the men who had been hanged by the Gibeonites. <sup>14</sup>The bones of Saul and his son Jonathan were then buried in Zela, in Benjaminite territory, in the tomb of Saul's father Kish. Once everything the king had commanded was done, God responded to prayers for the land.

War with the Philistines

<sup>15</sup>Once again war broke out between the Philistines and Israel. David and the soldiers who were with him went down and fought the Philistines. When David grew tired, <sup>16</sup>Ishbi-benob,

21:1-14 This narrative tells how a claim of bloodguilt against the house of Saul led to the execution of Saul's remaining sons. Readers are divided over whether this is a politically calculated act on the part of David or a series of events reflecting an ancient understanding of how guilt is purged. There is a famine in the land, and God reveals the cause of it to David as bloodguilt for Saul's attempt to wipe out the Gibeonites (21:1-2). The Gibeonites were non-Israelites who made a covenant with Joshua when Israel entered the land, and they later become temple servants from Solomon onward (Josh 9:3-27). We don't know anything of such an attempt by Saul against the Gibeonites, but the Gibeonites in this story seem to believe they have been wronged. To make things right, the Gibeonites demand the death of seven of Saul's offspring, actually his grandsons (21:5-9). David hands them over, and they are hanged. He spares Mephibosheth, Jonathan's son, because of his solemn pledge to Jonathan (21:7). One of Saul's daughters, and the mother of two of the hanged men, was named Rizpah. She maintained watch night and day, and wouldn't let birds or wild animals disturb the bodies (21:10). Her story shows the courage and resolve of a mother's love. When David hears of this, he takes sweeping action. He not only gathers the bodies of the hanged men but he brings the bones of Saul and Jonathan from Jabesh-gilead, where they had been buried after being rescued from the Philistine walls of Beth-shan (1 Sam 31). He gives all of these men from the house of Saul an honored burial in the tomb of Saul's father, Kish (21:11-14). After all this bloodshed, God gives relief from the famine. Is this a calculated act by David? These grandsons of Saul don't seem to have constituted much of a threat. Was it the Gibeonites who insisted on such bloody justice? We have no record of these events or of Saul's retaliation against the Gibeonites. 21:15-22 These verses tell of four of David's warriors who kill four Philistine giants in battle. After the first of these a descendant of the Raphah,<sup>c</sup> planned on killing David.<sup>d</sup> The weight of his spear was three hundred shekels of bronze, and he was wearing new armor. <sup>17</sup>But Zeruiah's son Abishai came to David's aid, striking the Philistine down and killing him. Then David's men swore a solemn pledge to him: "You will never march out to battle with us again! You must not snuff out Israel's lamp!"

The LORD is my solid rock, my fortress, my rescuer.

<sup>3</sup>My God is my rock—I take refuge in him!—

he's my shield and my salvation's strength, my place of safety and my shelter.

My savior! Save me from violence!

death's traps held me tight.

<sup>7</sup>In my distress I cried out to the LORD;
I cried out to my God.

God heard my voice from his temple;
my cry for help reached his ears.

battles, the warriors insist that David is too valuable to come into the field with them, and he isn't involved in the other three heroic deeds (21:17). The only other noteworthy element here is that Elhanan from Bethlehem, David's town, is reported to have killed a giant named Goliath (21:19). Some readers have wondered if David's adventure against Goliath is really historically Elhanan's deed, or if Elhanan is another name by which David is known. The Chronicler even makes the giant killed by Elhanan a brother of Goliath (1 Chron 20:5).

22:1-51 This is a royal thanksgiving psalm attributed to David when God had given him rest from all his enemies and from the hand of Saul. It is a near duplicate of Psalm 18. By standing near the end of the books of Samuel, it serves with the Song of Hannah in 1 Samuel 2:1-10 as a bracket around the story of kingship in Israel and David's story. Together these songs express the confidence that God's reality is the true source of Israel's life, and even the king depends on the sovereignty and grace of God to secure the future for Israel. This psalm falls into three parts. 22:1-20 The first part is a thanksgiving for deliverance. As a royal psalm, the voice behind the first person pronouns is the king. In this section of the psalm, the king appeals to God for help in times of distress: I cried out... God heard. What follows is a portrait of God powerful enough to face all chaotic forces and destructive powers. The appearance of God (called a theophany) is described using images of power in the natural world: earthquake, wind, fire, storm, lightning, and thunder (22:8-16). Then there is a rush of verbs indicating deliverance: God

- 10 God parted the skies and came down;
thick darkness was beneath his feet.
- 11 God mounted the heavenly creatures and flew;
he was seen on the wind's wings.
- 12 God made darkness his covering;
water gathered in dense clouds!
- 13 Coals of fire blazed out of the brightness before him.
- 14 The LORD thundered from heaven;
the Most High made his voice heard.
- 15 God shot arrows, scattering the enemy;
he sent the lightning and whipped them into confusion.
- 16 The seabeds were exposed;
the earth's foundations were laid bare at the LORD's rebuke, at the angry blast of air coming from his nostrils.
- 17 From on high God reached down and grabbed me;
he took me out of deep waters.
- 18 God saved me from my powerful enemy, saved me from my foes, who were too much for me.
- 19 They came at me on the very day of my distress, but the LORD was my support.
- 20 He brought me out to wide-open spaces;
he pulled me out, because he is pleased with me.
- 21 The LORD rewarded me for my righteousness;
he restored me because my hands are clean,
22 because I have kept the LORD's ways.
I haven't acted wickedly against my God.
- 23 All his rules are right in front of me;
I haven't turned away from any of his laws.
- 24 I have lived with integrity before him;
I've kept myself from wrongdoing.
- 25 And so the LORD restored me for my righteousness, because I am clean in his eyes.
- 26 You deal faithfully with the faithful;
you show integrity toward the one who has integrity.
- 27 You are pure toward the pure,
but toward the crooked, you are tricky.
- 28 You are the one who saves people who suffer, but your eyes are against the proud.
You bring them down!
- 29 You are my lamp, LORD;
the LORD illumines my darkness.
- 30 With you I can charge into battle;
with my God I can leap over a wall.
- 31 God! His way is perfect;
the LORD's word is tried and true.
He is a shield for all who take refuge in him.

reached down...grabbed me...took me out...saved me... brought me out... pulled me out (22:17-20).

22:21-28 The second part of this psalm suggests that God responds favorably to moral virtue, in this case the king's. The LORD rewarded me for my righteousness; he restored me because my hands are clean: This picture of David is a bit hard to reconcile with the king we have seen since 2 Samuel 11. The theme of the king's righteousness and obedience as the source of God's blessing doesn't ring true at this point in the books of Samuel. But it is expressing the desired ideal, and it implies a curse for disobedience.

22:29-51 In section three of this psalm, we may come closest to the truth of the David we have seen in the books of Samuel, both at his best and at his worst. Here statements by the king about his own gifts and skills are coupled with statements acknowledging God as the source and power behind those gifts (With you I can charge into battle; 22:30). The entire section is a mix of praise for God's power, guidance, direction, and empowerment, along with a genuine delight in the deeds that the king can do as leader, warrior, and king. The final section moves toward praise (22:47) and thanks (22:50) of God, to the conclusion of the entire

- 32 Now really, who is divine except the LORD?
And who is a rock except our God?
- 33 Only God! My mighty fortress,

34 who makes my step<sup>2</sup> as sure as the deer's, who lets me stand securely on the heights, 35 who trains my hands for war
so my arms can bend a bronze bow.
- 36 You've given me the shield of your salvation;
your help has made me great.
- 37 You've let me walk fast and safe, without even twisting an ankle.
- 38 I chased my enemies and destroyed them!
I didn't come home until I finished them off.
- 39 I ate them up! I struck them down!
They couldn't get up;
they fell under my feet.
- 40 You equipped me with strength for war;
you brought my adversaries down underneath me.
- 41 You made my enemies turn tail from me;
I destroyed my foes.
- 42 They looked around, but there was no one to save them.
They looked to the LORD, but he wouldn't answer them.
- 43 I crushed them like dust on the ground;
I stomped on them, trampled them like mud dumped in the streets.
- 44 You delivered me from struggles with many people;
you appointed me the leader of many nations.
Strangers come to serve me.
- 45 Foreigners grovel before me;
after hearing about me, they obey me.
- 46 Foreigners lose their nerve;
they come trembling out of their fortresses.<sup>1</sup>
- 47 The LORD lives! Bless God, my rock!
Let my God, the rock of my salvation, be lifted high!
- 48 This is the God who avenges on my behalf, who subdues peoples before me,
49 who rescues me from my enemies.
You lifted me high above my adversaries;
you delivered me from violent people.
- 50 That's why I thank you, LORD, in the presence of the nations.
That's why I sing praises to your name.
- 51 You are the one who gives great victories to your king, who shows faithful love to your anointed one—to David and to his descendants forever.

David's warriors

<sup>9</sup>Next in command was Eleazar, Dodo's son and Ahohi's grandson. He was among the three warriors with David when they insulted the Philistines who had gathered there for battle. The Israelites retreated,<sup>10</sup> but he stood his ground and fought the Philistines until his hand was weary and stuck to the sword. But the LORD accomplished a great victory that day. The troops then returned to Eleazar, but only to plunder the dead.

<sup>17</sup>"The LORD forbid that I should do that," he said. "Isn't this the blood of men who risked their lives?" So he refused to drink it.

These were the kinds of things the three warriors did.

royal theology shines through this song. The king must rule rightly... in the fear of God (23:3). But then God's eternal covenant is affirmed (23:5), and God will empower the king to overcome enemies and overcome dangers (23:6-7). The covenant commitment of God here is firm but conditional. The king must rule justly and fear God. The covenant is never canceled, but the challenges and dangers facing the king can't be met with the full power of God if the king is out of harmony with God's intentions for the king's moral rule. This seems like a concluding lesson from what David has learned in the final years of his life.

23:8-39 This section is a collection of small bits of information and memories of mighty feats by the men closest to David, especially in his earliest years. Most of the heroic deeds involve the Philistines as enemies. There seem to be two informal structures to these warriors surrounding David: the Three, mentioned in 23:8, 9, 13, 23; and the Thirty, mentioned in 23:18, 23, 24. The Three seem to be

Three. <sup>19</sup>He was the most famous of the Thirty.<sup>a</sup> He became their commander, but he wasn't among the Three.

Asahel, Joab's brother;
Elhanan, Dodo's son from Bethlehem;

Elika from Harod;

David's census

24 The LORD burned with anger against Israel again, and he incited David against them: Go and count the people of Israel and Judah.

those who risked their lives to bring David a drink of water from the well in Philistine-occupied Bethlehem, but David then poured it on the ground as an offering too precious to drink because they had risked their own blood for it (23:14-17). Some of these figures have played significant roles in the earlier stories in 1 and 2 Samuel. Abishai is Joab's brother and appears often in David's story (23:18). Benaiah eventually becomes commander of David's own personal body guard (23:23) and will be one of Solomon's key supporters in 1 Kings 1-2. In the listing of the Thirty at the end of this section, there are 37, because not all have survived. Indeed, the very first name in 23:24 is Asahel, the brother of Joab and Abishai, whose death at the hands of Abner was avenged by Joab in 2 Samuel 2:18-23. It is remarkable that Joab himself is never listed. And it is ironic that the final name listed is Uriah the Hittite, Bathsheba's husband. These lists then remind the reader of both David's glory and David's folly.

24:1-10 This final story in the books of Samuel begins in a troubling way. God is already angry with Israel, and

<sup>3</sup>Joab said to the king, "May the LORD your God increase the number of people a hundred times while the eyes of my master the king can still see it! But why does my master the king want to do this?"

<sup>10</sup>But after this David felt terrible that he had counted the people. David said to the LORD, "I have sinned greatly in what I have done. Now, LORD, please take away the guilt of your servant because I have done something very foolish."

<sup>11</sup>When David got up the next morning, the LORD's word came to the prophet Gad, David's seer: <sup>12</sup>Go and tell David, This is what the LORD says: I'm offering you three punishments. Choose one of them, and that is what I will do to you.

<sup>13</sup>So Gad went to David and said to him, "Will three<sup>d</sup> years of famine come on your land? Or will you run from your enemies for three months while they chase you? Or will there be three days of plague in your land? Decide now what answer I should take back to the one who sent me."

<sup>14</sup>"I'm in deep trouble," David said to Gad. "Let's fall into the LORD's hands because his mercy is great, but don't let me fall into human hands."

<sup>15</sup>So the LORD sent a plague on Israel from that very morning until the allotted time. Seventy thousand people died, from Dan to Beer-sheba. <sup>16</sup>But when the divine messenger stretched out his hand to destroy Jerusalem, the LORD regretted doing this disaster and said to the messenger who was destroying the people, "That's enough! Withdraw your hand." At that time the LORD's messenger was by the threshing floor of Araunah from Jebus.

<sup>17</sup>When David saw the messenger who was striking down the people, he said, "I'm the one who sinned! I'm the one who has done wrong. But these sheep—what have they done wrong? Turn your hand against me and my household."

we don't know the reason. Further, God causes David to do something that is later in the story regarded as sinful: namely, to take a census of the people in the kingdom (24:1). It isn't clear that David realizes that his desire to take this census comes from God; he simply orders Joab and his military commanders to carry it out. Later, David confesses this to be a sinful act for which he stands guilty (24:10). The Chronicler is later so concerned that God caused David to commit a sinful act that he associates the cause with the Adversary (the Satan, 1 Chron 21:1; cf. Job 1). Why would a census be a sinful act? Why would it require military power to carry it out? Indeed, Joab questions the wisdom of such a census but is overruled by David (24:3-4). It is carried out with great thoroughness throughout the land, and it requires nine months and twenty days (24:5-8). We begin to understand the gravity of such a census only when Joab makes his report to David: 800,000 men who can carry a sword in Israel and 500,000 in Judah (24:9). Such a census provides the basis for a military draft. Later, under Solomon, it provides the basis for a forced labor draft and for taxation. It is the beginning of centralization and a move away from tribal autonomy. Israel is starting to behave "like the other nations," as Samuel had warned in 1 Samuel 8. To David's credit, he realizes that what he has done is sinful and confesses that sin in 24:10.

24:11-17 God responds to David's confession of guilt by sending a prophet, but it isn't Nathan. It's a new prophet in our story, Gad, and strangely, God sends him to offer David his choice of three punishments (24:11-13). They are the dreaded three: three years of famine, three months of war, or three days of disease. David says he would rather be at the mercy of God's hand than of human enemies, so that rules out the war option (24:14). Apparently God makes the final choice because a plague falls on Israel and 70,000 people die. Yet David seems to have wisely relied on the mercy of God, because as the divine messenger extends the hand of plague toward Jerusalem, God declares, "That's enough! Withdraw your hand" (24:15-16). David utters a second confession of sin, and offers that the plague should fall on him and his household rather than further on Israel (24:17).

<sup>20</sup>Araunah looked up and saw the king and his servants approaching him. Araunah rushed out and bowed low before the king, his nose to the ground. <sup>21</sup>Araunah said, "Why has my master and king come to his servant?"

David said, "To buy this threshing floor from you to build an altar to the LORD, so the plague among the people may come to an end."

<sup>22</sup>Then Araunah said to David, "Take it for yourself, and may my master the king do what he thinks is best. Here are oxen for the entirely burned offering, and here are threshing boards and oxen yokes for wood. <sup>23</sup>All this, Your Majesty, Araunah gives to the king." Then he added, "May the LORD your God respond favorably to you!"

<sup>24</sup>"No," the king said to Araunah. "I will buy them from you at a fair price. I won't offer up to the LORD my God entirely burned offerings that cost me nothing." So David bought the threshing floor and the oxen for fifty shekels of silver. <sup>25</sup>David built an altar there for the LORD and offered entirely burned offerings and well-being sacrifices. The LORD responded to the prayers for the land, and the plague against Israel came to an end.

24:18-25 The prophet Gad comes again to David and sends him to build an altar to the Lord on the threshing floor of Araunah, a Jebusite (24:18). This is where the messenger of the plague had stopped in heading for Jerusalem (24:16). As the king approaches, Araunah goes out to meet him in respect, and David offers to buy the threshing floor for an altar to the Lord, but Araunah wishes to give it and his oxen for the sacrifice as a gift (24:20-23). David refuses, saying he can't offer to God sacrifices that cost him nothing, so he pays 50 shekels of silver for it and makes the entirely burned offering to the Lord. The offering is accepted, and the plague comes to an end (24:24-25). David's confession is now achieved through worship, and the gift of God's mercy is received. In 1 Chronicles 22:1, David declares the Jebusite threshing floor as the future site for a temple and even begins gathering materials, although it will be Solomon who builds it. It is fitting that the books of Samuel end with a prayerful petition in time of need that is met by God's merciful response, because that is the way 1 Samuel opened, with the prayerful petition of Hannah in a time of need that was met by God's merciful response. We have read many stories of human struggles, human gifts, human sin and confession, but beneath it all God's providence was consistently at work. The David who ends the story is the David of weakness, prayer, confession, and trust in God. This is the leadership God desires.

1 KINGS

The books of 1 and 2 Kings were originally one book. The division into two books probably occurred in the 2nd century BCE when the OT was translated into Greek. In the Jewish scriptures the books of Kings form a single narrative that begins with Israel's King David on his deathbed (approximately 971 BCE) and ends with Jehoiachin, Judah's last king, being released from prison in Babylon (560 BCE). These books present Israel's story from the greatness of David and his son Solomon to the tragic destruction of the two kingdoms formed after Solomon's death (Israel in the north and Judah in the south). The books of Kings fall into three main sections: the reign of Solomon (1 Kgs 1:1–11:43), the divided monarchy (1 Kgs 12:1–2 Kgs 17:41), and the kingdom of Judah from Hezekiah to the destruction of Jerusalem to the release of Jehoiachin from prison (2 Kgs 18:1–25:30).

The historian, who gathers material from ancient sources and creates a flowing narrative about Israel's past, also offers a theological interpretation of that past based on the themes of the book of Deuteronomy. The books of Kings don't present an unbiased perspective on Israel's history. They are interested, rather, in presenting an account of the past that assigns responsibility for events.

On the one hand, 1 and 2 Kings may be classified as historical books. On the other hand, as reflected in the Jewish scriptures, they can be linked to the collection of books called the Prophets. The books of Kings present a prophetic view of Israel's history. The prophets Elijah, Elisha, and Isaiah are prominent characters in the history. And the fulfillment of the prophetic word is a major theme that runs through both books.

The writer of Kings had access to written and oral sources. These included the "official records" of Solomon (1 Kgs 11:41), of Israel's kings (mentioned 18 times beginning with Jeroboam in 1 Kgs 14:19), and of Judah's kings (mentioned 15 times beginning with Rehoboam in 1 Kgs 14:29). The author also drew on stories about the royal court (David and Solomon in particular) and the prophets (Elijah, Elisha, and Isaiah). The author ties these stories together by using formulaic introductions and conclusions to each king's reign and interspersing events with theological explanations and interpretations.

In many places the use of theological vocabulary in the books of Kings is similar to expressions found in the book of Deuteronomy. The historian's interpretation of Israel's past is based, in large part, on the theological vision of Deuteronomy. For example, David's final speech to Solomon (1 Kgs 2:1-4) echoes various texts in Deuteronomy (Deut 4:29; 6:2; 8:6; 9:5; 11:1). Similar echoes of Deuteronomy's wording and themes occur throughout the books of Kings (see the notes). Israel's and Judah's kings will be evaluated on their faithfulness to the Instruction (Torah) from God (Deut 17:14-20). The author criticizes kings and people alike for neglecting their exclusive loyalty to God, for worshipping other gods, and for not obeying God's Instruction. The consequence of exile, for Israel and Judah, is already anticipated in Deuteronomy (Deut 4:25-27; 29:20-21, 36, 49, 63-64; 29:24-28; 30:17-18).

Such connections reveal that the author was steeped in the thought world if not the actual text of Deuteronomy. Many modern interpreters of Kings hold the view that the historical books of Joshua, Judges, Samuel, and Kings belong to one tradition or school of historical writing, which has come to be called the Deuteronomistic History. The author of the books of Kings is unknown. Based on the latest events recorded in 2 Kings, the author must be living either in exile in Babylon or in Jerusalem in the post-exilic era. It could be that these books emerged over an extended period of time, during which court archivists and historians preserved and composed parts of the story. Some scholars think that the later kings Hezekiah and Josiah may have been responsible for sponsoring editions of the history. Writers during or immediately after their reigns would have been responsible for the glowing praise of these kings. Of Josiah, for example, the author affirms: "There's never been a king like Josiah, whether before or after him, who turned to the LORD with all his heart, all his being, and all his strength, in agreement with everything in the Instruction from Moses" (2 Kgs 23:25; cf. Deut 6:4-6; and on Hezekiah, see 2 Kgs 18:5).

The final edition of Kings most likely depends on earlier editions of the book. One such edition may end exactly at that point where the author praises Josiah. The next verses, however, affirm that, in the light of covenant violations prior to Josiah's time, Judah will experience exile just as Israel did (2 Kgs 23:26-27). The final edition wants to provide a reason for the exile not only of Israel but especially of Judah. In particular, the historian wants to account for the destruction of Jerusalem, a city that God has chosen (2 Kgs 23:27). The end of the books of Kings presents readers with the release from prison of Judah's last Davidic king. Perhaps the historian is suggesting that God hasn't forgotten the promises to David of a "dynasty" and a "throne" that will be "established forever" (2 Sam 7:16).

The historian provides several reasons for the downfall and exile of Israel: (1) idolatry, which was begun by Jeroboam I and committed by every king until Assyria conquered and exiled Israel (1 Kgs 12:26-33; 2 Kgs 17:7-41; see sidebar, "Idolatry" at 1 Kgs 11); (2) failure to listen to and obey the words of the prophets (2 Kgs 17:12-14); and (3) failure to live by the Instruction from Moses (see the summary in 2 Kgs 18:12). Judah's downfall occurred because Judah's kings, for the most part, failed to follow David's example. As seen in the reign of King Manasseh, they practiced idolatry, imitated the practices of the earlier inhabitants of the land, and committed excessive violence (2 Kgs 21:1-23). Only three kings of Judah are praised: Asa (1 Kgs 15:11-15), Hezekiah (2 Kgs 18:5-6), and Josiah (2 Kgs 23:24-25). David is the standard for all the kings of Judah. He is the one who most fully obeyed God's Instruction (1 Kgs 3:3, 14; 9:4; 11:4, 6, 33; 15:3, 11; 2 Kgs 14:3; 16:2; 18:3; 22:2). Although Israel (the northern kingdom) takes up a good part of the story, the king named most often throughout both books is David. His name appears 90 times between 1 Kings 1:1 and the evaluation of King Josiah (2 Kgs 22:2). Although God acts with patience and a measure of grace for Israelite kings, it is for the sake of David that God acts most decisively on Judah's behalf (1 Kgs 11:12-13, 32-34; 2 Kgs 8:19; 19:34).

The books of Kings are grounded in two convictions: (1) God is the chief actor in creation, among the nations, and in the life of God's people. God expressed God's intentions and expectations through Moses (in the divine instruction scroll) and through the prophets. (2) Israel's and Judah's kings, along with their people, are responsible for their subjugation by the empires and exile into foreign lands. God's people have violated their exclusive commitment to God, have worshipped other gods, have imitated the practices of the peoples around them, and have failed to attend to the words of Moses and the prophets.

By beginning with those assumptions, the books of Kings seem to be an extended answer to the rhetorical question posed by the nations and answered by the narrator in Deuteronomy: "Why did the LORD do this to this land?" (Deut 29:24). "It was because those people abandoned the covenant of the LORD, their ancestors' God" (Deut 29:25). Kings also makes explicit the destruction assumed in Deuteronomy (Deut 4:25-28). Yet it leaves open and ambiguous how hope might be imagined after destruction and exile. Perhaps readers of Kings must return to Deuteronomy to find the solution: "Return to the LORD your God and you will obey his voice, because the LORD your God is a compassionate God. He won't let you go, he won't destroy you, and he won't forget the covenant that he swore to your ancestors" (Deut 4:30-31; cf. Deut 30:1-10).

David and Abishag

1 King David had become very old. His servants covered him with blankets, but he couldn't stay warm. 2They said to him, "Allow us to find a young woman for our master the king. She will serve the king and take care of him by lying beside our master the king and keeping him warm." 3So they looked in every corner of Israel until they found Abishag from Shunem. They brought her to the king. 4She was very beautiful. She cared for the king and served him, but the king didn't have sex with her.

Adonijah's rebellion

5Adonijah, Haggith's son, bragged about himself and said, "I'll rule as king myself." He got his own chariot and horses with fifty runners to go in front. 6Now Adonijah's father had never given him direction; he never questioned why Adonijah did what he did. He was very handsome and was born after Absalom. 7He took advice from Joab, Zeruiah's son, and from the priest Abiathar. They assisted Adonijah. 8But Zadok the priest, Jehoiada's son Benaiah, the prophet Nathan, Shimei and his friends, and David's veterans didn't join Adonijah. 9So Adonijah prepared lamb, oxen, and fattened cattle at the Stone of Zoheleth, next to Enrogel. He invited his brothers (the royal princes) and all the citizens of Judah who were the royal servants to come. 10But he didn't invite the prophet Nathan, Benaiah, David's veterans, or his brother Solomon.

1:1–2:46 The narrator introduces the story of Solomon's rise to power with a comment about King David's old age. David ruled for 40 years, beginning at age 30 (2 Sam 5:3–4) and dying at 70 (either 1005–965 or 1000–960 BCE). But now David's power has diminished, which sets the stage for the power struggle that follows in these two chapters. Adonijah, one of David's sons, makes a bid for the throne. Through the intervention of Bathsheba, one of David's wives, Solomon ends up on the throne of Israel. Not only that, but Solomon makes sure there is no foothold left for rivals to challenge his rule. The story ends with a summary that confirms for the reader what these chapters aim to communicate: Solomon is heir to David's throne.

1:1–4 Although David is the main character, he is no longer the capable leader he once was. He is old, frail, and bedridden. He plays no role as a public figure. The story begins with a premonition of his impending death, which is reported in 1 Kings 2:10. The scene presented here symbolizes his political weakness. The problem is that David can't keep warm. The solution of finding a young woman attendant to lie beside him for warmth is likely a euphemism, a way of speaking about sexual arousal. Unfortunately, the beautiful young woman lying beside him doesn't arouse him sexually. His impotence (in more ways than one) opens the door to Adonijah's bid for the throne (1 Kgs 1:5).

1:2 young woman: The woman is of marriageable age, likely a virgin (cf. Judg 21:12; Esth 2:3). The request is odd. One of his several wives could have warmed him. serve... lying beside: Even though the Hebrew words translated here are used elsewhere in contexts of sexual intimacy (Lev 18:23; Gen 16:5; 2 Sam 12:8; Mic 7:5), it is possible to understand this young woman's role simply as an attendant. The ambiguity may be deliberate.

1:3 every corner of Israel: The exaggerated search highlights the comedy of the situation (cf. a similar extensive search in Esth 2:2–3). Shunem: in northern Israel at the western end of the Jezreel Valley (mentioned in 2 Kgs 4:8).

1:4 Words are repeated here from 1 Kings 1:2: beautiful... cared for... served. The Hebrew verb "to know" is translated here as have sex. It appears in Genesis 4:1, where it is translated "knew... intimately." That David didn't have sex with her suggests either that the young woman was simply an attendant, or that David was impotent. This second option may be implied by Adonijah's political aspiration and his request for Abishag as his wife (see note on 1 Kgs 2:17).

1:5–53 The story of Adonijah's unsuccessful claim to the kingship ends with his bowing in submission to Solomon. 1:5–10 Adonijah plots to usurp the throne of his father David. He gathers his own trusted advisors and prepares a celebratory feast.

1:5 Adonijah: His name means "my lord is Jah," a reference to the divine name. He is the fourth of David's six sons born in Hebron (2 Sam 3:2–5). Amnon and Absalom have already died (2 Sam 13:28–29; 18:14–15). The third son, Chileab, is presumed to be dead. He isn't mentioned after 2 Samuel 3. Although there is no tradition of royal inheritance in the OT, Adonijah and his advisors act as though he is the rightful heir. Haggith: one of David's wives (2 Sam 3:4). The books of Kings often mention the name of the king's mother (e.g., 1 Kgs 14:21; 15:2). chariot and horses: an echo of Absalom's rebellion (2 Sam 15:1).

1:6 Adonijah's father: Referring to David this way may imply a distant or even neglectful relationship with his son (cf. 2 Sam 13:21; 14:24). From Absalom's story, it seems as though David also neglected his royal duties (2 Sam 15:4). handsome: Physical appearance is important in the descriptions of Joseph (Gen 39:6), Saul (1 Sam 9:2), David (1 Sam 16:12), and Absalom (2 Sam 14:25–26).

1:7 Adonijah's advisors (cf. 2 Sam 20:23–26). Joab: commander of David's army from David's early years as king (2 Sam 2–3). He killed Absalom and claimed that he was protecting David (2 Sam 18:9–18; 19:5–8). Abiathar: a priest who joined David's ranks after Saul's massacre of priests at Nob (1 Sam 22:20–23; 23:6, 9; 30:7). He was a descendant of Eli, who was priest at Shiloh (1 Sam 1:3). He was one of two prominent priests during David's reign (2 Sam 8:17; 20:25). See also 1 Kings 2:27.

1:8–10 Setting the stage for a coronation. These verses begin and end with a list of those not invited: David's loyal advisors. Zadok: Son of Ahitub and a descendant of Moses' brother Aaron (Num 20:28), he was a priest during David's reign (2 Sam 8:17; 20:25). Zadok and Abiathar: key figures in 2 Samuel 17–20. Benaiah: strongman and commander of David's special forces (2 Sam 20:20–23; see

<sup>11</sup>Nathan said to Bathsheba, Solomon's mother, "Did you hear that Adonijah, Haggith's son, has become king, but our master David doesn't know about it? <sup>12</sup>Let me give you some advice on how you and your son Solomon can survive this. <sup>13</sup>Go to King David and say, 'Didn't my master the king swear to your servant, "Your son Solomon will certainly rule after me. He will sit on my throne"? Why then has Adonijah become king?' <sup>14</sup>While you are speaking there with the king, I'll come along and support your words."

The king asked, "What do you want?"

<sup>17</sup>She said to him, "Your Majesty, you swore by the LORD your God to your servant, 'Your son Solomon will certainly rule after me. He will sit on my throne.' <sup>18</sup>But now, look, Adonijah has become king, and my master the king doesn't know about it. <sup>19</sup>He has prepared large quantities of oxen, fattened cattle, and lamb. He has invited all the royal princes as well as Abiathar the priest and Joab the general. However, he didn't invite your servant Solomon. <sup>20</sup>As for you, my master the king, the eyes of all Israel are upon you to tell them who will follow you on the throne of my master the king. <sup>21</sup>When my master the king lies down with his ancestors, then I and my son Solomon will become outlaws."

<sup>22</sup>While she was still speaking with the king, the prophet Nathan arrived. <sup>23</sup>The king was informed, "The prophet Nathan is here." Then Nathan came in before the king and bowed his face to the ground. <sup>24</sup>He said, "My master the king, you must have said, 'Adonijah will become king after me and will sit on my throne.' <sup>25</sup>Indeed, today he went down and prepared oxen, fattened cattle, and lamb in large numbers. He invited all the royal princes, the generals, and Abiathar the priest. They are eating and drinking with him, and they said, 'Long live King Adonijah!' <sup>26</sup>Adonijah didn't invite me, your servant, Zadok the priest, Jehoiada's son Benaiah, or your servant Solomon. <sup>27</sup>If this message was from my master the king, you didn't make it known to your servant. Who should follow you on the throne of my master the king?"

1 Kgs 1:38). Nathan: identified in 1 Kings 1:10 as a prophet. He first appears in David's story in 2 Samuel 7, where he announces that God will make David's "name great" and will found a "dynasty" for him (2 Sam 7:9, 11). He also promises that one of David's children will succeed him on the throne, one who will "build a temple for my name" (2 Sam 7:12-13). Although a supporter, he doesn't hesitate to challenge David about his affair with Bathsheba (2 Sam 12). Shimei: one of David's opponents (2 Sam 16:5-14). veterans: "fighting men" or "warriors." En-roget: en means "spring." The place is a short distance southeast of Jerusalem (2 Sam 17:17; cf. Josh 15:7; 18:16). The Stone of Zoheleth: was a sacred spot (zoheleth: meaning uncertain; perhaps "serpent"). Solomon: named for the first time in the book. This is telling, especially since his brothers (the royal princes), along with the royal servants, were invited. The author clearly identifies Adonijah's rival.

1:11-40 The scene shifts. Nathan the prophet takes charge and together with Bathsheba foils the plot to put Adonijah on the throne.

1:11-12 Bathsheba: David took her as his wife after having sex with her and having her husband, Uriah, killed (2 Sam 11). doesn't know: The expression echoes the wordplay in 1 Kings 1:4, where the Hebrew expression "did not know" is translated "didn't have sex." David is unaware in more ways than one. His loss of power is the reason for the plot to take over the throne. The turn of events is tragic, since David's reputation was of one who "knows everything... in the land" (2 Sam 14:20). advice... survive: The prophet acts as a political advisor, since the situation is a matter of life and death. Both David and Bathsheba would likely be killed if Adonijah's plot were to succeed.

1:13-14 Nathan hatches his own plot. His advice to Bathsheba doesn't reflect anything David has said earlier in 2 Samuel. Later in the story, Nathan seems not to know about this promise (1 Kgs 1:24-27), yet David's words to Bathsheba appear to confirm an earlier promise to her (1 Kgs 1:29-30). In other words, Nathan is setting David up to confirm Solomon's succession to the throne.

1:15 Repetition of details from 1 Kings 1 reflects an age-old storytelling technique.

1:18 doesn't know: See note on 1 Kings 1:11.

1:19-21 Bathsheba speaks as though Adonijah's kingship has already been established. After repeating details from 1 Kings 1:8-10, Bathsheba appeals to David's popularity (eyes of all Israel) and to the danger that she and Solomon face should Adonijah become king. lies down with his ancestors: the ancient Israelite way of speaking about death that is used throughout Kings and Chronicles (e.g., 1 Kgs 2:10; 11:21).

1:22-27 The scene shifts. Bathsheba leaves as Nathan enters. After bowing down (an act of reverence; cf. 1 Kgs 1:16), Nathan plays a trick on David by suggesting that he must have authorized Adonijah's actions (cf. 1 Kgs 1:13, 17). "Long live King Adonijah!": For dramatic effect, he repeats details of the story (cf. 1 Kgs 1:10, 19) and reports the crowd's response. your servant: Nathan sets the stage for the main question by wondering out loud why David hasn't let Nathan know of his intentions. Nathan frames his question to assure a quick and decisive response.

1:28-31 Bathsheba returns. as surely as the LORD lives: a Hebrew solemn pledge that highlights the seriousness of what David is about to say. His clarity of expression and his decisive action (today, 1:30) imply that David hasn't lost his every trouble, <sup>30</sup>regarding what I swore to you by the LORD, Israel's God, 'Your son Solomon will certainly succeed me; he will sit on the throne after me'—I'll see that it happens today."

<sup>31</sup>Bathsheba bowed down with her face to the ground. She honored the king and said, "May my master King David live forever!"

<sup>32</sup>King David said, "Bring me Zadok the priest, the prophet Nathan, and Benaiah, Jehoiada's son." They came to the king, <sup>33</sup>who said to them, "Take with you the servants of your masters. Put my son Solomon on my mule and bring him down to Gihon. <sup>34</sup>There Zadok the priest and the prophet Nathan will anoint him king over Israel. Blow the ram's horn and say, 'Long live King Solomon!' <sup>35</sup>You will follow him. He will enter and sit on my throne, and so he will succeed me as king. I have appointed him to become ruler over Israel and Judah."

<sup>36</sup>Benaiah, Jehoiada's son, responded to the king, "Yes, may it happen as the LORD, the God of my king, says. <sup>37</sup>Just as the LORD was with my master the king, so may he be with Solomon. May his throne be even greater than the throne of my master King David." <sup>38</sup>Zadok the priest, the prophet Nathan, Jehoiada's son Benaiah, and the Cherethites and the Pelethites went down and put Solomon on King David's mule. They led him to Gihon. <sup>39</sup>Zadok the priest took the horn of oil from the tent and anointed Solomon. They blew the ram's horn, and all the people said, "Long live King Solomon!" <sup>40</sup>All the people followed him playing flutes and celebrating. The ground shook at their noise.

<sup>41</sup>Adonijah and all his invited guests heard this when they had finished eating. When Joab heard the sound of the ram's horn, he said, "What's that noise coming from the city?"

Adonijah said, "Come on in! You are an honest man and will bring a good report."

<sup>45</sup>Zadok the priest and the prophet Nathan have anointed him king at Gihon. They went up from there celebrating so that the city was thrown into a commotion. That is the sound you heard. <sup>46</sup>There's more: Solomon has taken over the throne of the kingdom. <sup>47</sup>The royal attendants blessed our master King David: 'May your God make Solomon's name better than your name. May God elevate his throne above your throne.'

The king then worshipped on his bed <sup>48</sup>and said, "Bless Israel's God, the LORD, who today has set my son* on my throne, and has allowed my eyes to see it."

<sup>50</sup>Adonijah was afraid of Solomon, so he got up and went to grab hold of the horns of the mind. Bathsheba's response is a traditional response to royalty; she isn't literally wishing him a long life.

*Heb lacks my son; other versions have it or something similar.

1:32-40 David takes action immediately by calling together his advisors—those excluded by Adonijah—and declaring Solomon king.

1:33 my mule: By having Solomon ride David's mule the writer indicates that Solomon is David's chosen one (see 1 Kgs 1:44). The mule is a symbol of royalty (Zech 9:9; cf. Matt 21:1-11). Gihon: a spring just outside the city wall to the east in the Kidron Valley (also in 1 Kgs 1:38).

1:34-35 anoint: a symbolic action of pouring olive oil on the head of the person chosen as king (cf. 1 Sam 10:1; 16:12-13). ram's horn: a traditional instrument sounded for military or public announcements. A similar announcement was made at Absalom's attempted revolt (2 Sam 15:10). as king: These verses use two words for "king." Verse 35 uses a word for king that indicates God's special choice, selected by a prophet (cf. 1 Sam 13:14; 2 Sam 6:21; 7:8). The range of Solomon's authority will include Israel and Judah (cf. 1 Kgs 11:42), a significant note since David had first reigned from Hebron only over Judah (2 Sam 2:11; 1 Kgs 2:11). This may also be a premonition of a split in the future (cf. 1 Kgs 12).

1:38 Cherethites... Pelethites: David's special forces, possibly a personal guard (2 Sam 8:18; 15:18; 20:7, 23). Their names suggest non-Israelite groups, perhaps originally from Crete (sometimes called Sea Peoples) and related to the Philistines. 1:39-40 oil... horn... "Long live King Solomon!": typical events surrounding the rise to kingship (cf. 2 Kgs 9:13). All the people: The story makes it clear that this is a very public event affirmed by the entire population (cf. "all Israel" in 1 Kgs 11:42).

1:41-49 The scene changes to Adonijah's court at en-Rogel, from where they could hear the commotion in the city (see note on 1 Kgs 1:8-10).

1:42 Jonathan: the one who also reported Absalom's rebellion to David (2 Sam 15:36; 17:17-21). good report: In the spirit of the event, Adonijah can't imagine anything but good news.

1:43 Our master King David: Jonathan begins his report carefully, aligning himself publicly on David's side.

1:47-48 He ends his report by letting Adonijah know details of what was said in the ceremony for Solomon (cf. 1 Kgs 1:37), adding information about David's personal response to the proceedings.

1:49-50 The response from Adonijah and his guests is predictable. horns of the altar: raised stones at the four corners of an altar (Exod 27:2; 29:12; Ps 118:27; cf. Exod 21:12-14).

altar. <sup>51</sup>Solomon was told, "Look! Adonijah is afraid of King Solomon and has grabbed the horns of the altar. He's saying, 'King Solomon must swear to me first that he won't execute his servant with the sword.'"

<sup>52</sup>Solomon said, "If he shows himself to be an honorable person, then not a hair of his head will be harmed. But if any evil is found in him, he will die." <sup>53</sup>King Solomon sent word and had him brought down from the altar. He came and bowed down to King Solomon. Solomon said to him, "Go home!"

David's last words

2 David's time was coming to an end. So he commanded Solomon his son, <sup>2</sup>"I'm following the path that the whole earth takes. Be strong and be a man. <sup>3</sup>Guard what is owed to the LORD your God, walking in his ways and observing his laws, his commands, his judgments, and his testimonies, just as it is written in the Instruction from Moses. In this way you will succeed in whatever you do and wherever you go. <sup>4</sup>So also the LORD will confirm the word he spoke to me: 'If your children will take care to walk before me faithfully, with all their heart and all their being, then one of your own children will never fail to be on the throne of Israel.' <sup>5</sup>You should know what Joab, Zeruiah's son, has done to me and what he did to the two generals of Israel, Abner, Ner's son, and Amasa, Jether's son. He murdered them, spilling blood at peacetime and putting the blood of war on the belt around his waist and on the sandals on his feet. <sup>6</sup>So act wisely: Don't allow him to die a peaceful death. <sup>7</sup>As for Barzillai's sons from Gilead, show them kindness. Let them eat with you. When I was running away from your brother Absalom, they came to me. <sup>8</sup>Now as for this Shimei, Gera's son—a Benjaminite from Bahurim—who is with you, he cursed me viciously when I went to Mahanaim. When he came down to meet me at the Jordan, I swore to him by the LORD, 'Surely I won't execute you with the sword.' <sup>9</sup>But you don't need to excuse him. You are wise and know what to do to him. Give him a violent death."

<sup>10</sup>Then David lay down with his ancestors and was buried in David's City. <sup>11</sup>He ruled over Israel forty years—seven years in Hebron and thirty-three years in Jerusalem.

Those claiming innocence in criminal cases could claim sanctuary this way. It reflects a common ancient practice of seeking asylum at a shrine, a practice that continues today. 1:51-53 his servant: Adonijah gives in to David's authority; he has lost his bid for the kingship. But his ploy—asylum at the altar—provides him with an opportunity to ask for a pardon. Solomon grants it conditionally on good behavior. not a hair . . . harmed: a traditional saying expressing a guarantee of safety (1 Sam 14:45; 2 Sam 14:11). evil: a generic term used here to refer to political threat (cf. 1 Kgs 2:44).

2:1-9 David, on realizing his death is near, presents his charge to Solomon.

2:2 Be strong and be a man: David's words here and in the next verse echo God's words to Joshua at his commissioning to leadership after the death of Moses (Josh 1:6-9, 18; cf. Deut 31:7, 23). Both Joshua and Solomon are instructed in the same way to be faithful to God.

2:3 In naming the conditions of faithfulness to God, David provides a long list of terms used in the OT to refer to teachings that have their source in God: laws, commands, judgments, and testimonies. walking: a characteristic way of describing the moral life in God's presence (Gen 17:1; Deut 10:12; 11:1; 28:9; Josh 22:5; Ps 19:7-9). According to Deuteronomy, future kings were to read and obey the Instruction from Moses (Deut 17:9-10), which likely refers here to some form of the book of Deuteronomy (see also 2 Kgs 14:6; 22:8, 11; 23:25; cf. Deut 4:44; 29:21; 30:10; 31:26; 24:26; Josh 1:8; 8:31-32, 34; 23:6; 24:26). succeed: the same word as in Joshua 1:8. The requirement of faithfulness to God's instruction manual confirms the parallel between Joshua and Solomon. Where Joshua succeeds (Josh 24:15), Solomon, in spite of his great wisdom, fails (1 Kgs 11).

2:4 God's commitment to Solomon is also conditional for future generations of David's descendants. walk: See 1 Kings 2:3. all their heart . . . being: a combination that occurs nine times in the book of Deuteronomy (e.g. Deut 4:29; 6:5; 10:12) and in other places in the history (Josh 22:5; 1 Kgs 8:48; 2 Kgs 23:3, 25). The author of Kings draws on this traditional language, which is sometimes called "Deuteronomistic," because it is characteristic of the book of Deuteronomy. The conditional promise stands in some tension with God's unconditional promise (2 Sam 7:11-16; cf. 2 Sam 23:5; 1 Kgs 8:25; Ps 89:19-37; Jer 33:17).

2:5-9 Retributive justice, or getting even, is a prominent theme in the David story. Here, as in 2 Samuel, the theme highlights David's innocence in the violence that accompanies his rise to power. The verb "to know" appears again, this time implying clarity (1 Kgs 2:5; cf. 1 Kgs 1:11, 18). Joab . . . Abner . . . Amasa: Compare with 2 Samuel 3:26-39; 20:8-10; see note on 1 Kings 1:7. On the political intrigue surrounding Abner, see 2 Samuel 3:6-25. Amasa: See 2 Samuel 17:25; 19:11-15; 20:4-10. Joab's death will clear David's reputation (see 1 Kgs 2:31-34). Barzillai supported David (2 Sam 17:27-29; 19:31-40), whereas Shimei cursed David during Absalom's uprising (2 Sam 16:5-14; 19:21-23). act wisely . . . You are wise: 1 Kings 2:6, 9 imply political shrewdness and skill, a prominent theme in 1 Kings 3:1-28; 4:29-34; 10:1-13. kindness: a political word signifying loyalty. The instructions to Solomon have a political motivation: to smooth the way for successful transition to Solomon's kingship by eliminating opponents (cf. 1 Kgs 1:7) and partisan efforts that might hinder Solomon's rule over a united Israel (cf. 2 Sam 2:1-11; 1 Kgs 1:35).

Solomon secures his throne

<sup>13</sup>Adonijah, Haggith's son, went to Bathsheba, Solomon's mother. She said, "Are you coming in peace?"
He said, "Yes. <sup>14</sup>I have something to say to you."
She said, "Say it."
<sup>15</sup>He said, "You know how the kingdom was mine. All Israel had appointed me as their king. Then suddenly the kingdom went to my brother as the LORD willed. <sup>16</sup>Now I have just one request of you. Don't refuse me!"

She said to him, "Go on."

<sup>19</sup>So Bathsheba went to King Solomon to talk with him about Adonijah. The king stood up to meet her and bowed low to her. Then he returned to his throne and had a throne set up for the queen mother. She sat to his right. <sup>20</sup>She said, "I have just one small request for you. Don't refuse me."

The king said to her, "Mother, ask me. I won't refuse you."
<sup>22</sup>King Solomon replied to his mother, "Why ask only for Abishag from Shunem for Adonijah? Why not ask for the entire kingdom for him? After all, he is my older brother and has the support of Abiathar the priest and Joab, Zeruiah's son." <sup>23</sup>King Solomon swore by the LORD, "May God do to me as he sees fit! Adonijah has made this request at the cost of his life! <sup>24</sup>Now, as surely as the LORD lives—the one who supported me, put me on the throne of my father David, and provided a royal house for me exactly as he promised—Adonijah will be executed today." <sup>25</sup>So King Solomon sent Benaiah, Jehoiada's son. He attacked Adonijah, and Adonijah died.

<sup>26</sup>The king said to the priest Abiathar, "Go to your fields at Anathoth, because you are a condemned man. However, I won't kill you today because you carried the LORD's chest in front of my father David and because you shared in all my father's sufferings." <sup>27</sup>So Solomon expelled Abiathar from the LORD's priesthood in order to fulfill the LORD's word that was spoken against Eli's family at Shiloh.

<sup>28</sup>Now the news reached Joab because he had supported Adonijah, though he hadn't supported Absalom. Joab ran to the LORD's tent and grabbed the horns of the altar. <sup>29</sup>King Solomon was told that Joab had fled to the LORD's tent and was now beside the altar. So Solomon sent Benaiah, Jehoiada's son, instructing him, "Go. Attack Joab!"

<sup>30</sup>Benaiah came to the LORD's tent and said to Joab, "The king says, 'Come out!'"
Joab said, "No! I'd rather die here."

Benaiah sent a report back to the king: "This is what Joab said and how he answered me."
<sup>31</sup>The king said to him, "Do as he said. Attack him and then bury him. In doing this, you

1:19-21. David's City: the small Jebusite fortress that David conquered (2 Sam 5:7, 9; 1 Kgs 3:1). forty years: Compare with 1 Kings 11:42; he died in approximately 960 BCE. The number sometimes reflects a round number representing a generation (cf. Israel's 40 years in the wilderness). Hebron: Compare with 2 Samuel 2:1-4, 11.

2:12-46 well established: This section is tied together by a common theme, marked by the repetition of the same Hebrew verb for "establish" in 2:24 (supported) and 2:45-46 (be secure and handed over). See also 2 Samuel 5:12; 7:12, 13, 16. The story that follows describes how Solomon asserted his power against ongoing threats.

2:13-17 Behind Adonijah's request for Abishag is a thinly disguised plot to grasp the throne. Abishag belongs to the king's harem (For Absalom's similar action, cf. 2 Sam 16:20-22).

2:22-25 Solomon sees through the request, sentences Adonijah to death, and simply assumes Abiathar's and Joab's involvement in the plot. Benaiah: See note on

1 Kings 1:8; 2:7. royal house... promised: Compare with 2 Samuel 7:11-16; 23:5; 1 Kings 1:48; 2:4.

2:26-27 Abiathar: See note on 1 Kings 1:7. carried the LORD's chest: See 2 Samuel 15:24; see note on 1 Kings 3:15. Because of Abiathar's loyalty to David, Solomon banishes Abiathar to Anathoth, a Levitical city north of Jerusalem (Josh 21:18). the LORD's word: According to the author, David's action fulfills the prophecy against Eli, the priest at Shiloh (1 Sam 2:27-36; 3:10-14). This is the first of many occurrences of the fulfillment theme in the books of Kings. See sidebar, "Fulfillment of the Prophetic Word."

2:28-35 Solomon begins to follow through on David's instructions for retributive justice (see 1 Kgs 2:5-6). horns of the altar: See note on 1 Kings 1:50. guilt... innocent blood... bloodguilt: Compare with 2 Samuel 3:28; 20:10. David didn't think of Joab as innocent, and the altar couldn't therefore protect him (cf. Exod 21:12-14). Verse 35 summarizes the new political arrangements, with Benaiah

Fulfillment of the Prophetic Word According to the historian, God is active in history through the word of the prophets. This theme, it is often said, is reflected in a prophecy-fulfillment pattern in Kings. The story as a whole, however, isn't so much interested in prophecy as prediction as it is in asserting that God, not the king or any other human being, is the primary actor in the life of God's people and the nations. Events occur because they have been directed by the Lord's word (cf. 2 Kgs 10:10). Yet the author isn't naive about how God directs human affairs. Human beings, especially kings, are responsible for their actions and suffer the consequences when they make choices opposed to the purposes of God given through Moses and the prophets (cf. 2 Kgs 17:13). The prophets desire for all people, Israel and the nations, to acknowledge and worship God alone (cf. 1 Kgs 8:43, 60; 18:37; 20:13, 28; 2 Kgs 5:15; 19:19).

Throughout the books of Kings, the historian shows how events are announced and then unfold at the initiative of the prophetic word:

will remove from me and from my father's royal house the guilt over the innocent blood that Joab shed. <sup>32</sup>May the LORD return that bloodguilt back on his own head for attacking the two men who were better and more righteous than he was. He murdered those two with the sword: Abner, Ner's son and Israel's general, and Amasa, Jether's son and Judah's general. But my father David didn't know about it. <sup>33</sup>May the bloodguilt for their deaths return on Joab's head and on the head of his family line forever. But may the LORD's peace be on David, his family, and his royal house forever." <sup>34</sup>So Benaiah, Jehoiada's son, went and attacked Joab and killed him.

Joab was buried at his home in the wilderness. <sup>35</sup>In his place, the king gave leadership of the army to Benaiah, Jehoiada's son. The king put the priest Zadok in Abiathar's position. <sup>36</sup>Then he sent for Shimei and said, "Build a house for yourself in Jerusalem and stay in the city. Don't leave to go anywhere else. <sup>37</sup>If you try to leave, be advised that on the day you cross the Kidron Valley you will most certainly die. Your bloodguilt will be on your own head."

<sup>38</sup>Shimei said to the king, "This is a good idea. Your servant will do just what my master the king said." So Shimei stayed in Jerusalem for a long time.

<sup>42</sup>The king sent for Shimei and asked him, "Didn't I make you swear a solemn pledge by the LORD? And didn't I swear to you, 'If you try to leave and go anywhere, be advised that on in charge of the army and Zadok over the religious affairs (making him the "trustworthy priest" of 1 Sam 2:35).

2:32 David didn't know: See 1 Kings 1:11, 18.

2:36-46 Solomon acts on David's second suggestion for retributive justice. Shimei: See note on 1 Kings 2:8-9. Solomon's solution is clever, and not particularly wise (see 1 Kgs 2:6, 9). He appears to spare Shimei's life, but makes him agree to an almost impossible promise of never leaving Jerusalem (1 Kgs 2:36, 42).

2:37 Kidron Valley: to the east of Jerusalem between the city and the Mount of Olives. bloodguilt: Compare with 1 Kings 2:31-33.

2:39 Gath: one of the Philistine cities to which David had fled from Saul (1 Sam 21:10-15; 27:1-7).

that very day you will most certainly die'? You said to me, "This is a good idea. I agree to it."<sup>43</sup>Why didn't you keep your solemn promise to the LORD and the command that I gave you?"<sup>44</sup>The king said further, "You know quite well all the evil that you did to my father David. May the LORD return your evil on your own head."<sup>45</sup>However, may King Solomon be blessed and David's throne be secure before the LORD forever."<sup>46</sup>Then the king commanded Benaiah, Jehoiada's son, who went and attacked Shimei, and he died.

In these ways royal power was handed over to Solomon.

Solomon first meets God

3 Solomon became the son-in-law of Pharaoh, Egypt's king, when he married Pharaoh's daughter. He brought her to David's City until he finished building his royal palace, the LORD's temple, and the wall around Jerusalem.<sup>2</sup>Unfortunately, the people were sacrificing at the shrines because a temple hadn't yet been built for the LORD's name in those days.<sup>3</sup>Now Solomon loved the LORD by walking in the laws of his father David, with the exception that he also sacrificed and burned incense at the shrines.

<sup>4</sup>The king went to the great shrine at Gibeon in order to sacrifice there. He used to offer a thousand entirely burned offerings on that altar.<sup>5</sup>The LORD appeared to Solomon at Gibeon in a dream at night. God said, "Ask whatever you wish, and I'll give it to you."

<sup>6</sup>Solomon responded, "You showed so much kindness to your servant my father David when he walked before you in truth, righteousness, and with a heart true to you. You've kept this great loyalty and kindness for him and have now given him a son to sit on his throne.<sup>7</sup>And now, LORD my God, you have made me, your servant, king in my father David's place. But I'm young and inexperienced. I know next to nothing.<sup>8</sup>But I'm here, your servant, in the middle of the people you have chosen, a large population that can't be numbered or counted due to its vast size.<sup>9</sup>Please give your servant a discerning mind in order to govern your people and to distinguish good from evil, because no one is able to govern this important people of yours without your help."

2:44 all the evil . . . your evil: Solomon refers here to Shimei's political commitments. The word evil implies a political threat, a condition that Solomon had set out earlier concerning Adonijah (1 Kgs 1:52).

2:45 blessed: Solomon's final words counteract Shimei's original curse against David (2 Sam 16:5-14; 19:21-23).

2:46 In an echo of 1 Kings 2:12, 24, the author confirms that by killing or banishing opponents, Solomon has secured his hold on power. And by appealing to the principle of retributive justice (they got what they deserved), Solomon also appears innocent of wrongful action.

3:1-28 Two "firsts" for Solomon: the first encounter with God and the first demonstration of his extraordinary wisdom. This chapter begins a sequence of stories about Solomon's reign (1 Kgs 3:1-11:43) that demonstrate both his wisdom and his folly.

3:1-3 An introduction that sets the stage for topics that will be addressed later in the book: Solomon's strategic political alliances through marriage and the ambiguities of his worship practices (1 Kgs 11), as well as his building projects (1 Kgs 7-8). These verses seem to foreshadow Solomon's demise.

3:1 Pharaoh's daughter: Compare with Deuteronomy's warnings about relationships with Egypt and intermarriage (Deut 7:3-4; 17:16). This political marriage among others would be in the opinion of the author contribute to his ultimate failure as king of Israel (1 Kgs 11:3-4). David's city: Compare with 2 Samuel 5:7-9.

3:2-3 shrines: Before the construction of the temple, Israelites worshipped at many such raised or hilltop shrines (e.g., 1 Sam 9:12). Deuteronomy prohibits worship at those shrines because they represent worship practices of the indigenous peoples (Deut 12:2-7). Although 1

Kings 3:2 seems to account for such practices because the temple was not yet built, 1 Kings 3:3 implies a negative evaluation of Solomon for the same practice (yet the next verses describe the Lord appearing to Solomon in a dream at one such shrine). temple . . . the LORD's name: The temple as a place for God's name is a common theme in Deuteronomy (Deut 12:5; 14:23; 16:2, 11). See sidebar, "Temple and Name" at 1 Kings 8. loved the LORD by walking in the laws: The verb "walk" means "to live by" or "to follow." The sense here is that Solomon demonstrates his love for God by imitating David's faithfulness (cf. 1 Kgs 2:3). Even so, the author of the books of Kings notes many times that worship at such shrines was one of the main causes of the downfall not only of Solomon (1 Kgs 11:7-8) but also of Israel and Judah (1 Kgs 12:28-31; 22:43; 2 Kgs 12:3; 14:4; 15:4, 35; 16:4; 21:3-9).

3:4-15 Solomon's dream at Gibeon, a major worship site northwest of Jerusalem.

3:5 dream: God met others in their dreams (e.g., Gen 20:3; 28:10-22; 31:11, 24; 37:5).

3:6-9 much kindness . . . great loyalty and kindness: Solomon recognizes God's commitment to David, and now to him, by twice repeating a political idiom for covenant loyalty in 3:6. Compare with the same terms in God's promise to David in 2 Samuel 7:15, there translated "faithful love." Solomon recognizes his own limitations and asks for a discerning mind . . . to distinguish good from evil. Governance and administration are his concerns; God's help is his need. good and evil: Compare with similar expressions in Genesis 2:9, 17; 3:5, 22. Use of this language here implies that the author depicts Solomon symbolically as a "new Adam." A wise woman from Tekoa used these terms in appealing to David's capacity for making wise choices (2 Sam 14:17).

<sup>10</sup>It pleased the LORD that Solomon had made this request. <sup>11</sup>God said to him, “Because you have asked for this instead of requesting long life, wealth, or victory over your enemies—asking for discernment so as to acquire good judgment—<sup>12</sup>I will now do just what you said. Look, I hereby give you a wise and understanding mind. There has been no one like you before now, nor will there be anyone like you afterward. <sup>13</sup>I now also give you what you didn’t ask for: wealth and fame. There won’t be a king like you as long as you live. <sup>14</sup>And if you walk in my ways and obey my laws and commands, just as your father David did, then I will give you a very long life.”

<sup>15</sup>Solomon awoke and realized it was a dream. He went to Jerusalem and stood before the chest containing the LORD’s covenant. Then he offered entirely burned offerings and well-being sacrifices, and held a celebration for all his servants.

Solomon and the prostitutes

<sup>16</sup>Sometime later, two prostitutes came and stood before the king. <sup>17</sup>One of them said, “Please, Your Majesty, listen: This woman and I have been living in the same house. I gave birth while she was there. <sup>18</sup>This woman gave birth three days after I did. We stayed together. Apart from the two of us, there was no one else in the house. <sup>19</sup>This woman’s son died one night when she rolled over him. <sup>20</sup>She got up in the middle of the night and took my son from my side while I was asleep. She laid him on her chest and laid her dead son on mine. <sup>21</sup>When I got up in the morning to nurse my son, he was dead! But when I looked more closely in the daylight, it turned out that it wasn’t my son—not the baby I had birthed.”

<sup>22</sup>The other woman said, “No! My son is alive! Your son is the dead one.”

But the first woman objected, “No! Your son is dead! My son is alive!” In this way they argued back and forth in front of the king.

<sup>23</sup>The king said, “This one says, ‘My son is alive and your son is dead.’ The other one says, ‘No! Your son is dead and my son is alive.’ <sup>24</sup>Get me a sword!” They brought a sword to the king. <sup>25</sup>Then the king said, “Cut the living child in two! Give half to one woman and half to the other woman.”

<sup>26</sup>Then the woman whose son was still alive said to the king, “Please, Your Majesty, give her the living child; please don’t kill him,” for she had great love for her son.

But the other woman said, “If I can’t have him, neither will you. Cut the child in half.”

<sup>28</sup>All Israel heard about the judgment that the king made. Their respect for the king grew because they saw that God’s wisdom was in him so he could execute justice.

Solomon’s administration

4 King Solomon became king of all Israel.

<sup>3:10-14</sup> In response, God grants Solomon four gifts, more than he asked for. no one like you: The author describes Hezekiah and Josiah similarly (2 Kgs 18:5; 23:25). Each of the three is exemplary in his own way: Solomon for wisdom, Hezekiah for profound trust in God, and Josiah for obedience to God’s Instruction scroll. walk . . . your father David: God echoes David’s words (1 Kgs 2:3). This is the first of many references in the books of Kings to David as a standard against which to evaluate future kings (e.g., 1 Kgs 15:3, 11; 2 Kgs 14:3; 22:2). See sidebar, “David as Example” at 1 Kings 9.

<sup>3:15</sup> chest . . . covenant: both the place of meeting God and the container holding the Ten Commandments, the covenant manifesto of Israel (Exod 25:16, 22). burned offerings and well-being sacrifices: Solomon does what he came to do (1 Kgs 3:4). For descriptions of such acts of worship in God’s presence, see Exodus 29:38-46; Leviticus 1-3. celebration: According to Deuteronomy, such offerings were to be enjoyed in feasting (Deut 12:12, 17-18).

his God-given ability to exercise his “wise and understanding mind” (1 Kgs 3:9, 12). The story highlights the great potential for good use of this gift. As the story unfolds from here, readers will discover how Solomon fares.

<sup>3:24-26</sup> Solomon’s solution is risky, but it forces the imposter to reveal herself in her foolish response. The real mother identifies herself in her willingness to give up her child that he might live. Earlier, Solomon’s use of the sword served his political ends; this time the sword represents appropriate discernment of good from evil.

<sup>3:28</sup> All Israel: In the light of the division of the kingdom in 722 BCE (2 Kgs 11-12), this expression of a united Israel is important for the author (see 1 Kgs 4:1). It occurs 23 times in 1 and 2 Samuel, 17 times in 1 Kings, and only once in 2 Kings. wisdom . . . justice: Recognition of Solomon’s ability aligns him with God’s desire for caring for the marginal and those needing wrongs set right (cf. Deut 10:18; 16:18-20, where “justice” is translated “righteousness”; Mic 6:8).

Ben-hur in the highlands of Ephraim;

<sup>13</sup>Ben-geber in Ramoth-gilead, who controlled the villages of Jair, Manasseh's son, which were in Gilead, and who had the Argob region that was in Bashan—sixty large walled cities with bronze bars;

<sup>19</sup>Geber, Uri's son, in the land of Gilead, the land of the Amorite king Sihon and of King Og of Bashan;

and there was a single officer who was in the land of Judah.<sup>b</sup>

been preserved in the royal archives (cf. 1 Kgs 11:41). Including them here illustrates both the grandeur and the expansiveness of Solomon's kingdom and highlights his administrative skill. On the other hand, they also invite the reader to reflect on how Solomon's reign runs the risk of violating Deuteronomy's restrictions on kings (Deut 17:14-20) and corresponds to Samuel's warnings (1 Sam 8:11-18). The lists are divided into court officials (4:2-6) and imperial administrators (4:7-19).

4:2-6 officials: These are administrators of the royal court. Three priests are mentioned. Abiathar: either (1) he was banished from Solomon's inner circle (1 Kgs 2:26-27), but he continued to serve as priest; or (2) the list originates from a time before his banishment. son: may also mean "descendant" (e.g., Azariah was the grandson of Zadok in 1 Chron 6:8). scribes... recorder: in charge of keeping official records (archivists) and writing letters or making public announcements (2 Sam 8:16; 20:24). Benaiah: See 1 Kings 1:8, 38; 2:25. royal friend: a personal advisor (2 Sam 15:37). work gangs: the term is used to describe Israel's slavery in Egypt (Exod 1:11; cf. Deut 20:11). It won't become clear until later who made up these work gangs (1 Kgs 5:13-16; 9:15, 20-21).

4:7-19 Solomon's twelve officers are responsible for "tax collection," here described as providing food and supplies for the royal court (see also 1 Kgs 4:27-28). The districts don't correspond to the 12 tribal areas identified in Joshua 13-19, even though some of those tribes are named in this list. Solomon may have wanted to impose his own organizational structure on his kingdom.

4:19. See translation note b. Four options: (1) It could be that the Greek translation of 1 Kings added of Judah because this area was conspicuously absent from the administrative districts. (2) The first word of 1 Kings 4:20 belongs to the end of 4:19. (3) The second occurrence of "Judah" was omitted because the eye of a copyist skipped to "and Israel" (1 Kgs 4:20) accidentally. (4) It could be that Solomon deliberately omitted Judah from his collection because it was his own tribe. This would solidify his power in Jerusalem, which was located in Judah.

4:20 An idealistic and celebratory view of Solomon's empire. Judah and Israel: corresponds to the "all Israel" of 1 Kings 4:1 (cf. also 1 Kgs 4:25). Here, however, the reader is reminded that the unity of Israel and Judah under one king in Jerusalem ought not to be taken for granted (see note on 1 Kgs 1:34-35). numerous... sand alongside the sea: Although an idiom for "a great number," the words here may echo a fulfillment of the promises in the ancestral stories (Gen 22:17; 32:12).

4:21-34 Solomon, the nations, and the kings of the earth. This section presents an expansive, impressive, and extravagant picture of Solomon's kingdom and his reputation among world leaders.

4:21-24 Euphrates... border of Egypt: the range of Solomon's empire, territories to the northeast as far as the Euphrates River and to the southwest including the coastal areas as far as the Egyptian border (cf. 1 Kgs 4:24; Gen 15:18; Deut 1:7; 11:24; Josh 1:4). Philistines: peoples that originated in the area around the Aegean Sea.

pastured cattle; one hundred sheep; as well as deer, gazelles, roebucks, and the best of fowl. <sup>24</sup>He ruled over all the lands west of the Euphrates River, from Tiphshah to Gaza, and over all the kings west of the Euphrates. He had peace on all sides. <sup>25</sup>The people of Judah and Israel from Dan all the way to Beer-sheba lived securely under their vines and fig trees throughout the days of Solomon.

Wood and stone for the temple

tribute... served: Solomon's empire included small vassal states that were subject to him and contributed to his imperial economy. kors: See translation note c. A kor was a dry measure. Tiphshah: on a major trade route between Assyria and Syria situated along the Euphrates River about 75 miles south of Carchemish. peace: Solomon's name includes the root consonants of the Hebrew word for "peace" (shalom).

4:25 Judah and Israel: The author takes pains to highlight how the "peace" (1 Kgs 4:24) affected those within the two political regions of Israel. Dan to Beer-sheba: a common expression indicating the northern and southern boundaries of traditional Israel (Judg 20:1; 1 Sam 3:20; 2 Sam 3:10; 24:2). under their vines and fig trees: a description of economic prosperity. The prophet Micah describes such times as peaceful, a result of nations' beating their swords into plows (cf. 1 Kgs 5:12; Mic 4:1-4).

4:26-28 forty thousand: 2 Chronicles 9:25 (and one Greek and one Hebrew manuscript) have "four thousand." This may be a copyist's error or a deliberate exaggeration to imply Solomon's excesses. The officials' responsibility included providing provisions for the royal court and military establishment (see 1 Kgs 4:22-23; cf. 1 Sam 8:10-18). chariots... horses: represent Solomon's military force. Here is a hint that not all will be well. Deuteronomy's instruction for kings prohibits the amassing of horses from Egypt (Deut 17:16), which 1 Kings 10:26-29 emphasizes again (cf. Isa 31:1). It reminds readers of Pharaoh's forces (Exod 14:9, 23; 15:19; Deut 11:4).

4:29-34 Summarizing the breadth and depth of Solomon's wisdom to correspond to the complexity and expansiveness of his empire. This description of Solomon's wisdom, achievements, and fame demonstrates that God's promise was fulfilled.

4:29-31 The author uses hyperbole effectively (4:29-31), which either leaves no doubt about Solomon's greatness, or invites a too-good-to-be-true response. Easterners:

Compare with Genesis 29:1; Job 1:3. Other great civilizations were well known for their wisdom, including Egypt with its famous wisdom literature (e.g., the wisdom of Amen-em-ope). The individuals named here must have been well-known figures. Ethan and the others: See Psalms 88:1; 89:1; compare with 1 Chronicles 2:6.

4:32-33 proverbs... songs: Besides exercising his wisdom in the administration of justice (1 Kgs 3:28), Solomon also was involved in literary production or collection and in scientific exploration. He came to be associated with the literature of wisdom, as several biblical books are associated with him (Proverbs, Ecclesiastes, Song of Songs). Solomon is the patron of wisdom, as Moses is the mediator of God's Instruction and David comes to be associated with worship (Psalms). Since wisdom is both a gift from God and a quest for understanding, it makes sense that Solomon should be interested in the flora and fauna of the natural world (cf. the nature wisdom of Job 38-41; Prov 30:15-31). Solomon's wisdom can be likened to Adam's; both were involved in ordering and naming the creatures (Gen 2:19-20), a task that depended on the wisdom of observation.

4:34 The gift of wisdom (1 Kgs 3:12) bears fruit. Solomon's wisdom is world famous.

5:1-8:66 The temple construction project and its dedication to God. It was common in the ancient world for a new king to build temples in honor of their patron god(s).

5:1-18 An international trade agreement sets the stage for Solomon to build the temple. The story follows seamlessly from 1 Kings 4, since Hiram is the first of "the earth's kings" (1 Kgs 4:34) to respond to the news. Lebanon is part of Solomon's greater kingdom (cf. 1 Kgs 4:21; 9:19).

5:1 Hiram of Tyre: This Phoenician king is a treaty partner with David; he provided wood for David's palace (2 Sam 5:11-12). This story demonstrates that he was loyal in his allegiance to Solomon just as he had been to David. Tyre was a coastal Phoenician city in southern Lebanon.

<sup>2</sup>Solomon sent the following message to Hiram: <sup>3</sup>"You know that my father David wasn't able to build a temple for the name of the LORD my God. This was because of the enemies that fought him on all sides until the LORD put them under the soles of his feet. <sup>4</sup>Now the LORD my God has given me peace on every side, without enemies or misfortune. <sup>5</sup>So I'm planning to build a temple for the name of the LORD my God, just as the LORD indicated to my father David, 'I will give you a son to follow you on your throne. He will build the temple for my name.' <sup>6</sup>Now give the order and have the cedars of Lebanon cut down for me. My servants will work with your servants. I'll pay your servants whatever price you set, because you know we have no one here who is skilled in cutting wood like the Sidonians."

<sup>7</sup>Hiram was thrilled when he heard Solomon's message. He said, "Today the LORD is blessed because he has given David a wise son who is in charge of this great people." <sup>8</sup>Hiram sent word back to Solomon: "I have heard your message to me. I will do as you wish with the cedar and pinewood. <sup>9</sup>My servants will bring the wood down the Lebanon Mountains to the sea. I'll make rafts out of them and float them on the sea to the place you specify. There I'll dismantle them, and you can carry them away. Now, as for what you must do for me in return, I ask you to provide for my royal house."

Solomon builds the temple

5:3-6 David wasn't able: According to 2 Samuel 7:5-7, the Lord prohibited David from building. Here the reason given is his need to establish the security of his kingdom. 1 Chronicles, a later composition, elaborates on this inability, stating that it was because David had blood on his hands (1 Kgs 22:6-12; 28:3). temple for the name (5:3, 5): See sidebar, "Temple and Name" at 1 Kings 8. put... under... feet: an image of conquest (cf. Pss 8:6; 47:3). to my father David: Solomon applies to himself God's promise through the prophet Nathan (2 Sam 7:12-15). Sidonians: another name for the Phoenicians. Sidon was located north of Tyre. The Phoenicians were renowned for their sea trade, particularly for exporting lumber.

5:7-11 Hiram's contribution to the building project. Today the Lord is blessed: Hiram offers the appropriate political rhetoric: He recognizes the God of Solomon's kingdom, Solomon's wisdom, and the greatness of Israel. do for me... my royal house: Although Hiram is a vassal king, the arrangement is more like an international trade agreement. Hiram provides cedar and pinewood from his natural resources; Solomon provides wheat and olive oil, the main agricultural commodities of Israel. annual gift: The duration of this contribution isn't specified.

5:12 To underline the main point of the story, the covenant, a political treaty between Solomon and Hiram, is a fulfillment of God's gift of wisdom. peace: a key characteristic of Solomon's reign (see note on 1 Kgs 4:21-24).

5:13-18 Solomon is clearly in charge. He seems to reject Hiram's stipulation that Phoenician workers bring the lumber to the port (1 Kgs 5:9). Rather, Solomon sends his own conscripted laborers to Lebanon. work gang: It becomes clear later that Solomon conscripted indigenous Canaanites into the work gangs for Lebanon, and Israelite workers for the stone work within traditional Israelite territory (1 Kgs 5:13-16; 9:15-23). each month... two months at home: It is likely that during the two months at home they would work on Solomon's palaces (described in 1 Kgs 7).

6:1-7:51 The description of the elaborate temple project emphasizes the grandeur of the temple, which was of special interest to the historian. The story highlights God's special communication to Solomon (6:11-13). The three-part rectangular design is common in ancient Near Eastern temples. Ziv, Bul: The use of Canaanite month names in the Solomon story, and nowhere else in Kings (see 1 Kgs 5:1, 37-38; 8:2), may imply a critique of Solomon's participation in Canaanite culture.

6:1-10 Overview and dimensions of the temple construction. four hundred eightieth year... fourth year of Solomon's rule: Solomon's fourth year was 966 or 968 BCE. Taking the number 480 at face value would make the date of the exodus from Egypt 1446 BCE (or 1448). If 480 represents a symbolic number representing 12 generations, and if a generation is approximately 25 years, then the date of the exodus would be approximately 1266 BCE (or 1268 temple. <sup>2</sup>The temple that King Solomon built for the LORD was ninety feet long, thirty feet wide, and forty-five feet high. <sup>3</sup>The porch in front of the temple's main hall was thirty feet long. It ran across the whole width of the temple and extended fifteen feet in front of the temple. <sup>4</sup>He made recessed and latticed windows<sup>1</sup> for the temple <sup>5</sup>and built side rooms against the temple walls around both the main hall and the most holy place. <sup>6</sup>The lower walls were seven and a half feet wide. At the second floor the walls were nine feet wide, and at the third floor they were ten and a half feet wide. He made niches around the outside of the temple so the beams wouldn't be inserted into the temple walls.<sup>1</sup> <sup>7</sup>When the temple was built, they did all the stoneworking at the quarry. No hammers, axes, or any iron tools were heard in the temple during its construction. <sup>8</sup>The door to the stairs was at the south side of the temple. Winding stairs went up to the second floor and from there to the third floor. <sup>9</sup>He completed the temple with a roof of cedar beams and cross-planks.<sup>2</sup> <sup>10</sup>Then he built the side rooms all around the temple. They were seven and a half feet high. He attached them to the temple with cedarwood.

<sup>11</sup>The LORD's word came to Solomon, <sup>12</sup>Regarding this temple that you are building: If you follow my laws, enact my regulations, and keep all my commands faithfully, then I will fulfill for you my promise that I made to your father David. <sup>13</sup>I will live among the Israelites. I won't abandon my people Israel.

It is popularly known as the "Holy of Holies," an expression found in 1 Kings 6:16 and translated there as "most holy place." No hammers... tools: emphasizing the exacting work of the artisans; perhaps drawing inspiration from Deuteronomy 27:5-6.

6:11-13 The Lord's word came: Although God had spoken to Solomon in a dream (1 Kgs 3:5), this is the first occurrence of this expression in the books of Kings. It occurs seven times in 1 Kings (earlier only in 1 Sam 15:10; 2 Sam 7:4) and many times in Jeremiah and Ezekiel. The author of Kings is interested in God's words and the prophetic word. That is especially evident here: Verses 11-14 seem to have been added to an earlier edition of the story reflected in

Solomon builds palaces

7Now as for Solomon's palace, it took thirteen years for him to complete its construction. <sup>2</sup>He built the Forest of Lebanon Palace one hundred fifty feet in length, seventy-five feet in width, and forty-five feet in height. It had four rows of cedar columns with cedar the Greek translation (Septuagint), where these verses are missing. See sidebar, “Fulfillment of the Prophetic Word” at 1 Kings 2. God introduces a conditional if, which is fully in keeping with both David's words in 1 Kings 2:3–4 and Nathan's prophecy of 2 Samuel 7:12–16. I will live among . . . I won't abandon: The relationship between 1 Kings 6:12 and 6:13 is ambiguous. Is Solomon's faithfulness (6:12) required for God to live among the Israelites (6:13)? Or does 6:13 reflect God's commitment stated unambiguously elsewhere (Exod 29:45–46; Lev 26:11–12)? Yet the story told by the books of Kings raises exactly this question: Has God abandoned my people Israel in Babylonian exile? If Deuteronomy is a prologue to the history presented in the books of Kings, the answer might be found there (e.g., Deut 4:9–31; 30:1–20) or in God's promise to Joshua at the beginning of the history, where God promises, “I won't desert you or leave you” (Josh 1:5; using the same Hebrew word as in 1 Kgs 6:13). As in 1 Kings 6:11–13, the promise to Joshua is also set in the context of faithfulness to God's Instruction (Josh 1:7–8). The historian preserves both the promise of divine faithfulness and the challenge of human responsibility.

6:14–38 Details of the temple's interior construction, which are common features in ancient temples. Taking up the word “completed” from 1 Kings 6:9 in 6:14 and 6:38 (translated as finished) frames the spelling out of the details (see note on 1 Kgs 7:51). inner sanctuary: The author gives the most attention to this part of the temple, the focus of 6:19–32, since it is the place of the chest containing the Lord's covenant (6:19). winged creatures (6:23, 29, 32, 35): These are composite mythical creatures, often depicted in ancient Near Eastern art and monuments as part animal, bird, or human. As sculptures or in relief carvings they are guardians of a temple or palace. In the Bible they both guard God's holy presence and symbolize God's rule (Gen 3:24; 1 Sam 4:4; 2 Sam 22:11; Pss 80:1; 99:1). one row of trimmed cedar: a common ancient Near Eastern construction technique making for a resilient structure.

7:1–12 Building Solomon's palaces interrupts the larger story of building and furnishing the temple. Building both engravings above the columns. <sup>3</sup>The palace's cedar roof stood above forty-five beams resting on the columns, fifteen beams to each row. <sup>4</sup>Three sets of window frames faced each other. <sup>5</sup>All the doorframes were rectangular, facing each other in three sets. <sup>6</sup>He made a porch with columns seventy-five feet long and forty-five feet wide. Another porch was in front of these with roofed columns in front of them. <sup>7</sup>He made the throne room the Hall of Justice, where he would judge. It was covered with cedar from the lower to the upper levels. <sup>8</sup>The royal residence where Solomon lived was behind this hall. It had a similar design. Solomon also made a similar palace for his wife, Pharaoh's daughter. <sup>9</sup>He built all these with the best stones cut to size, sawed with saws, back and front, from the foundation to the highest points and from the outer boundary to the great courtyard. <sup>10</sup>The foundation was laid with large stones of high quality, some of fifteen feet and some of twelve feet. <sup>11</sup>Above them were high-quality stones cut to measure, as well as cedar. <sup>12</sup>The surrounding great courtyard had three rows of cut stones and a row of trimmed cedar just like the inner courtyard of the LORD's temple and its porch.

Solomon's temple equipment

<sup>13</sup>Then King Solomon sent a message and brought Hiram from Tyre. <sup>14</sup>Hiram's mother was a widow from the tribe of Naphtali. His father was a Tyrian skilled in bronze work. He was amazingly skillful in the techniques and knowledge for doing all kinds of work in bronze. He came to King Solomon and did all his work.

<sup>15</sup>He<sup>a</sup> cast two bronze pillars. Each one was twenty-seven feet high and required a cord of eighteen feet to reach around it. <sup>16</sup>He made two capitals of cast bronze for the tops of the columns. They were each seven and a half feet high. <sup>17</sup>He made an intricate network of chains for the capitals on top of the columns, seven for each capital. <sup>18</sup>He made the pillars and two rows of pomegranates for each network to adorn each of the capitals. <sup>19</sup>The capitals on top of the columns in the porch were made like lilies, each six feet high. <sup>20</sup>Above the round-shaped part and next to the network were two hundred pomegranates. These were placed in rows around both of the capitals on top of the columns. <sup>21</sup>He set up the columns at the temple's porch. He named the south column Jachin. The north column he named Boaz. <sup>22</sup>After putting the lily shapes on top of the columns, he was finished with the columns.

<sup>23</sup>He also made a tank of cast metal called the Sea. It was circular in shape, fifteen feet from rim to rim, seven and a half feet high, forty-five feet in circumference. <sup>24</sup>Under the rim were two rows of gourds completely encircling it, ten every eighteen inches, each cast in its mold. <sup>25</sup>The Sea rested on twelve oxen with their backs toward the center, three facing north, three facing west, three facing south, and three facing east. <sup>26</sup>The Sea was as thick as the width of a hand. Its rim was shaped like a cup or an open lily blossom. It could hold two thousand baths.<sup>b</sup>

temple and palaces took 20 years (cf. 1 Kgs 9:10). Forest of Lebanon Palace: Twice as large and more complex than the temple, it included several wings, a throne room and a Hall of Justice (also used as an armory and treasury; cf. 1 Kgs 10:16-17, 21; Isa 22:8). royal residence and palace for his wife: Attached or nearby, these are not described in detail. Altogether these massive buildings take thirteen years to build, almost twice as long as the temple. The use of cedar in these projects is more extensive than in the temple, which suggests that the trade relationship described in 1 Kings 5:6-11 continued for many years. 7:13-51 Furnishing the temple.

7:13-14 Hiram from Tyre: not Hiram the king of Tyre. skilled...knowledge: expressions of practical wisdom sometimes said to be divinely inspired (cf. Exod 36:1; 35:30-35).

7:15-22 bronze pillars...Jachin and Boaz: perhaps free-standing or supporting a roof, placed at the temple entrance (cf. 2 Chron 3:17). Jachin means "He establishes" and Boaz may mean "In him is strength."

7:23-26 tank...the Sea: a large elevated bronze basin holding about 12,000 gallons of water, used for purification (cf. Exod 30:18-21). fifteen...forty-five: These round numbers (or using 3 as pi) don't give a scientifically exact was an opening eighteen inches deep. The opening was round, measuring twenty-seven inches, with engravings. The panels of the stands were square rather than round. <sup>32</sup>There were four wheels beneath the panels. The axles of the wheels were attached to the stand. Each wheel was twenty-seven inches in height. <sup>33</sup>The construction of the wheels resembled chariot wheels. The axles, rims, spokes, and hubs were all made of cast metal. <sup>34</sup>There was a handle on each of the four corners of every stand, projecting from the side of the stand. <sup>35</sup>The top of the stand had a band running around the perimeter that was nine inches deep. The stand had its own supports and panels. <sup>36</sup>On the surfaces of the supports and panels he carved winged otherworldly creatures, lions, and palm trees with wreaths everywhere. <sup>37</sup>In this manner he made ten stands, each one cast in a single mold of the same size and shape.

<sup>38</sup>He made ten bronze washbasins, each able to hold forty baths. <sup>39</sup>Every washbasin was six feet across, and there was one for each of the ten stands. <sup>39</sup>He placed five stands on the south of the temple and five on the north of the temple. He placed the Sea at the southeast corner of the temple.

two circular capitals on top of the columns;

two networks, adorning the two circular capitals on top of the columns;

<sup>42</sup>four hundred pomegranates for the two networks, with two rows of pomegranates for each network that adorned the two circular capitals on top of the columns;

twelve oxen beneath the Sea;

All the equipment that Hiram made for King Solomon for the LORD's temple was made from polished bronze. <sup>46</sup>The king cast it in clay molds in the Jordan Valley between Succoth and Zarethan. <sup>47</sup>Due to the very large number of objects, Solomon didn't even try to weigh the bronze.

Solomon dedicates the temple

8 Then Solomon assembled Israel's elders, all the tribal leaders, and the chiefs of Israel's clans at Jerusalem to bring up the chest containing the LORD's covenant from David's calculation of the circumference (47.12388 feet). twelve oxen: or bulls, representing the 12 tribes of Israel.

7:40b-47 finished: See note on 1 Kings 6:14; 7:51.

7:48-50 Although Hiram's expertise (1 Kgs 7:14) qualified him to make the bronze items (1 Kgs 7:13-47), the author highlights Solomon's even greater wisdom in making the gold items. gold table... bread of the presence: Compare with Exodus 25:30; Leviticus 24:5-9.

7:51 work... was finished: The word "finished" is the same as is used in chapter 6 (see note on 1 Kgs 6:14). It appears in the creation story about God's work (Gen 2:1-2) and in the exodus story about two kinds of work: slave work and tabernacle construction work (Exod 5:13-14; 39:32; 40:33). Solomon shares in this work; finishing it creates a "home" for God (see Exod 29:45-46; Lev 26:11-12; cf. 1 Kgs 8:27). The author includes a play on words by highlighting Solomon's completion of this work with a different verb for "to complete" that contains the same Hebrew consonants as Solomon's name: objects... David: Compare with 2 Samuel 8:10-11. treasuries... temple: The treasury will become a vulnerable place and highly significant in the books of Kings (cf. 1 Kgs 14:26; 2 Kgs 12:18; 14:14; 16:8; 18:15; 20:13, 15; 24:13).

8:1-66 The dedication of the temple, Solomon's prayer, and a feast of celebration.

8:1-11 Solomon arranges to bring the chest containing the LORD's covenant to the new temple. chest: the box containing the Ten Commandments, which symbolized the throne of God (see 1 Kgs 8:9; cf. Exod 25:10-22; Deut 10:1-5; 1 Sam 4:4). Until now it had been kept in a tent (8:4) in David's City Zion, which was just south of the temple and palace area, which were built in the area around where the Dome of the Rock is now (2 Sam 6:16-17; 7:2; 1 Kgs 3:15).

City Zion. <sup>2</sup>Everyone in Israel assembled before King Solomon in the seventh month, the month of Ethanim,* during the festival. <sup>3</sup>When all of Israel's elders had arrived, the priests picked up the chest. <sup>4</sup>They brought the LORD's chest, the meeting tent, and all the holy equipment that was in the tent. The priests and the Levites brought them up, <sup>5</sup>while King Solomon and the entire Israelite assembly that had joined him before the chest sacrificed countless sheep and oxen. <sup>6</sup>The priests brought the chest containing the LORD's covenant to its designated spot beneath the wings of the winged creatures in the inner sanctuary of the temple, the most holy place. <sup>7</sup>The winged creatures spread their wings over the place where the chest rested, covering the chest and its carrying poles. <sup>8</sup>The carrying poles were so long that their tips could be seen from the holy place in front of the inner sanctuary, though they weren't visible from outside. They are still there today. <sup>9</sup>Nothing was in the chest except the two stone tablets Moses had placed there while at Horeb, where the LORD made a covenant with the Israelites after they left Egypt. <sup>10</sup>When the priests left the holy place, the cloud filled the LORD's temple, <sup>11</sup>and the priests were unable to carry out their duties due to the cloud because the LORD's glory filled the LORD's temple.

<sup>12</sup>Then Solomon said, "The LORD said that he would live in a dark cloud, <sup>13</sup>but I have indeed built you a lofty temple as a place where you can live forever." <sup>14</sup>The king turned around, and while the entire assembly of Israel was standing there, he blessed them, <sup>15</sup>saying, "Bless Israel's God, the LORD, who spoke directly to my father David and now has kept his promise: <sup>16</sup>'From the day I brought my people Israel out of Egypt I haven't selected a city from any Israelite tribe as a site for the building of a temple for my name. But now I have chosen David to be over my people Israel.' <sup>17</sup>My father David wanted to build a temple for the name of the LORD, Israel's God.

<sup>18</sup>"But the LORD said to my father David, 'It is very good that you thought to build a temple for my name. <sup>19</sup>Nevertheless, you yourself won't build that temple. Instead, your very own son will build the temple for my name.' <sup>20</sup>The LORD has kept his promise—I have succeeded my father David on Israel's throne just as the LORD said, and I have built the temple for the name of the LORD, Israel's God. <sup>21</sup>There I've placed the chest that contains the covenant that the LORD made with our ancestors when he brought them out of Egypt."

8:2 the festival: Festival of Booths, a feast commemorating the exodus (Heb. Sukkot; cf. 1 Kgs 8:65–66; Lev 23:33–39).
8:1–4 elders . . . priests: The assembly includes various leaders, including priests, who were the traditional bearers of the chest (Deut 31:9; 2 Sam 15:24). Solomon seems to be consolidating a unified Israel around the temple dedication.

8:6 winged creatures: See note on 1 Kings 6:14–38.

8:8 still there today: This comment reflects the time of the author of this chapter, which was written before the destruction of the temple (587 BCE). The books of Kings reached their final form during or after the exile and after the temple had been destroyed.

8:9 two stone tablets: the Ten Commandments (cf. Exod 25:16, 22). A later tradition held that the chest also contained a jar of manna and Aaron's staff (Heb 9:4; cf. Exod 16:32–34; Num 17:10–11). Horeb: the name of Mount Sinai that is used primarily in Deuteronomy (cf. Deut 4:10). In Exodus 3:1 it is called "God's mountain."

8:10–11 cloud: God's presence was often manifested in a cloud (cf. Exod 13:21–22; 16:10; 19:9; 33:9). The terms "cloud" and "glory" together remind readers of the completion of the meeting tent in the wilderness, and represent God's very presence in the temple (Exod 40:34–35). Solomon's temple becomes a replacement of that movable shrine.

8:12–61 Solomon's prayer and blessing of the people is one of the most densely packed theological texts in the books of Kings, echoing words and phrases from the book of Deuteronomy.

8:12–13 dark cloud: in some texts, where God is said to live (cf. Exod 20:21; Deut 4:11; 5:22; 2 Sam 22:10; Ps 97:2). Solomon suggests that the inner sanctuary of the temple is either a replacement for the dark cloud that protects God from view, or a place where God, who enters the temple in that cloud, might live forever (cf. 1 Kgs 8:29). The words I have . . . built are repeated in 1 Kings 8:20, 27, 43, 44, 48.

8:14–21 selected a city . . . temple for my name: Deuteronomy mentions a place, but never identifies it as Jerusalem (cf. Deut 12:5, 11; 16:2). name: a way of speaking of the presence of God without making the claim that God actually lives there. The name represents the person and presence without limiting God to the location (cf. 1 Kgs 8:27). The LORD . . . promise: a theme drawn in part from 2 Samuel 7:12–16 that echoes in various ways throughout this chapter (cf. 1 Kgs 8:20, 24–26, 53, 56; 9:5). chest: See note on 1 Kings 8:1.

8:22–53 Solomon's prayer of dedication and petition. The prayer brings together reflection on the covenant with Israel at Horeb (cf. 1 Kgs 8:9) and the covenant with David (2 Sam 7). Israel is God's people as David is the one God chose to govern this people. After introductory reflections on those relationships and on God's presence (8:23–30), the prayer lists seven requests, each one including the phrase listen from heaven (or some variation

The Lord's Chest Solomon placed in the temple a chest containing the covenant, or Ten Commandments, which governs the relationship between God and people (1 Kgs 6:19; 8:21; cf. Exod 25:16, 21; Deut 10:1-5). It is therefore called "chest of the covenant" (Exod 25:16; 1 Kgs 3:15; 6:19; 8:1, 21). It was placed in the inner, and holiest, room of the temple (Exod 26:33-34). The chest represents God's presence. For Deuteronomy the chest functions as a repository of God's words. God is present in God's words, God's words give life, and God's words order Israel's life (Deut 4:10-12; 5:24; 8:3; 11:18). Although God's "words" are in the chest, the chest also represents the God who continues to speak and instruct the people. It is the place of meeting (Exod 25:22; Num 7:89), where the people receive God's guidance (Num 10:33-36). It stands for the divine character—the "ruler of the whole earth" (Josh 3:11, 13). It embodies a symbolic yet real presence greater even than the great gods of the Philistines (1 Sam 4-6). Some biblical texts present God as having a throne in the heavens with the chest as God's footstool, thereby confirming Solomon's affirmation that God can't be contained (cf. 1 Chron 28:2; Pss 11:4; 99:5; 103:19; 132:7-8). Other nations have images that represent their gods; Israel has a box carrying God's instructions—a box that represents God's presence through the words mediated by Moses and the prophets (2 Kgs 17:12-13).

LORD God of Israel, there's no god like you in heaven above or on earth below. You keep the covenant and show loyalty to your servants who walk before you with all their heart. <sup>24</sup>This is the covenant you kept with your servant David, my father, which you promised him. Today, you have fulfilled what you promised. <sup>25</sup>So now, LORD, Israel's God, keep what you promised my father David, your servant, when you said to him, "You will never fail to have a successor sitting on Israel's throne as long as your descendants carefully walk before me just as you walked before me." <sup>26</sup>So now, God of Israel, may your promise to your servant David, my father, come true.

<sup>27</sup>But how could God possibly live on earth? If heaven, even the highest heaven, can't contain you, how can this temple that I've built contain you? <sup>28</sup>LORD my God, listen to your servant's prayer and request, and hear the cry and prayer that your servant prays to you today. <sup>29</sup>Constantly watch over this temple, the place about which you said, "My name will be there," and listen to the prayer that your servant is praying toward† this place. <sup>30</sup>Listen to the request of your servant and your people Israel when they pray toward this place. Listen from your heavenly dwelling place, and when you hear, forgive!

of it; 8:32, 34, 36, 39, 43, 45, 49). The main concern is for God to attend to Israel's dire situation, to forgive, and to set right what has gone wrong. The prayer even anticipates Israel's exile. The prayer includes many echoes of Deuteronomy.

8:23-26 no god like you: Solomon echoes Deuteronomy and David's prayer (cf. Deut 4:39; 2 Sam 7:22; Exod 15:11). covenant... loyalty: Compare with Deuteronomy 7:9, 12. Today: a motif common to Deuteronomy (Deut 4:20; 29:27). David... promised: Solomon reminds God of the covenant with David (2 Sam 7:1-17) and the promise concerning the temple and kingdom (2 Sam 7:13, 16). never fail... successor: a liberal paraphrase of 2 Samuel 7:13, 16. carefully walk... as you walked: The conditions of succession include imitation of David (see note on 1 Kgs 2:2, 3; 3:2-3).

8:27-30 listen: The word occurs 14 times in Solomon's prayer (1 Kgs 8:23-53), nine of those combined with from heaven or in heaven (1 Kgs 8:30, 32, 34, 36, 39, 43, 45, 49). A key purpose of Solomon's prayer is prayer itself. Although the temple is often thought of as a place of sacrifice, that isn't the focus here. The temple is a structure that prompts prayer. This passage probably motivates the prayers in later exilic and post-exilic texts (Ezra 9; Neh 1; 9; Dan 9). A significant highlight of the prayer is the question in 8:27: How is it possible for God to live on earth? What, then, is the purpose of a temple? The prayer as a whole affirms that God lives in heaven and is symbolically present in the temple. There is a tension between God's immanence (nearness) and God's transcendence (distance). Compare with 1 Samuel 4:3-4; Isaiah 66:1-2. My name... there: See sidebar, "Temple and Name." toward this place: This may be the origin of the practice of building churches and synagogues that are oriented toward Jerusalem. forgive: one of the main themes of the prayer (also 1 Kgs 8:34, 36, 39, 50; cf. Dan 6:10; Pss 5:7; 138:2). heavenly dwelling place: See 1 Kings 8:30, 39, 43, 49; echoing Deuteronomy 26:15.

8:31-32 This request, the first of seven, is about a legal situation that can't be decided through regular channels (e.g., 1 Kgs 3:16-28). wrongs another: The verb "wrongs" occurs seven times in the prayer (1 Kgs 8:23-53), elsewhere translated "sinned" or "sins."

<sup>33</sup>If your people Israel are defeated by an enemy because they have sinned against you, but then they change their hearts and lives, give thanks to your name, and ask for mercy before you at this temple, <sup>34</sup>then listen from heaven and forgive the sin of your people Israel. Return them to the land you gave their ancestors.

<sup>35</sup>When the sky holds back its rain because Israel has sinned against you, but they then pray toward this place, give thanks to your name, and turn away from their sin because you have punished them for it, <sup>36</sup>then listen from heaven and forgive the sin of your servants, your people Israel. Teach them the best way for them to follow, and send rain on your land that you gave to your people as an inheritance.

<sup>37</sup>Whenever there is a famine or plague in the land; or whenever there is blight, mildew, locust, or grasshopper; or whenever someone's enemy attacks them in their cities,<sup>b</sup> or any plague or illness comes; <sup>38</sup>whatever prayer or petition is made by any individual or by all of your people Israel—because people will recognize their own pain and spread out their hands toward this temple—<sup>39</sup>then listen from heaven where you live. Forgive, act, and repay each person according to all their conduct, because you know their hearts. You alone know the human heart. <sup>40</sup>Do this so that they may revere you all the days they live on the land that you gave to our ancestors.

Anger of God “Why are the gods angry?” In a 9th-century BCE inscription, Moab's King Mesha explains Moab's colonization under Israel's King Omri: “for Chemosh was angry at his land.” Deuteronomy suggests that other nations might ask why God was angry with Israel (Deut 29:24).

Although the OT characterizes God as patient (Exod 34:6; Num 14:18; Neh 9:17; Pss 86:15; 103:8; 145:8; Joel 2:13; Jon 4:2; Nah 1:3), that doesn't eliminate occurrences of divine anger in the Bible. The theme appears at least 21 times in Kings (1 Kgs 8:46; 11:9; 14:9, 15; 15:30; 16:2, 7, 13, 26, 33; 21:22; 22:53; 2 Kgs 13:3; 17:11, 17-18; 21:6, 15; 22:17; 23:19, 26). Anger reflects God's jealousy for Israel's exclusive loyalty as developed in the book of Deuteronomy. Anger expresses a concern for justice arising from violation of relationship (cf. Deut 1:37; 3:26; 4:21, 25; 6:15; 7:4; 9:8, 19-20; 11:17; 13:17; 19:6; 29:20, 23-24, 27-28; 31:17, 29; 32:22). God becomes angry when Israel forsakes the Lord, abandons its covenantal commitment, does evil, and serves other gods. The consequences of Israel's behavior include destruction and exile (cf. Deut 6:15; 29:27-28; 1 Kgs 14:15).

The hope of Deuteronomy is for God to turn from divine anger and show compassion (Deut 4:30-31; 13:17; 30:3; 32:36). Unfortunately, the books of Deuteronomy and Kings reveal that only on the other side of exile will that compassion again be evident (cf. Pss 30:5; 78:38; Isa 12:1; 48:9; Hos 11:9; 14:4; Jon 3:9; Mic 7:18; Zech 10:3).

8:33-34 your people Israel: emphasized by repetition in 1 Kings 8:33, 34, 38, 43, 52; echoing Deuteronomy 21:8; 26:15. sinned against you: wrong done that violates a relationship (against others, 1 Kgs 8:31; against God, 1 Kgs 8:33, 35, 46, 47, 50). change their hearts and lives: The Hebrew verb with a rough meaning of “turn/return,” refers to a total reorientation of life, recurs throughout the prayer, and is translated in various ways (1 Kgs 8:35, 47, 48). A play on words appears in 8:34, where people change and God is asked to Return them to the land . . . ancestors. This prayer, like Deuteronomy, assumes the exile of God's people from their land (Deut 4:26-27, 30; 29:28; 30:2-5). Deuteronomy also anticipates “return” (Deut 30:4-5). 8:35-36 rain: According to Deuteronomy, rain is a blessing from God, and drought is a consequence of disloyalty to

8:37-40 Both “rain” (1 Kgs 8:35-36) and famine provide the setting for the Elijah story (1 Kgs 18:1-2). heart: the seat of the will and of human intention or motivation. The word is used three times in 8:38-39, including verse 38, in a Hebrew expression, “pain of his heart.” The heart is a prominent theme in Deuteronomy (e.g., Deut 6:5). revere: Compare with Deuteronomy 4:10; 5:26. See 1 Kings 8:58, 61.

Temple and Name Solomon wants to build “a temple for the name of the LORD my God” (1 Kgs 5:5). The association of the name with the temple is a way of speaking about God’s presence without claiming that God actually lives there. God’s name represents all of God’s character, concern, and presence. Such language prevents God from being localized and assures a strong sense of God’s transcendence (distance), even while affirming God’s active presence. Solomon asks, in his prayer of dedication, how God can “live on earth,” when “heaven, even the highest heaven, can’t contain you” (1 Kgs 8:27). In other words, God can’t be limited to a temple, even though God is always present to it. Such affirmations are especially important in the light of the author’s concerns about the dangers of idolatry.

Deuteronomy assumes that God will choose a place “to put his name there, as his residence,” without ever naming the place (Deut 12:5; cf. 2 Sam 7:13). It is the place of “God’s presence” (Deut 12:7; cf. Deut 12:11-13, 18; 14:23; 16:2, 6, 11; 26:2). In the books of Kings, temple and name are associated primarily with the story of Solomon (1 Kgs 5:3-5 and nine times in 1 Kgs 8). God tells Solomon, “My eyes and my heart will always be there” (1 Kgs 9:3; cf. the warning of 1 Kgs 9:7). Jerusalem is named as that place only a few times, primarily in texts that anticipate the destruction of the city (1 Kgs 11:36; 2 Kgs 21:4, 7; 23:27).

<sup>44</sup>When your people go to war against their enemies, wherever you may send them, and they pray to the LORD toward the city you have chosen and toward this temple that I have built for your name, <sup>45</sup>then listen from heaven to their prayer and request and do what is right for them.

<sup>46</sup>When they sin against you (for there is no one who doesn’t sin) and you become angry with them and hand them over to an enemy who takes them away as prisoners to enemy territory, whether distant or nearby, <sup>47</sup>if they change their heart in whatever land they are held captive, changing their lives and begging for your mercy,<sup>48</sup> saying, “We have sinned, we have done wrong, we have acted wickedly!” <sup>48</sup>and if they return to you with all their heart and all their being in the enemy territory where they’ve been taken captive, and pray to you, toward their land, which you gave their ancestors, toward the city you have chosen, and toward the temple I have built for your name, <sup>49</sup>then listen to their prayer and request from your heavenly dwelling place. Do what is right for them, <sup>50</sup>and forgive your people who have sinned against you. Forgive all their wrong that they have done against you. See to it that those who captured them show them mercy. <sup>51</sup>These are your people and your inheritance. You brought them out of Egypt, from the iron furnace.

<sup>52</sup>Open your eyes to your servant’s request and to the request of your people Israel. Hear them whenever they cry out to you. <sup>53</sup>You set them apart from all the earth’s peoples as your own inheritance, LORD, just as you promised through your servant Moses when you brought our ancestors out of Egypt.

<sup>54</sup>As soon as Solomon finished praying and making these requests to the LORD, he got up from before the LORD’s altar, where he had been kneeling with his hands spread out to heaven. <sup>55</sup>He stood up and blessed the whole Israelite assembly in a loud voice: <sup>56</sup>“May the LORD be blessed! He has given rest to his people Israel just as he promised. He hasn’t neglected any part of the good promise he made through his servant Moses. <sup>57</sup>May the LORD our God be with us, just as he was with our ancestors. May he never leave us or abandon us. <sup>58</sup>May he draw our hearts to him to walk in all his ways and observe his commands, his expression in Deuteronomy (e.g., Deut 4:34; 5:15). all the people of the earth may know... revere: These words echo those of Joshua 4:24.

8:46-51 This request echoes Deuteronomy 30:1-10 in many details. angry: the effect of Israel’s breaking the covenant relationship with God. See sidebar, “Anger of God.” Compare with Deuteronomy 29:14-28, which describes breaking covenant, God’s anger, and exile similarly. change their heart... changing their lives: See note on 1 Kings 8:33-34. heart... being: See note on 1 Kings 2:4. city... chosen: See note on 1 Kings 8:14-21. your people... your inheritance... iron furnace: echo of Deuteronomy 4:20 (cf. Deut 9:26, 29; 32:9; Mic 7:14; “your possession,” Ps 28:9).

8:52-53 from all the earth’s peoples: Compare with Deuteronomy 32:8-9.

8:54-61 rest... as he promised: These themes reverberate throughout Deuteronomy and Joshua, applied there particularly to entry into the land (cf. Deut 6:23; 12:10; 19:8; 26:18-19; Josh 1:13; etc.). good promise: Solomon echoes Joshua’s and David’s words (Josh 21:45; 23:15; 2 Sam 7:28). never leave... abandon us: This combination occurs twice in Deuteronomy 31:6, 8 to confirm God’s faithfulness (cf. Josh 1:5). all the earth’s peoples may know: See note on 1 Kings 8:41-43 (cf. Deut 4:35; 2 Kgs 19:15, 19). draw our hearts (8:58) and all your heart (8:61): The prayer draws on the theme of God’s initiative in restoring covenant loyalty laws, and his judgments that he gave our ancestors. <sup>59</sup>And may these words of mine that I have cried out before the LORD remain near to the LORD our God day and night so that he may do right by his servant and his people Israel for each day's need, <sup>60</sup>and so that all the earth's peoples may know that the LORD is God. There is no other God! <sup>61</sup>Now may you be committed to the LORD our God with all your heart by following his laws and observing his commands, just as you are doing right now."

<sup>62</sup>Then the king and all Israel with him sacrificed to the LORD. <sup>63</sup>Solomon offered well-being sacrifices to the LORD: twenty-two thousand oxen and one hundred twenty thousand sheep when the king and all Israel dedicated the LORD's temple. <sup>64</sup>On that day the king made holy the middle of the courtyard in front of the LORD's temple. He had to offer the entirely burned offerings, grain offerings, and the fat of well-being sacrifices there, because the bronze altar that was in the LORD's presence was too small to contain the entirely burned offerings, the grain offerings, and the fat of the well-being sacrifices. <sup>65</sup>At that time Solomon, together with all Israel, held a celebration. It was a large assembly from Lebo-hamath to the border of Egypt. They celebrated for seven days and then for another seven days in the presence of the LORD our God: fourteen days in all. <sup>66</sup>On the eighth day,<sup>d</sup> Solomon dismissed the people. They blessed the king and went back to their tents happy and pleased about all the good that the LORD had done for his servant David and for his people Israel.

Solomon again meets God

Now once Solomon finished building the LORD's temple, the royal palace, and everything else he wanted to accomplish, <sup>2</sup>the LORD appeared to him a second time in the same way he had appeared to him at Gibeon. <sup>3</sup>The LORD said to him, "I have heard your prayer and your cry to me. I have set apart this temple that you built, to put my name there forever. My eyes and my heart will always be there. <sup>4</sup>As for you, if you walk before me just as your father David did, with complete dedication and honesty, and if you do all that I have commanded, and keep my regulations and case laws, <sup>5</sup>then I will establish your royal throne over

David as Example God promises Solomon a secure dynasty if he will "walk before me just as your father David did" (1 Kgs 9:4-5). This promise reflects God's covenant with David (cf. 2 Sam 7:11-16; 1 Kgs 8:19; 11:36; 15:4). Remarkably, God gives Jeroboam, the first king of northern Israel, the same promise (1 Kgs 11:38). Although God is committed to David in a special way, being faithful to God's instructions is even more important. Therefore, in spite of God's protective action for Jerusalem because of David (cf. 2 Kgs 19:34), Judah and Jerusalem suffer the consequences of exile because of the actions of the kings of Jerusalem (2 Kgs 21:1-15).

David provides the historian with a model for what it means to be fully devoted to God (cf. 1 Kgs 15:3). Only three kings of Judah are compared positively with David: Asa, Hezekiah, and Josiah (1 Kgs 15:11; 2 Kgs 18:3; 22:2). Other kings are evaluated negatively, not having done "what was right in the LORD's eyes" as David had done (cf. 1 Kgs 14:8; 15:3; 2 Kgs 16:2). Others receive a mixed evaluation, having done right, but "not as well as . . . King David" (2 Kgs 14:3; cf. 2 Kgs 12:2-3; 15:3-4, 34-35). David speaks to his son Solomon about what such faithfulness entails (1 Kgs 2:3), and in doing so he mirrors God's words to Joshua (Josh 1:7-8). David, therefore, is the one who most clearly models for Israel, even in exile, the path by which salvation might come (1 Kgs 14:8; cf. Deut 30:1-10).

(cf. Deut 30:6; Jer 31:31-34; Ezek 36:26-27; see note on 1 Kgs 2:4; 8:37-40).

8:62-64 well-being sacrifices: sacrifices to be eaten by the community; compare with Leviticus 7:11-21, 28-36. made holy: an act of ritual purification or consecration made necessary because of the large number of sacrifices that would not fit into the altar area. The hyperbole here seems designed to exaggerate Solomon's achievement. Over two weeks, each day's sacrifices would have included 1,571 oxen and 8,571 sheep.

8:65-66 Lebo-hamath to the border of Egypt: refers to the extent of Solomon's kingdom (see note on 1 Kgs 4:21-24). Lebo-hamath means "entrance to Hamath," a city on the Orontes River in Syria. eighth day: after the second seven-day celebration (8:65; cf. 2 Chron 7:8-10). Similar to the description in 1 Kings 4, the report of the temple dedication celebration paints a picture of a contented people and reminds readers that David is the center of this writer's interest. See sidebar, "David as Example."

9:1-9 In a second dream, God sets out the terms of the relationship with Solomon more clearly and with more carefully worded consequences for Israel if Solomon should be unfaithful to the covenant. An ominous tone underlies these verses.

9:1-2 at Gibeon: Compare with 1 Kings 3:4-5.

9:3-5 The Lord's promise. I have set apart this temple: It is God's action, not Solomon's (cf. 1 Kgs 8). my name there: See 1 Kings 3:2-3; 8:16, 29; see sidebar, "Temple and Name"

Israel forever, just as I promised your father David, 'You will never fail to have a successor on the throne of Israel.' <sup>6</sup>However, if you or your sons turn away from following me and don't observe the commands and regulations that I gave you, and go to serve other gods, and worship them, <sup>7</sup>then I will remove Israel from the land I gave them and I will reject the temple that I dedicated for my name. Israel will become a joke, insulted by everyone. <sup>8</sup>Everyone who passes by this temple, so lofty now, <sup>9</sup>will be shocked and will whistle, wondering, Why has the LORD done such a thing to this land and this temple? <sup>10</sup>The answer will come: Because they deserted the LORD their God, who brought their ancestors out of Egypt's land. They embraced other gods, worshipping and serving them. That is why the LORD brought all this disaster on them."

Solomon's buildings and prosperity

at 1 Kings 8. walk... David did: The conditions of the relationship are the same as those stated by David (see 1 Kgs 2:3-4; cf. 3:14; 8:25; see sidebar, "David as Example"). establish... throne... forever: echoing 2 Samuel 7:13, 16; compare with 1 Kings 2:45; 6:12; 8:15, 20, 24-26.

9:6-9 The Lord's warning goes further than the warning of "discipline" and seems to omit the divine commitment of "faithful love" in 2 Samuel 7:14-15. Failure to observe God's instructions focuses particularly on idolatry (see sidebar "Idolatry" at 1 Kgs 11). The worship of other gods, with the addition of servng them, is one of the main interests of the books of Kings. This is the first time the theme is mentioned in Kings. The authors draw this theme directly from the Ten Commandments (Exod 20:3-5; Deut 5:7-9), a theme that is a favorite of Deuteronomy (cf. Deut 6:13; 11:16; 17:3; 28:14). The warning here is a premonition of things to come (cf. 1 Sam 8:8-9; 1 Kgs 11:4, 10; 14:9; 2 Kgs 17:7, 33-40). remove Israel from the land: one of the consequences noted in Deuteronomy's warnings (Deut 29:25-28). a joke, insulted: These words echo Deuteronomy 28:37, which anticipates Israel's exile. Using the word "joke" here is ironic because the Hebrew word is translated as "proverb" in 1 Kings 4:32. Composing proverbs was the fruit of Solomon's wisdom. Why has the Lord done such a thing: Putting the question in the mouths of everyone echoes Deuteronomy 29:24. The answer there is the same as God's warning here, except for the addition here of this temple. The problem: they deserted the Lord their God: Deuteronomy uses the same verb in its warning of exile (Deut 28:20), in the answer of the nations (Deut 29:24), and in God's prediction to Moses (Deut 31:16-17). And this in spite of Deuteronomy's insistence that God doesn't abandon (Deut 4:31; 31:6-8). disaster: Compare with Deuteronomy 29:20; 31:17, 21, 29.

9:10-14 twenty years: 946 BCE. Hiram: These verses fill out the details of the trade agreement described in 1 Kings 5:1-18. My brother: indicates a treaty partner, even though Hiram gives Solomon all... that he wanted (cf. 1 Kgs 5:10). Solomon gives him twenty towns in northern Israel. Cabul perhaps means "good for nothing." Hiram's response suggests that the cities are worth nothing. Still, Hiram sends Solomon additional gold (not mentioned in 1 Kgs 5), perhaps making up the difference in value. Hiram has no real say in the arrangement (cf. note on 1 Kgs 5:13-18). kikkars: One kikkar is equivalent to approximately 76 pounds. (cf. 420 kikkars in 1 Kgs 9:28; 120 in 1 Kgs 10:10; 666 in 1 Kgs 10:14). Solomon's accumulation of gold, mentioned often in 1 Kings 9-10, is prohibited by Deuteronomy 17:17.

9:15-25 The projects of the work gangs (cf. 1 Kgs 4:6; 5:13-14). In addition to the temple and palaces, Solomon fortified cities and built collection and storage capacity for his taxation system. Amorites... Jebusites: This list of peoples is almost identical to the one in Deuteronomy 7:1. Non-Israelites are conscripted, which isn't mentioned in 1 Kings 5:13 where the work gangs are chosen from "all over Israel" weren't able wipe to them out: Compare with Joshua 15:63. The story, with its mention of Pharaoh and his daughter, Solomon's wife, along with the non-Israelite peoples, reminds readers of the dangers of intermarriage and the worship of "other gods," all of which are mentioned in Deuteronomy 7:1-6. offer... sacrifices: See 1 Kings 3:4, 15; of the Amorites, Hittites, Perizzites, Hivites, and Jebusites—<sup>21</sup>that is, the descendants of such people who were still in the land because the Israelites weren't able to wipe them out—Solomon forced into the labor gangs that are still in existence today. <sup>22</sup>However, Solomon didn't force the Israelites to work as slaves; instead, they became warriors, his servants, his leaders, his officers, and those in charge of his chariots and cavalry.

Queen of Sheba

10When the queen of Sheba heard reports about Solomon, due to the LORD's name,<sup>b</sup> she came to test him with riddles. <sup>2</sup>Accompanying her to Jerusalem was a huge entourage with camels carrying spices, a large amount of gold, and precious stones. After she arrived, she told Solomon everything that was on her mind. <sup>3</sup>Solomon answered all her questions; nothing was too difficult for him to answer. <sup>4</sup>When the queen of Sheba saw how wise Solomon was, the palace he had built, <sup>5</sup>the food on his table, the servants' quarters, the function and dress of his attendants, his cupbearers, and the entirely burned offerings that he offered at the LORD's temple, it took her breath away.

<sup>10</sup>The queen gave the king one hundred twenty kikkars of gold, a great quantity of spice, and precious stones. Never again has so much spice come to Israel as when the queen of Sheba gave this gift to King Solomon. <sup>11</sup>Hiram's fleet went to Ophir and brought back gold, much almuq wood, and precious stones. <sup>12</sup>The king used the almuq wood to make parapets for the LORD's temple and for the royal palace as well as lyres and harps for the musicians. To this day, that much almuq wood hasn't come into or been seen in Israel. <sup>13</sup>King Solomon gave the queen of Sheba everything she wanted and all that she had asked for, in addition to what he had already given her from his own personal funds. Then she and her servants returned to her homeland.

8:64 (cf. Lev 1:3). Three times a year: likely at the three great festivals, Unleavened Bread, Harvest, and Gathering or Booths (Exod 23:14-16). completed the temple: See note on 1 Kings 7:51.

9:26-28 Eloth: modern Eilat at the northern tip of the Gulf of Aqaba. Ezion-geber: a port on the Gulf of Aqaba whose exact location isn't known. Ophir: location unknown; famous for its gold (cf. Job 22:24; 28:16; Ps 45:9; Isa 13:12). kikkars: One kikkar is approximately 76 pounds.

10:1-13 The visit of the queen of Sheba highlights Solomon's wealth and wisdom. Sheba: located in the south of the Arabian Peninsula (modern Yemen). This story is an example of the people mentioned in 1 Kings 4:34 who come to visit Solomon because they have heard about his (and the Lord's) reputation. test him with riddles: Compare with Samson in Judges 14; Proverbs 1:6.

Solomon's responses are encyclopedic (10:3), and his wisdom and resources overwhelming (10:4-5, 7). Your people... truly happy: The Psalms describe truly happy people as those who follow God's instructions (Pss 1:1; 119:1-2; 128:1; cf. Ps 144:15). This description is ironic, since Solomon's fall is looming (cf. 1 Kgs 11). the LORD loved Israel: a characteristic theme of Deuteronomy (Deut 4:37; 7:8-9, 13; 10:15); uphold justice and righteousness: a word pair that depicts the chief goal of wisdom (Prov. 1:3; 2:9; 8:20). These words describe God's intention for Abraham (Gen 18:19). They stand at the beginning of the psalmist's prayer for Solomon (Ps 72:1-2). And they characterize God's rule (Pss 33:5; 89:14; 97:2; 99:4). The psalmist describes people who practice justice and righteousness as truly happy (Ps 106:3). See also note on 1 Kings 3:28.

Solomon's wealth

Solomon meets God a third time

11 In addition to Pharaoh's daughter, King Solomon loved many foreign women, including Moabites, Ammonites, Edomites, Sidonians, and Hittites. <sup>2</sup>These came from the nations that the LORD had commanded the Israelites about: "Don't intermarry with them. They will definitely turn your heart toward their gods." Solomon clung to these women in love. <sup>3</sup>He had seven hundred royal wives and three hundred secondary wives. They turned

10:14-29 A summary of Solomon's massive wealth. kikkars: One kikkar is approximately 76 pounds. The amount of gold seems astronomical (nearly 810,000 ounces), almost too good to be true. gold...silver (cf. 1 Kgs 9:14): The word gold appears 14 times in 1 Kings 10. The report is a subtle criticism of Solomon's excesses in accumulating gold and silver, prohibited by Deuteronomy 17:17. Similarly, Solomon's acquisition of chariots and horses...from Egypt (cf. 1 Kgs 4:28; 1 Sam 8:11) violates the instruction in Deuteronomy 17:16, where Egypt is specifically mentioned as the source for importing horses. Samuel warned that this would happen (1 Sam 8:4). The chapter is riddled with hyperbole, confirmed by expressions like these: No other kingdom (10:20); far exceeded all the earth's kings (10:23); and the whole earth (10:24). Tarshish-style ships: Seagoing vessels used for international trade (cf. 1 Kgs 22:48; Isa 2:16; 23:1; 60:9; Ezek 27:12-15; Jon 1:3). Kue: a city in southeastern Asia Minor, modern Turkey.

11:1-43 Solomon's story turns into a tragedy. The chapter doesn't follow chronologically from the previous chapter. It presents a summary explanation of why and how things turned bad for Solomon. The readers have already received clues to the tragedy that will unfold. These are all expressly forbidden by the instruction for kings in Deuteronomy 17:14-20: foreign wives (1 Kgs 3:1-3); accumulation of horses (1 Kgs 4:26, 28; 10:26-29); gold and silver (1 Kgs 9:28; 10:14-17, 25). Solomon's prayer and God's response sound as though the future doesn't look bright.

11:1-4 loved many foreign women: Solomon participates in the ancient Near Eastern practice of establishing political alliances through marriage. This practice violates the instruction for kings (Deut 17:17) and the more general prohibition against marrying non-Israelites (cf. Exod 34:11-16; Deut 7:1-5). The danger is idolatry. See sidebar, "Idolatry." turn your heart toward their gods: The chapter highlights the heart (1 Kgs 11:2, 3, 4, 9) and other gods (1 Kgs 11:2, 4, 5, 8, 10, 33; cf. Deut 17:17). Worship is one of the main concerns of the author of the books of Kings (see note on 1 Kgs 9:6-9). heart: seat of deliberation, motivation, and decision. loved (11:1) and clung (11:2) are verbs used in Deuteronomy of love for God (Deut 6:5; 10:12, 20; 11:1, 22; 13:4; 30:20). In other words, Solomon is choosing other allegiances, both political and divine. his father David: Although 1 Kings 3:3 states that Solomon had followed David's example, readers learn here that such practice must have been short-lived or incomplete. Evaluation of Judean kings based on David's example runs throughout the books of Kings (e.g., 1 Kgs 15:3, 11; see sidebar, "David as Example" at 1 Kgs 9). David appears as promise or pattern six times in this chapter (1 Kgs 11:4, 6, 12, 33, 34, 36, 38).

Moses and Joshua, David and Solomon The similarity of language between Joshua's commissioning by God (Josh 1:2-9) and Solomon's commissioning by David (1 Kgs 2:1-3), suggests that the writers of Joshua and Kings see analogous relationships among the characters at the heart of Israel's story. Faithfulness to God's Instruction will bring promised success (Josh 1:7-8; 1 Kgs 2:3). Whereas Joshua is the faithful successor and keeper of God's Instruction, Solomon is the promising but unfaithful one. As Joshua follows in the footsteps of Moses in an exemplary way, Solomon's following of David is characterized as a failure. Only Josiah (2 Kgs 22-23) is an ideal follower and faithful leader who imitates Joshua by fulfilling David's instructions. Where Solomon fails to follow David's instructions (1 Kgs 2:1-3), Josiah succeeds. In particular, both Joshua and Josiah read the Instruction of God, exactly what was stipulated for the king in Deuteronomy 17:18-19. It becomes obvious from the way Solomon's story plays itself out that Solomon doesn't pay attention to David's advice.

his heart.<sup>4</sup> As Solomon grew old, his wives turned his heart after other gods. He wasn't committed to the LORD his God with all his heart as was his father David.<sup>5</sup> Solomon followed Astarte the goddess of the Sidonians, and Milcom the detestable god of the Ammonites.<sup>6</sup> Solomon did what was evil in the LORD's eyes and wasn't completely devoted to the LORD like his father David.<sup>7</sup> On the hill east of Jerusalem, Solomon built a shrine to Chemosh the detestable god of Moab, and to Molech the detestable god of the Ammonites.<sup>8</sup> He did the same for all his foreign wives, who burned incense and sacrificed to their gods.<sup>9</sup> The LORD grew angry with Solomon, because his heart had turned away from being with the LORD, the God of Israel, who had appeared to him twice.<sup>10</sup> The LORD had commanded Solomon about this very thing, that he shouldn't follow other gods. But Solomon didn't do what the LORD commanded.

<sup>11</sup>The LORD said to Solomon, "Because you have done all this instead of keeping my covenant and my laws that I commanded you, I will most certainly tear the kingdom from you and give it to your servant.<sup>12</sup> Even so, on account of your father David, I won't do it during your lifetime. I will tear the kingdom out of your son's hands.<sup>13</sup> Moreover, I won't tear away the entire kingdom. I will give one tribe to your son on account of my servant David and on account of Jerusalem, which I have chosen."

Solomon and Hadad

<sup>14</sup>So the LORD raised up an opponent for Solomon: Hadad the Edomite from the royal line of Edom.<sup>15</sup> When David was fighting against Edom, Joab the general had gone up to bury the Israelite dead, and he had killed every male in Edom.<sup>16</sup> Joab and all the Israelites stayed there six months, until he had finished off every male in Edom.<sup>17</sup> While still a youth, Hadad escaped to Egypt along with his father's Edomite officials.<sup>18</sup> They set out from Midian and went to Paran. They took men with them from Paran and came to Egypt and to Pharaoh its king. Pharaoh assigned him a home, food, and land.<sup>19</sup> Pharaoh was so delighted with Hadad that he gave him one of his wife's sisters for marriage, a sister of Queen Tahpenes.<sup>20</sup> This sister of Tahpenes bore Hadad a son, Genubath. Tahpenes weaned him in Pharaoh's house. So it was that Genubath was raised in Pharaoh's house, among Pharaoh's children.<sup>21</sup> While in 11:5 Astarte: Hebrew Ashtoreth, which is a derogatory modification using the Hebrew vowels for the word "shame." This goddess of love and fertility is known elsewhere as Ishtar (and later as Aphrodite and Venus). In the Bible she is often the partner of Baal, the storm god (see sidebar, "Baal" at 1 Kgs 18). Milcom: also known as Molech (both based on the Semitic word for "king"), is associated with child sacrifice in the Bible (2 Kgs 23:10; Jer 32:35).

11:6 evil in the LORD's eyes: This is the first of 30 appearances of this phrase in the books of Kings (e.g., 1 Kgs 15:11, 26, 34). It is the evaluation of each king who didn't follow the Lord. In Deuteronomy 4:25 the phrase refers to idolatry, which is the main topic here.

11:7 Chemosh: Compare with Numbers 21:29. Chemosh is Molech: See 1 Kings 11:5. shrine: See note on 1 Kings 3:2.

11:9-13 The Lord grew angry: The consequence of Solomon's violation of his relationship with God follows clearly from earlier instructions and warnings (1 Kgs 2:4; 8:25; 9:4-5). See sidebar, "Anger of God" at 1 Kings 8. appeared... twice: Compare with 1 Kings 3:5; 9:2. on account of your father David: an allusion to God's promise to David (11:12-13), a major theme of the books of Kings (2 Sam 7:9-16; cf. 1 Kgs 2:45; 3:6; 6:12; 11:34; 15:4; 2 Kgs 8:19; 19:34; 20:6). on account of Jerusalem, which I have chosen: Deuteronomy mentions a place chosen by God, but never identifies it as Jerusalem (cf. 1 Kgs 8:16; Deut 12:5, 11; 16:2). one tribe: Judah, plus Benjamin (cf. 1 Kgs 11:32, 36; 12:20-23).

11:14-25 Opponents raised up by God, including flashbacks to David's encounters with these figures. Although 1 Kings 5:4 reported that Solomon had "peace on every side, without enemies"; here readers learn that the situation was more complicated. Hadad: opposes Solomon from the east and south (Edom is east of the Dead Sea; see 2 Sam 8:12-14). Rezon: opposes Solomon from the north

Egypt, Hadad heard that David had lain down with his ancestors and that Joab the general was also dead. Hadad said to Pharaoh, "Let me go to my homeland."

<sup>22</sup>Pharaoh said to him, "What do you lack here with me that would make you want to go back to your homeland?"

Hadad said, "Nothing, but please let me go!"

Solomon and Rezon

<sup>23</sup>God raised up another opponent for Solomon: Rezon, Eliada's son, who had escaped from Zobah's King Hadadezer. <sup>24</sup>Rezon recruited men and became leader of a band when David was killing them. They went to Damascus, stayed there, and ruled it. <sup>25</sup>Throughout Solomon's lifetime, Rezon was Israel's opponent and added to the problems caused by Hadad. Rezon hated Israel while he ruled as king of Aram.

Solomon and Jeroboam

Solomon had built the stepped structure and repaired the broken wall in his father David's City. <sup>28</sup>Now Jeroboam was a strong and honorable man. Solomon saw how well this youth did his work. So he appointed him over all the work gang of Joseph's house.

Idolatry Keeping the land requires single-minded loyalty to God, which implies rejecting all other allegiances, whether political or divine (Exod 20:3-6; Deut 5:7-10). Other gods are the most significant threat to Israel's well-being (cf. Deut 6:14; 8:19; 11:16-17; 30:17-18; 31:16-18; Josh 24:14). God warns Solomon that idolatry will lead to exile and God's rejection of the temple (1 Kgs 9:6-9). Unfortunately, and with tragic consequences, Solomon succumbed to the lure of these gods (1 Kgs 11:2-13). King Jeroboam, the first king of the northern kingdom, set up two gold calves, interpreted as an idolatrous and sinful act (1 Kgs 12:28-30; 13:34). Most of the kings of Israel are accused of imitating Jeroboam (cf. 1 Kgs 14:9; 15:34; 16:2). Assyria conquers Israel because of its worship of other gods (2 Kgs 17:7, 35-38).

Images of the divine are inappropriate because they don't adequately reflect the character of God and because they limit human experience and understanding of God. Because Israel's God is God of all creation and of all peoples, God can't be localized or made available in that way. Moreover, God is revealed primarily through the spoken (and written) word. Much is at stake. Idolatry threatens God's reputation not only as Israel's God, but as the only living and active God (1 Kgs 17:24; 18:21; 20:23; 2 Kgs 18:33-35). As Elijah prays, "Answer me so that this people will know that you, LORD, are the real God and that you can change their hearts" (1 Kgs 18:37-39; cf. 1 Kgs 8:60).

and east (see 2 Sam 8:3-4). Midian . . . Paran (1 Kgs 11:18): regions south of Israel in modern Jordan or the Arabian Peninsula. Damascus . . . Aram: Damascus was the capital of the Aramean kingdom of Syria to the north.

11:26-33 Jeroboam: This is the first time he appears in the story. He is one of Solomon's appointed supervisors (11:27-28) whom the prophet Ahijah announces as the next king of Israel, now comprising only ten tribes. Israel's God, the LORD, has said: the most common introduction to a prophetic statement, called a messenger speech because the expression is used in diplomatic communication (e.g., 2 Kgs 18:19-20). The words that follow are in the first person; the prophet speaks as God's ambassador, as though he speaks the very words of God (sometimes only "the LORD says"; cf. 1 Kgs 12:24; 13:2, 22; 14:7). See sidebar, "Fulfillment of the Prophetic Word" at 1 Kings 2. one tribe: plus Benjamin. See note on 1 Kings 11:9-13. abandoned me: translated "deserted" in 1 Kings 9:9.

11:34-39 These verses restate the themes found in 1 Kings 11:1-13. David: mentioned six times in these verses. See him as ruler throughout his lifetime on account of my servant David, who did keep my commands and my laws. <sup>35</sup>I will take the kingdom from the hand of Solomon's son, and I will give you ten tribes. <sup>36</sup>I will give his son a single tribe so that my servant David will always have a lamp before me in Jerusalem, the city that I chose for myself to place my name. <sup>37</sup>But I will accept you, and you will rule over all that you could desire. You will be king of Israel. <sup>38</sup>If you listen to all that I command and walk in my ways, if you do what is right in my eyes, keeping my laws and my commands just as my servant David did, then I will be with you and I will build you a lasting dynasty just as I did for David. I will give you Israel. <sup>39</sup>I will humble David's descendants by means of all this, though not forever."

Solomon's remaining days

How Rehoboam lost the kingdom

12 Rehoboam went to Shechem where all Israel had come to make him king. <sup>2</sup>When Jeroboam, Nebat's son, heard the news, he returned from Egypt where he had fled from King Solomon. <sup>3</sup>The people sent and called for Jeroboam, who along with the entire Israelite assembly went and said to Rehoboam, <sup>4</sup>"Your father made our workload<sup>m</sup> very hard for us. If you will lessen the demands your father made of us and lighten the heavy workload he demanded from us, then we will serve you."

<sup>6</sup>King Rehoboam consulted the elders who had served his father Solomon when he was alive. "What do you advise?" Rehoboam asked. "How should I respond to these people?"

<sup>7</sup>"If you will be a servant to this people by answering them and speaking good words today," they replied, "then they will be your servants forever."

<sup>8</sup>But Rehoboam ignored the advice the elders gave him and instead sought the counsel of the young advisors who had grown up with him and now served him. <sup>9</sup>"What do you advise?" he asked them. "How should we respond to these people who have said to me, 'Lighten the workload your father demanded of us?'"

<sup>10</sup>The young people who had grown up with him said to him, "This people said to you, 'Your father made our workload heavy; lighten it for us!' Now this is what you should say to sidebar, "David as Example" at 1 Kings 9. lamp: a metaphor for a living descendant of David assuring continuity for the line of David (cf. 2 Sam 21:17; 1 Kgs 15:4; 2 Kgs 8:19; Ps 132:17). to place my name: See sidebar, "Temple and Name" at 1 Kings 8. lasting dynasty: an echo of 2 Samuel 7:11, 16. The terms and conditions offered to Jeroboam are virtually the same as those spoken by David to Solomon and repeated throughout the previous chapters, including a dynasty (1 Kgs 2:3-4; 3:14; 8:25; 9:3-5), humble... though not forever: an allusion to 2 Samuel 7:14-15.

11:40 Shishak: Shoshenq I (945-924 BCE) is the first pharaoh named in the Bible (see note on 1 Kgs 14:25-31).

11:41-43 the rest... official records: This is the first of many similar summaries in the book. The authors of the books of Kings draw on court records and royal archives for Solomon and for other later kings of Israel and Judah. Such records are mentioned numerous times in the books of Kings (cf. 1 Kgs 14:19, 29; 15:7, 23, 31; 16:5, 14, 20, 27). The authors of the books of Kings drew from those records what suited their interests. Much has certainly been omitted. These archival materials no longer exist. forty years: a round number representing one generation. lay down with his ancestors: died and was buried (cf. 1 Kgs 1:21; 2:10).

12:1-33 As God (1 Kgs 11:11-13) and Ahijah had announced (1 Kgs 11:30-32), David's united kingdom is torn in two: Rehoboam takes Judah; Jeroboam takes Israel. Negotiations take place, and Rehoboam is rejected as king over the northern kingdom of Israel.

12:1 Shechem: a major city north of Jerusalem, significant because it was a place of covenant renewal (Josh 24:1-27). Israel's ancestors lived there for a time (Gen 12:6; 33:18; 37:12). all Israel: Unlike 1 Kings 11:42 and elsewhere (cf. 1 Kgs 4:1), 12:1 and 12:16 refer only to the northern tribes. 12:4 The people complain about their workload: The Hebrew metaphor is "yoke," for plowing with farm animals. It is used here as a metaphor (also five times in 12:9-14). heavy workload: the same expression as in Exodus 1:14. The implication is that conditions under Solomon had become like the slavery under Pharaoh in Egypt. This is a far cry from the hopeful sentiments of earlier descriptions (cf. 1 Kgs 4:25; 10:9).

12:10-11 baby finger: The Hebrew expression or euphemism is "little one," which likely refers to his sexual organ. Rehoboam connects sexuality and his oppressive power over the population. scorpions: perhaps a metaphor for a whip.

them: 'My baby finger<sup>a</sup> is thicker than my father's entire waist! '11So if my father made your workload heavy, I'll make it even heavier! If my father disciplined you with whips, I'll do it with scorpions!'"

<sup>12</sup>Jeroboam and all the people returned to Rehoboam on the third day, just as the king had specified when he said, "Come back to me in three days." <sup>13</sup>The king then answered the people harshly. He ignored the elders' advice <sup>14</sup>and instead followed the young people's advice. He said, "My father made your workload heavy, but I'll make it even heavier! My father disciplined you with whips, but I'll do it with scorpions!"

<sup>15</sup>The king didn't listen to the people because this turn of events came from the LORD so that he might keep the promise he delivered through Ahijah from Shiloh concerning Jeroboam, Nebat's son. <sup>16</sup>When all Israel saw that the king wouldn't listen to them, the people answered the king:

"Why should we care about David?

We have no stake in Jesse's son!

Go back to your homes, Israel!

You better look after your own house now, David!"

Then the Israelites went back to their homes, <sup>17</sup>and Rehoboam ruled over only the Israelites who lived in the cities of Judah.

<sup>18</sup>When King Rehoboam sent Adoram to them (he was the leader of the work gang), all Israel stoned him to death. King Rehoboam quickly got into his chariot and fled to Jerusalem. <sup>19</sup>Israel has been in rebellion against the house of David to this day. <sup>20</sup>When all Israel heard that Jeroboam had returned, they sent for him. They called him to the assembly and crowned him king of all Israel.

Nothing was left to the house of David except the tribe of Judah. <sup>21</sup>When Rehoboam arrived at Jerusalem, he assembled the whole house of Judah and the tribe of Benjamin—one hundred eighty thousand select warriors—to fight against the house of Israel and restore the kingdom for Rehoboam, Solomon's son. <sup>22</sup>But God's word came to Shemaiah the man of God, <sup>23</sup>"Tell Judah's King Rehoboam, Solomon's son, and all the house of Judah and Benjamin, and the rest of the people, <sup>24</sup>"This is what the LORD says: Don't make war against your relatives the Israelites. Go home, every one of you, because this is my plan.'" When they heard the LORD's words, they went back home, just as the LORD had said.

Jeroboam I and the shrines

12:14 even heavier: Rehoboam speaks like Pharaoh (cf. Exod 5:1-21).

12:15 came from the LORD: a theological commentary that explains how, in the midst of the human negotiation, it might be possible to see God at work in the circumstances (also 1 Kgs 12:24; cf. Exod 4:21; 7:3-4, 13; Josh 11:20). promise... Ahijah: See sidebar, "Fulfillment of the Prophetic Word" at 1 Kings 2, one of the main themes of the books of Kings.

12:16-17 The response of the northern tribes is to reject David's heir as Sheba did earlier (cf. 2 Sam 20:1). The effect was to break the alliance among the tribes, which had been established by David (2 Sam 5:3). the Israelites: probably Benjaminites who aligned themselves with Jerusalem. 12:18 Adoram: He may be the person named in 1 Kings 4:6 and 5:14. If so, he is assigned here to initiate Rehoboam's excessive measures (cf. 1 Kgs 9:15-23).

12:19 to this day: reflects a time prior to the exile of the northern kingdom (722 BCE).

12:22-24 The prophet seems to settle matters down. Although the conflict between Israel and Judah will continue (cf. 1 Kgs 14:30; 15:6, 16), they often cooperated in battles against enemies. God's word... the LORD's words: See sidebar, "Fulfillment of the Prophetic Word" at 1 Kings 2. my plan: See note on 1 Kings 12:15.

12:25 Shechem: See note on 1 Kings 12:1. Penuel: east of the Jordan River (cf. Gen 32:22-32).

12:26-28 Jeroboam's religious strategy for consolidating his kingdom is motivated by fear that the people might be drawn to the LORD's temple in Jerusalem. gold calves: El, the high god of the Canaanite pantheon; and Baal are often depicted as bulls. The bull represents sexual fertility and political power (see note on 1 Kgs 12:10; see sidebar, "Baal" at 1 Kgs 18). The story reflects the incident of the gold calf of Exod 32. Here are your gods... from the land of Egypt: Jeroboam repeats almost exactly Aaron's words from that event (cf. Exod 32:4). In place of the chest (which was housed in the Jerusalem temple and represented God's Look, Israel! Here are your gods who brought you out from the land of Egypt.”<sup>29</sup>He put one calf in Bethel, and the other he placed in Dan.<sup>30</sup>This act was sinful. The people went to worship before the one calf at Bethel and before the other one as far as Dan.<sup>31</sup>Jeroboam made shrines on the high places and appointed priests from all sorts of people, but none were Levites.<sup>32</sup>Jeroboam set a date for a celebration on the fifteenth day of the eighth month.<sup>33</sup>It was just like the celebration in Judah. He sacrificed on the altar. At Bethel he sacrificed to the calves he had made. There also he installed the priests for the shrines he had made.<sup>33</sup>On the fifteenth day of the eighth month—the time he alone had decided—Jeroboam went up<sup>34</sup> to the altar he had built in Bethel. He made a celebration for the Israelites and offered sacrifices on the altar by burning them up.<sup>35</sup>

Jeroboam I and the man of God

13 A man of God came from Judah by God’s command to Bethel. Jeroboam was standing at the altar burning incense.<sup>2</sup>By the LORD’s word, the man of God cried out to the altar: “Altar! Altar! The LORD says this: Look! A son will be born to the house of David. His name will be Josiah. He will sacrifice on you, Altar, the very priests of the shrines who offer incense on you. They will burn human bones on you.”<sup>3</sup>At that time the man of God gave a sign: “This is the sign that the LORD mentioned: ‘Look! The altar will be broken apart, and its ashes will spill out.’” presence), Jeroboam represents God with images of animals, an act prohibited by the Ten Commandments (Exod 20:4-5; Deut 5:8-9).

<sup>4</sup>When the king heard the word of the man of God and how he cried out to the altar at Bethel, Jeroboam stretched his hand from the altar and said, “Seize him!” But the hand that Jeroboam stretched out against the man of God grew stiff. Jeroboam wasn’t able to bend it back to himself.<sup>5</sup>The altar broke apart, and the ashes spilled out from the altar, just like the sign that the man of God gave by the LORD’s word.<sup>6</sup>The king said to the man of God, “Plead before the LORD your God and pray for me so that I can bend my hand back again.” So the man of God pleaded before the LORD, and the king’s hand returned to normal and was like it used to be.<sup>7</sup>The king spoke to the man of God: “Come with me to the palace and refresh yourself. Let me give you a gift.”

<sup>8</sup>The man of God said to the king, “Even if you gave me half your palace, I wouldn’t go with you, nor would I eat food or drink water in this place.<sup>9</sup>This is what God commanded me by the LORD’s word: Don’t eat food! Don’t drink water! Don’t return by the way you came!”

12:29-33 Bethel... Dan: Jeroboam’s political strategy for consolidating his kingdom involves situating worship sites at the southern and northern boundaries of the northern kingdom. This will prevent his people from traveling south to Jerusalem and being drawn into loyalty to Judah’s king. This act was sinful: 1 Kings 12:26-33 describes “Jeroboam’s sins,” a phrase repeated often throughout the books of Kings in the evaluation of the kings of Israel (e.g., 1 Kgs 14:16; 15:26, 30, 34; 2 Kgs 3:3; 10:29). According to the historian’s evaluation of Israel’s failures, this act leads Israel into exile (2 Kgs 17:20-23). shrines: See note on 1 Kings 3:2-3. none were Levites: Jeroboam bypasses the tradition of legitimate priesthood, thereby asserting his own management of the worship establishment. eighth month... the time he alone had decided: The festival in Jerusalem was held in the seventh month during Solomon’s reign (1 Kgs 8:2). As a further act of political control, Jeroboam changed the religious calendar, instituting his own feast one month later than the traditional date of the Festival of Booths (cf. Lev 23:39; Num 29:12). Perhaps he did this because of a slightly later harvest in the northern regions (e.g., Galilee).

13:1-34 The word of the Lord confronts the power politics of Jeroboam. The king fails to follow through on Ahijah’s hopeful prophetic invitation (1 Kgs 12:37-38) and is brought down by the prophetic word. Two stories about prophets illustrate one of the main themes of the books of Kings: the power of the prophetic word in history. See sidebar, “Fulfillment of the Prophetic Word” at 1 Kings 2.

13:1-10 man of God: a descriptive title for a prophet, used often in the books of Samuel and Kings (cf. 1 Sam 2:27; 9:6; 1 Kgs 12:22; 17:24; 2 Kgs 1:10; 4:9). In the Elijah story, a woman declares concerning him that “the Lord’s word is truly in your mouth” (1 Kgs 17:24). That is exactly what the stories in 1 Kings 13 are beginning to explore. In doing so, they set the stage for the explicit political theology of the books of Kings. by God’s command: This expression, repeated seven times in this chapter, identifies the power of the prophetic word as the chapter’s main theme. It is most often translated in this chapter as the LORD’s word (1 Kgs 13:1, 2, 5, 9, 17, 18, 32; cf. 20:35). Josiah: Naming this future king of Judah connects this prophetic event to the story in 2 Kings 22:1–23:30 (especially 23:15–16). By then the northern kingdom had come to an end. sign: Confirmed in 1 Kings 13:5, this immediate fulfillment is a confirmation that the announcement about Josiah will become reality. Josiah’s “reform” occurred in approximately 620 BCE. I wouldn’t go with you: The prophet refuses to be co-opted by the king. He is obedient to the Lord’s word, which Jeroboam is not, as readers are beginning to discover.

<sup>10</sup>So the man of God went by a different way. He didn't return by the way he came to Bethel. <sup>11</sup>Now there was an old prophet living in Bethel. His sons came and told him everything that the man of God had done that day at Bethel. They also told their father the words that he spoke to the king. <sup>12</sup>"Which way did he go?" their father asked them. His sons had seen the way the man of God went when he came from Judah. <sup>13</sup>The old prophet said to his sons, "Saddle my donkey." So they saddled his donkey, and he got on it. <sup>14</sup>He went after the man of God and found him sitting underneath a terebinth tree. He said to him, "Are you the man of God who came from Judah?"

"I am," he replied.

<sup>15</sup>The old prophet then said to him, "Come home with me and eat some food."

<sup>16</sup>But the man of God answered, "I can't return or go with you, and I can't eat food or drink water with you in this place <sup>17</sup>because of the message that came to me from the LORD's word: Don't eat food! Don't drink water! Don't return by the way you came!"

<sup>18</sup>The old prophet said to the man of God, "I'm also a prophet like you. A messenger spoke to me with the LORD's word, 'Bring him back with you to your house so that he may eat food and drink water.'"

But the old prophet was lying to him. <sup>19</sup>So the man of God went back with the old prophet. He ate food in his home and drank water. <sup>20</sup>Then as they were sitting at the table, the LORD's word came to the prophet who had brought him back. <sup>21</sup>He cried out to the man of God who had come from Judah:

"The LORD says this:

You rebelled against the LORD's word!

You didn't keep the command that the LORD your God gave you!

<sup>22</sup>You came back and ate food and drank water in this place.

"But he had commanded you: 'Don't eat food! Don't drink water!' Now your body won't go to the grave of your ancestors."

<sup>27</sup>The old prophet told his sons, "Saddle the donkey." They did so, <sup>28</sup>and he went and found the body thrown down on the road. The donkey and the lion were still standing beside the body. The lion hadn't eaten the body, nor had it torn the donkey apart. <sup>29</sup>The prophet lifted the body of the man of God and put it on the donkey. He brought it back, arriving in the old prophet's town to mourn and bury the man of God. <sup>30</sup>He placed the body in his own grave, and they mourned over him, "Oh, my brother!" <sup>31</sup>After the old prophet buried him, he said to his sons, "When I die, bury me in the grave where the man of God is. Put my bones beside his bones. <sup>32</sup>The message he gave by the LORD's word concerning the altar of Bethel and all the shrines in the towns of Samaria will most certainly come true."

13:11-32 Testing the prophetic word. This odd and tragic story underlines the theme of obedience to the Lord's word, introduced in the previous story. The motif the Lord's word continues to reverberate throughout the story. You rebelled... didn't keep the command: The punch line in 13:21-22, delivered by the old prophet, highlights disobedience. There is no compromising, no matter how questionable the circumstances. Yet this story also opens up an important question: How does one recognize when a word from the Lord is authentic? The story takes up the topic from Deuteronomy 18:15-22, which warns against not paying attention to the words of the prophets (the outcome is death), and which provides the criterion for recognizing a false prophet (if the prophetic announcement "doesn't happen"). Unfortunately for this man of God, he had to choose obedience (the first principle) since he had no other way of evaluating the prophet's claim: I'm also a prophet like you. He can't know that the old prophet was lying. The story ultimately isn't about these two prophets. It concerns the power of the Lord's word to shape reality in general, and in particular to bring about the consequences of Jeremiah's actions. See 1 Kings 22 for another story about the complications surrounding true and false prophecy.

13:11 His sons: a term for a prophetic guild (cf. 1 Kgs 13:31; 2 Kgs 2:3, 5, 7, 16). The old prophet is their leader.

13:32 Samaria: became the capital of the northern kingdom, Israel, under Omri, the father of Ahab (1 Kgs 16:24). It is used here for the first time in the books of Kings, where it often refers, as it does here, to the entire region.

<sup>33</sup>Even after this happened, Jeroboam didn't change his evil ways. Instead, he continued to appoint all sorts of people as priests of the shrines. Anyone who wanted to be a priest Jeroboam made a priest for the shrines. <sup>34</sup>In this way the house of Jeroboam acted sinfully, leading to its downfall and elimination from the earth.

Abijah's Illness

14 At that time, Jeroboam's son Abijah became sick. <sup>2</sup>Jeroboam said to his wife, "Please go with a disguise so no one will recognize you as Jeroboam's wife. Go to Shiloh where the prophet Ahijah is. He told me I would be king of this people. <sup>3</sup>Take ten loaves of bread, cakes, and a bottle of honey with you. Go to him. He will tell you what will happen to the boy." <sup>4</sup>Jeroboam's wife did precisely this. She left and went to Shiloh and came to Ahijah's house. Now Ahijah had become blind in his old age.

<sup>5</sup>The LORD said to Ahijah, "Look! Jeroboam's wife has come seeking a word from you about her son. He is sick. Say this and that to her. When she comes, she will be disguised."

<sup>6</sup>When Ahijah heard the sound of her feet coming through the doorway, he said, "Come in, Jeroboam's wife! Why have you disguised yourself? I have hard news for you. <sup>7</sup>Tell Jeroboam: This is what the LORD, Israel's God, says: When I lifted you up from among the people, I appointed you as a leader over my people Israel. <sup>8</sup>I tore the kingdom from David's house and gave it to you. But you haven't been like my servant David, who kept my commands and followed me with all his heart by doing only what is right in my eyes. <sup>9</sup>Instead, you have done more evil than any who were before you. You have made other gods and metal images to anger me. You have turned your back on me. <sup>10</sup>Therefore, I'm going to bring disaster on Jeroboam's house! Because of Jeroboam, I will eliminate everyone who urinates on a wall, whether slave or free. Then I will set fire to the house of Jeroboam, as one burns dung until it is gone. <sup>11</sup>Dogs will eat any of Jeroboam's family who die in town. Birds will eat those who die in the field. The LORD has spoken!

<sup>12</sup>As for you, get up and go back home. When your feet enter the town, the boy will die. <sup>13</sup>All Israel will mourn for him and will bury him. Out of the whole line of Jeroboam, he alone will have a tomb, because only in him did Israel's God, the LORD, find something good. <sup>14</sup>For this reason the LORD will raise up a king over Israel who will eliminate the house of Jeroboam. This begins today. What's that? Even now! <sup>15</sup>The LORD will strike Israel so that it shakes like a reed in water. He will uproot Israel from this fertile land that he gave to their ancestors and their offspring, and he will scatter them across the Euphrates River, because 13:33-34 The conclusion to the stories in this chapter make it clear that Jeroboam's heart is set in its way. He doesn't respond to the Lord's warning but continues to do the same things (cf. 1 Kgs 12:31). didn't change: the Hebrew verb, often translated "to turn," "to return," or "to go/bring back," is used here in a play on words that highlights an important theme of the chapter (occurring 16 times to indicate the turning or returning of the prophet). In these last verses the author makes clear that Jeroboam didn't, literally, "turn back." In Deuteronomy Moses announces that Israel from exile might "return to the LORD . . . obeying his voice" (Deut 30:2; cf. 30:10). Jeroboam has done the opposite, has not "returned." As a result of his having acted sinfully, his house (dynasty) will meet its end.

14:1-20 Jeroboam's reign ends with a personal tragedy: the death of his son. Jeroboam discovers that consulting the prophet in the hope of a recovery (for his son and perhaps also for his kingdom) is of no use.

14:1-4 disguise: Jeroboam's attempt to manage the situation fails, since the prophet, as recipient of God's knowledge, sees through the ploy even though he is blind. The motif of royal disguise in other texts also emphasizes God's capacity to control the situation (cf. 1 Sam 28; 1 Kgs 20:35-48; 22:29-38). Ahijah: the prophet who announced that Jeroboam would become Israel's king (1 Kgs 11:29). It was common to consult prophets regarding illness (2 Kgs 4:22; 5:3).

14:5 seeking a word: a common expression used for consulting prophets concerning God's will in various situations (cf. 1 Kgs 22:5; 7-8; 2 Kgs 22:18). See sidebar, "Fulfillment of the Prophetic Word" at 1 Kings 2.

14:6-11 This is what the LORD . . . says: See note on 1 Kings 11:26-33. Ahijah's words allude to 1 Kings 11:37-38 and highlight Jeroboam's "sins" (cf. 1 Kgs 12:25-33). like my servant David: See sidebar, "David as Example" at 1 Kings 9. anger: See sidebar, "Anger of God" at 1 Kings 8. His announcement of disaster on Jeroboam's house and its gruesome outworking come to fruition in 1 Kings 15:29. eliminate: The Hebrew expression is "cut off," which is a stark contrast to the promises concerning David, about whom it is said that his dynasty "will never fail" (David will "not be cut off"; 1 Kgs 2:4; 8:25; 9:5). urinates on a wall . . . slave or free: a graphic description indicating that all males will be killed (cf. 1 Kgs 16:11; 21:21; 2 Kgs 9:8). as one burns dung: The imagery continues with this simile. Dogs . . . Birds will eat: They will be dishonored by not being buried.

14:12-18 Ahijah's words to Jeroboam's wife include only slightly good news: Her son will have a tomb since God found something good in him. The prophet doesn't say they made the LORD angry by making their sacred poles.<sup>16</sup> Because of the sins Jeroboam committed, and because he made Israel sin too, God will give Israel up.”

Rehoboam rules Judah

<sup>21</sup>Rehoboam, Solomon’s son, ruled over Judah. Rehoboam was 41 years old when he became king. He ruled for seventeen years in Jerusalem, the city the LORD chose from among all the tribes of Israel to set his name. Rehoboam’s mother’s name was Naamah from Ammon. <sup>22</sup>Judah did evil in the LORD’s eyes. The sins they committed made the LORD angrier than anything their ancestors had done. <sup>23</sup>They also built shrines, standing stones, and sacred poles<sup>a</sup> on top of every high hill and under every green tree. <sup>24</sup>Moreover, the consecrated workers<sup>b</sup> in the land did detestable things, just like those nations that the LORD had removed among the Israelites.

what that might be. This announcement is fulfilled immediately. raise up a king: Baasha (1 Kgs 15:27-29). strike Israel... uproot Israel... scatter them: In the longer term God intends exile, which is fulfilled in Assyria’s conquest of Israel (2 Kgs 17:1-6, 21-23; cf. Deut 29:28; 1 Kgs 8:46). fertile land: The threat of being uprooted from the fertile land occurs in other texts (cf. Deut 11:17; Josh 23:13, 15-16). This is a favorite way of describing the land in Deuteronomy, where it is also translated “wonderful land” (Deut 1:25, 35; 3:25; 4:21-22; 6:18; 8:7, 10). angry: See sidebar, “Anger of God” at 1 Kings 8. sacred poles: a symbol of the fertility goddess Asherah. In various ancient texts, she is either the wife of El, head of the Canaanite pantheon, or the consort of Baal (cf. Deut 7:5; 16:21; 2 Kgs 17:10; 23:14). Tirzah: probably Tell el Farah, about seven miles northeast of Shechem. This was the capital of the northern kingdom from Jeroboam to Omri, who changed the capital to Samaria. in agreement with the Lord’s word: The announcement made in verse 12 has now been realized. See sidebar, “Fulfillment of the Prophetic Word” at 1 Kings 2.

14:19-20 The rest... official records: See note on 1 Kings 11:41-43.

14:21-31 At this point the story begins to alternate between kings of Judah and kings of Israel. Rehoboam: Solomon’s son. Rehoboam has already been introduced as the one who lost the 10 northern tribes (see 1 Kgs 12:1-24).

14:21 Each Judean king will be introduced this way: name, age, years of reign, mother’s name, and evaluation of the king. Jerusalem... to set his name: See sidebar, “Temple and Name” at 1 Kings 8.

14:22-24 did evil in the Lord’s eyes: a characteristic expression in the books of Kings. See note on 1 Kings 11:6. Here it is the whole people of Judah, not only the king, that violates God’s instructions regarding worshipping this God alone. shrines, standing stones, and sacred poles: See notes at 1 Kings 3:2-3; 14:12-18. According to Deuteronomy, the standing stones are prohibited and are to be destroyed (Deut 12:3; 16:22; see also 2 Kgs 3:2; 10:26-27; 17:10; 23:14). They are upright pillars dedicated to a deity. consecrated workers: Their responsibilities are unclear. As the translators’ footnote suggests, these have traditionally been understood as male prostitutes, though there is no evidence of ritual intercourse at holy places. They may have been foreigners, since Asa deported them (1 Kgs 15:12). detestable things, just like those nations: Imitation of the worship practices of other peoples was prohibited and led to the downfall of the northern kingdom, Israel. There is a premonition here that the same is likely to happen to Judah (cf. Deut 12:20; 18:9-14; 2 Kgs 17:15).

14:25-31 Rehoboam’s rule comes to an end with Shishak’s (Sheshonq I, 945-924 BCE) invasion. Canaan had been an Egyptian province. The walls of the temple at Karnak (Egypt) record 156 Israelite cities were captured, most of them from Jeroboam’s territory. Shishak: See note on 1 Kings 11:40. treasures of the Lord’s temple... palace: The stripping of Solomon’s wealth from the treasures (see note on 1 Kgs 7:51) is the first such event among many to follow that will ultimately spell the demise of Judah (cf. 1 Kgs 15:18; 2 Kgs 12:18; 14:14; 16:8; 18:15-16; 20:13; 24:13). Rehoboam may have used the wealth from the treasures

Deut 12:28; 13:18; 1 Kgs 5:11; 22:43; 2 Kgs 22:2), a counterpart to "evil in the LORD's eyes," which is applied to Solomon and others after him (cf. 1 Kgs 11:6; 15:26). except in the matter of Uriah the Hittite: Although David is an example of doing right (cf. 1 Kgs 14:8), this is the first time in the book where the author notes David's singular exception (cf. 1 Sam 11).

15:6-8 The comments about war between Rehoboam and Jeroboam and between Abijam and Jeroboam highlight the continuation of the same state of affairs as noted in 1 Kings 14:30. The summary of Abijam's reign in 1 Kings 15:7-8 includes the same features as other reports about Judean and Israelite kings found throughout the books of Kings (see note on 1 Kgs 11:41-43).

15:10 forty-one years: from 910 to 869 BCE. His rule spanned the reigns of seven Israelite kings, from Jeroboam (1 Kgs 15:9) to Ahab (1 Kgs 16:29). grandmother's . . . daughter: The Hebrew word for "mother" can also be translated grandmother.

15:11-15 The positive evaluation of Asa's rule is similar to other Judean kings who did the right things and who acted like . . . David: See sidebar, "David as Example" at 1 Kings 9. consecrated workers: See note on 1 Kings 14:22-24. idols: Compare with Deuteronomy 29:16; 1 Kings 21:26; 2 Kings 17:12; 21:11, 21; 23:24. queen mother: an important figure in the royal court (cf. 1 Kgs 2:19; 2 Kgs 10:13; Jer 13:18). The books of Kings often mention the mother or grandmother of the king in the introductions to Judean kings' reigns (e.g. 1 Kgs 15:2, 10). Asherah: See note on 1 Kings 14:12-18. with all his heart: See note on 1 Kings 2:3. Kidron Valley: between Jerusalem and the Mount of Olives. shrines: Although hilltop shrines were prohibited, the matter isn't held against him. See note on 1 Kings 3:2-3.

15:16-17 Baasha: Compare with 1 Kings 15:33-16:7. Ramah: a few miles north of Jerusalem, was on a main transportation route into Jerusalem from the west and north. Like Jeroboam, Baasha wants to prevent people from worshipping in Jerusalem (cf. 1 Kgs 12:28).

<sup>18</sup>Asa took all the silver and gold that remained in the treasuries of the LORD's temple and the royal palace, and he gave them to his officials. Then King Asa sent them with the following message to Aram's King Ben-hadad, Tabrimmon's son and Hezion's grandson, who ruled from Damascus: <sup>19</sup>"Let's make a covenant similar to the one between our fathers. Since I have already sent you a gift of silver and gold, break your covenant with Israel's King Baasha so that he will leave me alone." <sup>20</sup>Ben-hadad agreed with King Asa and sent his army commanders against the cities of Israel, attacking Ijon, Dan, Abel-beth-maacah, and all Chinneroth, along with all the land of Naphtali. <sup>21</sup>As soon as Baasha learned this, he stopped building Ramah and stayed in Tirzah. <sup>22</sup>King Asa issued an order to every Judean without exception: all the people carried away the stone and timber that Baasha was using to build Ramah, and King Asa used it to build Geba of Benjamin and Mizpah. <sup>23</sup>The rest of Asa's deeds, his strength, and all that he did, as well as the towns that he built, aren't they written in the official records of Judah's kings? When he was old, Asa developed a severe foot disease. <sup>24</sup>He died and was buried with his ancestors in David's City.<sup>a</sup> His son Jehoshaphat succeeded him as king.

Nadab rules Israel

<sup>25</sup>Jeroboam's son Nadab became king of Israel in the second year of Judah's King Asa. He ruled over Israel for two years. <sup>26</sup>He did evil in the LORD's eyes by walking in the way of his father Jeroboam and the sin Jeroboam had caused Israel to commit. <sup>27</sup>Baasha, Ahijah's son from the house of Issachar, plotted against him and attacked him at Gibbethon, which belonged to the Philistines. Nadab and all Israel were laying siege against Gibbethon. <sup>28</sup>Baasha killed Nadab in the third year of Judah's King Asa and ruled in Nadab's place.

<sup>29</sup>When he became king, Baasha attacked the entire house of Jeroboam. He didn't allow any living person to survive in Jeroboam's family; he wiped them out according to the LORD's word spoken by the LORD's servant Ahijah of Shiloh. <sup>30</sup>This happened because of Jeroboam's sins that he committed and that he caused Israel to commit, and because he angered the LORD, Israel's God. <sup>31</sup>The rest of Nadab's deeds and all that he did, aren't they written in the official records of Israel's kings? <sup>32</sup>There was war between Asa and Israel's King Baasha throughout their lifetimes.

Baasha rules Israel

<sup>33</sup>In the third year of Judah's King Asa, Baasha, Ahijah's son, became king over all Israel. He ruled in Tirzah for twenty-four years. <sup>34</sup>He did evil in the LORD's eyes by walking in Jeroboam's ways and the sin he had caused Israel to commit.

16 The LORD's word came to Jehu, Hanani's son, against Baasha: <sup>1</sup>I raised you up from the dust and made you a leader over my people Israel, but you walked in Jeroboam's ways, making my people Israel sin, making me angry with their sins. <sup>2</sup>So look, I am about to set fire to Baasha and his household, and I will make your house like the house of Jeroboam, Nebat's son. <sup>4</sup>Dogs will eat any of Baasha's family who die in town. Birds will eat any who die in the country.

15:18-22 With silver and gold from the temple treasuries, Asa finances a covenant (treaty) with Ben-hadad, the Aramean king in Damascus, who made a serious military incursion into Israel. Much of the northern kingdom (tribes of Dan and Naphtali) are now under Aramean control. Asa's motivation is to keep Baasha at bay (cf. 1 Kgs 15:17). Plundering the treasuries for such purposes became common for Judean kings (cf. 2 Kgs 12:18; 16:8; 18:15; 20:13; 15; 24:13). The Syrian advance in the north allows Asa to move his border several miles north of Ramah to Geba and Mizpah.

15:23-24 official records: See note on 1 Kings 11:41-43.

15:25-32 The evaluation of Jeroboam's son Nadab doesn't mention specifics. The summary notes simply that he did evil and imitated the way of his father Jeroboam (see note on 1 Kgs 12:29-33). The plot, along with the death of Jeroboam's family, intends to destroy any living heir to the throne (house means dynasty). The author interprets this event as a fulfillment of the prophet's words (cf. 1 Kgs 14:10-11). See sidebar, "Fulfillment of the Prophetic Word" at 1 Kings 2. angered the LORD: See sidebar, "Anger of God" at 1 Kings 8. official records: See note on 1 Kings 11:41-43.

15:33-16:7 Baasha comes under the criticism of both the narrator and the prophet Jehu, an otherwise unknown prophetic figure. Jehu's words echo those of Ahijah against Jeroboam (see 1 Kgs 14:7, 10-11). making me angry: The motif of God's anger occurs five times in this chapter (1 Kgs 15:2, 7, 13, 26, 33). See sidebar, "Anger of God" at 1 Kings 8. official records: See note on 1 Kings 11:41-43. The last sentence of 16:7 is difficult to translate. Either the Lord attacked Baasha or he (Baasha) attacked and wiped out Nadab's family (referring perhaps to 1 Kgs 15:29). The second option is an example of how the one who carries out God's intentions for judgment is also judged for doing so (cf. 1 Kgs 21:21-24 and Hos 1:4).

<sup>7</sup>But the LORD's word came through the prophet Jehu, Hanani's son, concerning Baasha and his house. It concerned everything evil in the LORD's eyes that Baasha had done, angering the Lord by his actions so that he would end up just like the house of Jeroboam. The message was also about how the Lord attacked Baasha.<sup>b</sup>

Elah rules Israel

<sup>11</sup>Once Zimri became king and sat on the throne, he attacked all of Baasha's house. He didn't spare anyone who urinates on a wall, whether relative or friend. <sup>12</sup>Zimri destroyed the entire house of Baasha in agreement with the LORD's word that had been spoken by the prophet Jehu to Baasha. <sup>13</sup>This happened because of all Baasha's sins, as well as the sins of his son Elah and because they caused Israel to sin. They angered Israel's God, the LORD, with their insignificant idols. <sup>14</sup>The rest of Elah's deeds and all that he did, aren't they written in the official records of Israel's kings?

Zimri rules Israel

<sup>15</sup>In the twenty-seventh year of Judah's King Asa, Zimri became king. He ruled in Tirzah for seven days. The army was camped at Gibbethon in Philistia. <sup>16</sup>They heard the news: "Zimri has plotted against the king and killed him." Right then, in the camp, the whole Israelite army made their general Omri king of Israel. <sup>17</sup>Omri and the entire army then went up from Gibbethon and laid siege to Tirzah. <sup>18</sup>When Zimri saw that the city was captured, he went into the fort of the royal palace and burned it down on top of himself. So he died. <sup>19</sup>This happened because of the sins Zimri had committed by doing evil in the LORD's eyes and by walking in Jeroboam's ways and the sin he had done by causing Israel to sin. <sup>20</sup>The rest of Zimri's deeds and the plot he carried out, aren't they written in the official records of Israel's kings?

Omri rules Israel

<sup>21</sup>At this time the people of Israel were split in two. One half of the people followed Tibni, Ginath's son, making him king; the other half followed Omri. <sup>22</sup>Omri's side was stronger than those who followed Tibni, Ginath's son. So Tibni died and Omri became king. <sup>23</sup>In the thirty-first year of Judah's King Asa, Omri became king of Israel. He ruled for twelve years, six of which were in Tirzah. <sup>24</sup>He bought the hill of Samaria from Shemer for two kikkars of silver. He fortified the hill and named the town that he built there after Shemer, the previous owner of the hill of Samaria. <sup>25</sup>Omri did evil in the LORD's eyes, more evil than anyone

<sup>b</sup>Or and also about how he attacked him or and because Baasha had attacked Jeroboam

16:8-14 Baasha's dynasty is cut short when Zimri plots an attack on Baasha's house. urinates... wall: See note on 1 Kings 14:6-11. the Lord's word: See sidebar, "Fulfillment of the Prophetic Word" at 1 Kings 2. sins: The elimination of dynastic heirs is accounted for by both Baasha's and Elah's idolatrous actions. official records: See note on 1 Kings 11:41-43.

16:15-20 Although Zimri's accession to the throne is noted in 1 Kings 16:11, these verses take up the formal description of Zimri's reign, which lasted for only seven days. Zimri's plot against Baasha didn't get him the popular support he needed. Omri, on the other hand, had the support of his army. In spite of Zimri's very short reign (he hardly has time to move into the palace), the narrator's theological explanation for Zimri's downfall is the same as that of Baasha (1 Kgs 15:34) and other Israelite kings.

See note on 1 Kings 12:29-33. official records: See note on 1 Kings 11:41-43.

16:21-27 Omri had already attacked Zimri at Tirzah (1 Kgs 16:17), and now must deal with another contender, Tibni. Omri emerges from civil war and moves the capital from Tirzah to Samaria. Omri is one of the few Israelite kings named in non-Israelite texts from the ancient Near East. King Mesha of Moab (cf. 2 Kgs 3:4) reports on a stele that Omri had conquered parts of Moab. Because of his reputation Israel was called "the house of Omri" in Assyrian inscriptions. kikkars: one kikkar is equivalent to approximately 76 pounds. The narrator notes that Omri did... more evil than anyone else. In spite of that, he founded a three- or four-member dynasty that lasted for more than 100 years and included Ahab and Ahaziah and possibly Jehoram, whose stories are told in 1 Kings who preceded him. <sup>26</sup>He walked in all the ways and sins of Jeroboam, Nebat's son, because he caused Israel to sin. They angered Israel's God, the LORD, with their worthless idols. <sup>27</sup>The rest of Omri's deeds and his powerful acts, aren't they written in the official records of Israel's kings? <sup>28</sup>Omri lay down with his ancestors and was buried in Samaria. His son Ahab succeeded him as king.

Ahab rules Israel

<sup>29</sup>In the thirty-eighth year of Judah's King Asa, Ahab, Omri's son, became king of Israel. He ruled over Israel in Samaria for twenty-two years <sup>30</sup>and did evil in the LORD's eyes, more than anyone who preceded him. <sup>31</sup>Ahab found it easy to walk in the sins of Jeroboam, Nebat's son. He married Jezebel the daughter of Ethbaal, who was the king of the Sidonians. He served and worshipped Baal. <sup>32</sup>He made an altar for Baal in the Baal temple he had constructed in Samaria. <sup>33</sup>Ahab also made a sacred pole<sup>c</sup> and did more to anger the LORD, the God of Israel, than any of Israel's kings who preceded him. <sup>34</sup>During Ahab's time, Hiel from Bethel rebuilt Jericho. He set up its foundations at the cost of his oldest son Abiram. He hung its gates at the cost of his youngest son Segub. This fulfilled the LORD's word spoken through Joshua, Nun's son.

Elijah and the ravens

17 Elijah with Tishbe, who was one of the settlers in Gilead, said to Ahab, "As surely as the LORD lives, Israel's God, the one I serve, there will be neither dew nor rain these years unless I say so."

17–21; 2 Kings 8. Omri reigned from 886 to 875 BCE. sins of Jeroboam: See note on 1 Kings 12:29–33 (cf. 1 Kgs 14:16; 15:26, 34). official records: See note on 1 Kings 11:41–43. 16:29–22:40 A large portion of 1 Kings concerns Ahab and the prophets Elijah and Elisha, who challenge his identification with the Canaanite god Baal and who call Israel back to faithfulness to Israel's God. The report specifically about Ahab's reign begins in 1 Kings 16:29–34 and ends with the summary in 1 Kings 22:39–40. In between, Elijah, Elisha, and various prophets take center stage. 16:29–34 The summary statements about Ahab's reign in these verses provide the narrator's overall evaluation. Ahab... did evil... more than anyone: The narrator highlights the problem facing the northern kingdom by repeating the formula from 1 Kings 16:25. The repetition of the comparative more... than any of Israel's kings in 16:33 underscores the matter even further. Ahab even found it easy to imitate Jeroboam (cf. 1 Kgs 12:29–33). The sense is that Ahab betrayed God deliberately. He married Jezebel, who was a partner in crime (cf. 1 Kgs 21; see note on 1 Kgs 11:1–4). In particular, he served and worshipped Baal: Baal is mentioned here for the first time in the books of Kings. Baal is the ancient Semitic storm god whose potency guarantees the fertility of the land. His name is shorthand for Baal-Hadad, meaning "lord Hadad." The name Baal often occurs as part of personal names, as it does in Ethbaal (16:31; cf. Judg 7:1; 2 Sam 2:10). According to Ugaritic mythology, Baal is married to Anat; he battles against Yam ("Sea") and Mot ("Death") in the creation narrative. A stele in the Louvre museum (Paris) depicts him with the weapon of lightning. He rides on chariots, and the clouds thunder. It isn't surprising, therefore, that rain (storm) and famine and fertility of the land are the preoccupation of the stories about Elijah and Ahab that follow (1 Kgs 17–18). sacred pole: See note on 1 Kings 14:12–18. 16:34 Hiel... rebuilt Jericho... fulfilled the LORD's word: The author assumes this terrible event is the outcome of Joshua's curse on the one who rebuilt Jericho (Josh 6:26). The historian affirms that Joshua spoke a prophetic word, confirming the theological perspective of the books of Kings that the divine word is the primary active power in history. See sidebar, "Fulfillment of the Prophetic Word" at 1 Kings 2. at the cost of: The text doesn't say how Hiel's sons died. He may have offered them as sacrifices (a common interpretation), or they may have died during the construction project (interpreted simply as a judgment of God). 17:1–22:40 The settings of the following stories within Ahab's reign take up major themes from the lives of Elijah, Elisha, and other prophets. These stories focus on the challenge of monotheism (believing in one god) in a religious setting with cultures that have more than one god. Even more, they emphasize the power of the prophetic word. See sidebar, "Fulfillment of the Prophetic Word" at 1 Kings 2. 17:1–18:46 The drought takes Elijah to confront Baal on his territory in Phoenicia and on Mount Carmel. Since Baal is the god of storm and rain, and therefore of fertility, the drought poses a most serious practical and theological problem. Worship of Baal, the god of rain and fertility, challenges the prophets' exclusive monotheistic claims. The story teaches that it is Israel's God who provides rain, fertility, and life. Baal is truly a god of death. See sidebar, "Baal" at 1 Kings 18. 17:1 Elijah: His name means "God is the LORD (Jah)", a name confirmed by his confession, the one I serve. Tishbe: unknown location in Gilead, on the east side of the Jordan River. as the LORD lives: The Baal myth assumed the dying of the god during the summer season, during which rain doesn't fall in the land of Canaan. Life returns on his resuscitation. By contrast, Elijah claims that Israel's God lives even in the drought. unless I say so: The prophetic word is the only truly creative force in the world, a theme that ties these stories to the previous chapter (1 Kgs 16:34), and recurs later in the chapter (1 Kgs 17:16, 24). Elijah is its agent. See sidebar, "Fulfillment of the Prophetic Word" at 1 Kings 2.

Elijah and the widow from Zarephath

<sup>8</sup>The LORD's word came to Elijah: <sup>9</sup>Get up and go to Zarephath near Sidon and stay there. I have ordered a widow there to take care of you. <sup>10</sup>Elijah left and went to Zarephath. As he came to the town gate, he saw a widow collecting sticks. He called out to her, "Please get a little water for me in this cup so I can drink." <sup>11</sup>She went to get some water. He then said to her, "Please get me a piece of bread."

<sup>12</sup>"As surely as the LORD your God lives," she replied, "I don't have any food; only a handful of flour in a jar and a bit of oil in a bottle. Look at me. I'm collecting two sticks so that I can make some food for myself and my son. We'll eat the last of the food and then die."

<sup>13</sup>Elijah said to her, "Don't be afraid! Go and do what you said. Only make a little loaf of bread for me first. Then bring it to me. You can make something for yourself and your son after that. <sup>14</sup>This is what Israel's God, the LORD, says: The jar of flour won't decrease and the bottle of oil won't run out until the day the LORD sends rain on the earth." <sup>15</sup>The widow went and did what Elijah said. So the widow, Elijah, and the widow's household ate for many days. <sup>16</sup>The jar of flour didn't decrease nor did the bottle of oil run out, just as the LORD spoke through Elijah.

<sup>17</sup>After these things, the son of the widow, who was the matriarch of the household, became ill. His sickness got steadily worse until he wasn't breathing anymore. <sup>18</sup>She said to Elijah, "What's gone wrong between us, man of God? Have you come to me to call attention to my sin and kill my son?"

<sup>19</sup>Elijah replied, "Give your son to me." He took her son from her and carried him to the upper room where he was staying. Elijah laid him on his bed. <sup>20</sup>Elijah cried out to the LORD, "LORD my God, why is it that you have brought such evil upon the widow that I am staying with by killing her son?" <sup>21</sup>Then he stretched himself over the boy three times and cried out to the LORD, "LORD my God, please give this boy's life back to him." <sup>22</sup>The LORD listened to Elijah's voice and gave the boy his life back. And he lived. <sup>23</sup>Elijah brought the boy down from the upper room of the house and gave him to his mother. Elijah said, "Look, your son is alive!"

17:2-7 the Lord's word came: This makes it clear that Elijah . . . did just what the Lord said: See sidebar, "Fulfillment of the Prophetic Word" at 1 Kings 2. Cherith Brook: in a valley running into the east side of the Jordan River. The exact location is unknown. The area is semiarid and infertile. ravens . . . mornings and evenings: Like Israel in the wilderness (Exod 16:8, 12-13), Elijah receives nourishment from God; he receives bread and meat twice a day.

17:8-24 Elijah's encounter with the woman from Zarephath is the first demonstration that God provides, even in the drought. Even more, God provides for a marginal non-Israelite outside the traditional land of Israel (cf. Luke 4:26).

17:9 Zarephath near Sidon: The location along the Phoenician coast is strategic for demonstrating that Israel's God isn't geographically limited. This is the region where Baal worship is at home. See sidebar, "Baal" at 1 Kings 18. I have ordered a widow: The story doesn't provide God's words to this poor woman who, together with her son, is marginalized and at the point of death. The sense is that God is in charge of the situation; just as the ravens bring food to Elijah, so the widow, with God's help, feeds him.

17:12 your God lives: The widow's repetition of Elijah's confession (1 Kgs 17:1), emphasizing your God, continues the theme of life in the midst of drought.

17:13-16 Don't be afraid: a necessary consolation, especially when Elijah asks her to feed him before she feeds her son. Like Elijah, the widow does what she is told to do (cf. 1 Kgs 17:5). just as the Lord spoke: The word becomes reality immediately. See sidebar, "Fulfillment of the Prophetic Word" at 1 Kings 2.

17:17-23 A complication arises, as one might have expected. call attention to my sin: The woman assumes that her actions have in some way or other brought about this dire situation. The book of Job wrestles with the problem of whether human sinfulness brings unexpected disasters. Many of the psalms assume the same (cf. Ps 38). why . . . you . . . brought such evil: Elijah assumes the same thing: God is the source of the calamity. Yet his prayer may also be understood as a challenge to God. stretched himself over the boy: Elijah performs a symbolic action that would have been common in ancient Near Eastern healing practices. The Lord listened to Elijah's voice: The Hebrew verb meaning "to listen" may also mean "to obey." Now the roles are reversed. Normally human beings are instructed to attend to the Lord's voice. Here God listens and "obeys" Elijah. your son is alive!: The drama ends with a victory for life in a world permeated by death. Elijah's God brings life out of death.

<sup>24</sup>“Now I know that you really are a man of God,” the woman said to Elijah, “and that the LORD’s word is truly in your mouth.”

Elijah versus Baal’s prophets

18 After many days, the LORD’s word came to Elijah (it was the third year of the drought): Go! Appear before Ahab. I will then send rain on the earth. <sup>25</sup>So Elijah went to appear before Ahab.

Now the famine had become especially bad in Samaria. <sup>26</sup>Ahab had called Obadiah, who was in charge of the palace affairs. (Obadiah greatly feared the LORD. <sup>27</sup>When Jezebel killed the LORD’s prophets, Obadiah took one hundred of them and hid them, fifty each in two caves. He supplied them with food and water.) <sup>28</sup>Ahab said to Obadiah, “Go throughout the land and check every spring of water and every brook. Perhaps we can find some grass to keep our horses and mules alive so we don’t have to kill any of them.” <sup>29</sup>To search, they divided the land between themselves. Ahab went one way by himself, while Obadiah went a different way by himself.

<sup>30</sup>While Obadiah was out searching, suddenly Elijah met up with him. When Obadiah saw him, he fell on his face. “My master!” he said. “Are you Elijah?”

<sup>32</sup>Then Obadiah said, “How have I sinned that you are handing me, your servant, over to Ahab so he can kill me? <sup>33</sup>As surely as the LORD your God lives, there’s no nation or kingdom where my master Ahab hasn’t looked for you. They would insist, ‘He’s not here,’ but Ahab would make them swear that they couldn’t find you. <sup>34</sup>And now you are commanding me: ‘Go and say to your master, “Elijah is here?”’ <sup>35</sup>But here’s what will happen: As soon as I leave you, the LORD’s spirit will carry you off somewhere—I don’t know where—then I’ll report to Ahab, but he won’t be able to find you. Then he will kill me! But your servant has feared the LORD from my youth. <sup>36</sup>Wasn’t my master told what I did when Jezebel killed the LORD’s prophets? I hid one hundred of the LORD’s prophets, fifty each in two caves. I also supplied them with food and water. <sup>37</sup>But even after all that, you tell me, ‘Say to your master, “Elijah is here!”’ Ahab will kill me!”

<sup>38</sup>Elijah said, “As surely as the LORD of heavenly forces lives, the one I serve, I will appear before Ahab today.”

<sup>39</sup>So Obadiah went to meet Ahab. He told him what had happened. Then Ahab went to meet Elijah. <sup>40</sup>When Ahab saw Elijah, Ahab said to him, “Is that you, the one who troubles Israel?”

<sup>41</sup>Elijah answered, “I haven’t troubled Israel; you and your father’s house have! You did as much when you deserted the LORD’s commands and followed the Baals. <sup>42</sup>Now send a 17:24 Now I know... the LORD’s word is truly in your mouth: The woman’s final words underline one of the main themes of the books of Kings. She affirms not only that Elijah is a prophet (man of God), but that God speaks through him. See sidebar, “Fulfillment of the Prophetic Word” at 1 Kings 2.

18:1-2 The scene shifts, but the theme remains the same as in 1 Kings 17:1. At the center are the LORD’s word and drought. While 1 Kings 17 presents the story of an apparently inconsequential individual, 1 Kings 18 moves Elijah into the political spotlight before Ahab.

18:3-4 Obadiah... feared the LORD: Obadiah is on the other side; he protects the prophets whom Jezebel considers threats to the regime. The fear is holy reverence and loyalty—and, highlighted along with loving and serving—is key to faithful response to the Lord in Deuteronomy (Deut 10:12, 20). killed the LORD’s prophets: Although the stories focus on Elijah, these verses confirm that Elijah wasn’t the only prophet in Israel.

18:9 How have I sinned: Obadiah’s response to Elijah’s presence is like that of the widow (1 Kings 17:18).

18:12-14 the LORD’s spirit will carry you off: It was thought that God moved prophets around suddenly (cf. 1 Kings 18:7; 2 Kgs 2:16; Ezek 3:12). Although Obadiah feared the Lord (cf. 1 Kgs 18:3), he is truly afraid of Ahab, who, he says twice, will kill me.

18:15 LORD of heavenly forces: The prophets use this title five times in the books of Kings (cf. 1 Kgs 19:10, 14; 2 Kgs 3:14; 19:31). It refers metaphorically to God as the king in charge of the cosmic armies (cf. 1 Sam 1:1; 2 Sam 7:8; Pss 24:10; 82:1; 89:5-7; 103:21).

18:17-18 troubles Israel... troubled Israel: The wording echoes several other texts where the actions of individuals threaten the life of the community (Josh 6:18-19; 1 Sam 14:24-26). The word “trouble” (Heb. akar) is translated as “calamity” in Joshua 6:18 and “disaster” in Joshua 7:25. Achan’s name (Josh 7:1) even sounds like the Hebrew word for “trouble.” Comparison of these stories implies that much is at stake here. And the cause is clear: you deserted the LORD’s commands and followed the Baals, like Saul, who “rejected what the LORD said” (cf. 1 Sam 15:23; on Ahab’s sins, see 1 Kgs 16:31-33). Ahab is partly right. Elijah is a “troubler,” but the troubler of Ahab, not of Israel.

18:19 all Israel: Elijah has been with an unnamed foreign widow and the king of Israel. Now the scene shifts into a public setting. Mount Carmel: the mountain ridge to the south and east of modern Haifa. Actually a 13-mile-long

Baal Baal is known in the Canaanite pantheon as the storm god. He is depicted on a stele (dated 15th to 13th centuries BCE, now located in the Louvre museum in Paris) holding a club in his raised right hand and thrusting a spear sprouting vegetation into the ground with his left hand. The spear looks very much like a lightning rod or thunderbolt. The sprouting spear suggests the fertility that followed the rains he brought in the fall and winter months.

In the Baal Epic, discovered at Ugarit in modern Lebanon, Baal wins a victory over Yam, the god of the sea. This mythic victory assures worshippers that Baal controlled the waters, including rain and storms. Baal would be sure to send rain after the dry summer months.

Although Baal makes an appearance in the book of Judges (Judg 6), it is in the reign of Ahab in Israel that he becomes a threat to Israel's exclusive worship of God (1 Kgs 16:31-32). Elijah's contest with the prophets of Baal demonstrates that Yahweh, translated as "the LORD," is the true and only God. He alone controls the rain and ends the drought, the very things for which Baal was known (1 Kgs 18:37-39). But the story of Elijah suggests more. Even without rain, Israel's God is the source of nourishment and life (1 Kgs 17:8-24). The author states that worship of Baal is the main reason for the downfall of Israel and Judah (cf. 2 Kgs 17:16; 21:3), in spite of occasional attempts to eliminate Baal worship (cf. 2 Kgs 10:27-28; 11:18; 23:4-5).

message and gather all Israel to me at Mount Carmel. Gather the four hundred fifty prophets of Baal and the four hundred prophets of Asherah who eat at Jezebel's table."

<sup>20</sup>Ahab sent the message to all the Israelites. He gathered the prophets at Mount Carmel. <sup>21</sup>Elijah approached all the people and said, "How long will you hobble back and forth between two opinions? If the LORD<sup>d</sup> is God, follow God. If Baal is God, follow Baal." The people gave no answer.

<sup>22</sup>Elijah said to the people, "I am the last of the LORD's prophets, but Baal's prophets number four hundred fifty. <sup>23</sup>Give us two bulls. Let Baal's prophets choose one. Let them cut it apart and set it on the wood, but don't add fire. I'll prepare the other bull, put it on the wood, but won't add fire. <sup>24</sup>Then all of you will call on the name of your god, and I will call on the name of the LORD. The god who answers with fire—that's the real God!"

All the people answered, "That's an excellent idea."

<sup>25</sup>So Elijah said to the prophets of Baal, "Choose one of these bulls. Prepare it first since there are so many of you. Call on the name of your god, but don't add fire."

<sup>26</sup>So they took one of the bulls that had been brought to them. They prepared it and called on Baal's name from morning to midday. They said, "Great Baal, answer us!" But there was no sound or answer. They performed a hopping dance around the altar that had been set up.

mountain ridge, it rises near the sea to an elevation of nearly 1,600 feet. This range overlooks the Mediterranean Sea to the west (cf. 1 Kgs 18:43-44) and the Jezreel Valley to the northeast. At the other end of the Jezreel Valley was the palace of Ahab and Jezebel at Jezreel (cf. 1 Kgs 18:45-46; see note on 1 Kgs 21:1). prophets of Baal: The contest between God and Baal is also a contest between prophets (cf. 1 Kgs 18:36).

18:21 hobble... two opinions: Elijah presents only two options. Either the Lord is God or Baal is God. It isn't possible to worship two "lords" (see sidebar, "Baal"). The wordplay between hobble and "hopping dance" (1 Kgs 18:26, using the same verb) emphasizes the contrast of allegiances. no answer: The silence from the people speaks volumes. The same verb will be used by Elijah (1 Kgs 18:24) and to describe Baal's nonresponsiveness (1 Kgs 18:26, 29). The verb "to answer" occurs eight times in this story.

18:22 I am the last... prophets: Elijah's hyperbole that stresses that he alone is facing the prophets of Baal (cf. other prophets, 1 Kgs 18:4, 13; 20:35-43; 22:1-18).

18:24 call on the name: to pray to the deity (cf. 1 Kgs 18:25-26). See sidebar, "Temple and Name" at 1 Kings 8. The god who answers with fire... real God: Fire in the form of lightning is one of Baal's weapons. See sidebar, "Baal": The "answer" from the gods is the central focus of this story (cf. 1 Kgs 18:26, 29).

18:26 no sound or answer: The verb "to answer" occurs eight times in this story. The people have no answer to Elijah's question (1 Kgs 18:21); nor is Baal able to respond (1 Kgs 18:26, 29).

18:27-28 Since this event is about life and death, Elijah's taunts are not polite interfaith dialogue. cut themselves: This ritualistic activity demonstrates the seriousness with which the participants are taking the challenge before them.

18:29 went crazy: The Egyptian writer and traveler Wen-Amon describes such ritual frenzy at a temple in Byblos, <sup>28</sup>So the prophets of Baal cried with a louder voice and cut themselves with swords and knives as was their custom. Their blood flowed all over them. <sup>29</sup>As noon passed they went crazy with their ritual until it was time for the evening offering. Still there was no sound or answer, no response whatsoever.

<sup>30</sup>Then Elijah said to all the people, "Come here!" All the people closed in, and he repaired the LORD's altar that had been damaged. <sup>31</sup>Elijah took twelve stones, according to the number of the tribes of the sons of Jacob—to whom the LORD's word came: "Your name will be Israel." <sup>32</sup>He built the stones into an altar in the LORD's name, and he dug a trench around the altar big enough to hold two seahs<sup>f</sup> of dry grain. <sup>33</sup>He put the wood in order, butchered the bull, and placed the bull on the wood. "Fill four jars with water and pour it on the sacrifice and on the wood," he commanded. <sup>34</sup>"Do it a second time!" he said. So they did it a second time. "Do it a third time!" And so they did it a third time. <sup>35</sup>The water flowed around the altar, and even the trench filled with water. <sup>36</sup>At the time of the evening offering, the prophet Elijah drew near and prayed: "LORD, the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, let it be known today that you are God in Israel and that I am your servant. I have done all these things at your instructions. <sup>37</sup>Answer me, LORD! Answer me so that this people will know that you, LORD, are the real God and that you can change their hearts."<sup>g</sup> <sup>38</sup>Then the LORD's fire fell; it consumed the sacrifice, the wood, the stones, and the dust. It even licked up the water in the trench!

<sup>39</sup>All the people saw this and fell on their faces. "The LORD is the real God! The LORD is the real God!" they exclaimed.

<sup>40</sup>Elijah said to them, "Seize Baal's prophets! Don't let any escape!" The people seized the prophets, and Elijah brought them to the Kishon Brook and killed them there. <sup>41</sup>Elijah then said to Ahab, "Get up! Celebrate with food and drink because I hear the sound of a rainstorm coming." <sup>42</sup>So Ahab got up to celebrate with food and drink. But Elijah went up to the top of Mount Carmel. He bowed down to the ground and put his face between his knees. <sup>43</sup>He said to his assistant, "Please get up and look toward the sea."

So the assistant did so. He said, "I don't see anything."

Seven times Elijah said, "Do it again."

north of Sidon (approximately 1100 BCE). no sound or answer: See note on 1 Kings 18:26.

18:30–31 repaired the Lord's altar: Breaking down altars was common in the ancient world. Followers of Baal would have destroyed this older Israelite altar, just as Israelites were commanded to destroy Canaanite altars (Deut 7:5; 12:3). twelve stones: Compare Exodus 24:4; Joshua 4:8. Jacob... Israel: The storyteller reminds readers not only of Israel's origins (cf. Gen 35:10), but also of the unity of Israel as a 12-tribe federation.

18:33–35 water: In a time of drought, such excessive use of water emphasizes the high stakes involved here. In Canaanite mythology, Baal is considered the source of water by means of rain.

18:36–39 you are God... at your instructions: Elijah's prophetic vocation is confirmed. The text doesn't report the instructions from God. The Answer he asks for comes soon (cf. 1 Kgs 18:26, 29). The people respond, repeating Elijah's prayer by crying out, The Lord is the real God! Their words echo exactly Deuteronomy 4:35, 39 and, most significantly, Solomon's affirmation in 1 Kings 8:60. They also resemble Elijah's name, which means "God is the Lord." Elijah's contest between the gods has had its desired effect. But like Solomon's, will it last or bear fruit?

18:40 Kishon Brook: flows in the Jezreel Valley at the northern foot of the Carmel range. Elijah... killed them: Killing opponents isn't a practice of one side only (cf. 1 Kgs 18:4; Deut 13:1–18).

18:42–44 face between his knees: It could be that Elijah is praying. More likely it is another prophetic action (cf. 1 Kgs 17:21), since he deliberately doesn't look at the sky. He asks his assistant to look. At the seventh time the assistant sees a small cloud. Rain is on its way (cf. 1 Kgs 17:1); the drama between the gods has reached its end.

<sup>44</sup>The seventh time the assistant said, "I see a small cloud the size of a human hand coming up from the sea."

Elijah said, "Go and tell Ahab, 'Pull yourself together, go down the mountain, and don't let the rain hold you back.'" <sup>45</sup>After a little while, the sky became dark with clouds, and a wind came up with a huge rainstorm. Ahab was already riding on his way to Jezreel, <sup>46</sup>but the LORD's power strengthened Elijah. He gathered up his clothes and ran in front of Ahab until he came to Jezreel.

Elijah runs to Mount Horeb

19 Ahab told Jezebel all that Elijah had done, how he had killed all Baal's prophets with the sword. <sup>2</sup>Jezebel sent a messenger to Elijah with this message: "May the gods do whatever they want to me if by this time tomorrow I haven't made your life like the life of one of them."

<sup>3</sup>Elijah was terrified. He got up and ran for his life. He arrived at Beer-sheba in Judah and left his assistant there. <sup>4</sup>He himself went farther on into the desert a day's journey. He finally sat down under a solitary broom bush. He longed for his own death: "It's more than enough, LORD! Take my life because I'm no better than my ancestors." <sup>5</sup>He lay down and slept under the solitary broom bush.

Then suddenly a messenger tapped him and said to him, "Get up! Eat something!" <sup>6</sup>Elijah opened his eyes and saw flatbread baked on glowing coals and a jar of water right by his head. He ate and drank, and then went back to sleep. <sup>7</sup>The LORD's messenger returned a second time and tapped him. "Get up!" the messenger said. "Eat something, because you have a difficult road ahead of you." <sup>8</sup>Elijah got up, ate and drank, and went refreshed by that food for forty days and nights until he arrived at Horeb, God's mountain. <sup>9</sup>There he went into a cave and spent the night.

The LORD's word came to him and said, "Why are you here, Elijah?"

<sup>10</sup>Elijah replied, "I've been very passionate for the LORD God of heavenly forces because the Israelites have abandoned your covenant. They have torn down your altars, and they have murdered your prophets with the sword. I'm the only one left, and now they want to take my life too!"

<sup>11</sup>The LORD said, "Go out and stand at the mountain before the LORD. The LORD is passing by." A very strong wind tore through the mountains and broke apart the stones before the LORD. But the LORD wasn't in the wind. After the wind, there was an earthquake. But

18:45-46 Jezreel: This is where Jezebel was staying (1 Kgs 19:1) and where Ahab had a palace (1 Kgs 21:1). the LORD's power... ran in front of Ahab: Running alongside or in front of a chariot was not out of the ordinary (cf. 1 Sam 8:11; 1 Kgs 1:5). But it isn't clear why Elijah runs.

19:1-21 Things turn bad for Elijah, who flees the wrath of Jezebel to meet the God who refuses to be identified with the traditional trappings of the gods.

19:1-2 May the gods do... to me: She uses a traditional formula for a solemn pledge (cf. 1 Kgs 2:23; 20:10). Ahab only plays the role of reporter. Jezebel is the main actor in the Ahab and Elijah drama. She is out for revenge; she isn't interested in keeping rivals alive, especially the prophets (cf. 1 Kgs 18:4, 13).

19:3 Elijah is terrified; he runs for his life. This time he acts on his own without instructions from God (cf. 1 Kgs 17:5; 8:10; 18:1-2). Beer-sheba: the most southern city of Israel, bordering the desert about 120 miles from Mount Carmel (cf. Gen 21:31; 26:33; 1 Sam 3:20; 2 Sam 3:10; 1 Kgs 4:25).

19:4-5 longed for his own death... lay down and slept: More than exhausted, Elijah is also depressed. messenger: Jezebel had also sent a messenger (1 Kgs 19:2). The first brings a death sentence; this one, from God (1 Kgs 19:7), brings nourishment (1 Kgs 19:6, 8; cf. 1 Kgs 17:6).

19:8 forty days and nights: a symbolic number (used often in the Bible) that recalls the 40 days Moses spent on the same mountain (Exod 24:18). Horeb: Deuteronomy's favorite name for Mount Sinai. It is the place where Israel made a covenant with God (Deut 5:2). The name is used once more in the books of Kings 18:15 (1 Kgs 8:9). The book of Exodus calls it "God's mountain" (Exod 3:1). Depending on the location of the mountain and the route, the challenging hike from Beer-sheba to Mount Horeb could be as long as 250 miles.

19:9-10 Mention of a cave is reminiscent of God's placing Moses into "a gap in the rock" (a crevice or a cave; Exod 33:21-23), where he glimpses God's "glorious presence." The parallel makes it possible to see Elijah as a new Moses figure (cf. Deut 18:15, 18). "Why are you here, Elijah?": God's question is neutral and nonjudgmental. Elijah's response includes a fine balance between the "I" and "my" of his own experience (rightly or wrongly) and the "your" of God's symbolic presence among the people. LORD God of heavenly forces: See note on 1 Kings 18:15. abandoned your covenant: an allusion to the Deuteronomist warning about idolatry (Deut 28:20; 29:24; 31:16; see sidebar, "idolatry" at 1 Kgs 11) and the consequences that God will abandon Israel (Deut 31:16-17).

19:11-12 The LORD is passing by: The use of the verb confirms the parallel to the Moses story (Exod 33:19, 22; 34:6). The Exodus texts emphasize the compassion of God, which God displays toward Elijah in this story. wasn't in the wind... earthquake... fire: These manifestations are what one might expect of Baal (see sidebar, "Baal" at 1 Kgs 18) the LORD wasn't in the earthquake. <sup>12</sup>After the earthquake, there was a fire. But the LORD wasn't in the fire. After the fire, there was a sound. Thin. Quiet. <sup>13</sup>When Elijah heard it, he wrapped his face in his coat. He went out and stood at the cave's entrance. A voice came to him and said, "Why are you here, Elijah?"

<sup>14</sup>He said, "I've been very passionate for the LORD God of heavenly forces because the Israelites have abandoned your covenant. They have torn down your altars, and they have murdered your prophets with the sword. I'm the only one left, and now they want to take my life too."

<sup>15</sup>The LORD said to him, "Go back through the desert to Damascus and anoint Hazael as king of Aram. <sup>16</sup>Also anoint Jehu, Nimshi's son, as king of Israel; and anoint Elisha from Abel-meholah, Shaphat's son, to succeed you as prophet. <sup>17</sup>Whoever escapes from the sword of Hazael, Jehu will kill. Whoever escapes from the sword of Jehu, Elisha will kill. <sup>18</sup>But I have preserved those who remain in Israel, totaling seven thousand—all those whose knees haven't bowed down to Baal and whose mouths haven't kissed him."

Elijah replied, "Go! I'm not holding you back!" <sup>21</sup>Elisha turned back from following Elijah, took the pair of oxen, and slaughtered them. Then with equipment from the oxen, Elisha boiled the meat, gave it to the people, and they ate it. Then he got up, followed Elijah, and served him.

Ben-hadad's wars with Ahab

20 King Ben-hadad of Aram brought together all his army along with thirty-two kings plus horses and chariots. He went up, surrounded Samaria, and made war against it.

or even of Israel's God (Judg 5:4-5; Pss 18:7-15; 68:8; Hab 3:15). But in this context, since fire on Mount Carmel was from the Lord, it could be expected that the third of these natural phenomena might symbolize God's presence. a sound. Thin. Quiet: On this occasion, however, God's comforting and empowering presence comes in the nearly imperceptible. Like Moses' opportunity to see God's "glorious presence" from the back, so Elijah hears God through the spaces between the mountain breezes.

19:13-14 wrapped his face: presuming, perhaps, as God says to Moses, that "no one can see me and live" (Exod 33:20; cf. Gen 32:30; Judg 6:22; 13:22). A voice: the same word translated "a sound" in 1 Kings 19:12. Elijah's answer to God's question is the same as he gives to the identical question earlier (cf. 1 Kgs 19:9-10). Perhaps it will take Elijah some time to process his experience. But God isn't bothered. God has other work for Elijah to do.

19:15-18 God's new instructions, not Elijah's anxieties about his vocation, are the main point. anoint Hazael... Jehu... Elisha: Prophets are agents of God's political will (cf. 1 Sam 10:1; 15:1; 2 Sam 12:7; 1 Kgs 1:45). Elisha: His name means "God saves" or "God is salvation." Nimshi's son: The word "son" may also mean grandson (see 2 Kgs 9:2). I have preserved... seven thousand: In other words, Elijah isn't "the only one left" (1 Kgs 19:10, 14). God will continue to govern and to bring about God's purposes with those who haven't bowed down to Baal. Not altogether surprisingly, God even has a hand in the political process of another nation (Aram, headquartered in Damascus). kissed him: a ritual action of kissing the image of a god (cf. Hos 13:2; contrast Elisha's kiss in 1 Kgs 19:20). 19:19-21 Although the story doesn't go on to tell of Elijah's completing the first two assignments, he does commission Elisha as his successor. Later on, Elisha announces that Hazael will be king over Aram (2 Kgs 8:7-15) and anoints Jehu (2 Kgs 9:1-10), thereby demonstrating that he has taken over Elijah's role. The storyteller doesn't provide all the details, only enough to lead the reader know that God is in control of the political process. There are more important things to tell besides details like that. The coat represents the transfer of authority (cf. 1 Sam 18:4; 2 Kgs 2:13). Slaughtering the oxen and hosting a feast is Elisha's way of making a transition to his new vocation. served him: Elisha has become Elijah's attendant. Verse 20 doesn't describe Elisha's reluctance, nor does it reflect Elijah's disappointment. Elisha has made the transition and is now in Elijah's service. Elisha reappears in the story in 2 Kings 2:1.

20:1-43 The story of Ahab's war against Syria is spiced with political intrigue, but its main interest is theological. Its main characters, the prophets, announce not only that God is in charge, but that God's intention is for Ahab (and Israel) to acknowledge God as their only allegiance (20:13, 28). The prophets are the main actors in spite of the military action of kings. Neither Elijah nor Elisha appears in this story, which underlines the fact that Elijah isn't the only prophet left (1 Kgs 19:10, 14), and the shift to Elisha has begun. The story unfolds in two parts over the course of a year (20:1-22, 23-43).

20:1 Ben-hadad of Aram: king of the Syrian coalition headquartered in Damascus. thirty-two kings plus horses and chariots: an ominous note. Ben-hadad has vassal partners and a significant standing army.

20:2-9 Your silver and your gold are mine... children are mine: Ben-hadad offers terms of surrender, which include making Ahab his vassal king like the 32 who are already

20:11 Prv 27:1

Ben-hadad says: "Your silver and your gold are mine. Your good-looking wives and children are mine."

<sup>4</sup>Israel's king answered, "Whatever you say, my master, great king, I am yours and so is everything I have."

<sup>5</sup>The messengers came back again: "This is what Ben-hadad says: 'I sent you the message: Give me your silver and gold, your wives and your sons. <sup>6</sup>However, at this time tomorrow I will send my officers to you, and they will search your palace and the houses of your officers. Everything that you find valuable they will seize and take away.'"

<sup>7</sup>Then Israel's king called all the elders of the land and he said, "Please know and understand the evil this man wants to do! He demanded from me my wives and sons, and my silver and gold; and I didn't refuse him."

<sup>8</sup>All of the elders and the people said to him, "Don't obey and don't give in!"

<sup>9</sup>So the king said to Ben-hadad's messengers, "Say to my master the king: 'Everything that you first ordered your servant, I will do. But I can't comply with this new command.'"

The messengers took this response to Ben-hadad, <sup>10</sup>who sent back this reply: "May the gods do whatever they want to me if there is even a handful of dust left in Samaria for the armies under me!"

<sup>12</sup>When Ben-hadad heard this message, he and the other kings were drinking in their tents. Ben-hadad said to his officers, "Take your positions!" So they took up their positions against the city.

<sup>13</sup>Suddenly a prophet approached Israel's King Ahab. He said, "This is what the LORD says: Do you see that great army? Today I am handing it over to you. Then you will know that I am the LORD."

<sup>14</sup>Ahab said, "Who will do it?"

The prophet answered, "This is what the LORD says: The servants of the district officials will do it."

"Who should start the battle?" Ahab asked.

"You should," the prophet replied.

<sup>15</sup>So Ahab assembled the servants of the district officials. There were two hundred thirty-two of them. Next he assembled the entire Israelite army, seven thousand total. <sup>16</sup>At noon they marched for battle. Meanwhile, Ben-hadad and the thirty-two kings allied with him were getting drunk in their tents. <sup>17</sup>The servants of the district officials were at the head of the march. Ben-hadad sent for information and was told, "Some men have marched out of Samaria."

<sup>18</sup>He said, "If they have come out in peace, take them alive; if they have come out for war, take them alive as well." <sup>19</sup>So the servants of the district governors with the army behind them marched out from the city. <sup>20</sup>Each one struck down his opponent, so that the Arameans fled. Israel chased after them. Ben-hadad, Aram's king, escaped with some horses and chariots. <sup>21</sup>Israel's king went out and attacked the horses and chariots. He attacked the Arameans with a fierce assault.

<sup>22</sup>The prophet came to Israel's king and said to him, "Maintain your strength! Know and understand that at the turn of the coming year, Aram's king will attack you again."

with him (on Ben-hadad's treaty with Judean king Asa, cf. 1 Kgs 15:18-22), everything I have: Ahab's response leads Ben-hadad to take Ahab literally by increasing his demands. After consultation, Ahab realizes the seriousness of Ben-hadad's search-and-plunder strategy. It's evil. This interchange offers a premonition of the kind of "seizing" and "taking away" that Ahab and Jezebel will do in the story of Naboth (1 Kgs 21).

20:10 May the gods do: a formula for making a solemn pledge (cf. 1 Kgs 2:23; 19:2).

20:13 a prophet: The presence of this unnamed prophet is proof that Elijah was wrong about being the only one in the Lord's service (cf. 1 Kgs 19:10, 14). the LORD says... I am the LORD: The prophet is God's diplomatic agent announcing God's intentions. This prophetic saying is the theological center of the chapter (also in 1 Kgs 20:28). Israel's God is the one who superintends the historical process, no matter how many kings or horses and chariots are in play. See sidebar, "Fulfillment of the Prophetic Word" at 1 Kings 2.

20:22 Know... Aram's king will attack you again: By tying the two stories about Ahab and Ben-hadad together, this prophetic statement confirms that Israel's God isn't only the one who knows what's about to happen but also the one who controls the outcome. turn... year: clarified in 1 Kings 20:26 as "spring," which was the normal time for kings to go to war (cf. 2 Sam 11:1).

<sup>23</sup>The officers of Aram's king said to him, "Israel's god is a god of the mountains. That's why they were stronger than us. But if we fight them on the plains, we will certainly be stronger than they are. <sup>24</sup>This is what you need to do: Remove the kings from their military posts and appoint officials in their place. <sup>25</sup>Then raise another army like the one that was destroyed, with horses like those horses and chariots like those chariots. Then we will fight them on the plains, and we will certainly be stronger than they are." The king took their advice and followed it.

<sup>26</sup>So in the spring of the year, Ben-hadad assembled the Arameans and marched up to Aphek to fight with Israel. <sup>27</sup>Now the Israelites had already been assembled and provisioned, so they went to engage the Arameans. The Israelites camped before them like two small flocks of goats, but the Arameans filled the land.

<sup>28</sup>Then the man of God came forward and said to Israel's king, "This is what the LORD says: Because the Arameans said that the LORD is a god of the mountains but not a god of the valleys, I am handing this whole great army over to you. Then you will know that I am the LORD."

<sup>29</sup>The two armies camped opposite each other for seven days. On the seventh day, the battle began. The Israelites attacked and destroyed one hundred thousand Aramean foot soldiers in a single day. <sup>30</sup>Those who were left fled to Aphek, into the city where a wall fell on twenty-seven thousand more of them. But Ben-hadad escaped and hid in an inner room within the city.

<sup>31</sup>Ben-hadad's officers said to him, "Listen, we have heard that the kings of Israel are merciful kings. Allow us to put mourning clothes on our bodies and cords around our heads. We will then go to Israel's king. Perhaps he will let you live." <sup>32</sup>So they put mourning clothes on their bodies and cords around their heads. They went to Israel's king and said, "Ben-hadad is your slave. He begs, 'Please let me live!'"

Israel's king said, "Is he still alive? He is my brother."

"Go and get him," the king ordered. So Ben-hadad came to him, and the king received him into his chariot.

<sup>34</sup>Ben-hadad said to the king, "I will return the towns that my father took from your father. Furthermore, you can set up markets for yourself in Damascus just as my father did in Samaria."

The king replied, <sup>1</sup> "On the basis of this covenant, I will let you go." So he made a covenant with Ben-hadad and set him free.

20:23-25 god of the mountains: Like the prophets, the Aramean officers understand the war to be a matter of theological interpretation: The outcome will be determined by the strength of the gods. Just as 1 Kings 17 asserted that Israel's God isn't limited by geography or ethnicity and 1 Kings 18 that God (not Baal) is the source of fertility and rain, this story says that God isn't constrained by topography or to one or another kind of military strategy or equipment. Neither mountains nor plains, chariots nor horses, will hinder God's purposes as announced by the prophets.

20:26 Aphek: located near the Galilee Sea, perhaps a few miles to the east. The earlier battle engagement had occurred at Ahab's capital, Samaria (1 Kgs 20:1).

20:28 man of God: one of the prophets. See note on 1 Kings 13:1. The LORD says ... I am the LORD: See note on 1 Kings 20:13. The Lord is the chief actor in the story, and the prophets are God's messengers. See sidebar, "Fulfillment of the Prophetic Word" at 1 Kings 2.

20:29-30 one hundred thousand ... single day ... twenty- seven thousand: The hyperbole is typical of biblical and ancient Near Eastern battle reports.

20:31-32 mourning clothes ... cords: symbols of submission to Ahab, as though they were coming to Ahab as prisoners led by ropes around their necks. my brother: Ahab immediately assumes the upper hand by naming him an equal-status vassal. In doing so he demonstrates not only his mercy but a strategic purpose that will be realized in Ben-hadad's response (1 Kgs 20:34).

20:34 towns ... markets: The real strength of empire is economic viability, here secured by access to (and perhaps control of) international trade. your father: The word "father" can mean "grandfather" or "ancestor." Baasha is the "father" in view here (cf. 1 Kgs 15:19-20). covenant: Ahab's equal partnership covenant (treaty) assures Ahab, for now at least, that he can regain a semblance of control over territories that had been lost under Baasha. Although the books of Kings tell readers little about how this covenant plays itself out, ancient Assyrian texts from Shalmaneser III (858-824 BCE) report that Ahab and Ben-hadad, along

<sup>35</sup>At the LORD's command a certain man who belonged to a prophetic group said to his friend: "Please strike me." But his friend refused to hit him. <sup>36</sup>So he said to his friend, "Because you didn't obey the LORD's voice, a lion will attack you as soon as you leave me." And as the friend left the prophet, a lion found him and attacked him. <sup>37</sup>Then the prophet found another man and said, "Please strike me." He hit the prophet, and the attack left a wound. <sup>38</sup>The prophet went and stood before the king by the road. He disguised himself by putting a bandage over his eyes. <sup>39</sup>When the king passed by, the prophet called out to the king, "Your servant was in the middle of the battle when someone brought a prisoner. 'Guard this man,' he said. 'If he escapes it will be your life for his—that, or you will owe me a kikkar of silver.' <sup>40</sup>Your servant got busy doing this and that, and the prisoner disappeared."

Israel's king replied, "It appears you have decided your own fate."

<sup>43</sup>So Israel's king went to his palace at Samaria, irritated and upset.

Naboth's vineyard

21 Now it happened sometime later that Naboth from Jezreel had a vineyard in Jezreel that was next to the palace of King Ahab of Samaria. <sup>2</sup>Ahab ordered Naboth, "Give me your vineyard so it can become my vegetable garden, because it is right next to my palace. In exchange for it, I'll give you an even better vineyard. Or if you prefer, I'll pay you the price in silver."

<sup>3</sup>Naboth responded to Ahab, "LORD forbid that I give you my family inheritance!"

<sup>5</sup>His wife Jezebel came to him. "Why are you upset and not eating any food?" she asked.

20:35-42 Through a series of events, the story emphasizes the power of the prophetic word and the failure of King Ahab to do the necessary thing.

20:35 a prophetic group: communities of prophets under the leadership and direction of a master (cf. 2 Kgs 2:3; 4:1, 38; 5:22; 6:1). obey the Lord's voice: This apparently arbitrary event, which leads to the man's death, demonstrates that ignoring the commands of the prophets leads to disastrous results (and reminds readers of the story in 1 Kgs 13:11-32). See sidebar, "Fulfillment of the Prophetic Word" at 1 Kings 2.

20:37-42 The prophet plays a trick on Ahab, catching him unawares by disguising himself in a living parable. Such actions were typical of prophets' interactions with kings. Compare Nathan's trick on David in the affair with Bathsheba and the murder of Uriah (2 Sam 12:1-4).

20:39 kikkar: about 76 pounds.

20:42 I condemned to die: God had defeated Ben-hadad (1 Kgs 20:28). Now God, through the prophet, says that the death sentence had already been declared. The prophet assumes that Ahab should have killed Ben-hadad. His reasoning reflects Deuteronomic instructions, using the same Hebrew verb in Deuteronomy for "[to] place under the ban" (Deut 7:2; 20:16-17; cf. 1 Sam 15:17-24).

21:1-29 The story about how Ahab (and Jezebel) take Naboth's vineyard is the occasion for another prophetic critique, this time by Elijah. Like Ben-hadad's, (cf. 1 Kgs 20:3-6), Ahab's story depicts the king as a taker. And like David, Ahab murders and takes (cf. 2 Sam 11).

21:1 Jezreel: a secondary residence of the king of Israel located on the edge of the fertile Jezreel Valley to the northeast of the capital, Samaria.

21:2 Give me your vineyard: Ahab uses the same verb, "to give," as Ben-hadad does (cf. 1 Kgs 20:5). But Ahab offers more than fair market value. If Naboth's vineyard falls inside the walls of the city, Ahab's offer falls within the scope of the law (cf. Lev 25:29-30). Based on archaeological discoveries at Jezreel, Ahab's palace lies inside a walled city. But if the property falls outside the walls, there may be some ambiguity (cf. Lev 25:23-28, 31). vegetable garden: A vineyard takes many years to nurture into productivity, whereas a vegetable garden in that location will immediately produce several crops per year (cf. Deut 11:10, the only other occurrence of "vegetable garden" in the OT, and where such a place is compared to "Egypt"). Vegetable gardens require much water (the topic of previous chapters; cf. Gen 13:10), whereas Israel is a land watered by the Lord (cf. Deut 11:11).

21:3 Lord forbid . . . my family inheritance: the nub of the matter. Naboth isn't willing to sacrifice his responsibility to his descendants. He isn't willing to forfeit the land that is theirs in trust from God, who is the true owner of the land (Lev 25:23; cf. Gen 17:8).

21:4 irritated and upset: Ahab is consistently out of sorts (cf. 1 Kgs 20:43).

21:5-7 Jezebel: As in previous stories, Jezebel takes over for the ineffective Ahab, who isn't ruling as the despot she

<sup>6</sup>He answered her, "I was talking to Naboth. I said, 'Sell me your vineyard. Or if you prefer, I'll give you another vineyard for it.' But he said, 'I won't give you my vineyard!'"

<sup>7</sup>Then his wife Jezebel said to him, "Aren't you the one who rules Israel? Get up! Eat some food and cheer up. I'll get Naboth's vineyard for you myself." <sup>8</sup>So she wrote letters in Ahab's name, putting his seal on them. She sent them to the elders and officials who lived in the same town as Naboth. <sup>9</sup>This is what she wrote in the letters: "Announce a fast and place Naboth at the head of the people. <sup>10</sup>Then bring in two liars in front of him and have them testify as follows: 'You cursed God and king!' Then take Naboth outside and stone him so he dies."

<sup>11</sup>The elders and the officials who lived in Naboth's town did exactly as Jezebel specified in the letters that she had sent. <sup>12</sup>They announced a fast and placed Naboth at the head of the people. <sup>13</sup>Then the two liars came and sat in front of him. They testified against Naboth in front of the people, "Naboth cursed God and king!" So the people took Naboth outside the town and stoned him so that he died.

<sup>14</sup>It was then reported to Jezebel, "Naboth was stoned. He's dead." <sup>15</sup>As soon as Jezebel heard that Naboth had been stoned to death, she said to Ahab, "Get up and take ownership of the vineyard of Naboth, which he had refused to sell to you. Naboth is no longer alive; he's dead." <sup>16</sup>When Ahab heard that Naboth had died, he got up and went down to Naboth's vineyard to take ownership of it.

"I found you," Elijah said, "because you've enslaved yourself by doing evil in the LORD's eyes. <sup>21</sup>So I am now bringing evil on you! I will burn until you are consumed, and I will eliminate everyone who urinates on a wall that belongs to Ahab, whether slave or free. <sup>22</sup>I will make your household like that of Jeroboam, Nebat's son, and like the household of Baasha, Ahijah's son, because of the way you've angered me and because you've made Israel sin. <sup>23</sup>As for Jezebel, the LORD says this: Dogs will devour Jezebel in the area of Jezreel. <sup>24</sup>Dogs will eat anyone of Ahab's family who dies in town, and birds will eat anyone who dies in the country."

(<sup>25</sup>Truly there has never been anyone like Ahab who sold out by doing evil in the LORD's eyes—evil that his wife Jezebel led him to do. <sup>26</sup>Ahab's actions were deplorable. He followed thinks he should be (cf. 1 Kgs 18:4; 19:2). Aren't you the one who rules Israel?: Jezebel assumes that those who govern have absolute right over the property of their subjects. The irony here is that the stories about the prophets set in Ahab's time all intend to depict God as the real ruler, not only of Israel but of the nations.

21:8-14 Jezebel's plot to kill Naboth assumes a corrupt court system controlled by royalty. This act is a clear violation of instructions to act justly in all legal situations. Instead, Jezebel rigged the process, violating the instruction about justice in the courts (cf. Deut 16:18-20), and forced the corruption of the witnesses (cf. Deut 17:6; 19:15; on false witness, cf. Exod 20:16; Deut 5:20; 19:16-21). cursed God and king: On the trumped-up charge and the sentence (21:10, 13), see the instructions of Exodus 22:28; Leviticus 24:14-16.

21:15 take ownership: The verb highlights the royal couple's grasping for land, which, in other biblical texts, only God is able to permit the people "to possess" or "to take" (see also 1 Kgs 21:18-19; cf. Deut 1:8, 21).

21:17 The LORD's word came: Elijah appears again as the one who receives God's instructions to communicate judgment on Ahab and Jezebel. See sidebar, "Fulfillment of the Prophetic Word" at 1 Kings 2.

21:18-19 murdered . . . taking ownership: The Lord takes up

Jezebel's words (1 Kgs 21:15). But the allusion to David's affair with Bathsheba, and Nathan's criticism, is clear (2 Sam 11-12; especially 2 Sam 12:9). In the same place . . . your own blood: Ahab was killed in battle (1 Kgs 22:34-36) and was buried in Samaria (1 Kgs 22:37-38). This is an inexact fulfillment of Elijah's words. It is Ahab's son Joram whose body ends up in Naboth's vineyard (2 Kgs 9:25-26). The point is that both died according to the Lord's word (1 Kgs 22:38; 2 Kgs 9:26), which reinforces one of the main themes of the books of Kings. See sidebar, "Fulfillment of the Prophetic Word" at 1 Kings 2.

21:20-24 my old enemy: These two have had a history together (cf. 1 Kgs 17-18). enslaved . . . evil in the Lord's eyes: See note on 1 Kings 11:6. Elijah now names Ahab's evil just as Ahab identified Ben-hadad as evil (1 Kgs 20:7). According to the prophets, evil rebounds to harm the one who does it (cf. 1 Sam 25:39; 1 Kgs 2:32; Ezek 16:43; Obad 1:15). urinates . . . slave or free: See note on 1 Kings 14:6-11. Jeroboam and Baasha suffered a similar fate, preceded by similar prophetic pronouncements (cf. 1 Kgs 14:10-11; 16:3-4). Like them, Jezebel will become food for dogs and birds (cf. 2 Kgs 9:34-37). All of them die without an honorable burial (cf. Deut 28:25-26; Jer 16:4). you've angered me: See sidebar, "Anger of God" at 1 Kings 8.

after the worthless idols exactly like the Amorites had done—the very ones the LORD had removed before the Israelites.)

<sup>27</sup>When Ahab heard these words, he tore his clothes and put mourning clothes on his body. He fasted, even slept in mourning clothes, and walked around depressed. <sup>28</sup>The LORD's word then came to Elijah from Tishbe: <sup>29</sup>Have you seen how Ahab has humbled himself before me? Because he has done so, I won't bring the evil during his lifetime. Instead, I will bring the evil on his household in the days of his son.

Jehoshaphat and Ahab

22 For three years there was no war between Aram and the Israelites. <sup>2</sup>In the third year, Judah's King Jehoshaphat visited Israel's king. <sup>3</sup>Israel's king said to his servants, "You know, don't you, that Ramoth-gilead is ours? But we aren't doing anything to take it back from the king of Aram." <sup>4</sup>He said to Jehoshaphat, "Will you go with me into battle at Ramoth-gilead?"

Jehoshaphat said to Israel's king, "I am with you, and my troops and my horses are united with yours. <sup>5</sup>But," Jehoshaphat said to Israel's king, "first let's see what the LORD has to say."

<sup>6</sup>So Israel's king gathered about four hundred prophets, and he asked them, "Should I go to war with Ramoth-gilead or not?"

"Attack!" the prophets answered. "The LORD will hand it over to the king."

<sup>7</sup>But Jehoshaphat said, "Isn't there any other prophet of the LORD whom we could ask?"

<sup>8</sup>"There is one other man who could ask the LORD for us," Israel's king told Jehoshaphat, "but I hate him because he never prophesies anything good about me, only bad. His name is Micaiah, Imlah's son."

"The king shouldn't speak like that!" Jehoshaphat said.

never been anyone... sold out by doing evil in the LORD's eyes: The verb "sold out" is translated "enslaved" in 1 Kings 21:20. For the second time in the Ahab story, he is said to have done more evil than anyone else, even more than Jeroboam, since he introduced the worship of Baal (cf. 1 Kings 16:30-33). The story as a whole emphasizes Ahab's incorrigibility. Like a hardened criminal he seems irredeemable. Implicated along with Jezebel, Ahab is responsible for the violence against Naboth and for idolatrous imitation of the Amorites (cf. Exod 23:23-24, 33; Deut 8:19; and especially Deut 12:30; Josh 24:15; Judg 6:10). See notes on 1 Kings 9:6-9 and 11:1-5.

21:27-29 In spite of Elijah's prediction, and the impression about Ahab's evil provided in the previous verses, Ahab's remorse leads God (through Elijah) to postpone the divine judgment (the evil during his lifetime). This explains the rather ordinary report about Ahab's death (1 Kgs 22:40).

22:1-40 On the surface, the story tells how Ahab died in another war against the Arameans. The main theme, however, concerns the problem of recognizing the truly prophetic word when more than one interpretation is being offered.

22:1-5 three years: After the battle of Aphek (1 Kgs 20:26-34), Ahab and Ben-hadad became covenant partners (1 Kgs 20:34). They were allies in a successful attempt to stop the Assyrians from moving westward (Battle of Qarqar in 853 BCE). According to the records of Assyria's King Shalmaneser III, Ahab provided the 13 coalition partners with 2,000 chariots and 10,000 soldiers. That partnership, however, wasn't enough to prevent this new initiative against Israelite territory held by Aram.

Israel's king: Ahab remains unnamed in the story, which emphasizes the role of the prophets and Judah's good King Jehoshaphat. The partnership between these two kings is the first to break the ongoing conflict between Israel and Judah (cf. 1 Kgs 14:30; 15:7, 16, 32). Ramoth-gilead is ours: Ahab and Jehoshaphat conspire to take back this Israelite levitical city east of the Jordan River (cf. 1 Kgs 4:13; Deut 4:43; Josh 20:8; 21:38). The way Ahab speaks and Jehoshaphat responds (22:3-4) makes it appear as though Ahab is in charge. Since Ramoth-gilead is on a north-south transportation corridor, this action will help recover control of territory for Judah east of the Jordan and for Israel in the northern Galilee region. But... what the LORD has to say: Jehoshaphat's words indicate that there is yet another power to take into account. The writer positions him as over against Ahab in his use of the word "But." See sidebar, "Fulfillment of the Prophetic Word" at 1 Kings 2.

22:6-7 gathered about four hundred prophets: It was common practice in the ancient Near East for kings to consult prophets or diviners concerning the possible outcomes of their military endeavors. They ask directly for "the LORD's word." See sidebar, "Fulfillment of the Prophetic Word" at 1 Kings 2. The number of prophets raises suspicions, since that was the same number of prophets of Asherah (1 Kgs 18:19). The LORD will hand it over: Repeated two more times in the chapter (1 Kgs 22:12, 15), this is a common expression intended to inspire confidence. Since it was spoken by a prophet to Ahab in an earlier confrontation with Aram, the affirmation by the 400 prophets doesn't appear surprising (cf. 1 Kgs 20:13, 28). But... any other prophet of the LORD: Jehoshaphat interjects a second time, nicely introduced with the word "But" (cf. 1 Kgs 22:5). Jehoshaphat stands for an alternative governance, not his own but the Lord's.

22:8 Micaiah: a prophet, not identified earlier in 1 Kings, who has a history of unfavorable encounters with Ahab. "The king shouldn't speak like that!": Jehoshaphat continues his role as challenger of Ahab.

<sup>12</sup>All the other prophets agreed: "Attack Ramoth-gilead and win! The LORD will hand it over to the king!"

<sup>14</sup>But Micaiah answered, "As surely as the LORD lives, I will say only what the LORD tells me to say."

<sup>15</sup>When Micaiah arrived, the king asked him, "Micaiah, should we go to war with Ramoth-gilead or not?"

"Attack and win!" Micaiah answered. "The LORD will hand it over to the king!"

<sup>16</sup>But the king said, "How many times must I demand that you tell me the truth when you speak in the name of the LORD?"

<sup>17</sup>Then Micaiah replied, "I saw all Israel scattered on the hills like sheep without a shepherd! And then the LORD said: They have no master. Let them return safely to their own homes."

<sup>24</sup>Zedekiah, Chenaanah's son, approached Micaiah and slapped him on the cheek. "Just how did the LORD's spirit leave me to speak to you?" he asked.

<sup>26</sup>"Arrest him," ordered Israel's king, "and turn him over to Amon the city official and to Joash the king's son. <sup>27</sup>Tell them, 'The king says: Put this man in prison and feed him minimum rations of bread and water until I return safely.'"

<sup>28</sup>"If you ever return safely," Micaiah replied, "then the LORD wasn't speaking through me." Then he added, "Pay attention, every last one of you!"

22:10 threshing floor: Part of the process of harvesting grains included beating the grain on a large open area, and then throwing it up in the air to allow the wind to remove the straw and chaff. gate: The large open area was often the place where royalty consulted the people and where the courts were held (cf. 2 Sam 15:2; Amos 5:10-15).

22:11-12 Zedekiah . . . iron horns: By using a symbolic action, a common technique of prophets (e.g., Isa 20; Jer 13; Ezek 5), one of the 400 prophets tries to confirm the word spoken earlier, and which all the other prophets repeat word for word (1 Kgs 22:6).

22:13-14 say the same thing . . . say only what the LORD tells me: By trusting God's words, Micaiah willingly risks fueling further royal outrage.

12:15-17 Attack . . . hand it over to the king: Micaiah repeats the words of the 400. Ahab sees through Micaiah's mocking irony and challenges Micaiah to speak the truth. shepherd: a metaphor for the king (cf. 2 Sam 5:2; Zech 13:7).

22:19-23 Micaiah tells of a scene in the heavenly court, somewhat different from the one in Job 1-2, but similar to that found in Isaiah 6:1-3. Here God is on a throne and those stationed beside him belong to the heavenly forces

(see note on 1 Kgs 18:15). They are God's advisors and agents in governing the nations. These are God's cosmic army. And the prophet is their messenger (cf. Jer 23:18). See note on 1 Kings 18:15. lying spirit: The effect of this deception is for Ahab to hear what he wanted to hear in order to expose the true intention of God. it is the LORD: Viewed that way, the 400 prophets aren't so much false prophets as they are agents of God's purposeful interaction with a rebellious and idolatrous king. Although Jehoshaphat's question in 1 Kings 22:7 undermines their status as authentic prophets, Ahab doesn't get it. The narrator wants to undermine Ahab through exposing his mistrust of Micaiah (1 Kgs 22:8).

22:24-25 Just how . . . leave me to speak to you?: an understandable reaction, since Zedekiah also claimed to be speaking the Lord's words. Given the insight provided by 1 Kings 22:19-23, Zedekiah is rightfully shocked. You will find out: There is no way of knowing the outcome ahead of time. Only the outcome of the prophetic word will tell. And Zedekiah will discover that when the disaster actually arrives (cf. 1 Kgs 20:30).

<sup>29</sup>So Israel's king and Judah's King Jehoshaphat attacked Ramoth-gilead. <sup>30</sup>Israel's king said to Jehoshaphat, "I will disguise myself when we go into battle,<sup>k</sup> but you should wear your royal attire." When Israel's king had disguised himself, they entered the battle.

<sup>32</sup>As soon as the chariot officers saw Jehoshaphat, they assumed that he must be Israel's king, so they turned to attack him. But Jehoshaphat cried out for help. <sup>33</sup>When the chariot officers realized that he wasn't Israel's king, they stopped chasing him. <sup>34</sup>But someone randomly shot an arrow that struck Israel's king between the joints in his armor.<sup>l</sup>

"Turn around and get me out of the battle," the king told his chariot driver. "I've been hit!"

<sup>35</sup>While the battle raged all that day, the king stood propped up in the chariot facing the Arameans. But that evening he died after his blood had poured from his wound into the chariot. <sup>36</sup>When the sun set, a shout spread throughout the camp: "Retreat to your towns! Retreat to your land!" <sup>37</sup>Once the king had died, people came from Samaria and buried the king there. <sup>38</sup>They cleaned the chariot at the pool of Samaria. The dogs licked up the king's blood and the prostitutes bathed in it, just as the LORD had spoken.

Ahab's last days

<sup>39</sup>The rest of Ahab's deeds and all that he did—including the ivory palace he built and all the towns he constructed—aren't they written in the official records of Israel's kings? <sup>40</sup>Ahab lay down with his ancestors. His son Ahaziah succeeded him as king.

Jehoshaphat rules Judah

me: Micaiah may be confident that he has spoken God's authentic word. But he isn't saying any more than the instruction in Deuteronomy about recognizing a true prophet (Deut 17:20-22): The prophecy is authentic if the prophet's words become reality.

22:30-34 disguise myself: Ahab reveals his own lack of understanding of how the prophetic word plays itself out. There is a touch of dark humor here, since as it turns out Ahab was randomly shot. Fight only with Israel's king: confirms the inequality in the relationship between Ahab and Jehoshaphat. Although Ahab is the real power broker, he can't prevent the fulfillment of the prophetic word.

22:38 as the Lord had spoken: The story ends by reminding readers of the real actor in the historical drama. dogs... prostitutes: Events have unfolded as announced (cf. 1 Kgs 21:19). Dogs may be a euphemism for male prostitutes, as the word is translated in Deuteronomy 23:18. Using these words together here both demonstrates how the prophet's words have been fulfilled and adds a subtle critique of the idolatrous practices that Ahab supported during his reign.

22:39-40 The summary of Ahab's reign is typical of the historian's style. See note on 1 Kings 11:41-43. ivory palace: Ivory inlays were common in palaces and houses, as confirmed by excavations in Samaria, Ahab's capital (cf. Amos 3:15; 6:4).

22:41-50 Although Jehoshaphat is already mentioned in 1 Kings 15:24, and is one of the main characters in the immediately preceding story (1 Kgs 22:2), this short summary describes him as one who acted in keeping with God's standards. See note on 1 Kings 15:3-5 (cf. 1 Kgs 15:5, 11). In various ways, this description draws attention to Jehoshaphat's similarity to Solomon (cf. 1 Kgs 3:2-3; 4:24; 5:12; 9:26-28; 10:11). shrines: See note on 1 Kings 3:2-3 (cf. 1 Kgs 15:14). made peace with Israel's king: Compare 1 Kings 22:1. consecrated workers: See note on 1 Kings 14:22-24. Tarshish-styled ships: See note on 1 Kings 10:14-27. Ophir: See note on 1 Kings 9:26-28. Ezion-geber: an Edomite port on the Gulf of Aqaba (cf. 1 Kgs 9:26).

Ahaziah rules Israel

<sup>51</sup>In the seventeenth year of Judah's King Jehoshaphat, Ahaziah, Ahab's son, became king over Israel in Samaria. He ruled over Israel for two years. <sup>52</sup>He did evil in the LORD's eyes. He walked in his father's ways and his mother's ways—that is, in the ways of Jeroboam, Nebat's son, who had caused Israel to sin. <sup>53</sup>Ahaziah served Baal and worshipped him. He angered the LORD, Israel's God, by doing all the same things his father had done.

22:51-53 The summary of Ahaziah's reign over Israel echoes other similar descriptions rooted in the ways of Jeroboam (cf. 1 Kgs 12:28-31), especially that of Ahab, who initiated the worship of Baal (cf. 1 Kgs 16:31-33). seventeenth year . . . two years: Based on information in 2 Kings 3:1, Ahaziah probably reigned for a portion of two separate calendar years, from 850 to 849 BCE. his mother's ways: referring to Jezebel. Of all the negative summaries in the books of Kings, this is the only one to mention the king's mother. angered the Lord: See sidebar, "Anger of God" at 1 Kings 8. Ahaziah's story continues in 2 Kings 1.

2 KINGS

The two books of Kings were originally one book. For a fuller summary of the historian's interests and major themes, see the introduction to 1 Kings.

Although the narrative of the books of Kings continues without interruption between 1 and 2 Kings, 2 Kings offers a theological explanation for the destruction and exile of Israel and of Judah. The writer highlights the role of the prophets, and the significance of the Lord's word, by painting a picture of God's perspective on Israel's and Judah's history. The historian's chief concern is the violation of the covenant relationship between God and God's people. Two features of that violation are abandoning exclusive loyalty to God by worshipping other gods, and disregarding the words of the prophets. The consequences of that covenant violation are drawn from the warnings of Deuteronomy (Deut 28:15, 20, 25, 36-37, 47-52, 63-65). Although other nations feature prominently in the story—from relatively small kingdoms (Moab, Edom, Philistia, and Aram) to superpowers with massive military capacity (Egypt, Assyria, and Babylon)—their power and might don't dominate the historian's perspective. Rather, Israel's God, who is sovereign over nature and all nations, governs both gods and peoples. Israel's God, speaking through the prophets, brings about the warned consequences of human actions.

2 Kings takes up the story of Israel, beginning with the death of Ahab and the reign of Ahaziah. God's announcements to Elijah in 1 Kings 19:15-17 give structure to the first part of 2 Kings: Elisha takes over the role of Elijah; and over the course of time Hazael becomes king of Aram, and Jehu becomes king of Israel. After Elisha's death, the story reveals the slow death of Israel, and then of Judah. The historian criticizes king after king, and in the end the people as well, for failing to "do what was right in the Lord's eyes." Israelite kings consistently imitate the sin of Jeroboam, which involved setting up two gold calves at Bethel and Dan (1 Kgs 12:26-33). According to the historian, Israel succumbs to the Assyrians (721 BCE) because of serious covenant violations (2 Kgs 17:7-41). Only three kings of Judah in all of Kings receive praise: Asa, Hezekiah, and Josiah (1 Kgs 15:11; 2 Kgs 18:3-4; 22:2). Unfortunately, neither their positive actions nor Josiah's great reform of worship practices can rescue Judah from its own demise. Manasseh's actions are the nails in Judah's coffin. Because Judah didn't learn from what happened to Israel, so says the writer (2 Kgs 17:19; 21:13-16), Judah fell to the Babylonians, and Jerusalem was destroyed (587/586 BCE).

After noting the exile of Judah (2 Kgs 25:23b), the historian's final paragraph tells of King Jehoiachin's release from prison after 37 years of captivity in Babylon. This may be a thinly disguised vision of hope. A Davidic king still lives. Perhaps God still has something good in store for Judah. But the historian is cautious. That hope remains implicit, if it is there at all.

Ahaziah's death

1 After Ahab died, Moab rebelled against Israel.

<sup>2</sup>Ahaziah fell out the window of his second-story room in Samaria and was hurt. He sent messengers, telling them, "Go to Ekron's god Baal-zebul, and ask if I will recover from this injury."

<sup>3</sup>But the LORD's messenger said to Elijah from Tishbe, "Go, intercept the messengers of Samaria's king, and ask them, 'Is it because there's no God in Israel that you are going to question Ekron's god Baal-zebul?' <sup>4</sup>This is what the LORD says: You will never get out of the bed you are lying in; you will die for sure!" So Elijah set off.

<sup>5</sup>The messengers returned to Ahaziah. He said to them, "Why have you come back?"

<sup>6</sup>They said to him, "A man met us and said, 'Go back to the king who sent you. Say to him, This is what the LORD says: Is it because there's no God in Israel that you've come to question Ekron's god Baal-zebul? Because of this, you will never get out of the bed you are lying in; you will die for sure!'"

<sup>7</sup>Ahaziah said to them, "Describe the man who met you and said these things."

<sup>8</sup>They said to him, "He wore clothes made of hair<sup>a</sup> with a leather belt around his waist."

Ahaziah said, "That was Elijah from Tishbe."

<sup>9</sup>So Ahaziah sent out a commander with fifty soldiers. The commander met up with Elijah while he was sitting on a hilltop. The commander said, "Man of God, the king says, 'Come down!'"

<sup>10</sup>Elijah replied to the commander of the fifty soldiers, "If I really am a man of God, may fire come down from the sky and burn up you and your fifty soldiers." Then fire came down from the sky and burned up the commander and his fifty soldiers.

<sup>11</sup>Ahaziah then sent another commander with fifty soldiers. The commander said to Elijah, "Man of God, this is what the king says: 'Hurry and come down!'"

<sup>12</sup>Elijah said to them, "If I really am a man of God, may fire come down from the sky and burn up you and your fifty soldiers." Then God's fire came down from the sky and burned up the commander and his fifty soldiers.

<sup>13</sup>For a third time Ahaziah sent a commander with fifty soldiers. So the third commander arrived. He kneeled before Elijah and begged him, "Man of God! Please have some regard for my life and the lives of these fifty soldiers who are your servants. <sup>14</sup>Look, fire came from the sky and burned up the two earlier commanders and their troops of fifty soldiers. Please have regard for my life."

<sup>15</sup>Then the LORD's messenger said to Elijah, "Go down with him. Don't be afraid of him." So Elijah set out to go with him to the king.

<sup>16</sup>Elijah said to the king: "This is what the LORD says: Why did you send messengers to question Ekron's god Baal-zebul? Is there no God in Israel whose word you could seek? Because of this, you won't ever get out of the bed you are lying in; you'll die for sure!" <sup>17</sup>So Ahaziah died in agreement with the LORD's word that Elijah had spoken.

1:1-18 The description of Ahaziah's reign in Israel continues after the summary of 1 Kings 22:51-53. Elijah returns as a key prophetic figure in this story.

1:1 Moab rebelled: This event, which describes a treaty violation, is told in more detail in 2 Kings 3. Ahaziah died (1 Kgs 22:51) and Joram took his place (2 Kgs 3:1) in the same year as the Moabite rebellion.

1:2 Samaria: the capital city of the northern kingdom Israel from the time of Omri (1 Kgs 16:24). Ekron: a Philistine city about 22 miles west of Jerusalem; part of Judah during David's time (1 Sam 7:14). Baal-zebul: The name means "lord of the flies." The word zebul may poke fun at the actual name of the god, Baal-zebul, which means something like "lord of glory/height/majesty." Zebul is part of Ahaziah's mother Jezebel's name (1 Kgs 16:31). The word is also used to describe the temple as a "lofty temple" (1 Kgs 8:13; or "house of zebul"). On Jesus and Baal-zebul, see Matthew 10:25; 12:24-27; Mark 3:22; Luke 11:15.

1:3 the LORD's messenger: most likely a heavenly messenger who provides guidance for the prophet (cf. 2 Kgs 1:15). no God in Israel: The sentence, repeated three times in the chapter (cf. 2 Kgs 1:6, 16), recalls Elijah's contest with the god Baal (1 Kgs 18) with its contrasting saying "The LORD is the real God!" (1 Kgs 18:39).

1:9-15 The story bears marks of oral storytelling, with its clear repetitions and dynamic transformation in the third of its three parts. Man of God: See note on 2 Kings 13:1-10. Two delegations call on the Man of God to come down. Instead, Elijah causes fire to come down and destroy the men. Fire is associated with both Baal and Israel's God (cf. 1 Kgs 18:24, 38; contra 1 Kgs 19:11-12). Only Israel's God is the one whose words have the power to effect change. A lack of respect for that power (in this case represented in the person of the prophet) brings judgment. The leader of the third delegation not only has the proper respect for God's representative but also rightly protests the violence displayed in God's name.

Because Ahaziah had no son, Joram<sup>b</sup> became king after him in the second year of Judah's King Jehoram, who was Jehoshaphat's son. <sup>18</sup>The rest of Ahaziah's deeds, aren't they written in the official records of Israel's kings?

Elijah goes to heaven

2 Now the LORD was going to take Elijah up to heaven in a windstorm, and Elijah and Elisha were leaving Gilgal. <sup>2</sup>Elijah said to Elisha, "Stay here, because the LORD has sent me to Bethel."

But Elisha said, "As the LORD lives and as you live, I won't leave you." So they went down to Bethel.

<sup>3</sup>The group of prophets from Bethel came out to Elisha. These prophets said to Elisha, "Do you know that the LORD is going to take your master away from you today?"

Elisha said, "Yes, I know. Don't talk about it!"

<sup>4</sup>Elijah said, "Elisha, stay here, because the LORD has sent me to Jericho."

But Elisha said, "As the LORD lives and as you live, I won't leave you." So they went to Jericho.

<sup>5</sup>The group of prophets from Jericho approached Elisha and said to him, "Do you know that the LORD is going to take your master away from you today?"

He said, "Yes, I know. Don't talk about it!"

<sup>6</sup>Elijah said to Elisha, "Stay here, because the LORD has sent me to the Jordan."

But Elisha said, "As the LORD lives and as you live, I won't leave you." So both of them went on together. <sup>7</sup>Fifty members from the group of prophets also went along, but they stood at a distance. Both Elijah and Elisha stood beside the Jordan River. <sup>8</sup>Elijah then took his coat, rolled it up, and hit the water. Then the water was divided in two! Both of them crossed over on dry ground. <sup>9</sup>When they had crossed, Elijah said to Elisha, "What do you want me to do for you before I'm taken away from you?"

Elisha said, "Let me have twice your spirit."

<sup>10</sup>Elijah said, "You've made a difficult request. If you can see me when I'm taken from you, then it will be yours. If you don't see me, it won't happen."

fall out of the window, the author associates Ahaziah's death with Elijah's prophetic pronouncement. The narrator doesn't deny the effects of natural causes but associates them with the divine purpose. in agreement with the LORD's word: See sidebar, "Fulfillment of the Prophetic Word" at 1 Kings 2. Joram: Ahaziah's brother and Ahab's son (cf. 2 Kgs 3:1). because Ahaziah had no son: Like the inheritance of property, the throne could pass to the brother.

1:18 official records: See note on 1 Kings 11:41-43.

2:1-10:36 Events announced by Elijah (1 Kgs 19:15-18) are now about to take place. Elisha will succeed Elijah as prophet, Hazael will become king of Aram, and Jehu will take the throne of Israel. According to the historian, all of that occurs because of the power of the prophets' words. See sidebar, "Fulfillment of the Prophetic Word" at 1 Kings 2. Although Elisha is at the center of those events, his influence continues. The last story about him reports his death during the reign of Israel's King Joash (2 Kgs 13:14-25). The stories about Elisha are interspersed with material from the royal archives.

2:1-18 Elijah ascends in a windstorm, and Elisha becomes his successor.

2:1 up to heaven in a windstorm: The phrase is repeated in 2 Kings 2:11. Windstorms are often associated with God's powerful presence (cf. Job 38:1; 40:6; Ps 83:15; Isa 29:6; Nah 1:3; Zech 9:14). This event reports the transport of Elijah into God's presence. Enoch is the only other OT character who was "taken" by God (Gen 5:24). Much later, the story of Elijah's disappearance gave rise to the idea that he might return one day (cf. Mal 4:5-6; in the NT, see, e.g., Matt 17:10; Luke 1:17) Gilgal: perhaps the same place where Joshua and the Israelites first set up camp in the land (Josh 4:19-20). Gilgal became a prominent worship site in Israel under Samuel's leadership (cf. 1 Sam 10:8). King Saul was crowned there (1 Sam 11:15).

2:2-7 The story develops through three repetitions of Elijah's command Stay here and by Elisha's three solemn pledges that culminate in his promise I won't leave you (2:2, 4, 6). In each case, it is the LORD who sends Elijah to Bethel, Jericho, and the Jordan. Jericho: in the Jordan Valley about 10 miles north of the Dead Sea. Bethel: See 1 Kings 12:29-33. Between each of those exchanges, The group of prophets questions Elisha, and in each case Elisha silences them, for reasons not explained in the story itself (2:3, 5). See note on 2 Kings 6:1-7.

2:8 water was divided... on dry ground: Elijah's final act echoes two earlier events under Moses' and Joshua's leadership, where the sea or river parted and people crossed on dry ground (Exod 14:21-22; Josh 3:15-17). Just as Elijah mirrors Moses, Elisha will mirror Joshua (2 Kgs 2:14). The story emphasizes continuity of leadership and implies that God continues to be at work through these delegates. 2:9-10 twice your spirit: According to an analogy with inheritance instructions, Elisha is asking for the larger portion that rightfully belongs to the oldest male child (cf. Deut 21:15-17). He is asking for a spiritual inheritance; he has already left his earthly inheritance behind (1 Kgs 19:19-21). He isn't asking for twice Elijah's power but a larger share than the other prophets. difficult request: Elijah knows that Elisha will take on his prophetic role.

<sup>11</sup>They were walking along, talking, when suddenly a fiery chariot and fiery horses appeared and separated the two of them. Then Elijah went to heaven in a windstorm.

<sup>12</sup>Elisha was watching, and he cried out, "Oh, my father, my father! Israel's chariots and its riders!" When he could no longer see him, Elisha took hold of his clothes and ripped them in two.

Elisha succeeds Elijah

<sup>13</sup>Then Elisha picked up the coat that had fallen from Elijah. He went back and stood beside the banks of the Jordan River. <sup>14</sup>He took the coat that had fallen from Elijah and hit the water. He said, "Where is the LORD, Elijah's God?" And when he hit the water, it divided in two! Then Elisha crossed over.

<sup>15</sup>The group of prophets from Jericho saw him from a distance. They said, "Elijah's spirit has settled on Elisha!" So they came out to meet him, bowing down before him. <sup>16</sup>"Look," they told him, "there are fifty strong men among us, your servants. Please let them go and search for your master. Perhaps the LORD's spirit has picked him up and put him down on some mountain or in some valley."

Elisha said, "Don't send them." <sup>17</sup>They insisted until he became embarrassed and said, "Okay, send them." So they sent fifty men who searched for three days. But they couldn't find Elijah. <sup>18</sup>When these men returned to Elisha, who was staying in Jericho, he said to them, "Didn't I tell you not to go?"

<sup>19</sup>The citizens said to Elisha, "As you can see, sir, this city is in a good location, but the water is bad, and the land causes miscarriages."

<sup>20</sup>He said, "Bring me a new bowl, and put some salt in it." They did so. <sup>21</sup>Elisha then went out and threw salt into the spring. He said, "This is what the LORD has said: I have purified this water. It will no longer cause death and miscarriage." <sup>22</sup>The water has stayed pure right up to this very day, in agreement with the word that Elisha spoke.

Elisha and the bears

<sup>23</sup>Elisha went up from there to Bethel. As he was going up the road, some young people came out of the city. They mocked him: "Get going, Baldy! Get going, Baldy!" <sup>24</sup>Turning around, Elisha looked at them and cursed them in the LORD's name. Then two bears came out of the woods and mangled forty-two of the youths. <sup>25</sup>From there Elisha went to Mount Carmel and then back to Samaria.

The difficulty arises because the request isn't Elijah's to grant. His response indicates that it is the Lord who must provide the answer, though Elijah confirms that it will be yours.

2:11-12 my father: indicates the prophetic mentoring relationship of a disciple to a master. It also refers back to his request for a prophetic inheritance (2 Kgs 2:9). chariot... horses... windstorm... chariots... riders: These images depict God's cosmic army. This army appeared in God's battle against Ahab (1 Kgs 22:19), and appears later again in God's battle against the Arameans (2 Kgs 6:15-17). Horses, chariots, fire, and storms are often associated with God's appearance (which is called a "theophany": cf. Ezek 1; Hab 3:8, 11; Pss 18:14; 104:3). clothes... ripped: a gesture normally associated with mourning (cf. 1 Sam 4:12; 2 Sam 1:2).

2:13-14 the coat... hit the water: Elisha imitates Elijah's action (2 Kgs 2:8) with the same effect. The coat that he picks up replaces the one he ripped in two (2 Kgs 2:12), and symbolizes his taking up Elijah's prophetic authority and role. "Where is the Lord, Elijah's God?": With this question Elisha calls on God to take action, which will serve as a public demonstration of Elisha as Elijah's successor. On the parallel between Elijah/Elisha and Moses/Joshua, see note on 2 Kings 2:8.

2:15-18 search for your master: Having seen the event from a distance, the prophets affirm Elisha's prophetic succession, but they think God has simply taken Elijah elsewhere (cf. 1 Kgs 18:12). "Didn't I tell you not to go?": The incident is the first confirmation that Elisha's word is dependable, which affirms his prophetic authority.

2:19-22 The pure water of Jericho's spring and the surrounding fertile land are here ascribed to this act by Elisha. Although the story may be a folkloric way of explaining the remarkable fertility of the place, it clearly emphasizes the power of the divine word. what the Lord has said: In verse 21 the Lord's word, the divine I, is the cause, which is a keynote in the historian's presentation of the prophets. to this very day: In verse 22 Elisha's word confirms the life-sustaining power of the prophetic word through time. 2:23-25 Baldy: Perhaps the young people are insulting Elisha by comparing him to Elijah, who may have been hairy (cf. translation note a at 2 Kgs 1:8). cursed them in the Lord's name: This gruesome story illustrates that no one may act disrespectfully toward the prophets without expecting terrible consequences. Including this story here contributes to establishing Elisha as Elijah's legitimate successor. forty-two: a symbolic number whose meaning is unclear (cf. 2 Kgs 10:14). Some think it is associated with evil (the multiplication of, or conflict between six, the human number, and seven, the divine number). Mount Carmel... Samaria: These two sites remind readers of Elijah's contests with the prophets of Baal and his opposition to Ahab's worship of Baal.

Moab's rebellion

3 Joram,<sup>c</sup> Ahab's son, became king of Israel in Samaria in the eighteenth year of Jehoshaphat, Judah's king. He ruled for twelve years. <sup>2</sup>He did what was evil in the LORD's eyes, but he wasn't as bad as his father and mother. He removed the sacred pillar of Baal that his father had made. <sup>3</sup>But he nevertheless clung to the sins that Jeroboam, Nebat's son, had caused Israel to commit. He didn't deviate from them.

Jehoshaphat responded, "Yes, I'll go. We'll fight as one: you and I, our troops and our horses."
<sup>8</sup>"Which road should we take?" Joram asked.

Jehoshaphat responded, "The road that goes through the Edomite wilderness."

<sup>9</sup>So Israel's and Judah's kings set out with the king of Edom. They marched around for seven days until there was no water left for the army or for the animals with them. <sup>10</sup>Israel's king said, "This is terrible! Has the LORD brought us three kings together only to hand us over to Moab?"

<sup>11</sup>Jehoshaphat said, "Isn't there any prophet of the LORD around, so we could question the LORD through him?"

One of the servants of Israel's king answered, "Elisha, Shaphat's son, is here. He used to pour water on Elijah's hands."

<sup>12</sup>Jehoshaphat said, "He has the LORD's word!" So Israel's king and Jehoshaphat and Edom's king went down to see Elisha.

<sup>13</sup>Elisha said to Israel's king, "What do we have to do with each other? Go to your father's or mother's prophets."

Then Israel's king said to him, "Don't say that, because it is the LORD who has brought us three kings together—but only to hand us over to Moab!"

<sup>14</sup>Elisha said, "I swear by the life of the LORD of heavenly forces, the one I stand before

<sup>c</sup>Heb Jehoram (also in 3:6); the king's name is variously spelled in either long Jehoram or short Joram form.

3:1-27 Joram's alignment with Jehoshaphat and the Edomite king to wage war against treaty-breaking. Moab provides the setting for Elisha's first political engagement.

3:1-3 evil in the LORD's eyes: This is the first of many occurrences of this evaluative statement in 2 Kings. See note on 1 Kings 11:6. sacred pillar of Baal: See note on 1 Kings 14:22-24 (cf. 2 Kgs 10:26-27; 17:10; 23:14). sins... Jeroboam: See note on 1 Kings 12:29-33.

3:4-27 The story reports the consequences of a treaty violation by King Mesha of Moab. The Moabite Stone, discovered in 1868 and now in the Louvre museum in Paris, records Mesha's victory in a war against Israel. Mesha's account describes Omri's and Ahab's occupation of Moabite lands and reports Mesha's victory against Israel (850 BCE). This story is told from an Israelite point of view, but without a clear victory in the conflict.

3:4-5 pay Israel's king: Certain types of treaty relationships required payment, perhaps for protection against military incursion (see note on 1 Kgs 14:25-31). Such payments were the ancient equivalent of modern occupation in which a more powerful country extracts resources from the occupied country. rebelled: a term that indicates violation of the treaty obligations (cf. 1 Kgs 12:19; 2 Kgs 1:1; 8:20). As verse 5 implies, Mesha may have sensed Israelite weakness and an opportunity for independence after Ahab's death.

3:7 Jehoshaphat responded: His response is like the one he offered to Ahab (1 Kgs 22:4). According to 1 Kings 22:47, Edom depended on Judah and was under its control. Jehoshaphat may have willingly participated in order to protect Judah's strategic interests east of the Jordan. In addition, Judah and Israel had an official marriage alliance: Jehoshaphat's son had married Ahab's daughter (2 Kgs 8:18).

3:8 Which road... Edomite wilderness: Israel controlled the territory east of the Jordan River and north of Moab. Instead of approaching from the north, as might be expected, Joram and Jehoshaphat move up from the south through Edom.

3:9-10 Has the LORD... hand us over to Moab?: Joram interprets the lack of water as the Lord's doing.

3:11-12 As in the campaign of Ahab and Jehoshaphat against the Arameans, Jehoshaphat is interested in what the Lord has to say through the prophets (2 Kgs 22:5, 7). In 2 Kings 22, however, Jehoshaphat makes the suggestion before marching off to war rather than after, as he does here. The difference doesn't seem to have an impact on the outcome, since God is the main actor in any case. He has the LORD's word!: This is one of the most prominent themes in the books of Kings, which depict God's action through the prophets as the energizing power in the story of Israel and Judah. See sidebar, "Fulfillment of the Prophetic Word" at 1 Kings 2.

3:13-14 Elisha has little respect for Joram, and participates in the endeavor only reluctantly because of Jehoshaphat (reflecting the larger prophetic interest of the narrator in Judah and the dynasty of David). your father's or mother's prophets: the prophets of the northern kingdom who and serve, if I didn't care about Judah's King Jehoshaphat, I wouldn't notice you or even look at you! <sup>15</sup>Now bring me a musician." While the musician played, the LORD's power came over Elisha. <sup>16</sup>He said, "This is what the LORD says: This valley will be filled with pools." <sup>17</sup>This is what the LORD says: You won't see any wind or rain, but that valley will be full of water. Then you'll be able to drink—you, your cattle, and your animals. <sup>18</sup>This is easy for the LORD to do. He will also hand Moab over to you. <sup>19</sup>You will then attack every fort and every grand city, cutting down all the good trees, stopping up all the springs, and ruining the good fields with stones."

<sup>21</sup>Now all the Moabites had heard how these kings had come to fight against them. So all who were able to fight were summoned, and they took up positions along the border. <sup>22</sup>They got up early in the morning as the sun's rays shone on the water. The Moabites saw the water from a distance. It looked as red as blood. <sup>23</sup>They said, "It's blood! The kings must have fought each other and killed themselves! Now get the plunder, Moab!"

<sup>24</sup>But when they entered Israel's camp, the Israelites rose up and attacked the Moabites. The Moabites fled from them. Israel moved forward, striking the Moabites down as they went. <sup>25</sup>Then the Israelites destroyed the Moabite cities. Each Israelite threw a stone on every piece of good land until it was covered. They stopped up every spring and cut down every good tree. Only Kir-hareseth remained with its stone wall intact,<sup>f</sup> but then stone throwers<sup>g</sup> surrounded it and attacked it.

<sup>26</sup>Moab's king saw that he was losing the battle. So he took seven hundred soldiers with him, each with sword in hand, to break through to Edom's king. But they failed. <sup>27</sup>Then he took his oldest son, who was to succeed him as king, and he offered him on the wall as an

The Mesha Inscription This is an inscription from the 9th century BCE that tells of King Mesha, who, with the help of his god Chemosh, conquers part of the Transjordan area, thereby recovering it from Israelite control. The inscription illustrates the story in 2 Kings 3. It depicts an intimate relationship between people, land, and gods. The Assyrian diplomat who negotiates with Hezekiah holds a similar view. He assumes that the god of empire is greater than all the gods of the petty kingdoms Nebuchadnezzar's army had defeated (2 Kgs 18:33-35).

"Omri was the king of Israel, and he oppressed Moab for many days, for Chemosh was angry at his land. . . . And Omri took possession of the whole land of Medeba, and he lived there . . . forty years. But Chemosh restored it in my days. . . . And the men of Gad lived in the land of Atarot from ancient times; and the king of Israel built Atarot for himself, and I fought against the city and captured it. And I killed all the people of the city as a sacrifice for Chemosh and for Moab. . . . And Chemosh said to me, "Go, take Nebo from Israel." And I went in the night and fought against it . . . and I took it and I killed the whole population. . . . For I had put it to the ban for Ashtar Chemosh."

Later in the inscription, we read of Mesha's restoration of towns, cisterns, and even "flocks of the land," a reference that resonates with 2 Kings 3:4, which notes that "Moab's King Mesha kept sheep" and that he paid tribute to Israel's king with "one hundred thousand lambs."

supported the imperial interests (cf. 1 Kgs 18:19; 22:1-12). The unexpected mention of mother's invites the reader to recall Jezebel's influence in the northern Israelite court (e.g., 1 Kgs 21). heavenly forces: See note on 1 Kings 18:15. 3:15 musician: Sometimes music induced prophetic trances (1 Sam 10:5-6; cf. 1 Sam 19:20). 3:16-19 Elisha announces a double message: water in the dry season and a victory over Moab. cutting down . . . trees . . . fields with stones: Elisha's prediction seems excessive, especially in the light of Deuteronomy's interest in protecting trees (Deut 20:19-20). 3:20-25 Elisha's words become a reality. water . . . from the direction of Edom: The phrase red as blood (Heb. 'adummim dam) reflects a play on words with "Edom" (Heb. 'Edom), red as blood: In the pools of red and pink limestone of the region, the water remaining after the flash flood might look like blood. Kir-hareseth: identified as Kerak, now the site of a ruined crusader castle situated on a high hill surrounded by deep valleys. It is situated about 11 miles east of the Dead Sea and 17 miles south of the Arnon Gorge. 3:26-27 took his oldest son . . . burned offering: In a desperate move, King Mesha sacrifices his son. Deuteronomy appears to prohibit such behavior (cf. Deut 18:10), but the historian criticizes Israel and Judah for similar actions (cf. 2 Kgs 16:3; 17:17; 21:6). outrage . . . by Israel: Interpreters differ about the meaning here, depending on whether the preposition is translated by or against. Either Israel was outraged and left or the sacrifice sparked a kind of deadly anger unleashed by the Moabite army against Israel, which caused the Israelites to retreat. In either case,

A poor widow

4 Now there was a woman who had been married to a member of a group of prophets. She appealed to Elisha, saying, "My husband, your servant, is dead. You know how he feared the LORD. But now someone he owed money to has come to take my two children away as slaves."

<sup>2</sup>Elisha said to her, "What can I do for you? Tell me what you still have left in the house."

She said, "Your servant has nothing at all in the house except a small jar of oil."

<sup>3</sup>He said, "Go out and borrow containers from all your neighbors. Get as many empty containers as possible. <sup>4</sup>Then go in and close the door behind you and your sons. Pour oil into all those containers. Set each one aside when it's full."

<sup>5</sup>She left Elisha and closed the door behind her and her sons. They brought her containers as she kept on pouring. <sup>6</sup>When she had filled the containers, she said to her son, "Bring me another container."

He said to her, "There aren't any more." Then the oil stopped flowing, <sup>7</sup>and she reported this to the man of God.

He said, "Go! Sell the oil and pay your debts. You and your sons can live on what remains."

A rich woman

<sup>8</sup>One day Elisha went to Shunem. A rich woman lived there. She urged him to eat something, so whenever he passed by, he would stop in to eat some food. <sup>9</sup>She said to her husband, "Look, I know that he is a holy man of God and he passes by regularly. <sup>10</sup>Let's make a small room on the roof. We'll set up a bed, a table, a chair, and a lamp for him there. Then when he comes to us, he can stay there."

<sup>11</sup>So one day Elisha came there, headed to the room on the roof, and lay down. <sup>12</sup>He said to his servant Gehazi, "Call this Shunammite woman." Gehazi called her, and she stood before him. <sup>13</sup>Elisha then said to Gehazi, "Say to her, 'Look, you've gone to all this trouble for us. What can I do for you? Is there anything I can say on your behalf to the king or to the commander of the army?'"

She said, "I'm content to live at home with my own people."

<sup>14</sup>Elisha asked, "So what can be done for her?"

Gehazi said, "Well, she doesn't have a son, and her husband is old."

<sup>15</sup>Elisha said, "Call her." So Gehazi called her, and she stood at the door. <sup>16</sup>Elisha said, "About this time next year, you will be holding a son in your arms."

But she said, "No, man of God, sir; don't lie to your servant."

<sup>17</sup>But the woman conceived and gave birth to a son at about the same time the next year. This was what Elisha had promised her.

although Israel inflicted serious damage, they didn't get the decisive victory predicted by Elisha (2 Kgs 3:18).

4:1–6:23 A series of stories about Elisha focuses on his prophetic powers. Elisha provides life-giving provisions and healing in the face of scarcity, illness, and death. These stories not only confirm Elisha as an authentic prophet but also demonstrate that his God is the true and only source of life and of whatever sustains life.

4:1–7 Like Elijah (1 Kgs 17:8–16), Elisha provides resources to meet the need of a destitute widow. feared the LORD: a common way of speaking about reverence for and loyalty to God. take my two children away as slaves: The story is rooted in the danger of debt-slavery, a common problem in the ancient world (cf. Exod 21:2–11; Lev 25:39–55; Deut 15:12–15; Amos 2:6; 8:6; Neh 5:1–5). The story illustrates how Elisha acts on God's behalf as one who cares for widows and orphans (Deut 10:18), by providing essential and staple food ingredients (oil and flour).

4:8–37 The situation of a wealthy woman, one of Elisha's supporters, becomes an opportunity for him to offer the gift of life itself, once through a miraculous birth, and again through a restoration from death. This story parallels another of the Elijah stories (1 Kgs 17:17–24). The story spans approximately five years, with each of three parts beginning with the words one day (4:8, 11, 18).

4:8 Shunem: in northern Israel at the western end of the Jezreel Valley to the southeast of Mount Carmel (mentioned also in 1 Kgs 1:3).

4:9–10 passes by regularly: Elisha probably traveled through on a circuit visiting various communities and groups of prophets along the way (cf. 1 Sam 7:15–17). holy man of God: See note on 2 Kings 13:1–10.

4:13 What can I do for you?: This is the same question Elisha asks the widow (2 Kgs 4:2). The prophet doesn't discriminate between the poor and the rich but meets their needs according to their predicament.

4:14–16 doesn't have a son: Although this wealthy woman (2 Kgs 4:8) isn't vulnerable in the same way as the widow in the previous story, without a son she has no practical means of support in her old age. Here the story emphasizes the power of the prophetic word to bring about

<sup>18</sup>The child grew up. One day he ran to his father, who was with the harvest workers. <sup>19</sup>He said to his father, "Oh, my head! My head!"

The father said to a young man, "Carry him to his mother." <sup>20</sup>So he picked up the boy and brought him to his mother.

The boy sat on her lap until noon. Then he died. <sup>21</sup>She went up and laid him down on the bed for the man of God. Then she went out and closed the door. <sup>22</sup>She called her husband and said, "Send me one of the young men and one of the donkeys so that I can hurry to the man of God and come back."

<sup>23</sup>Her husband said, "Why are you going to him today? It's not a new moon or sabbath."

She said, "Don't worry about it." <sup>24</sup>She saddled the donkey, then said to her young servant, "Drive the donkey hard. Don't let me slow down unless I tell you." <sup>25</sup>So she went off and came to the man of God at Mount Carmel.

As soon as the man of God saw her from a distance, he said to Gehazi his servant, "Look, it's the Shunammite woman!" <sup>26</sup>Run out to meet her and ask her, "Are things okay with you, your husband, and your child?"

She said, "Things are okay."

<sup>27</sup>When she got to the man of God at the mountain, she grabbed his feet. Gehazi came up to push her away, but the man of God said, "Leave her alone! She is distraught, but the LORD has hidden the reason from me and hasn't told me why."

<sup>28</sup>She said, "Did I ask you for a son, sir? Didn't I say, 'Don't raise my hopes'?"

<sup>29</sup>Elisha said to Gehazi, "Get ready, take my staff, and go! If you encounter anyone, don't stop to greet them. If anyone greets you, don't reply. Put my staff on the boy's face."

<sup>30</sup>But the boy's mother said, "I swear by your life and by the LORD's life, I won't leave you!" So Elisha got up and followed her.

<sup>31</sup>Gehazi went on ahead of them. He set the staff on the young boy's face, but there was no sound or response. So he went back to meet Elisha and told him, "The boy didn't wake up."

<sup>32</sup>Elisha came into the house and saw the boy lying dead on his bed. <sup>33</sup>He went in and closed the door behind the two of them. Then he prayed to the LORD. <sup>34</sup>He got up on the bed and lay down on top of the child, putting his mouth on the boy's mouth, his eyes on the boy's eyes, his hands on the boy's hands. And as he bent over him, the child's skin grew warm.

<sup>35</sup>Then Elisha got down and paced back and forth in the house. Once again he got up on the bed and bent over the boy, at which point the boy sneezed<sup>b</sup> seven times and opened his eyes.

<sup>36</sup>Elisha called for Gehazi and said, "Call the Shunammite woman." Gehazi called her, and she came to Elisha. He told her, "Pick up your son." <sup>37</sup>She came and fell at his feet, facedown on the ground. Then she picked up her son and left.

Miracles with food

<sup>38</sup>When Elisha returned to Gilgal, there was a famine in the land. A group of prophets was sitting before him. He said to his servant, "Put on the big pot and cook some stew for the whatever the prophet announced. See sidebar, "Fulfillment of the Prophetic Word" at 1 Kings 2.

4:23 new moon or sabbath: It was customary to visit the prophets on festival days, like the beginning of the month or the Sabbath day. Don't worry about it: The woman appears to be single-minded about what needs to be done, as the following verses make clear. She acts because of her husband's lack of attention to his son's injury, and he seems not to care that his wife would want to go to a holy man in the midst of crisis (cf. Noah with his wife in Judg 13 and Eli with his wife Hannah in 1 Sam 1).

4:26-28 Are things okay...okay: Both Elisha and the woman use the Hebrew word shalom, which, in this context, implies well-being. Yet all is not well. In her distress the woman exhibits extraordinary trust in the ability of the prophet to address her new situation of need. The LORD has hidden the reason: It seems as though Elisha doesn't understand the problem. The woman's reply in 4:28 recalls her earlier plea (2 Kgs 4:16) and evokes Elisha's personal involvement.

4:29-31 my staff: In spite of having Elisha's staff, Gehazi isn't able to revive the boy. I swear... the LORD's life: a traditional Hebrew formula when making a solemn pledge. The woman expresses with determination that only the prophet can solve her problem.

prophets.”<sup>39</sup> So one of them went out to the field to gather plants; he found a wild vine and gathered wild gourds from it, filling his garment. He came and cut them up into the pot of stew, but no one knew what they were.

<sup>40</sup>The stew was served to the men, but as they started to eat it, they cried out and said, “There is death in that pot, man of God!” They couldn’t eat it.

<sup>41</sup>Elisha said, “Get some flour.” He threw it into the pot and said, “Serve the people so they can eat.” At that point, there was nothing bad left in the pot.

Elisha said, “Give it to the people so they can eat! This is what the LORD says: ‘Eat and there will be leftovers.’”<sup>44</sup> So the servant gave the food to them. They ate and had leftovers, in agreement with the LORD’s word.

Naaman is healed

5 Naaman, a general for the king of Aram, was a great man and highly regarded by his master, because through him the LORD had given victory to Aram. This man was a mighty warrior, but he had a skin disease.<sup>2</sup> Now Aramean raiding parties had gone out and captured a young girl from the land of Israel. She served Naaman’s wife.

<sup>3</sup>She said to her mistress, “I wish that my master could come before the prophet who lives in Samaria. He would cure him of his skin disease.”<sup>4</sup> So Naaman went and told his master what the young girl from the land of Israel had said.

<sup>5</sup>Then Aram’s king said, “Go ahead. I will send a letter to Israel’s king.”

So Naaman left. He took along ten kikkars of silver, six thousand shekels of gold, and ten changes of clothing.<sup>6</sup> He brought the letter to Israel’s king. It read, “Along with this letter I’m sending you my servant Naaman so you can cure him of his skin disease.”

<sup>7</sup>When the king of Israel read the letter, he ripped his clothes. He said, “What? Am I God to hand out death and life? But this king writes me, asking me to cure someone of his skin disease! You must realize that he wants to start a fight with me.”

4:39-41 wild gourds: The servant has gathered a plant that has poisonous seeds (citrus colocynthis). flour: The remedy isn’t a prescribed antidote but an ordinary cooking ingredient. The story, like that of the purification of bad water (2 Kgs 2:19-22), demonstrates that the prophet is God’s agent of transformation. The ordinary means (salt or flour) suggests that magic isn’t involved.

4:42-44 Baal-shalishah: in the highlands southwest of Shechem. bringing . . . early produce: It was the practice to offer priests some of the first harvest. The story assumes that prophets also benefited from this practice (cf. Num 18:13; Deut 18:4). what the LORD says . . . in agreement with the LORD’s word: As in the story in 2 Kings 4:1-7, the prophet here multiplies the food to serve a crowd. The story shows that God (by means of a divine word through the prophets) is the one who provides, who heals, and who gives life. See sidebar, “Fulfillment of the Prophetic Word” at 1 Kings 2. This story may have served as a model for the NT feeding stories (cf. Matt 14:13-21; Mark 6:30-42; Luke 9:13-17; John 6:12-13).

5:1-27 The healing of Naaman the Syrian continues several themes introduced in the Elijah stories: Elijah’s God may also be worshipped by foreigners (1 Kgs 17:17-24), and this God is the only living and active God (1 Kgs 18:20-40). In addition, this story demonstrates that Israel’s God is active in the affairs of all nations, not only Israel or Judah. 5:1 Naaman: is the only person named in the story. Both the king of Aram (Syria) and the king of Israel remain anonymous. The key characters are Naaman and Elisha. the LORD had given victory to Aram: Several earlier battles with Aram are reported in 1 Kings 20:1-34; 22:1-40. It was common throughout the ancient Near East to assume that a country’s gods were able to give victory to their people in battle (cf. Judg 11:24). In this case, however, the narrator states that Israel’s God has given victory to a foreign country (1 Kgs 22:19-36). skin disease: The ailment isn’t specified. It’s not associated with the disease known today as leprosy (Hansen’s disease). Any skin disease was cause for ritual impurity (cf. Lev 13).

5:5 ten kikkars: equivalent to approximately 750–760 pounds, plus about 150 pounds of silver. The sum of money is massive, the equivalent of the annual wages of hundreds of workers.

5:6-7 ripped his clothes: a symbolic act signifying grief (cf. 2 Kgs 2:11-12) or anger (cf. 1 Kgs 21:27; 2 Kgs 2:11-12; 6:30; 11:14; 19:1-2; 22:11-13). letter to Israel’s king: The king of Aram wrongly assumes that Israel’s king and the prophet are on friendly terms. Am I God to hand out death and life? . . . start a fight with me: The irony of the situation is evident. The you of verse 6 must be the prophet, not the king. Yet part of the king’s answer in verse 7 is more true than he realizes. Although the Israelite king has no power to give life, kings were certainly known to deal in death (cf. 1 Kgs 21). The second part of his answer may be more to the point. Given several wars between Israel and Aram, this letter could well imply a subversive plot.

<sup>8</sup>When Elisha the man of God heard that Israel's king had ripped his clothes, he sent word to the king: "Why did you rip your clothes? Let the man come to me. Then he'll know that there's a prophet in Israel."

<sup>10</sup>Elisha sent out a messenger who said, "Go and wash seven times in the Jordan River. Then your skin will be restored and become clean."

<sup>11</sup>But Naaman went away in anger. He said, "I thought for sure that he'd come out, stand and call on the name of the LORD his God, wave his hand over the bad spot, and cure the skin disease. <sup>12</sup>Aren't the rivers in Damascus, the Abana<sup>k</sup> and the Pharpar, better than all Israel's waters? Couldn't I wash in them and get clean?" So he turned away and proceeded to leave in anger.

<sup>13</sup>Naaman's servants came up to him and spoke to him: "Our father, if the prophet had told you to do something difficult, wouldn't you have done it? All he said to you was, 'Wash and become clean.'" <sup>14</sup>So Naaman went down and bathed in the Jordan seven times, just as the man of God had said. His skin was restored like that of a young boy, and he became clean.

<sup>15</sup>He returned to the man of God with all his attendants. He came and stood before Elisha, saying, "Now I know for certain that there's no God anywhere on earth except in Israel. Please accept a gift from your servant."

<sup>16</sup>But Elisha said, "I swear by the life of the LORD I serve that I won't accept anything."

Naaman urged Elisha to accept something, but he still refused. <sup>17</sup>Then Naaman said, "If not, then let me, your servant, have two mule loads of earth. Your servant will never again offer entirely burned offerings or sacrifices to any other gods except the LORD. <sup>18</sup>But may the LORD forgive your servant for this one thing: When my master comes into Rimmon's temple to bow down there and is leaning on my arm, I must also bow down in Rimmon's temple. When I bow down in Rimmon's temple, may the LORD forgive your servant for doing that."

5:8 know that there's a prophet in Israel: This is the second most important point in the story, and it comes first in the sequence (cf. 2 Kgs 5:15 for the most important point). Yet these two are actually inseparable. The prophet acts as God's agent of healing.

5:10 wash seven times . . . Jordan River: The number seven often appears in ritual acts that symbolized perfection. In this case it represents healing. The number seven also appears in the particular rituals involved when skin disease is present (Lev 14:7, 16, 27, 51). The instructions to wash in the Jordan River are unusual. As on other occasions, when the prophet used salt and flour in actions that resulted in miraculous effects, this instruction is incomprehensible to Naaman. Why this river? (See 2 Kgs 5:12.) The more important point of the story concerns obedience to the prophetic word, not the physical means by which the healing comes. wash . . . become clean: The verbs used here also appear in the healing rituals of Leviticus (cf. Lev 14:8-9; also Lev 13:7, 35; 14:2, 23, 32).

5:12 Abana . . . Pharpar: rivers flowing just north of Damascus, the capital of Aram.

5:14 young boy: The words here stand as a parallel to "young girl" (2 Kgs 5:2-3), suggesting a transformation. Like the young girl who knows about the prophet, now Naaman, as though beginning again, will make a confession about his own knowing in 2 Kings 5:15.

5:15 Now I know . . . no God anywhere on earth except in Israel: Although 2 Kings 5:8 anticipates Naaman's knowledge of Elisha's prophetic role, here readers discover the heart of the matter. Naaman's confession echoes Solomon's confession at the beginning of his prayer at the dedication of the temple (1 Kgs 8:23). Naaman is a textbook example of the foreigner (translated "immigrant" in 1 Kgs 8:41) who "comes from a distant country because of your reputation." The hope, prays Solomon, is "so that all the people of the earth may know your reputation and revere you" (1 Kgs 8:43). Similarly, Solomon's blessing on the people also includes the hope "that all the earth's peoples may know that the LORD is God. There is no other God!" (1 Kgs 8:60). Naaman has demonstrated the fulfillment (perhaps as a representative of all foreigners) of Solomon's hopes. 2 Kings begins with Ahaziah going to inquire of the foreign god. This is a problem because, as Elijah puts it, "Is it because there's no God in Israel" (2 Kgs 1:3) that Ahaziah is consulting Baal-zebub? Naaman puts that question to rest. Not only is the LORD (Yahweh) actually Israel's God, but the LORD is the only God on earth. Perhaps this is the grandest confessional statement in the books of Kings, and that from the mouth of an outsider.

5:17 two mule loads of earth: Although Elisha refuses payment, Naaman asks for earth. Some suggest that he wishes to make a mud-brick altar when he arrives at home (cf. Exod 20:24-25). Others think the earth represents the sacred land of Israel, the land of Israel's God; and the Lord's power is limited to that territory. The more important point is that Naaman's worship won't be directed toward any other gods except the Lord.

5:18 may the Lord forgive: Naaman's request echoes Solomon's prayer at the dedication of the temple (1 Kgs 8:30, 34, 36, 39, 50). He represents the foreigner who prays toward the temple (see note on 2 Kgs 5:15). Rimmon: another name for the Aramean storm god Hadad (cf. 1 Kgs 16:31-33; Zech 12:11).

<sup>19</sup>Elisha said to him, "Go in peace."

But when Naaman had gone some distance from Elisha, <sup>20</sup>Gehazi (who was the servant of Elisha the man of God) thought, My master let this Aramean Naaman off the hook by not accepting the gift he brought! As surely as the LORD lives, I'll go after him and accept something from him. <sup>21</sup>So Gehazi pursued Naaman.

Naaman saw him running after him, so he got down off his chariot to meet him. He said, "Is everything okay?"

<sup>22</sup>Gehazi answered, "Yes, but my master sent me to say, 'Two young men who are members of a group of prophets have just now come to me from the hills of Ephraim. Give them a kikkar of silver and two changes of clothing.'"

<sup>23</sup>Naaman said, "By all means, take two kikkars!" He encouraged Gehazi to accept them. He tied two kikkars of silver up in two bags, along with two changes of clothes. Naaman gave them to two of his servants, and they carried them in front of Gehazi. <sup>24</sup>When Gehazi arrived at the elevated fortress,<sup>1</sup> he took the items from them and stored them in his house. Then he sent the servants away, and they left. <sup>25</sup>Gehazi then went and stood before his master.

Elisha said to Gehazi, "Where did you come from, Gehazi?"

"Your servant didn't go anywhere," Gehazi replied.

<sup>26</sup>Elisha said to him, "Wasn't my heart going along with you<sup>m</sup> when the man got off his chariot to meet you? Is this the time to accept silver, clothes, olive trees, vineyards, sheep, cattle, or male and female servants?<sup>27</sup> Naaman's skin disease will now cling to you and to your descendants forever!" And Gehazi left Elisha's presence, flaky like snow with skin disease.

An ax head floats

6 The members of the group of prophets said to Elisha, "Look, the place where we now live under your authority is too small for us. <sup>2</sup>Let's go to the Jordan River and each get a log from there. Then we can make a place to live there."

Elisha said, "Do it!"

<sup>3</sup>One of them said, "Please come with us, your servants."

Elisha said, "Okay, I'll go." <sup>4</sup>So he went with them. They came to the Jordan River and began cutting down trees. <sup>5</sup>One of them was cutting down a tree when his ax head fell into the water. He cried out, "Oh, no! Master, it was a borrowed ax!"

<sup>6</sup>The man of God said, "Where did it fall?" He showed Elisha the place. Elisha then cut a piece of wood, threw it into the river there, and the ax head floated up. <sup>7</sup>"Lift it out," Elisha said. So the man then reached out and grabbed it.

Aramean attacks are stopped

<sup>9</sup>The man of God sent word to Israel's king: "Beware of passing by this place because the Arameans are going down there." <sup>10</sup>Then Israel's king sent word to the place the man of God had mentioned to him. Time after time, Elisha warned the king, and the king stayed on the alert.

<sup>11</sup>Aram's king was extremely upset about this. He called his officers and said to them, "Tell me! Who among us is siding with Israel's king?"

5:19-27 Gehazi, Elisha's servant, seizes an opportunity to grasp for wealth and suffers the consequences.

5:26 Wasn't my heart going along: In this case Elisha is aware of Gehazi's involvement (cf. 2 Kgs 4:27, where he doesn't know the situation). Is this the time to accept silver: Except for the silver, the list of items doesn't correspond to what Gehazi was given. The additional items are similar to the list of items Samuel warned would be taken from the people by Israel's kings (cf. 1 Sam 8:14-17). This addition to the story reminds the people about royal greed, and it provides a contrast to the selflessness of both Naaman and the prophet (cf. 2 Kgs 5:16).

6:1-7 This story provides another example of Elisha's prophetic power. group of prophets: communities of prophets living together under Elisha's leadership and direction (cf. 1 Kgs 20:35; 2 Kgs 2:3; 4:1, 38; 5:22).

6:8-23 Unlike the episode in 2 Kings 5, which depicts friendly relations between Israel and Syria, this story belongs to the time of the Aramean wars (cf. 1 Kgs 20:1-34; 22:1-40). The kings remain anonymous.

6:9-12 man of God sent word... Elisha the Israelite prophet: It wasn't unusual in the ancient world for prophets or diviners to comment on political affairs. In this case the story highlights Elisha's, and therefore the Lord's

<sup>13</sup>He said, "Go and find out where he is. Then I will send men to capture him."

They told him, "He is in Dothan." <sup>14</sup>So the king sent horses and chariots there with a strong army. They came at night and surrounded the city.

<sup>15</sup>Elisha's servant got up early and went out. He saw an army with horses and chariots surrounding the city. His servant said to Elisha, "Oh, no! Master, what will we do?"

<sup>16</sup>"Don't be afraid," Elisha said, "because there are more of us than there are of them."

<sup>17</sup>Then Elisha prayed, "LORD, please open his eyes that he may see." Then the LORD opened the servant's eyes, and he saw that the mountain was full of horses and fiery chariots surrounding Elisha. <sup>18</sup>The Arameans came toward him, so Elisha prayed to the LORD, "Strike this nation with blindness." And the LORD struck them blind, just as Elisha asked. <sup>19</sup>Elisha said to them, "This isn't the right road or the right city. Follow me, and I'll lead you to the man you are looking for." But he took them to Samaria!

<sup>20</sup>When they arrived in Samaria, Elisha said, "LORD, open the eyes of these men so they can see." The LORD opened their eyes, and they saw that they were right in the middle of Samaria! <sup>21</sup>When he saw them, Israel's king said to Elisha, "Should I kill them, my father? Should I?"

<sup>22</sup>He said, "No, don't kill them. Did you capture them with your own sword or bow? Do you have the right to kill them?" Put food and water in front of them so they can eat and drink and return to their master." <sup>23</sup>So the king gave them a great feast, and they ate and drank. Then the king let them go, and they returned to their master. After that, Aramean raiding parties didn't come into Israel anymore.

Ben-hadad attacks Samaria

<sup>24</sup>Now it happened later that Aram's King Ben-hadad gathered all his forces and went up to attack Samaria. <sup>25</sup>The siege lasted so long that there was a great famine in Samaria. A donkey's head sold for eighty shekels of silver and a quarter kab of doves' dung<sup>a</sup> for five shekels. <sup>26</sup>Israel's king was passing by on the city wall when a woman appealed to him, "Help me, Your Majesty!"

<sup>27</sup>The king said, "No! May the LORD help you! Where can I find help for you? From the threshing floor or the winepress?" <sup>28</sup>But then the king asked her, "What's troubling you?"

direction in the political affairs of the nations (cf. 2 Kgs 3:11-12).

6:13 Dothan: about 10 miles north of Samaria, Israel's capital city. This suggests that Aramean raiders were able to penetrate deep into Israelite territory south of the Jezreel Valley.

6:15-17 Don't be afraid: a common prophetic announcement of salvation (cf. Isa 41:10; Jer 1:8). mountain was full of horses and fiery chariots: See notes at 2 Kings 2:11-12. This army is part of God's "heavenly forces" (see notes at 1 Kgs 18:15; cf. 1 Kgs 19:10; 22:19; 2 Kgs 3:13-14). Wordplay and repetition emphasize God's miraculous protection. Although the Aramean army is surrounding the city (Heb. sabab), God's troops are surrounding Elisha (Heb. sabib).

6:21-22 Should I kill them... No, don't kill them: The prophet introduces an alternative to retributive violence (that is, punishment as a form of seeking revenge), so common throughout the political stories in the books of Kings. my father: the traditional address of a disciple to a master (cf. 2 Kgs 2:12). The story demonstrates the submission of king to prophet and therefore also to God. your own sword or bow: These words echo Joshua 24:12. The appearance of the words here emphasizes the divine character of the event. God is the chief actor in the story. 6:23 raiding parties... anymore: The narrator's summary outcome of the story underlines the point of the story: God's ways, as mediated through the prophets, shape the story of Israel's relationships with her neighbors more significantly than the political might of kings and their armies.

6:24-7:20 The story of the Aramean siege of Samaria continues the theme of divine management of Israel's and Syria's political affairs through the word of the prophet.

6:24 Now it happened later: The stories of Aramean raids into Israelite territory can't be arranged chronologically. The stories have been included to illustrate the main theme of the God's supervision of political affairs. Ben-hadad: Several Syrian kings had this name. This is likely Ben-hadad III, not the king mentioned in 1 Kings 15:18; 20:1.

6:25 donkey's head: Because of the severity of the famine, people had to eat ritually unclean food and even scraps (cf. Lev 11:26). eighty shekels... quarter kab: approximately one quart. Inflation is out of control. In 1 Kings 10:29 a live horse is said to cost 150 shekels of silver. doves' dung: See translation note o. Although animal dung was used for fuel, this may be a special name for an unknown product or a plant.

6:26 Israel's king: As in other stories, this king remains anonymous as though to make the point that these are prophetic, not political stories.

6:27 threshing floor: See note on 1 Kings 22:10. winepress: a flat surface on which grapes were pressed with the feet. The juice would run off into collection basins from where it could be collected into jars. The king implies that these places of food production are inactive.

6:28-29 Cannibalism may be an unfortunate consequence of siege warfare (cf. Deut 28:53-57; Ezek 5:10; Lam 2:20; 4:10).

She answered, "A woman said to me, 'Give up your son so we can eat him today; we'll eat my son tomorrow.'"<sup>29</sup> So we cooked and ate my son. The next day I said to her, "Hand over your son so we can eat him." But she had hidden her son."

<sup>30</sup>When the king heard the woman's story, he ripped his clothes. And as he passed by along the wall, the people could see that he was wearing mourning clothes underneath. <sup>31</sup>He said, "So may God do to me, and more, if the head of Elisha, Shaphat's son, remains on his shoulders today!"

<sup>32</sup>Elisha was sitting in his house, and the elders were sitting with him. The king sent a messenger on ahead, but before the man arrived, Elisha said to the elders, "Do you see that this murderer has sent someone to cut off my head? Watch for when the messenger comes, then close the door and hold it shut against him. The sound of his master's feet is right behind him, isn't it?"

<sup>33</sup>While Elisha was still speaking with them, the messenger<sup>q</sup> arrived and said, "Look, this disaster is the LORD's doing. Why should I trust the LORD any longer?"

7Elisha said, "Hear the LORD's word! This is what the LORD says: At this time tomorrow a seah<sup>a</sup> of wheat flour will sell for a shekel at Samaria's gate, and two seahs of barley will sell for a shekel."

<sup>2</sup>Then the officer, the one the king leaned on for support, spoke to the man of God: "Come on! Even if the LORD should make windows in the sky, how could that happen?"

Elisha said, "You will see it with your own eyes, but you won't eat from it."

The siege is broken

<sup>3</sup>Now there were four men with skin disease<sup>r</sup> at the entrance to the city. They said to each other, "What are we doing sitting here until we die? <sup>4</sup>If we decide, 'Let's go into the city,' the famine is there, and we'll die in the city. But if we stay here, we'll die just the same. So let's go and surrender to the Aramean camp. If they let us live, we'll live. If they kill us, we'll die."

<sup>5</sup>So they set out in the evening to the Aramean camp, and they came to the edge of the camp. But there was no one there because <sup>6</sup>the Lord had made the Aramean camp hear the sound of chariots, horses, and a strong army. They had said to each other, "Listen! Israel's king has hired the Hittite and Egyptian kings to come against us!" <sup>7</sup>So they had got up and fled in the evening, leaving their tents, horses, and donkeys. They left the camp exactly as it was and ran for their lives.

<sup>8</sup>So these men with skin disease came to the edge of the camp. They entered a tent where they ate and drank. They carried off some silver, gold, and garments, and they hid them. Then they returned and went into another tent. They took more things from there, went away, and hid them. <sup>9</sup>But then they said to each other, "What we're doing isn't right. Today is a day of good news, but we're keeping quiet about it. If we wait until dawn, something bad will happen to us. Come on! Let's go and tell the palace." <sup>10</sup>So they went and called out to the gatekeepers, telling them, "We went to the Aramean camp, and listen to this: No one was there, not even the sound of anyone! The only things there were tied-up horses and donkeys,

6:30 ripped his clothes: See note on 2 Kings 5:6-7.

6:31 So may God do to me: The saying indicates a serious promise or solemn pledge. The king assumes Elisha is the cause of the siege, even though nothing so far in the story indicates that to be true.

6:33-7:1 this disaster... trust the LORD: Given the overall theme of the prophet stories—the Lord's supervision of Israel's history—this question is the heart of the matter. Doesn't the siege contradict the Lord's presence and power? Hear the LORD's word!: The prophet's immediate response indicates that the prophetic word continues to shape Israel's story. His answer indicates that the economy will again flourish and that the inflation reported in 2 Kings 6:25 will end. Salvation is on its way. Samaria's gate: The open area inside the gate of the city was the place of commerce and judicial activity.

7:2 the one the king leaned on: very likely the king's chief advisor or armor-bearer. windows in the sky: the source of rain. The officer uses this phrase in order to question God's capacity to provide food (cf. Ps 78:23; Mal 3:10). You will see it... but you won't eat: Because of his cynical response, Elisha predicts his death (cf. 2 Kgs 7:20).

7:3-4 skin disease: See note on 2 Kings 5:1. People classified as ritually unclean had to live outside the community (cf. Lev 13:46; Num 5:1-4). Their decision to defect to the Arameans was based on a practical consideration: At least there they would find food.

7:6 hear the sound of chariots... army: The motif of God's heavenly forces appears again (see notes at 2 Kgs 2:11-12; 6:16-17; cf. 2 Sam 5:24). Hittite and Egyptian kings: two traditional imperial powers representing dangers from the north and the south (with the Hittites from eastern Turkey).

and the tents left just as they were.”<sup>11</sup>The gatekeepers shouted out the news, and it was reported within the palace.

<sup>12</sup>The king got up in the night. He said to his servants, “Let me tell you what the Arameans are doing to us. They know we are starving, so they’ve left the camp to hide in the fields. They are thinking, The Israelites will come out from the city, and then we’ll capture them alive and invade the city.”

The king sent them after the Aramean army, saying, “Go and see!”<sup>15</sup>So they went after the Arameans as far as the Jordan River. The road was filled the whole way with garments and equipment that the Arameans had thrown away in their rush. The messengers returned and reported this to the king.

<sup>16</sup>Then the people went out and looted the Aramean camp. And so it happened that a seah of wheat flour did sell for a shekel, and two seahs of barley sold for a shekel, in agreement with the LORD’s word.<sup>17</sup>But the king had put the officer whom he leaned on for support in charge of the city gate. The people trampled the officer at the gate, and he died. This was just what the man of God said when the king had come down to him.<sup>18</sup>Because when the man of God said to the king, “At this time tomorrow two seahs of barley will sell for a shekel at Samaria’s gate, and one seah of wheat flour will sell for a shekel,”<sup>19</sup>the officer had answered the man of God, “Come on! Even if the LORD should make windows in the sky, how could that happen?” Then Elisha had said, “You will see it with your own eyes, but you won’t eat from it.”<sup>20</sup>That’s exactly what happened to him. The people trampled him at the city gate, and he died.

The woman from Shunem

Glisha spoke to the woman whose son he had brought back to life: “You and your household must go away and live wherever you can, because the LORD has called for a famine. It is coming to the land and will last seven years.”

<sup>2</sup>So the woman went and did what the man of God asked. She and her household moved away, living in Philistia seven years.<sup>3</sup>When seven years had passed, the woman returned from Philistia. She went to appeal to the king for her house and her farmland.<sup>4</sup>The king was speaking to Gehazi, the man of God’s servant, asking him, “Tell me about all the great things Elisha has done.”<sup>5</sup>So Gehazi was telling the king how Elisha had brought the dead to life. At that very moment, the woman whose son he had brought back to life began to appeal to the king for her house and her farmland.

Gehazi said, “Your Majesty, this is the woman herself! And this is her son, the one Elisha brought to life!”

7:12 The king is fully aware of a common battle tactic (cf. Josh 8:3-23).

7:16-20 in agreement with the LORD’s word . . . what the man of God said . . . exactly what happened: As is characteristic of many of these stories, this conclusion takes pains to emphasize the power of the prophetic word to bring about what the prophet had foretold concerning the siege and the officer’s death (2 Kgs 7:1-2). The narrator emphasizes again the power of the prophetic word (cf. 1 Kgs 12:24; 13:26; 14:18; 2 Kgs 1:17; 10:17; 14:25). See sidebar, “Fulfillment of the Prophetic Word” at 1 Kings 2.

8:1-6 The story of the Shunammite woman’s land claim is a sequel to the story in 2 Kings 4:8-37.

8:1 famine . . . seven years: perhaps related to the famine reported in 2 Kings 4:38. It’s not the same as the famine of the previous story, which was caused by the siege of Samaria (2 Kgs 6:24–7:20).

8:2 Philistia: along the Mediterranean coast to the west of Judah and north of Egypt.

8:3 appeal . . . her farmland: For some unstated reason, the woman’s house and land had been confiscated by the crown or taken over by others. It could be that her husband has died. The king dispenses justice (cf. Ps 72), which his decision confirms (2 Kgs 8:6).

8:4 Gehazi: Elisha’s servant (2 Kgs 5:27). great things Elisha has done: Unlike the previous story, the king here seems interested in Elisha’s reputation. But his motivation isn’t clear.

8:6 everything that the farmland has produced: The king dispenses justice liberally, going far beyond what might

Hazael becomes king

<sup>7</sup>Now Elisha had gone to Damascus when Aram's King Ben-hadad became sick. The king was told, "The man of God has come all this way."

<sup>8</sup>So the king said to Hazael, "Take a gift with you and go to meet the man of God. Question the LORD through him: 'Will I recover from this sickness?'"

<sup>9</sup>So Hazael went out to meet Elisha. He took along forty camel-loads of Damascus' finest goods as a gift. He came and stood before Elisha and said, "Your son Ben-hadad, the king of Aram, sent me to you to ask, 'Will I recover from this sickness?'"

<sup>10</sup>Elisha said to him, "Go and tell him, 'You will definitely recover,' but actually the LORD has shown me that he will die."<sup>11</sup>Elisha stared straight at Hazael until he felt uneasy.<sup>12</sup> Then the man of God began to cry.

<sup>12</sup>Hazael said, "Master, why are you crying?"

"Because I know what violence you will do to the Israelites," Elisha said. "You will drive them from their forts with fire. You will kill their young men with the sword. You will smash their children and rip open their pregnant women."

<sup>13</sup>Hazael replied, "How could your servant, who is nothing but a dog, do such mighty things?"

Elisha said, "The LORD has shown me that you will be king over Aram."<sup>14</sup>Then Hazael left Elisha and returned to his master.

"What did Elisha say to you?" Ben-hadad asked.

"He told me that you will certainly live," Hazael replied.<sup>15</sup>But the next day he took a blanket, soaked it in water, and put it over Ben-hadad's face until he died. Hazael succeeded him as king.

Jehoram rules Judah

<sup>16</sup>In the fifth year of Israel's King Joram, Ahab's son Jehoram, the son of Judah's King Jehoshaphat, became king.<sup>17</sup>He was 32 years old when he became king, and he ruled for eight years in Jerusalem.<sup>18</sup>He walked in the ways of Israel's kings, just as Ahab's dynasty had done, because he married Ahab's daughter. He did what was evil in the LORD's eyes.

be expected. In doing so, he follows the pattern of an ideal king who exhibits God's character (cf. Deut 10:17-18; 1 Kgs 10:9; Pss 72:1-2, 12-13; 99:4).

8:7-15 After a long wait, readers begin to discover that Elijah's prophecies of 1 Kings 19:15-18 are about to be fulfilled. The stories about the prophets demonstrate that prophetic announcements play themselves out, sometimes immediately, and often in due time. This story and the ones that follow show that God is still at work, fulfilling Elijah's words even though now Elisha is God's agent. Hazael becomes king of Aram (Syria) and Jehu becomes king of Israel (2 Kgs 9:1-7).

8:7-8 to Damascus: the capital of the Aramean kingdom. This story seems to be a sequel to the story about Naaman, which would have elevated Elisha's reputation (2 Kgs 5:1-27). Ben-hadad: Ben-hadad II, who consults Elisha for a prognosis about his health (cf. 2 Kgs 1:2; 1 Kgs 14:1-16).

8:9 The extravagant gifts recall Naaman's generosity (2 Kgs 5:5).

8:10 Go and tell him, "You will definitely recover... will die": Elisha's words hide the full truth slightly. Elisha himself doesn't lie, but he tells Hazael to do so. The truth is, he will be murdered (2 Kgs 8:15).

8:11 stared straight at Hazael... began to cry: Elisha's actions indicate that he knows what is about to occur. It's as though Elisha's look sends a silent message to Hazael. His tears demonstrate his grief at what the future holds for Hazael as king (cf. 2 Kgs 10:32; 13:7).

8:13 your servant... a dog: Hazael responds with words traditionally used to identify one's lowly position in relationship to one's superiors (cf. 2 Sam 9:8; 16:9).

8:15 Hazael succeeded him as king: a deliberately unremarkable ending after a graphically described murder. Based on the Assyrian inscriptions of Shalmaneser III, Hazael took the throne in Damascus after 845 BCE and before 841 BCE. He reigned for approximately 40 years.

8:16-29 Two brief stories about Judah's kings set the stage for the ongoing saga of Elisha's encounter with Israel. Judah's kings were last mentioned in 1 Kings 22:41-50, and Jehoshaphat appears again in 2 Kings 3. The focus, here, however, isn't simply on Judah but on the relationship of the next two Judean kings to Israelite kings Omri and Ahab.

8:16 Jehoram: He's introduced in 1 Kings 22:50 and mentioned again in 2 Kings 1:17. In 2 Kings 8:21, 23-24 his alternate name Joram appears in the Hebrew (see translation note u). Joram also happens to be the name of the Israelite king mentioned here (8:16; cf. 2 Kgs 8:25, 29). Yet that Israelite king is also called Jehoram (2 Kgs 1:17; 3:1). These similarities may be the result of traditions developed because of intermarriages between the royal dynasties of Israel and Judah. Or they reflect a symbolic merger; Judah is becoming more like Israel, as these two reports about Judah's kings suggest (cf. 2 Kgs 8:18, 27).

8:18 walked in the ways of Israel's kings... evil in the LORD's eyes: The historian assumes that intermarriage caused Jehoram's failure to live up to the standards set for Judean kings by David. Jehoram's close association

Ahaziah rules Judah

<sup>25</sup>Ahaziah, the son of Judah's king Jehoram, became king in the twelfth year of Israel's King Joram,<sup>x</sup> Ahab's son. <sup>26</sup>Ahaziah was 22 years old when he became king, and he ruled for one year in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Athaliah; she was the granddaughter of Israel's King Omri. <sup>27</sup>He walked in the ways of Ahab's dynasty, doing what was evil in the LORD's eyes, just as Ahab's dynasty had done, because he had married into Ahab's family. <sup>28</sup>Ahaziah went with Joram, Ahab's son, to fight against Aram's King Hazael at Ramoth-gilead, where the Arameans wounded Joram. <sup>29</sup>King Joram returned to Jezreel to recover from the wounds the Arameans had given him at Ramah in his battle with Aram's King Hazael. Then Judah's King Ahaziah, the son of Jehoram, went down to visit Joram, Ahab's son, at Jezreel because he had been wounded.

Jehu rules Israel

9 The prophet Elisha called to a member of the group of prophets, "Get ready, take this jug of oil with you, and go to Ramoth-gilead. <sup>2</sup>When you arrive there, look for Jehu, Jehoshaphat's son and Nimshi's grandson. Go to him, then pull him away from his associates, taking him to a private room. <sup>3</sup>Take the jug of oil and pour it on his head. Then say, "This is what the LORD has said: I anoint you king of Israel." Then open the door, and run out of there without stopping."

<sup>v</sup>Heb Joram (also in 8:23-24); the king's name is usually spelled in its long form Jehoram (cf 2 Chron 21:9).

<sup>w</sup>Heb uncertain <sup>x</sup>Heb Jehoram (also in 8:29); the king's name is variously spelled in either long Jehoram or short Joram form.

with Israel follows Jehoshaphat's alliance with Israel (1 Kgs 22:44), which ended the antagonism that followed the division of the united kingdom after Solomon's death (1 Kgs 14:30; 15:8, 16, 32). Israel's worship of Baal, although only implied here, becomes the great danger also for Judah.

8:19 his servant David... his sons forever: a reference to God's covenantal promise to David (2 Sam 7:1-17). lamp: a metaphor for a living descendant of David (cf. 2 Sam 21:17; 1 Kgs 11:36; 15:4; Ps 132:17). Because of God's promise to David, Judah receives special treatment in spite of the behavior of its kings.

8:20 Edom: a state that, until now, depended on Judah and was under its control (cf. 1 Kgs 22:47). The Edomite king mentioned in 2 Kings 3:9 was a servant of Judah. This act of rebellion against the treaty imposed on Edom severely diminished Judah's control of north-south trade routes between Egypt and Mesopotamia.

8:22 to this day: to the time of the historian. Libnah: a levitical city southeast of Jerusalem about five miles from Lachish (cf. Josh 10:29; 21:13; 2 Kgs 19:8). The move of Edom toward independence and this mention of Libnah's rebellion suggests political weakness at the heart of the Judean monarchy (cf. more extensive explanations in 2 Chron 21:16-17).

8:23-24 official records: See note on 2 Kings 11:41-43.

8:25 Ahaziah: not to be confused with his dead uncle Ahaziah, who was king of Israel (1 Kgs 22:51-53). Joram: See note on 2 Kings 8:16.

8:26-27 Athaliah... Ahab's dynasty... family: The note about Athaliah being related to Omri ties Ahaziah to the northern kingdom (cf. 2 Kgs 8:18) and spells disaster to come (cf. 2 Kgs 11). The behavior of Israel's kings is now the pattern against which the historian evaluates these Judean kings. Gone is any comparison to the example of David (cf. 1 Kgs 15:3).

8:28-29 The ill-fated alliance between Judah and Israel continues (for a fuller description of the events surrounding the visit, see 2 Kgs 9:14-16). Ramah: a short form of Ramoth-gilead, a town east of the Jordan River (cf. 2 Kgs 9:14). Jezreel: Although Ahab is mentioned twice in these stories of Judean kings (2 Kgs 8:19, 27), the mention of Jezreel ties these stories about Judean kings even more explicitly to the Ahab story (cf. 1 Kgs 21:1, 23) and will feature again in the next chapter (cf. 2 Kgs 9:10).

9:1-10:17 Elijah's three-part prophecy now reaches its final outcome in the anointing of Jehu (cf. 1 Kgs 19:15-18). Two other fulfillments—establishing Hazael as king of Aram and Elisha as Elijah's successor—are reported earlier (1 Kgs 19:19-21; 2 Kgs 8:7-15). The fulfillment of the prophetic word is one of the major themes running through the books of Kings. See sidebar, "Fulfillment of the Prophetic Word" at 1 Kings 2.

9:1-3 Ramoth-gilead: Elisha tells the young prophet (2 Kgs 9:4) to visit the battlefield east of the Jordan River (cf. 2 Kgs 8:28-29; 9:14). Although the king has already left (2 Kgs 8:29), the commanders and the army are still there. jug of oil... on his head... anoint: Anointing with oil was a ritual act associated with appointing kings (cf. 1 Sam 16:13; 1 Kgs 1:34).

<sup>4</sup>So the young prophet went to Ramoth-gilead. <sup>5</sup>He came in, and the military commanders were sitting right there. He said, "Commander, I have a word for you."

"For which one of us?" Jehu asked.

The young prophet said, "For you, Commander."

<sup>6</sup>So Jehu got up and went inside. The prophet then poured oil on his head and said to him, "This is what the LORD, Israel's God, says: I anoint you king over the LORD's people, over Israel. <sup>7</sup>You will strike down your master Ahab's family. In this way I will take revenge for the violence done by Jezebel to my servants the prophets and to all the LORD's servants. <sup>8</sup>Ahab's whole family will die. I will eliminate from Ahab everyone who urinates on a wall, whether slave or free, in Israel. <sup>9</sup>I will make Ahab's dynasty like the dynasty of Jeroboam, Nebat's son, and like the dynasty of Baasha, Ahijah's son. <sup>10</sup>And as for Jezebel: The dogs will devour her in the area of Jezreel. No one will bury her." Then the young prophet opened the door and ran.

<sup>11</sup>Jehu went out to his master's officers. They said to him, "Is everything okay? Why did this fanatic come to you?"

Jehu said to them, "You know the man and the nonsense he talks."

<sup>12</sup>"That's a lie!" they said. "Come on, tell us!"

Jehu replied, "This is what he said to me: 'This is what the LORD says: I anoint you king of Israel.'"

<sup>13</sup>Then each man quickly took his cloak and put it beneath Jehu on the paved steps. <sup>7</sup>They blew a trumpet and said, "Jehu has become king!"

Jehu kills his enemies

<sup>14</sup>Then Jehu, Jehoshaphat's son and Nimshi's grandson, plotted against Joram. Now Joram along with all of Israel had been guarding Ramoth-gilead against Aram's King Hazael, <sup>15</sup>but King Joram<sup>8</sup> had gone back to Jezreel to recover from wounds that the Arameans had given him when he fought Hazael. So Jehu said, "If this is the way you feel, then don't let anyone escape from the city to talk about it in Jezreel." <sup>16</sup>Then Jehu got on a chariot and drove to Jezreel because Joram was resting there. Judah's King Ahaziah had also come to visit Joram.

<sup>17</sup>The guard standing on the tower at Jezreel saw a crowd of people coming with Jehu. He said, "I see a crowd of people."

Joram said, "Take a chariot driver. Send him out to meet them to ask, 'Do you come in peace?'"

<sup>18</sup>So the driver went to meet him and said, "The king asks, 'Do you come in peace?'"

Jehu replied, "What do you care about peace? Come around and follow me."

Meanwhile, the tower guard reported, "The messenger met them, but he isn't returning."

<sup>19</sup>The king sent a second driver. He came to them and said, "The king asks, 'Do you come in peace?'"

<sup>7</sup>Heb uncertain <sup>8</sup>Heb Jehoram (also in 9:17, 21-24); the king's name is variously spelled in either long Jehoram or short Joram form.

9:4 young prophet: one of the members of the prophetic guild (cf. 2 Kgs 9:1; see note on 2 Kgs 6:1-7).

9:6-10 The actual words of the young prophet expand the instructions of Elisha considerably (cf. 2 Kgs 9:3). His words fill out Elijah's mention of Jehu's killing those who escape from Hazael (cf. 1 Kgs 19:17; 21:21-24), the LORD's people: These additional words imply there are also "Baal's people," and open a window into a later story about the eradication of Baal worship (2 Kgs 10:18-27). revenge for... my servants the prophets: a reference to Jezebel's actions against the prophets (cf. 1 Kgs 18:4, 13, 22; 19:14-18). urinates on a wall: See note on 1 Kings 14:6-11. dogs: a reference to Elijah's prediction of 1 Kings 21:23 and an anticipation of its conclusion in 2 Kings 9:37-38. For literary purposes, perhaps, the wording varies among these three texts, even though they are all said to be the Lord's word. 9:11 fanatic: The word is sometimes translated "madman."

It describes the behavior of the prophets (cf. Jer 29:26; Hos 9:7). A related noun form appears in 2 Kings 9:20, where it is translated "madman."

9:13 trumpet... Jehu has become king!: typical of coronation celebrations (cf. 1 Kgs 1:39-40).

9:16 Ahaziah: Joram's brother-in-law (cf. 2 Kgs 8:25-29).

9:17-22 Do you come in peace?: The question likely means "Is everything okay?" (cf. 2 Kgs 4:26; 5:21; 9:11). In other words, is all well on the battlefield? Here, however, the translators have provided a more direct translation of the question because the Hebrew word shalom in the question makes the wordplay in this section more visible. The word for "peace," shalom, is used seven times in this short section (and again in 2 Kings 9:31). The punch line in the wordplay occurs at the end of 9:22. No, not all is well, and it won't be well (according to Jehu) until Ahab's dynasty is erased.

Jehu said, "What do you care about peace? Come around and follow me."

<sup>20</sup>The tower guard reported, "The messenger met them, but he isn't returning. And the style of chariot driving is like Jehu, Nimshi's son. Jehu drives like a madman."

<sup>21</sup>Joram said, "Hitch up the chariot!" So they hitched up his chariot. Then Israel's King Joram and Judah's King Ahaziah—each in his own chariot—went out to meet Jehu. They happened to meet him at the plot of ground that belonged to Naboth the Jezreelite.

<sup>22</sup>When Joram saw Jehu, he said, "Do you come in peace, Jehu?"

He said, "How can there be peace as long as the immoralities of your mother Jezebel and her many acts of sorcery continue?"

<sup>23</sup>Then Joram turned his chariot around and fled. He shouted to Ahaziah, "It's a trap, Ahaziah!"

<sup>24</sup>Jehu took his bow and shot Joram in the back. The arrow went through his heart, and he fell down in his chariot. <sup>25</sup>Jehu said to Bidkar his chariot officer, "Pick him up, and throw him on the plot of ground belonging to Naboth the Jezreelite. Remember how you and I were driving chariot teams behind his father Ahab when the LORD spoke this prophecy about him: <sup>26</sup>Yesterday I saw Naboth's blood and his sons' blood, declares the LORD. I swear that I will pay you back on this very plot of ground, declares the LORD. Now pick him up, and throw him on that plot of ground, in agreement with the LORD's word."

<sup>27</sup>Judah's King Ahaziah saw this and fled on the road to Beth-haggan. Jehu chased after him. "Do the same to him!" he commanded. They shot him<sup>a</sup> in his chariot on the way up to Gur, near Ibleam. Ahaziah fled to Megiddo and died there. <sup>28</sup>His servants carried him back in a chariot to Jerusalem. He was buried in his tomb with his ancestors in David's City. <sup>29</sup>Ahaziah had become Judah's king in the eleventh year of Ahab's son Joram.

<sup>30</sup>Jehu then went to Jezreel. When Jezebel heard of it, she put on her eye shadow and arranged her hair. She looked down out of the window. <sup>31</sup>When Jehu came through the gate, she said, "Do you come in peace, Zimri, you master murderer?"

<sup>32</sup>Jehu looked up to the window and said, "Who's on my side? Anyone?" Two or three high officials looked down at him. <sup>33</sup>Then he said, "Throw her out!" So they threw her out of the window. Some of her blood splattered against the wall and on the horses, and they trampled her. <sup>34</sup>Jehu then went in to eat and drink. He said, "Deal with this cursed woman and bury her. She was, after all, a king's daughter." <sup>35</sup>They went to bury her, but they couldn't find her body. Only her skull was left, along with her hands and feet. <sup>36</sup>They went back and reported this to Jehu. He said, "This is the LORD's word spoken through his servant Elijah from Tishbe: Dogs will devour Jezebel's flesh in the area of Jezreel. <sup>37</sup>Jezebel's corpse will be like dung spread out in a field in that plot of land in Jezreel, so no one will be able to say, This was Jezebel."

9:20 madman: Jehu's chariot driving associates him with Elisha, where a related Hebrew word is used (2 Kgs 9:11).

9:21 plot of ground... Naboth: This meeting place is significant because it was there where Ahab stole Naboth's land and killed him (1 Kgs 21:1-16), and where Elijah prophesied against Ahab and his dynasty (1 Kgs 21:19, 21-22).

9:22 immoralities... sorcery: These words are used together in Nahum 3:4, where they are translated "whorings" and "sorceries." The word translated immoralities is used often in Hosea to refer to worship of other gods or participation in Canaanite religion (e.g., Hos 1:2; 2:2, 4; 4:12; 5:4). Jezebel, the enemy of Elijah (see 1 Kgs 19:2), represents a worship practice that is an abomination to the historian (1 Kgs 16:31; 18:4, 19).

9:25-26 plot of ground... in agreement with the LORD's word: The story confirms the main theme of the historian. The prophets are the real agents of God in history; what they say becomes reality. Elisha had spoken against Ahab and against his dynasty (cf. 1 Kgs 21:19, 21-22, 29).

9:27-29 The reign of Ahaziah (see 2 Kings 8:25-29) now comes to an end. Beth-haggan... Ibleam... Megiddo: Ahaziah fled south from Jezreel toward Samaria, but after he was shot he turned west and then north toward Megiddo, where he died. His death isn't part of the prediction of Elijah or the young prophet. eleventh year: In 2 Kings 8:25 Ahaziah is said to have begun to reign in the twelfth year. The apparent discrepancy probably arises from different ways of counting the beginning of the king's reign in Israel or Judah. If Joram ruled for 12 years (2 Kgs 3:1), and if Ahaziah reigned for less than one year, he could have become king in Joram's eleventh year or twelfth year.

9:31 Do you come in peace, Zimri...?: The question anticipates bad things to come (see note on 2 Kgs 9:17-22), especially since Jezebel calls Jehu by the name of the man who killed King Elah and all of Baasha's descendants (1 Kgs 16:8-20).

9:36-37 This is the LORD's word: These verses depicting Jezebel's gruesome death show that events are unfolding as predicted by Elijah, including the disgrace of not having an honorable burial (cf. 1 Kgs 21:23).

Jehu kills Ahab's family

10 Now Ahab had seventy sons in Samaria. So Jehu wrote letters and sent them to Samaria, to the senior officers of the city,<sup>b</sup> the elders, and the guardians of Ahab's sons.<sup>c</sup> <sup>2</sup>The letters said: "Your master's sons are in your possession, along with horses and chariots, a fortified city, and weapons. Now when this letter reaches you, <sup>3</sup>look for the best and most capable of your master's sons. Place him on his father's throne. Then fight for your master's family."

<sup>4</sup>But they were frozen with fear. They said, "Not even two kings could resist him! How can we?" <sup>5</sup>So the palace administrator, the mayor, the elders, and the guardians sent a letter back to Jehu that read, "We are your servants. We will do whatever you tell us. We won't make anyone king. Do whatever seems right to you."

<sup>6</sup>Jehu wrote them a second letter: "If you are loyal to me and ready to obey me, take the heads of your master's sons and bring them to me at Jezreel at this time tomorrow."

Now the king's seventy sons were with the city leaders who were raising them. <sup>7</sup>So when the letter came to them, they took the king's sons and slaughtered all seventy of them. They placed their heads in baskets and sent them to Jehu at Jezreel.

<sup>8</sup>A messenger came and told Jehu, "They have brought the heads of the king's sons."

He responded, "Pile them in two stacks at the entrance of the gate where they will stay until morning." <sup>9</sup>In the morning he went out and stood there to address all the people. "You are innocent. I'm the one who plotted against my master and killed him, but who killed all these people? <sup>10</sup>Know this: Nothing that the LORD has said against Ahab's dynasty will fail to come true. The LORD has done what he said he would do, speaking through his servant Elijah." <sup>11</sup>Then Jehu struck down all those belonging to Ahab's family who were left in Jezreel, so that not one of his leaders, close acquaintances, or priests remained.

10:1-17 The story of Jehu's elimination of any potential claimants to the throne completes the fulfillment of Elijah's and the young prophet's predictions (1 Kgs 21:21-22; 2 Kgs 9:7-9). It was common in the ancient world to kill potential rivals (1 Kgs 15:29; 16:11). But Jehu's extermination goes well beyond Ahab's family members (2 Kgs 9:11).

10:1 seventy sons: a round number representing Ahab's entire extended family (cf. Judg 8:30; 9:2, 5, 24; 12:14). The book of Judges records Abimelech's killing of 70 of his brothers before taking the throne (Judg 9:5).

10:3 fight for your master's family: In the exchange of letters that takes place, Jehu taunts the caretakers of Ahab's royal establishment to take sides, knowing that he will have the upper hand.

10:5-7 We are your servants: This reply indicates that they have switched allegiance to Jehu. Yet Jehu, by writing a second letter, tests their decision severely. He demands loyalty and obedience in the harshest terms. slaughtered all seventy of them: The prophets' predictions seem now to have been fulfilled (cf. 1 Kgs 21:20-24, 29; 2 Kgs 9:7-9; but see also 2 Kgs 10:11, 14, 17).

10:9-10 You are innocent... but who killed all these people?: Jehu appears to position himself as innocent of the blood-bath. Yet he interprets the recent killings as having come about because of what the Lord has said and what The Lord has done. All that has happened goes back to words spoken by Elijah (1 Kgs 21:21-22, 24). The historian's inclusion of these words confirms the conviction that runs throughout the books of Kings that God's word through the prophets is the force that drives history. See sidebar, "Fulfillment of the Prophetic Word" at 1 Kings 2.

10:11 not one... remained: Jehu's subsequent action goes far beyond what the prophets announced (cf. 2 Kgs 9:7-9). Jehu is intent on a complete sweep of the royal <sup>12</sup>Next Jehu set out for Samaria. Beth-eked of the Shepherds was on his way. <sup>13</sup>There Jehu met up with the brothers of Judah's King Ahaziah. "Who are you?" he asked.

"We're Ahaziah's relatives," they replied. "We've come down for a visit with the king's sons and the queen mother's sons."

<sup>14</sup>Jehu then commanded, "Take them alive!" His soldiers took them alive, then slaughtered them at the well of Beth-eked. There were forty-two of them, but not one was left.

Jehu kills Baal worshippers

<sup>15</sup>Jehu departed from there and encountered Rechab's son Jehonadab. Jehu greeted him, and asked, "Are you as committed to me as I am to you?"

Jehonadab responded, "Yes, I am."

"If so," said Jehu, "then give me your hand." So Jehonadab put out his hand, and Jehu pulled him up into the chariot.

<sup>16</sup>Jehu said, "Come with me and see my zeal for the LORD." So Jehu had Jehonadab ride with him in his chariot. <sup>17</sup>When Jehu arrived in Samaria, he killed all those belonging to Ahab who were left in Samaria until they were completely wiped out, in agreement with the LORD's word that was spoken to Elijah.

<sup>18</sup>Then Jehu gathered all the people, saying to them, "Ahab served Baal a little. Jehu will serve him a great deal! <sup>19</sup>So invite all of Baal's prophets, all his worshippers, and all his priests to come to me. Don't leave anyone out, because I have a great sacrifice planned for Baal. Anyone who doesn't show up won't survive." But Jehu was lying so that he could wipe out Baal's worshippers. <sup>20</sup>Jehu called for a holy assembly for Baal, and it was done. <sup>21</sup>Jehu then sent word throughout Israel. All Baal's worshippers came. No one stayed away. They entered Baal's temple until it was packed from one end to the other. <sup>22</sup>Then Jehu said to the person in charge of the vestments, "Bring out the special clothes for all Baal's worshippers." So he brought out robes for them. <sup>23</sup>Then Jehu and Jehonadab, Rechab's son, entered Baal's temple. They said to Baal's worshippers, "Make sure there are no worshippers of the LORD here with you. There should be only Baal worshippers." <sup>24</sup>Then they went in to offer sacrifices and entirely burned offerings. But Jehu had stationed eighty soldiers outside and told them, "I'm handing these people over to you. Whoever lets even one of them escape will pay for it with his life." <sup>25</sup>So when Jehu finished offering the entirely burned offering, he said to the guards and the officers, "Go in and kill everyone! Don't let anyone escape!" They killed the Baal worshippers without mercy. The guards and the officers then disposed of the bodies and entered the inner part of Baal's temple. <sup>26</sup>They brought the sacred pillar<sup>4</sup> out of Baal's temple and burned it. <sup>27</sup>They tore down Baal's sacred pillar and destroyed Baal's temple, turning it into a public restroom, which is what it still is today.

administration. His aim, as will be seen, is complete political mastery, but it will be disguised as religious fanaticism (confirming the premonition signaled in 2 Kgs 9:11).

10:12-14 Ahaziah's relatives . . . not one was left: Jehu demonstrates his cruelty by slaughtering Judeans who are connected through Athaliah, Ahaziah's mother, to Ahab through intermarriage (cf. 2 Kgs 8:26; on Ahaziah's death, see 2 Kgs 9:27). This murderous act will reap consequences (cf. 2 Kgs 11:1). forty-two: See note on 2 Kings 2:24.

10:15-17 Jehu continues his rampage. Rechab's son Jehonadab: Rechabites lived a simple life, devoted to the Lord (Jer 35:1-11). They avoided the corruption of Canaanite culture and religion; they didn't cultivate land, grow vineyards, or drink wine. Jehonadab is an ideal but unwitting partner in Jehu's final exploits. zeal for the Lord: Jehu appeals to Jehonadab's radical monotheism, which resonated with Elijah's own convictions (a related word is used of Elijah in 1 Kgs 19:10, 14, there translated "passionate"). he killed all . . . completely wiped out, in agreement with the Lord's word: As though it hadn't been clear earlier (see note on 2 Kgs 10:9-10), the narrator interprets this final brutal assault as the last thing needed for the prophetic predictions to be realized. The sequence of killings has been unrelenting (cf. 2 Kgs 10:7, 11, 14). Yet it is only the beginning as Jehu continues his zealotry in the next story.

10:18-27 Jehu's final murderous action takes him one step further than the prophecy of Elijah and the young prophet (2 Kgs 9:7-9). Jehu's killing of the worshippers of Baal resonates with the historian's concerns about idolatry. It also makes Jehu an accomplice of Elijah, who in his time killed the prophets of Baal (1 Kgs 18:40). See sidebar, "Idolatry" at 1 Kings 11.

10:20 holy assembly: This was held in the temple to Baal that Ahab built in Samaria (1 Kgs 16:32).

10:26-27 sacred pillar: See note on 1 Kings 14:22-24 (cf. 2 Kgs 3:2; 17:10; 23:14). The actions reported here are in keeping with Deuteronomy's insistence that Israel destroy remaining aspects of Canaanite religion (cf. Deut 7:5; 12:3). still is today: at the time of the writer.

<sup>28</sup>This is how Jehu eliminated Baal from Israel. <sup>29</sup>However, Jehu didn't deviate from the sins that Jeroboam, Nebat's son, had caused Israel to commit—specifically, the gold calves that were in Bethel and Dan.

Jehu rules Israel

<sup>30</sup>The LORD said to Jehu: Because you've done well by doing what is right in my eyes, treating Ahab's family as I wished, your descendants will sit on Israel's throne for four generations. <sup>31</sup>But Jehu wasn't careful to keep the LORD God of Israel's Instruction with all his heart. He didn't deviate from the sins that Jeroboam had caused Israel to commit.

<sup>32</sup>In those days the LORD began to reduce Israel's size. Hazael struck them down in every region of Israel: <sup>33</sup>from the Jordan River eastward, throughout the land of Gilead (Gad, Reuben, and Manasseh), and from Areroe by the Arnon Valley (that is, Gilead) and Bashan.

Queen Athaliah rules Judah

11 When Athaliah, Ahaziah's mother, learned of her son's death, she immediately destroyed the entire royal family. <sup>2</sup>But Jehosheba, King Jehoram's* daughter and Ahaziah's sister, secretly took Ahaziah's son Jehoash<sup>f</sup> from the rest of the royal children who were about to be murdered and hid<sup>g</sup> him in a bedroom along with his nurse. In this way Jehoash was hidden from Athaliah and wasn't murdered. <sup>3</sup>He remained hidden with his nurse in the LORD's temple for six years while Athaliah ruled the country.

*Heb Joram; the king's name is usually spelled in its long form Jehoram (cf 2 Chron 22:11). <sup>f</sup>Heb Joash; the king's name is variously spelled in either long Jehoash or short Joash forms. The latter is the form used in 2 Chron.

10:28-29 eliminated Baal: This verse appears to be a summary of Jehu's primary accomplishment. However... gold calves: According to the historian, Jehu fails in one thing, Jeroboam's actions continue to be a standard against which to measure the kings of Israel (cf. 1 Kgs 12:26-33). Baal worship, with its bull or calf representation, reflects the religious establishment of the official sanctuaries of the kingdom. It appears that the gold calves are a prohibited representation of "the LORD" (Yahweh) by many of the Israelite kings, which ultimately becomes Israel's downfall (cf. 2 Kgs 17:21-23).

10:30-31 doing what is right in my eyes... four generations: The historian includes this prophetic word, which affirms Jehu's actions against Ahab's family and provides him with the promise of the longest-lasting dynasty in Israel—almost 100 years in all. The historian uses the word "right" positively like this in other places only about David (1 Kgs 15:5) and some of the kings of Judah (1 Kgs 15:11; 22:43; 2 Kgs 12:2; 14:3; 15:3, 34; 18:3; 22:2). Jeroboam was promised a dynasty like David's if he did what was right in God's eyes (1 Kgs 11:38). Jehu comes as close as anyone to living up to that ideal. Still, other prophets viewed Jehu's actions as excessive (cf. Hos 1:4-5). the LORD God of Israel's Instruction with all his heart: The wording reflects motifs of God's Instruction and the heart (desires and expectations) that reverberate throughout the books of Kings (cf. 1 Kgs 2:3-4; 14:8; 2 Kgs 17:13, 37; 23:3, 25). Deuteronomy's instruction for kings to attend to God's Instruction applies appropriately to Jehu's situation (Deut 17:18-20). sins... Jeroboam: As though it hasn't been made clear enough in 10:29, the historian repeats Jehu's fatal flaw.

10:32-36 Returning to the affairs of state, the historian documents the beginning of Israel's demise. God's motive for diminishing Israel's control of territory isn't clearly stated. Perhaps Hosea's prophecy can be heard in the background (Hos 1:4-5). Hazael: This king of Aram (Syria) conquered Israelite territory east of the Jordan River as far south as the Arnon Valley (on Hazael, see 1 Kgs 19:15-18; 2 Kgs 8:7-15). Gad... Manasseh: According to the book of Joshua, two and a half tribes were given territory east of the Jordan River (Josh 13:8-33). Hazael made incursions westward during brief reprieves from Assyrian imperial expansion in the mid-9th century BCE. Stories that follow report on Hazael's ongoing military ventures into Israel and neighboring territories (cf. 2 Kgs 12:17-18; 13:3-7, 22-23). But Assyria remains the dominant player on the imperial landscape from the beginning to the end of Jehu's reign. On the Black Obelisk of Shalmaneser III, Jehu is depicted as a vassal of the Assyrian king, giving gifts of precious objects in gold and silver. all his powerful acts: Perhaps because of Israel's relative weakness on the international scene, the historian wants to paint a realistic yet more or less positive portrait of Jehu. official records: See note on 1 Kings 11:41-43.

11:1-12:21 Although chapter 11 begins with a focus on Athaliah, her story provides an introduction to Jehoash, the character of interest to the historian. This is the first story in 2 Kings to focus entirely on political matters in Judah.

11:1 Athaliah: not a legitimate successor to the throne, after she attempts to secure her own position by killing all the male heirs to the throne (previously mentioned in 2 Kgs 8:26).

11:2 Jehosheba: half sister of Ahaziah, not likely the daughter of Athaliah. According to 2 Chronicles 22:11, she is the wife of Jehoaiada the priest (see 2 Kgs 12:4, 9). Jehoash: called by this long form of his Hebrew name in 2 Kings 11:21; 12:1 and through most of chapter 12, and the short form Joash in 2 Kings 11:2; 12:19, 20; 13:1. Jehoash was seven years old at the time (cf. 2 Kgs 11:21).

<sup>4</sup>But in the seventh year Jehoiada sent for the commanders of the Carites and of the guards and had them come to him at the LORD's temple. He made a covenant with them, and made them swear a solemn pledge in the LORD's temple. Then he showed them the king's son. <sup>5</sup>He commanded them, "This is what you must do: A third of you coming on sabbath duty will guard the palace, <sup>6</sup>a second third will be at the Sur Gate, and the final third will be at the gate behind the guards. You will take turns guarding the temple. <sup>7</sup>You who are in the first two groups that usually go off duty on the Sabbath should also guard the LORD's temple to protect the king. <sup>8</sup>Surround the king completely, each of you with your weapons drawn. Whoever comes near your ranks must be killed. Stay near the king wherever he goes."

<sup>9</sup>The unit commanders did everything that Jehoiada the priest ordered. They each took charge of those men reporting for duty on the Sabbath as well as those going off duty on the Sabbath. They came to the priest Jehoiada. <sup>10</sup>Then the priest gave the unit commanders King David's spears and shields, which were kept in the LORD's temple. <sup>11</sup>The guards, each with their weapons drawn, then took up positions near the temple and the altar, stretching from the south side of the temple to the north side to protect the king. Everyone was holding his weapons, surrounding the king. <sup>12</sup>Jehoiada then brought out the king's son, crowned him, gave him the royal law,<sup>1</sup> and made him king and anointed him, as everyone applauded and cried out, "Long live the king!"

<sup>13</sup>When Athaliah heard the noise made by the guard and the people, she went to the people at the LORD's temple <sup>14</sup>and saw the king standing by the royal pillar, as was the custom, with the commanders and trumpeters beside the king. All the people of the land were rejoicing and blowing trumpets. Athaliah ripped her clothes and screamed, "Treason! Treason!"

<sup>15</sup>Then the priest Jehoiada ordered the unit commanders who were in charge of the army: "Take her out under guard,"<sup>2</sup> he told them, "and kill anyone who follows her." This was because the priest had said, "She must not be executed in the LORD's temple." <sup>16</sup>They arrested her when she reached the entrance of the Horse Gate at the royal palace. She was executed there.

<sup>17</sup>Jehoiada then made a covenant between the LORD, the king, and the people, that the people would belong to the LORD. The king and the people also made a covenant. <sup>18</sup>Then all the people of the land went to Baal's temple and tore it down, smashing its altars and images into pieces. They executed Mattan, Baal's priest, in front of the altars. The priest Jehoiada posted guards at the LORD's temple. <sup>19</sup>Then he took the unit commanders, the Carites, the guards, and all the people of the land, and they led the king down from the LORD's temple, processing through the Guards' Gate to the palace, where the king sat upon the royal throne.

11:4 Jehoiada: the priest (2 Kgs 11:9, 15). Carites: soldiers for hire who served as guards of the temple. Although their origin isn't known, some scholars think that the Hebrew text of 2 Samuel 20:23 suggests that they may be related to the Cherethites, part of David's foreign mercenary army (cf. 2 Sam 8:18; 1 Kgs 1:38).

11:5-8 sabbath duty: The day masks the plot under way. No one will suspect, since the guards are being changed anyway. palace... temple... the Lord's temple: These verses refer to guarding the royal palace and the temple of the Lord. The entire palace-temple complex is to be put under guard so as to protect the king. The words "the king" appear many times in the rest of the chapter, which suggests the narrator's interest in restoring the legitimate Davidic monarchy in Judah.

11:10 King David's spears and shields: This unique feature of the story emphasizes the alignment of the commanders and the guards with the Davidic tradition in Jerusalem.

11:12 This verse provides a description of royal appointment and anointing. The coronation report includes mention of the traditional anointing with oil (cf. 1 Sam 10:1; 1 Kgs 1:25, 34, 39; 2 Kgs 9:3, 13). royal law: A document was provided to the king that set forth the duties and obligations of the king. It might have been a scroll such as the one mentioned in the instruction governing kingship (Deut 17:18; cf. 1 Kgs 2:3; 2 Kgs 23:3).

11:14 royal pillar: The word "pillar" has appeared previously only in reference to Solomon's palace and temple (1 Kgs 7). The word "royal" doesn't actually appear in the Hebrew text. The pillar mentioned here may be one of the two pillars mentioned in 1 Kings 7:21. Perhaps Jachin, the pillar whose name means "establishes," is in fact a "royal" pillar associated with the place of coronation (see note on 1 Kgs 7:15-22). people of the land: not simply the general population, but citizens and landowners who were seen to have political influence (cf. 2 Kgs 11:18-19; 2 Kgs 14:21-22; 21:24; 25:19).

11:17 covenant: This is the first covenant renewal ceremony mentioned in the books of Kings. This ceremony brings together not only Jehoash's reign but the people and the Davidic kingship itself as belonging to the Lord. The second mention of covenant in this verse suggests, perhaps, that a solemn promise or commitment of the people's loyalty to the king is also necessary (cf. 2 Sam 5:1-3).

11:18 Baal's temple: Although Ahab built a temple to Baal in Samaria (cf. 1 Kgs 16:32; 2 Kgs 10:21-27), this is the first mention of such a temple in Jerusalem. Shrines to other gods were known since Solomon's time (cf. 1 Kgs 11:7).

11:19 Carites: See note on 2 Kings 11:4. people of the land: See note on 2 Kings 11:14.

Jehoash rules Judah

<sup>6</sup>But by the twenty-third year of King Jehoash, the priests still hadn't repaired the temple. <sup>7</sup>So King Jehoash summoned Jehoiada the priest and the other priests together. "Why haven't you repaired the temple?" he asked them. "Stop taking money from your donors; instead, give it directly for temple repairs." <sup>8</sup>The priests agreed that they wouldn't take any more money from the people nor be responsible for temple repairs. <sup>9</sup>Then the priest Jehoiada took a box, made a hole in its lid, and placed it beside the altar, to the right as one enters the LORD's temple. The priests who stood watch at the door put all the money brought to the LORD's temple in the box. <sup>10</sup>As soon as they saw that a large amount of money was in the box, the royal scribe and the high priest would come, count the money that was in the temple, and put it in a bag. <sup>11</sup>They would then hand over the money that had been counted<sup>n</sup> to those who supervised the work on the temple. These supervisors then paid money to those who worked on the LORD's temple: carpenters, builders, <sup>12</sup>masons, and stonecutters. The money was used to purchase wood and quarried stone to repair the LORD's temple and for every other cost involved in repairing it. <sup>13</sup>But the money that was brought to the LORD's temple was not used to make silver basins, wick trimmers, sprinkling bowls, trumpets, or any gold or silver object for the LORD's temple. <sup>14</sup>Instead, it was given directly to those who did the repair work; they used it to repair the LORD's temple. <sup>15</sup>There was no need to check on those who received the money and paid the workers, because they acted honestly. <sup>16</sup>Now as for the money for compensation and purification offerings, it wasn't brought to the LORD's temple. It belonged to the priests.

<sup>17</sup>About this same time, Aram's King Hazael came up, attacked Gath, and captured it. Next Hazael decided to march against Jerusalem. <sup>18</sup>Judah's King Jehoash took all the holy objects that had been dedicated by his ancestors—Judah's kings Jehoshaphat, Jehoram, and Ahaziah—along with the holy objects he himself had dedicated, as well as all the gold in the treasure rooms of the LORD's temple and the palace, and he sent them to Aram's King Hazael. Hazael then pulled back from Jerusalem.

12:2-3 shrines: Although the historian evaluates Jehoash's behavior favorably, he fails in this one matter. See note on 1 Kings 3:2-3 (cf. 1 Kgs 15:14; 22:43).

12:4 redeem persons . . . assessed value . . . offer voluntarily: Money will come from several sources, including the census tax (Exod 30:11-16); money received from persons who have provided money in exchange for objects and persons dedicated to the Lord (Lev 27:1-8); and voluntary donations of any kind (the Hebrew may also be translated as "from the heart"; cf. Exod 35:5, 21-22, 26, 29).

12:5 repair the temple: Solomon's temple had been built over 140 years earlier. Jehoash's initiative will serve to solidify his claim to the throne, since he will be seen as acting as patron of the temple and as loyal to its God.

12:6-16 This detailed scenario implies that over the past 23 years the priests have taken all donations to the temple for themselves, failing to carry out the instructions to repair the temple. Offerings given by the people were legitimately to be used by the priests for their own support

(cf. Num 5:9-10; 18:19). But for some reason they weren't able to follow through on Jehoash's order (2 Kgs 12:5). He therefore establishes a system that divides the gifts to the temple into two types: those for the materials and labor for the repairs (12:9-15), and those deriving from sacrificial offerings for the support of the priests (2 Kgs 12:16). Nevertheless, none of the gifts could be used to improve the special instruments and equipment used in temple worship (12:13).

12:17-18 Hazael . . . attacked Gath: Gath is a Philistine city in the coastal plain between Judah and the Mediterranean Sea. On Hazael's military actions against Israel during the reigns of Jehu and Jehoahaz, see 2 Kings 8:28-29; 10:32-33; 13:1-7, 22-23. Jehoash took all the holy objects . . . to Aram's King Hazael: Handing over tribute money and gifts effectively puts Judah under the control of Syria (cf. 1 Kgs 15:18-24; 2 Kgs 18:15). This allows Jehoash to keep his small kingdom intact without loss of territory.

Jehoahaz rules Israel

13 Jehoahaz, Jehu's son, became king of Israel in Samaria in the twenty-third year of Judah's King Jehoash,<sup>b</sup> who was Ahaziah's son. He ruled for seventeen years. <sup>2</sup>He did what was evil in the LORD's eyes. He walked in the sins that Jeroboam, Nebat's son, had caused Israel to commit. He didn't deviate from them. <sup>3</sup>So the LORD was angry at Israel. Time after time God handed them over to Aram's king Hazael, and to Hazael's son Ben-hadad.

<sup>4</sup>But Jehoahaz sought the LORD's presence, and the LORD listened to him because he saw how badly Aram's king was oppressing Israel. <sup>5</sup>The LORD sent Israel a savior, and they escaped from Aram's power. Then the Israelites lived peacefully at home, just as they had in the past. <sup>6</sup>But they didn't deviate from the sins that Jeroboam's dynasty had caused Israel to commit; they walked in them! Moreover, a sacred pole<sup>c</sup> stood in Samaria. <sup>7</sup>No, nothing was left of Jehoahaz's army except fifty chariot riders, ten chariots, and ten thousand foot soldiers, because Aram's king had decimated them, trampling them as if they were dirt. <sup>8</sup>The rest of Jehoahaz's deeds, all that he accomplished, and all his powerful acts, aren't they written in the official records of Israel's kings? <sup>9</sup>Jehoahaz lay down with his ancestors. He was buried in Samaria. His son Joash succeeded him as king.

Joash rules Israel

<sup>10</sup>Joash,<sup>e</sup> Jehoahaz's son, became king of Israel in Samaria in the thirty-seventh year of Judah's King Jehoash. He ruled for sixteen years. <sup>11</sup>He did what was evil in the LORD's eyes. He didn't deviate from all the sins that Jeroboam, Nebat's son, had caused Israel to commit, but he walked in them! <sup>12</sup>The rest of Joash's deeds, all that he accomplished, and his powerful acts—how he fought against Judah's King Amaziah—aren't they written in the official

<sup>a</sup>Heb Joash (also in 13:20); the king's name is variously spelled in either long Jehoash or short Joash form. The latter is the form used in 2 Chron. <sup>b</sup>Heb Joash (also in 13:10); the king's name is variously spelled in either long Jehoash or short Joash form. The latter is the form used in 2 Chron. <sup>c</sup>Heb asherah, perhaps an object devoted to the goddess Asherah. <sup>d</sup>Heb Jehoash (also in 13:25); the king's name is variously spelled in either long Jehoash or short Joash form. The latter is the form used in 2 Chron.

12:19-21 official records: See note on 1 Kings 11:41-43. conspiracy: The author doesn't provide a reason for the murder of Jehoash. Chronicles provides a different account (cf. 2 Chron 24:23-27). Beth-millo: The word "millo" occurs elsewhere (2 Sam 5:9; 1 Kgs 9:15), where it is translated "earthen terraces" and "stepped structure." Beth-millo, or "house of millo," could be a house on or near the terraces on the way to Silla, an unknown place in or near Jerusalem. 13:1-25 The next three short stories return to Israel and to events that have been taking place during Jehoash's reign in Judah. The reigns of Jehoahaz and Joash provide a setting from which to get a glimpse into Elisha's final days.

13:1-3 sins... Jeroboam: Like other Israelite kings, Jehoahaz is compared to Jeroboam (13:2; cf. 1 Kgs 12:26-33). the LORD was angry at Israel: Although God's anger is a common theme in the books of Kings, it occurs here for the first time in 2 Kings. See sidebar, "Anger of God" at 1 Kings 8. God handed them over: This motif, along with the oppression of Hazael and God's sending a savior (2 Kgs 13:3-5), recalls the repetitive cycle of events in the book of Judges (cf. Judg 2:12-23). God's response reflects divine discipline in the light of God's promise to Jehu (cf. 2 Kgs 10:30), and which looks very much like the discipline God announced as a consequence to David's descendants (2 Sam 7:14).

13:4-5 sought the LORD's presence... savior: The language throughout these verses sounds much like the pattern presented in the book of Judges, where God is said to respond to the people's cry, which comes from their situation of oppression, by sending a savior (cf. Judg 3:9, 15 where the Hebrew word for "savior" is translated "deliverer"). In this case, the savior might well be Assyria's King Adad-nirari III, who led a campaign against Damascus. When the Arameans yielded to the Assyrian advance, Israel was given a window of freedom.

13:6-7 Jeroboam: By underlining the point made in 2 Kings 13:2, the historian suggests that the "savior" wasn't able to prevent a devastating blow to Jehoahaz's military capacity. sacred pole: See note on 1 Kings 14:12-18.

13:8 official records: See note on 1 Kings 11:41-43.

13:10-13 Joash: This king of Israel isn't to be confused with Israel's King Joash (2 Kgs 12). Like him, the name of this Joash is also spelled in short or long form (Jehoash) in Hebrew. His reign receives a summary report that is typical of Israelite kings, including mention of Jeroboam's sins (1 Kgs 12:26-33). fought against... Amaziah: See 2 Kings 14:14-25 for a description of this conflict. The summary statement of 13:12-13 is repeated in 2 Kings 14:15-16, perhaps to make explicit the intersecting events during these two kings' reigns.

records of Israel's kings? <sup>13</sup>Joash lay down with his ancestors, and Jeroboam followed him on the throne. Joash was buried in Samaria with the kings of Israel.

Elisha's last days

<sup>14</sup>Now Elisha became sick with the illness that would kill him. So Israel's King Joash went down to see him. Joash cried over Elisha, saying, "Oh, my father, my father! Israel's chariots and its riders!"

<sup>15</sup>Elisha told Joash, "Get a bow and some arrows." So he brought Elisha a bow and some arrows. <sup>16</sup>Elisha then said to Israel's king, "Put your hand on the bow." So Joash put his hand on the bow. Elisha then put his hands over the king's hands <sup>17</sup>and said, "Open the window to the east." The king did so. "Now shoot!" Elisha told him. Joash shot, then Elisha announced, "That's the LORD's rescue arrow! The rescue arrow against the Arameans! You will finish the Arameans off at Aphek." <sup>18</sup>Then Elisha said, "Take the arrows!" so Joash took them. Elisha then said to Israel's king, "Hit the ground with them!" Joash hit the ground three times and stopped. <sup>19</sup>The man of God became angry with him. He said, "If only you had struck five or six times, you would have finished the Arameans off. As it is, you will defeat them only three times."

<sup>20</sup>So Elisha died, and he was buried.

Sometimes Moabite raiding parties used to come into the land each spring. <sup>21</sup>Now it happened once that while a man was being buried, the people at the funeral suddenly saw a raiding party. They threw the body into Elisha's tomb and ran off. When the body touched Elisha's bones, the man came to life and stood up on his feet!

<sup>22</sup>Aram's King Hazael had oppressed Israel throughout Jehoahaz's rule. <sup>23</sup>But the LORD was gracious to Israel and had compassion on them, turning back to them because of his covenant with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob; he didn't want to destroy them or throw them out of his presence until now. <sup>24</sup>Aram's King Hazael died. His son Ben-hadad succeeded him as king. <sup>25</sup>Then Jehoahaz's son Joash recaptured from Hazael's son Ben-hadad those cities that Hazael had won in battle from Joash's father Jehoahaz. Joash attacked Ben-hadad three times and took back these Israelite cities.

13:14-20a Even in Elisha's final days, which are framed by the mention of his sickness (13:14) and his death (13:20a), he continues to be God's agent in Israel's military engagements. Elisha, with a prophetic career of 50 to 60 years, first appeared in the story in 1 Kings 19:19-21.

13:14 went down: Elisha may be living with other prophets below sea level in the Jordan Valley (cf. 2 Kgs 6:1-2). Oh, my father... chariots and its riders: These are the same words Elisha used when Elijah was taken up by God (see note on 2 Kgs 2:11-12). Joash's use of the words carries a double meaning. He is mourning the devastating loss of Israel's chariots and riders to Aram's forces (2 Kgs 13:7). Yet Elisha understands that God's involvement, expressed in the imagery of heavenly forces, shapes Israel's history more than Israel's military capacity (cf. 2 Kgs 2:11-12; 6:8-17).

13:16 his hands over the king's hands: the prophet's, and therefore God's, symbolic identification with the king.

13:17-19 the Lord's rescue arrow: Elisha's announcement asserts victory with God's help. Arameans: a neighboring nation to the northeast, hostile to Israel since Solomon's time (cf. 1 Kgs 11:25). Aphek: where Ahab had once defeated the Arameans (1 Kgs 20:26-30). finish... off: The expression, used twice in these verses, once in Elisha's prediction, suggests thorough defeat of the Arameans. defeat them only three times: Joash's action, however, limits the defeat (cf. 2 Kgs 13:25). The combination of prophetic announcement and human action suggests that the word of God through the prophet isn't always fulfilled in a literal way. The story implies that other human factors must also be taken into account.

13:20-21 Moabite: Moab is located to the east of the Dead Sea. touched Elisha's bones: Elisha was buried in a traditional cave tomb. His body would have been laid out on a stone slab. threw: Some interpreters suggest that this action, which is the same verb as is used in 2 Kings 17:20 of Israel's being thrown into Assyrian exile, implies that for Israel to receive new life after exile, they must stay "in touch" with the prophets by being faithful to God's word as mediated through the prophets (cf. 2 Kgs 17:13). It's also significant that two stories about resuscitation begin and end the long narrative in which the two great prophets Elijah and Elisha are the primary characters (see also 1 Kgs 17:17-24). The first of those stories confirms that the prophet is the one who speaks "the Lord's word" (1 Kgs 17:24). This last one confirms that even in death, the prophet has the capacity to restore life.

13:22 Hazael... oppressed Israel: This king of Aram (Syria) has been a character in the story since the Lord's word to Elisha in 1 Kings 19:15. Elisha's announcement to Hazael indicates that this king would do great violence to Israel (cf. 2 Kgs 8:12-13).

13:23 gracious to Israel... covenant with Abraham: This is the only reference in the books of Kings to God's covenant with Israel's ancestors (cf. 1 Kgs 18:36; on this covenant, see Gen 15:1-21; 17:1-27; 26:23-25; 28:10-22). This basis for God's compassion suggests that Israel's survival in the face of ongoing conflict with the Arameans has more to do with God's larger project with Israel than with the "right" actions of individual Israelite kings like Jehu (cf. 2 Kgs 10:30). until now: If the writers of 1 and 2 Kings are located in Babylonian exile, they may be suggesting that God continues to be present to them even into that desperate time. Still, the writer notes later in 2 Kings 17:18, using the same expression as here, that the fall of Israel to Assyria marked a removal "from his presence." Only Judah was spared.

13:25 three times: Compare with 2 Kings 13:19.

Amaziah rules Judah

14 Amaziah, the son of Judah's King Jehoash,<sup>a</sup> became king in the second year of Israel's King Joash, who was Jehoahaz's son. <sup>2</sup>Amaziah was 25 years old when he became king, and he ruled for twenty-nine years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Jehoaddin; she was from Jerusalem. <sup>3</sup>He did what was right in the LORD's eyes, but not as well as his ancestor King David. He did everything his father Jehoash did. <sup>4</sup>However, the shrines weren't removed. People kept sacrificing and burning incense at them. <sup>5</sup>Once he had secured control over his kingdom, he executed the officials who had assassinated his father the king. <sup>6</sup>However, he didn't kill the children of the murderers, because of what is written in the Instruction scroll from Moses, where the LORD commanded, Parents shouldn't be executed because of what their children have done; neither should children be executed because of what their parents have done. Each person should be executed for their own guilty acts.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>7</sup>Next Amaziah struck down ten thousand Edomites in the Salt Valley and captured Sela in battle. He renamed it Jokthe-el, which is what it is still called today. <sup>8</sup>Then Amaziah sent messengers to Israel's King Joash<sup>c</sup> son of Jehoahaz son of Israel's King Jehu, saying, "Come on! Let's go head-to-head."

<sup>9</sup>But Israel's King Joash responded to Judah's King Amaziah, "Once upon a time, a thistle in Lebanon sent a message to a cedar, 'Give your daughter to my son as a wife.' But then a wild beast in Lebanon came along and trampled the thistle. <sup>10</sup>You have definitely defeated Edom and have now become conceited. Enjoy the honor, but stay home. Why invite disaster when both you and Judah will fall?"

<sup>a</sup>Heb Joash (also in 14:3, 17, 23); the king's name is variously spelled in either long Jehoash or short Joash form. The latter is the form used in 2 Chron. <sup>b</sup>Deut 24:16 <sup>c</sup>Heb Jehoash (also in 14:9, 11, 13, 15, 16-17); the king's name is variously spelled in either long Jehoash or short Joash form. The latter is the form used in 2 Chron.

14:1-22 This story about King Amaziah from Judah continues a sequence of stories (2 Kgs 14:1-17:41) about the intersecting reigns of Judah's and Israel's kings that ends with the fall of Samaria in 722 BCE.

14:1-2 Amaziah probably reigned alongside his father for part of his 29-year reign.

14:3-4 right in the LORD's eyes... shrines weren't removed: The historian provides a qualified approval by comparing Amaziah to David and by highlighting the failure to remove the shrines (see note on 1 Kgs 3:2-3). On evaluating the kings of Judah, compare 1 Kings 3:3; 15:11; 22:43; 2 Kings 12:2; 14:3; 15:3, 34.

14:5-6 assassinated his father: On Jehoash's murder, see 2 Kings 12:19-21. because of what is written in the Instruction scroll from Moses: The narrator ascribes Amaziah's restraint to his obedience to the instruction of Deuteronomy 24:16 (cf. Jer 31:29-30; Ezek 18:2-4, 20). The full and exact expression Instruction scroll from Moses occurs elsewhere in the larger history of Joshua through Kings only in Joshua 8:31; 23:6 (cf. similar expressions highlighting Moses as mediator of God's instruction in Deut 31:24-26; 2 Kgs 21:8; 23:25). Since Moses is the best example of a prophet, this motif defines the historian's interest in the dominance of the prophetic word.

14:7 Salt Valley... Sela: Edom broke away from Judah's control during Jehoram's reign (2 Kgs 8:20-22). Now Amaziah brings a measure of control over Judah's southern region, although he isn't able to recover control of Edom itself (cf. 2 Kgs 14:22). For a different and fuller description of Amaziah's war against Edom, see 2 Chronicles 25:5-16. still called today: at the time of the writer.

14:9 thistle... cedar: Judah and Israel. Amaziah is being overly confident in the face of Israel's superior strength. For another similar fable, see Judges 9:7-15.

14:11 Beth-shemesh: about 20 miles southwest of Jerusalem. Amaziah is completely unprepared, since Joash is able to move directly up the valley that runs from the coastal plain to Jerusalem. Ephraim Gate: a gate along the northern wall where the city is most vulnerable. Here, unlike the city's other three sides, the wall isn't bordered by a steep valley.

14:14 took all the gold... treasuries of the palace: Robbing from the treasury was the same thing as making Judah a dependent state. Even more, the vulnerability of Judah's treasury represents and symbolically foreshadows Judah's own vulnerability to the powers (cf. 1 Kgs 14:26; 15:18; 2 Kgs 12:18; 15:19; 16:8; 18:15; 20:13, 15; 24:13).

14:15-16 These verses echo 2 Kings 13:12-13, perhaps to make explicit the intersecting events during these two kings' reigns and to highlight the fact that Amaziah lived longer than Joash (cf. 2 Kgs 14:17).

with his ancestors. He was buried in Samaria with the kings of Israel. His son Jeroboam succeeded him as king.

<sup>21</sup>Then all the people of Judah took Azariah and made him king after his father Amaziah. He was 16 years old. <sup>22</sup>He rebuilt Elath, restoring it to Judah after King Amaziah had lain down with his ancestors.

Jeroboam II rules Israel

<sup>23</sup>Jeroboam, the son of Israel's King Joash, became king in Samaria in the fifteenth year of Judah's King Amaziah, Jehoash's son. He ruled for forty-one years. <sup>24</sup>He did what was evil in the LORD's eyes. He didn't deviate from all the sins that Jeroboam, Nebat's son, had caused Israel to commit. <sup>25</sup>He reestablished Israel's border from Lebo-hamath to the Dead Sea. This was in agreement with the word that the LORD, the God of Israel, spoke through his servant the prophet Jonah, Amittai's son, who was from Gath-hepher. <sup>26</sup>The LORD saw how brutally Israel suffered, whether slave or free, with no one to help Israel. <sup>27</sup>But the LORD hadn't said he would erase Israel's name from under heaven, so he saved them through Jeroboam, Joash's son. <sup>28</sup>The rest of Jeroboam's deeds, all that he accomplished, and his powerful acts—how he fought and how he restored Damascus and Hamath to Judah in Israel<sup>v</sup>—aren't they written in the official records of Israel's kings? <sup>29</sup>Jeroboam lay down with his ancestors the kings of Israel. His son Zechariah succeeded him as king.

14:18 official records: See note on 1 Kings 11:41-43.

14:19 people in Jerusalem: perhaps similar to "people of the land" (see note on 2 Kgs 11:14). The assassination was likely initiated by Amaziah's foolish loss in battle against Joash. Lachish: an important city 30 miles southwest of Jerusalem and not far from Beth-shemesh in the foothills between the coastal plain and the Judean highlands (cf. 2 Kgs 14:11). It's the second-most-important city in Judah after Jerusalem. This fortified city guards access to Jerusalem. The Assyrian armies approach Jerusalem from Lachish (cf. 2 Kgs 18:14, 17).

14:21 Azariah: See 2 Kings 15:1-7 for a description of his reign.

14:22 after King Amaziah . . . with his ancestors: The Hebrew of this verse doesn't include the name of a king, and Amaziah is one possibility. The king who "lay down with his ancestors" could as well be Joash (cf. 2 Kgs 14:16, where the phrase occurs), the Israelite king who defeated Amaziah and effectively controlled all of Judah until his death. Azariah, in that case, could have restored Elath to Judah after Joash's death. Elath: the seaport at the southern end of the rift valley at the north end of the Gulf of Aqaba. The port was important for trade, since it connected to the north-south trade route between Mesopotamia and Arabia and Egypt. This action was a follow-up to Amaziah's capture of territory controlled by Edom (cf. 2 Kgs 8:20-22; 9:26).

14:23-29 Jeroboam: the second king of Israel named Jeroboam, who is described here in typical language as having done evil in the Lord's eyes and having imitated the first Jeroboam's sins (cf. 1 Kgs 12:26-33; 14:16; 15:30; 16:31; etc.). The prophets Amos and Hosea were engaged with Israel's religious and political affairs during his reign. Jeroboam's reign ushers in an era of prosperity, which the prophets criticized as fueled by injustice and violence.

14:25 Lebo-hamath: the northern border of the promised land and the northern border of the kingdom of David and Solomon (cf. Num 13:21; 34:8; 1 Kgs 8:65). Syria's invasion by the Assyrians (the "savior" of 2 Kgs 13:5) gave Israel some breathing room and allowed Jeroboam II to expand his territory to the northern extent of Solomon's empire. in agreement with the word . . . the Lord . . . Jonah: We have no record of this prophecy by Jonah, even though there is a biblical book named after him, in which he is a central character.

14:26-27 no one to help . . . saved them through Jeroboam: As God did during Jehoahaz's reign, God acts to preserve Israel (cf. 2 Kgs 13:3-5, 23; 14:27). The historian seems to be asserting that God isn't in the business of giving up on Israel, in spite of the behavior of Israel's kings. Though we don't know what Jonah prophesied, the theme of grace that echoes through the stories of Jehoahaz and Jeroboam II resonates with the main theme of the book of Jonah.

14:28 Damascus and Hamath: Damascus was the Aramean (Syrian) capital. Hamath is situated on the Orontes River between Damascus and Aleppo. Jeroboam II was able to move that far north because the Assyrians had already weakened the Aramean military capacity (see note on 2 Kgs 13:4-5). to Judah in Israel: The phrase is oddly constructed. It might be shorthand for a united Israel restored to the glory of the Solomon era, since territory is being recovered in both Judah and Israel (cf. 2 Kgs 14:22). Or it might allude to the historian's bias toward Judah as the rightful heir of David's kingdom (cf. 1 Kgs 11:39). official records: See note on 1 Kings 11:41-43.

14:29 Zechariah: Jeroboam's death and Zechariah's accession to the throne signaled the fulfillment of the prophecy of four generations in Jehu's dynasty (cf. 2 Kgs 10:30; 15:12).

Azariah rules Judah

15 Azariah, Amaziah's son, became king of Judah in the twenty-seventh year of Israel's King Jeroboam. <sup>2</sup>He was 16 years old when he became king, and he ruled for fifty-two years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Jecoliah; she was from Jerusalem. <sup>3</sup>He did what was right in the LORD's eyes, just as his father Amaziah had done. <sup>4</sup>However, the shrines weren't removed. People kept sacrificing and burning incense at them. <sup>5</sup>Now the LORD afflicted the king with a skin disease that he had until his dying day, so he lived in a separate house. <sup>6</sup>The king's son Jotham supervised the palace administration and governed the people of the land. <sup>7</sup>The rest of Azariah's deeds and all he accomplished, aren't they written in the official records of Judah's kings? <sup>8</sup>Azariah died and was buried with his ancestors in David's City. His son Jotham succeeded him as king.

Zechariah rules Israel

<sup>9</sup>Zechariah, Jeroboam's son, became king of Israel in Samaria in the thirty-eighth year of Judah's King Azariah. He ruled for six months. <sup>10</sup>He did what was evil in the LORD's eyes, just as his ancestors had done. He didn't deviate from the sins that Jeroboam, Nebat's son, had caused Israel to commit. <sup>11</sup>Shallum, Jabesh's son, plotted against Zechariah. He struck him down in public, <sup>12</sup>murdering him. Shallum then succeeded him as king. <sup>13</sup>The rest of Zechariah's deeds are written in the official records of Israel's kings. <sup>14</sup>This was exactly what the LORD spoke to Jehu: Your descendants will sit on Israel's throne for four generations. And that's exactly what happened.

Shallum rules Israel

<sup>15</sup>Shallum, Jabesh's son, became king in the thirty-ninth year of Judah's King Uzziah. He ruled for one month in Samaria. <sup>16</sup>Menahem, Gadi's son, went up from Tirzah and came to Samaria. He struck down Jabesh's son Shallum in Samaria, murdering him. Menahem then succeeded him as king. <sup>17</sup>The rest of Shallum's deeds and the conspiracy he plotted are written in the official records of Israel's kings.

Menahem rules Israel

<sup>18</sup>Menahem then moved from Tirzah and attacked Tiphshah, all its citizens, and its neighboring areas. Because they wouldn't surrender, he attacked and ripped open all its pregnant women. <sup>19</sup>Menahem, Gadi's son, became king of Israel in the thirty-ninth year of Judah's King Azariah. He ruled for ten years in Samaria. <sup>20</sup>He did what was evil in the LORD's eyes. Throughout his life, he didn't deviate from the sins that Jeroboam, Nebat's son, had caused Israel to commit. <sup>21</sup>When Assyria's King Tiglath-pileser<sup>y</sup> marched against the land, 15:1-38 This chapter tells of seven kings who rule Judah and Israel. Although interesting details emerge throughout these descriptions, the stories imply a growing sense of inevitable disaster to come. In Israel a series of assassinations suggests internal unrest, which may have been fueled by political divisions associated with Israel's alignment with Assyria, a power broker in the region led by Tiglath-pileser III (cf. 2 Kgs 15:19-20).

15:1 Azariah: also called Uzziah (2 Kgs 15:13, 30, 32, 34; 2 Chron 26-27; Isa 1:1; 6:1). During his long reign he expanded Judah's territory to that of Solomon's empire (cf. 2 Kgs 14:22 and the more elaborate description of his reign in 2 Chron 26:3-15).

15:3-4 right in the LORD's eyes... shrines: a typical summary of Judean kings who are good, but fail in one critical matter (cf. 2 Kgs 14:3-4). On shrines, see note on 1 Kings 3:2-3.

15:5 skin disease: This ailment kept the king at a distance from the affairs of state. See note on 2 Kings 5:1.

15:6-7 official records: See note on 1 Kings 11:41-43. Jotham: His reign is described in 2 Kings 15:32-38.

15:9 evil in the LORD's eyes... sins that Jeroboam: a typical description of the reign of kings, occurring 31 times in the books of Kings (cf. 1 Kgs 11: 6-33; 14:22; 15:26; 16:30).

15:10 Shallum: See 2 Kings 15:13-15 for a description of his reign.

15:11 official records: See note on 1 Kings 11:41-43.

15:12 what the LORD spoke to Jehu... four generations: By highlighting the common theme in the books of Kings of the power of the prophets' words, the narrator points out the fulfillment of 2 Kings 10:30.

15:13-15 Shallum... in Samaria: He was king of Israel. Uzziah: another name for Azariah. See note on 2 Kings 15:1. official records: See note on 1 Kings 11:41-43.

15:16 Tiphshah: a city on the Euphrates River that was once within Solomon's empire (1 Kgs 5:4). The description of Menahem's brutal violence makes him a pretender to Solomon's greatness. The prophets expose such brutality, whether practiced by foreign or Israelite kings (cf. 2 Kgs 8:4; Amos 1:13). Hosea's judgment speech against Samaria assumes such violence will be done against Israel, perhaps as poetic justice for Menahem's behavior (Hos 13:16).

15:18 evil in the LORD's eyes... sins that Jeroboam: a typical description of the reign of an Israelite king (cf. 1 Kgs 12:26-33).

15:19-20 Tiglath-pileser: Pul (see translation note y) is a short name for Tiglath-pileser III, who ruled Assyria from Menahem gave Tiglath-pileser one thousand silver kikkars in order to become his ally and to strengthen his hold on the kingdom. <sup>20</sup>Menahem taxed Israel for this money. All the wealthy people had to give fifty silver shekels each to Assyria's king. So Assyria's king went home and didn't stay there in the land. <sup>21</sup>The rest of Menahem's deeds and all that he accomplished, aren't they written in the official records of Israel's kings? <sup>22</sup>Menahem lay down with his ancestors. His son Pekahiah succeeded him as king.

Pekahiah rules Israel

<sup>23</sup>Pekahiah, Menahem's son, became king of Israel in the fiftieth year of Judah's King Azariah. He ruled for two years in Samaria. <sup>24</sup>He did what was evil in the LORD's eyes. He didn't deviate from the sins that Jeroboam, Nebat's son, had caused Israel to commit. <sup>25</sup>Pekah, Remaliah's son and Pekahiah's officer, plotted against him. Pekah struck Pekahiah in Samaria at the palace fortress, along with Argob and Arie<sup>h</sup>.<sup>a</sup> Pekah had fifty Gileadites with him. He murdered Pekahiah and succeeded him as king. <sup>26</sup>The rest of Pekahiah's deeds and all that he accomplished are written in the official records of Israel's kings.

Pekah rules Israel

<sup>27</sup>Pekah, Remaliah's son, became king of Israel in the fifty-second year of Judah's King Azariah. Pekah ruled for twenty years in Samaria. <sup>28</sup>He did what was evil in the LORD's eyes. He didn't deviate from the sins that Jeroboam, Nebat's son, had caused Israel to commit. <sup>29</sup>In the days of Israel's King Pekah, Assyria's King Tiglath-pileser came and captured Ijon, Abel-beth-maacah, Janoah, Kedesh, and Hazor. He also captured Gilead, Galilee, and all the land of Naphtali. He sent the people into exile to Assyria. <sup>30</sup>Then Hoshea, Elah's son, plotted against Pekah, Remaliah's son. He struck Pekah down, murdering him. Hoshea became king after Pekah in the twentieth year of Uzziah's son Jotham. <sup>31</sup>The rest of Pekah's kingship and all that he accomplished are written in the official records of Israel's kings.

Jotham rules Judah

<sup>32</sup>Jotham, Uzziah's son, became king of Judah in the second year of Israel's King Pekah, Remaliah's son. <sup>33</sup>Jotham was 25 years old when he became king, and he ruled for sixteen years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Jerusha; she was Zadok's daughter. <sup>34</sup>Jotham did 745 to 727 BCE. He campaigned westward, probably to enhance trade between Assyria and Egypt and thereby to advance Assyrian imperial power in the region. Along the way he needed to subdue small kingdoms like Israel and Judah. Menahem gave . . . hold on the kingdom: Menahem's payment, funded by taxation, was protection money. Tiglath-pileser left him alone, but Israel effectively became an Assyrian vassal state. See note on 2 Kings 14:14. Menahem is mentioned in Assyrian texts documenting Tiglath-pileser's military campaigns in the west in 738 BCE. This new arrangement meant that Israel lost control of any territory gained from the Arameans by Jeroboam II (2 Kgs 14:28). kikkars: One kikkar is approximately 76 pounds. fifty silver shekels: The monetary value of a human male adult (cf. Lev 27:3).

15:21 official records: See note on 1 Kings 11:41-43.

15:23-26 evil in the Lord's eyes . . . sins . . . Jeroboam: a typical description of the reign of Israelite kings (cf. 1 Kgs 12:26-33; cf. 1 Kgs 14:16; 15:30; 16:31). Pekah . . . plotted against him: Pekah was probably opposed to Pekahiah's pro-Assyrian policy, which was a continuation of the policy of his father, Menahem. fifty Gileadites: Details like this shed light on the political situation. The coconspirators from east of the Jordan River are probably among those who lost control of their region to Assyria and became disenfranchised from the central government in Samaria. official records: See note on 1 Kings 11:41-43.

15:28 evil in the Lord's eyes . . . sins . . . Jeroboam: a typical description of the reign of Israelite kings (cf. 1 Kgs 12:26-33; 14:16; 15:30; 16:31; etc.).

15:29 Tiglath-pileser: See note on 2 Kings 15:19-20. The Assyrian king campaigned westward in 733-732 BCE, conquering most of the Galilee region as well as Gilead east of the Jordan River—some of the same areas Baasha lost to the Arameans (1 Kgs 15:20). This Assyrian invasion came at the same time that Israel and Syria joined forces to attack Judah. Judah's King Ahaz invited Tiglath-pileser to come to his aid against both Israel and the Arameans (2 Kgs 16:5-9). exile to Assyria: It was standard imperial practice to transfer populations, which terrorized the population in the conquered lands. Tiglath-pileser's annals mention 13,520 exiles to Assyria. This is the beginning of Israel's demise (cf. 2 Kgs 17:5-6, 24).

15:30-31 Hoshea: This last Israelite king's reign is described in 2 Kings 17:1-6. official records: See note on 1 Kings 11:41-43.

15:32-38 Jotham . . . right in the Lord's eyes . . . didn't remove the shrines: The historian's evaluation of Jotham's reign is like that of other kings of Judah who don't meet expectations (cf. 2 Kgs 14:3; 15:3). shrines: See the note on 1 Kings 3:2-3. official records: See note on 1 Kings 11:41-43. the Lord began to send . . . Rezin and Pekah: The Aramean and Israelite kings, in an anti-Assyrian coalition, attempt to force Jotham into a common cause with them. This threat becomes all-out war during the reign of Jotham's son Ahaz (2 Kgs 16:5-9; cf. Isa 7:1-8:10). The historian makes sure the what was right in the LORD's eyes, just as his father Uzziah had done. <sup>35</sup>However, he didn't remove the shrines. The people continued to sacrifice and burn incense at them. Jotham rebuilt the Upper Gate of the LORD's temple. <sup>36</sup>The rest of Jotham's deeds, aren't they written in the official records of Judah's kings? <sup>37</sup>It was in those days that the LORD began to send Aram's King Rezin and Pekah, Remaliah's son, against Judah. <sup>38</sup>Jotham died and was buried with his ancestors in David's City.<sup>a</sup> His son Ahaz succeeded him as king.

Ahaz rules Judah

16 Ahaz, Jotham's son, became king of Judah in the seventeenth year of Pekah, Remaliah's son. <sup>2</sup>Ahaz was 20 years old when he became king, and he ruled for sixteen years in Jerusalem. He didn't do what was right in the LORD's eyes, unlike his ancestor David. <sup>3</sup>Instead, he walked in the ways of Israel's kings. He even burned his own son alive, imitating the detestable practices of the nations that the LORD had driven out before the Israelites. <sup>4</sup>He also sacrificed and burned incense at the shrines on every hill and beneath every shady tree. <sup>5</sup>Then Aram's King Rezin and Israel's King Pekah, Remaliah's son, came up to Jerusalem to fight. They surrounded Ahaz, but they weren't able to defeat him. <sup>6</sup>At that time Aram's King Rezin recovered Elath for the Arameans, driving the Judeans out of Elath. The Edomites<sup>b</sup> came to Elath and settled there, and that's still the case now.

<sup>7</sup>Ahaz sent messengers to Assyria's King Tiglath-pileser, saying, "I'm your servant and your son. Come up and save me from the power of the kings of Aram and Israel. Both of them are attacking me!" <sup>8</sup>And Ahaz took the silver and the gold that was in the LORD's temple and in the palace treasuries, and sent a gift to Assyria's king. <sup>9</sup>The Assyrian king heard the request and marched against Damascus. He captured it and sent its citizens into exile to Kir. He also killed Rezin.

<sup>10</sup>Then King Ahaz went to Damascus to meet up with Assyria's King Tiglath-pileser. King Ahaz noticed the altar that was in Damascus, and he sent the altar's plan and details for its construction to the priest Uriah. <sup>11</sup>Uriah built the altar, following the plans that King Ahaz had sent from Damascus; he had it finished before King Ahaz returned from Damascus.

<sup>12</sup>When the king arrived from Damascus, he inspected the altar. He came close to it, then went up on it, <sup>13</sup>burning his entirely burned offering and grain offering, pouring out his drink offering, and sprinkling the blood of his well-being sacrifices on the altar. <sup>14</sup>As for the bronze altar that used to stand before the LORD, Ahaz moved it away from the front of the reader knows that this is nothing other than God's doing. The Lord directs even Israel's and Judah's enemies. This theological statement is the first indication in the books of Kings that not all will be well for Judah. Micah begins his prophetic ministry during Jotham's reign (Mic 1:1).

16:1-4 didn't do what was right . . . Israel's kings: The historian's evaluation of Jotham's reign introduces a double criticism for the first time (cf. other negative comparisons to David: 1 Kgs 14:8; 2 Kgs 14:3). detestable practices: A return to Canaanite practices includes prohibited worship objects and may include child sacrifice (cf. 1 Kgs 11:7; 14:23-24; 16:34; 2 Kgs 3:26-27; 23:10). These practices were prohibited by the book of Deuteronomy (Deut 18:9-14; cf. Lev 18:21; 20:2-5; Jer 7:31; 19:5; 32:35). the Lord had driven out: The historian assumes that the practices of the peoples of the land were grounds for their exile. The same practices will later become grounds for the exile of both Israel and Judah (cf. 2 Kgs 17:8, 15; 21:2-6). shrines: See note on 1 Kings 3:2-3.

16:5-6 Rezin . . . Pekah: The assault implied in 2 Kings 15:37 begins. recovered Elath: Azariah had recaptured Elath (2 Kgs 14:22), but it now reverts to Aramean control, with the help of Edomites who settle the region and become allies in managing the major trade route from Damascus down the eastern side of the Dead Sea. still the case now: at the time of the author. The Chronicles history tells a fuller and different story in which Ahaz is thoroughly defeated by the Aramean-Israelite coalition, and the Assyrians don't help Ahaz (2 Chron 28). This war (733–732 BCE) is also described in Isaiah 7–8.

16:7-8 I'm your servant . . . gift to Assyria's king: With Rezin (Aram) and Pekah (Israel) rallying against him, Ahaz becomes a vassal to Tiglath-pileser III. On the payment from the temple and palace treasuries, see note on 2 Kings 14:14. 16:9 Assyrian help arrived in the form of military campaigns in the years 733–732 BCE. Kir: Amos considers this the original home of the Arameans (Amos 9:7).

16:10-18 altar . . . in Damascus: Ahaz seems to have been so enamored by the altar to the god Hadad that he incorporates its design into a renovated temple courtyard in Jerusalem. because of the Assyrian king: Although this section seems not to criticize Ahaz for these actions (contrast the perspective of 2 Chron 28:23), this brief aside in 16:18 implies that Ahaz's actions were done for political reasons. The items removed (16:17-18) may have been part of the tribute. Although the author implies that standard Israelite worship practices continued (16:15), the reality is nothing other than syncretism—that is, a blending of pagan and Israelite worship. The removal of the original altar (16:14; 1 Kgs 8:64), now to be used for seeking guidance (16:15) or divination (a practice prohibited by Deut 18:10), also implies a subtle criticism.

temple where it had stood between the main altar and the LORD's temple. He put it on the north side of the new altar. <sup>15</sup>Then King Ahaz ordered the priest Uriah, saying, "Burn the following sacrifices on the main altar:

in the morning, the entirely burned offering;

in the evening, the grain offering;

the king's entirely burned offering and his grain offering;

the entirely burned offering for all the people of the land, their grain offering, and their drink offerings.

"Sprinkle all the blood of the entirely burned offerings and all the blood of the sacrifices on it. I will use the bronze altar for seeking guidance."<sup>c</sup> <sup>16</sup>Uriah the priest did everything that King Ahaz commanded. <sup>17</sup>King Ahaz cut off the side panels from the stands and removed the basins from them. He took the Sea down from the bronze bulls that were under it and put it on a stone pavement. <sup>18</sup>He also took away the sabbath canopy that had been built in the temple. He removed the royal entrance outside the LORD's temple. This was done because of the Assyrian king.

Hoshea rules Israel

17 Hoshea, Elah's son, became king in Samaria in the twelfth year of Judah's king Ahaz. He ruled over Israel for nine years. <sup>2</sup>He did what was evil in the LORD's eyes, but he wasn't as bad as the Israelite kings who preceded him. <sup>3</sup>Assyria's King Shalmaneser marched against Hoshea, and Hoshea became Shalmaneser's servant, paying him tribute. <sup>4</sup>But the Assyrian king discovered that Hoshea was a traitor, because Hoshea sent messengers to Egypt's King So. Hoshea stopped paying tribute to the Assyrian king as he had in previous years, so the Assyrian king arrested him and put him in prison. <sup>5</sup>Then the Assyrian king invaded the whole country. He marched against Samaria and attacked it for three years. <sup>6</sup>In Hoshea's ninth year, the Assyrian king captured Samaria. He sent Israel into exile to Assyria, resettling them in Halah, in Gozan on the Habor River, and in the cities of the Medes.

The northern kingdom falls

<sup>7</sup>All this happened because the Israelites sinned against the LORD their God, who brought them up from the land of Egypt, out from under the power of Pharaoh, Egypt's king. They worshipped other gods. <sup>8</sup>They followed the practices of the nations that the LORD had removed before the Israelites, as well as the practices that the Israelite kings had done.<sup>d</sup>

16:19-20 official records: See note on 1 Kings 11:41-43. David's City: Jerusalem. Hezekiah: His reign is described in 2 Kings 18-20.

17:1-41 The story of Israel now comes to its end. Hoshea (see 2 Kgs 15:30), the last king of Israel, succumbs to the Assyrian forces, and Israel is exiled to Assyria. Hoshea is mentioned in an Assyrian inscription in which Tiglath-pileser III is said to have "placed Hoshea as king over them." The biblical historian goes on to provide the reasons for this abrupt end, which had been announced earlier (2 Kgs 14:15-16) but was delayed until now because of God's commitment, compassion, and covenant with Israel's ancestors (cf. 2 Kgs 10:30; 13:3-5, 23; 14:27).

17:2 evil in the LORD's eyes... wasn't as bad: A typical critique of Israelite kings is modified only slightly in comparison to previous kings. It doesn't seem to matter that Jeroboam's sins aren't mentioned here (cf. 1 Kgs 12:25-33; 2 Kgs 15:28).

17:3 Shalmaneser: Tiglath-pileser's son. paying him tribute: Hoshea becomes a vassal of Shalmaneser V, as indicated by the word "servant" (cf. 1 Kgs 20:9; 2 Kgs 16:7).

17:4-6 Hoshea was a traitor: The word "traitor" is the same word as is used in contexts of political scheming throughout the books of Kings (cf. 1 Kgs 15:27; 2 Kgs 11:14; 15:30). Hoshea changes sides by requesting an alliance with Egypt. Egypt's King So: It isn't possible to identify this Egyptian king; all suggestions are speculative. the Assyrian king captured Samaria: The historian names Shalmaneser V (2 Kgs 17:3) as the Assyrian king who conquered the city in 722 BCE. into exile... resettling them: Assyrian political policy involved transferring populations within its empire. Halah is northeast of Nineveh; cities of the Medes are located in Persia. Jewish populations continued to live in these regions until the late 20th century CE.

17:7-23 this happened because the Israelites sinned: This section elaborates on what the writer considers the cause of Israel's demise. No mention is made of the superior power of the Assyrian military. Rather, the chapter offers a theological explanation. On the one hand, the people are responsible (17:7); on the other hand Jeroboam is responsible (17:21). But the underlying cause is similar.

17:7-8 worshipped other gods: God allowed Israel to be deported into exile because Israel persistently violated its covenant with God (17:7; cf. Exod 20:3-6; Deut 5:7-10).

<sup>14</sup>But they wouldn't listen. They were stubborn like their ancestors who didn't trust the LORD their God. <sup>15</sup>They rejected his regulations and the covenant he had made with their ancestors, along with the warnings he had given them. They followed worthless images so that they too became worthless. And they imitated the neighboring nations that the LORD had forbidden them to imitate. <sup>16</sup>They deserted all the commandments of the LORD their God. They made themselves two metal idols cast in the shape of calves and made a sacred pole.<sup>f</sup> They bowed down to all the heavenly bodies. They served Baal. <sup>17</sup>They burned their sons and daughters alive. They practiced divination and sought omens. They gave themselves over to doing what was evil in the LORD's eyes and made him angry.

<sup>18</sup>So the LORD was very angry at Israel. He removed them from his presence. Only the tribe of Judah was spared. <sup>19</sup>But Judah didn't keep the commands of the LORD their God either. They followed the practices of Israel. <sup>20</sup>So the LORD rejected all of Israel's descendants.

Instead of beginning this summary by blaming the kings of Israel (as in previous chapters), this explanation places the responsibility on the people (17:8), practices of the nations: This motif recurs in 2 Kings 17:11, 15 (cf. Deut 18:9-14; 1 Kgs 11:2; 14:24; 2 Kgs 16:3).

17:9-11 shrines... beneath every green tree: The combination of terms here indicates adoption of Canaanite religious practices (see notes at 1 Kgs 3:2-3; 14:12-18; cf. 1 Kgs 14:23; 2 Kgs 16:4). made the LORD angry: This motif occurs three times in this chapter (cf. 2 Kgs 17:17-18) and many times throughout the books of Kings. See sidebar, "Anger of God" at 1 Kings 8.

17:12-13 worshipped images: "Images" is sometimes translated "idols" (cf. Deut 29:16; 1 Kgs 15:12; 21:26; 2 Kgs 21:11, 21; 23:24). The appeal here is to the Ten Commandments, among other texts (cf. Exod 20:3-6; Deut 5:7-10). prophets... the entire Instruction... my servants the prophets: Here for the first time the historian specifies what has been stated throughout the books of Kings: The Lord's word, as mediated by the prophets, is God's primary means of involvement in the life of God's people. In addition, responsiveness to that word is embodied in the written Instruction scroll (see note on 1 Kgs 2:3 and sidebar, "Fulfillment of the Prophetic Word" at 1 Kgs 2; cf. 2 Kgs 14:5-6). Turn from your evil ways: This expression is characteristic of the prophetic vocation (e.g., Jer 7:3, 5; 18:11; Ezek 33:11), but no prophets in the books of Kings actually use these words.

17:14-17 they wouldn't listen: The Hebrew word translated here as "listen" also has the sense "obey." Given the criticism leveled against the people in 2 Kings 17:12-13, it's possible to say here that the people wouldn't obey. They didn't listen to the prophets, nor did they obey God's Instruction. The author is so insistent on this point that the following verses repeat and add to what's already stated in 2 Kings 17:7-11. ancestors... ancestors: The two uses of the word may refer to two groups: the traditional ancestors of Israel, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, who were inclined toward stubbornness (17:14); and those who made the covenant with God at Mount Sinai (17:15). two metal idols: the gold calves set up by Jeroboam (1 Kgs 12:26-33). heavenly bodies: an allusion to the prohibition of Deuteronomy (Deut 4:19; 17:13). The common expression "LORD of heavenly forces" (cf. 2 Sam 7:26; 2 Kgs 19:31) uses the same words to express God's rule over all deities. served Baal: After Ahab (1 Kgs 16:31), this Canaanite god is mentioned many times in the books of Kings. See note on 1 Kings 16:29-34.

17:18-20 removed them from his presence: Earlier God is said not to have acted in such a manner because of God's compassion and covenant commitment (2 Kgs 13:23). The situation now, however, has become impossible to sustain. God's patience, it seems, has come to an end. Judah was spared: Verse 19, however, doesn't let Judah off the hook. rejected all of Israel's descendants: Verse 20 could be understood as applying to both Israel and Judah, at least from the vantage point of the later author, who is writing after the fall of Judah. The verb "to reject" is used often in the Bible of Israel's rejection of God. It's never used in Deuteronomy or in the books of Kings in that way. In 2 Kings it appears only three times, each time referring to God's rejection of Israel or Jerusalem (2 Kgs 17:15, 20; 23:27). The verb "reject" is a stark notice of the seriousness with which the historian understands this moment in time. The people may wish instead to hear words of assurance that God will never abandon God's people, as found, for example, in Deuteronomy 4:31. Yet the author's intent is to shock, and thereby to invite people who have experienced this devastating loss to return, pay attention, trust, and obey. That is exactly what Deuteronomy imagines when it anticipates that Israel will "disappear—and quickly—from the land" (see the larger context of Deut 4:25-32).

He punished them, and he handed them over to enemies who plundered them until he finally threw them out of his sight.

New settlers in Samaria

<sup>24</sup>The Assyrian king brought people from Babylon, Cuth, Avva, Hamath, and Sepharvaim, resettling them in the cities of Samaria in place of the Israelites. These people took control of Samaria and settled in its cities. <sup>25</sup>But when they began to live there, they didn't worship the LORD, so the LORD sent lions against them, and the lions began to kill them. <sup>26</sup>Assyria's king was told about this: "The nations you sent into exile and resettled in the cities of Samaria don't know the religious practices of the local god. He's sent lions against them, and the lions are killing them because none of them know the religious practices of the local god."

<sup>27</sup>So Assyria's king commanded, "Return one of the priests that you exiled from there. He<sup>b</sup> should go back and live there. He should teach them the religious practices of the local god." <sup>28</sup>So one of the priests who had been exiled from Samaria went back. He lived in Bethel and taught the people how to worship the LORD.

<sup>29</sup>But each nationality still made its own gods. They set them up in the houses that the people of Samaria had made at the shrines. Each nationality did this in whichever cities

Covenant and Treaty The Hebrew word for "covenant" (berit) can also be translated "treaty."

In 1 and 2 Kings it's a political and a theological word. Politically it refers to a treaty relationship between two kings, while theologically it refers to a committed relationship between Israel and God. Both uses of the word are political in that a berit sets out the expectations of a mutual relationship (e.g., Gen 21:27; 1 Sam 18:3; 2 Sam 5:3; Josh 9:15). When a king conquered a territory, he would set the terms of the new relationship with a treaty. Such treaties are mentioned explicitly in Kings (1 Kgs 15:19; 20:34). Other treaties are implied by references to loyalty or to the "rebellions," which indicate that the king has decided no longer to honor the treaty obligations (e.g., 1 Kgs 5:1, 12; 2 Kgs 1:1; 3:5-7; 17:4; 18:7; 24:1; 24:20).

Israel's relationship with God is also based on a binding agreement called the Instruction scroll (cf. 1 Kgs 2:3; 2 Kgs 23:2-3). According to Deuteronomy, Israel must keep and teach their relational obligations in good faith with a loving God (Deut 4:23), because the Lord is a faithful God who keeps promises (Deut 4:31; 7:9, 12; 2 Kgs 13:23). Abandoning or rebelling against the covenant with God will lead to Israel's demise (Deut 29:25). Solomon's prayer at the dedication of the temple puts the tension clearly: God keeps covenant commitments to those who are faithful (1 Kgs 8:23). But Solomon hasn't kept the covenant obligations (1 Kgs 11:11), nor has Israel (2 Kgs 17:15; 18:12).

17:21-23 A further explanation summarizes the story of the northern kingdom of Israel and returns to the theme of Jeroboam's responsibility and the warnings given by the prophets (cf. 1 Kgs 12:26-33; 2 Kgs 17:13). how it is today: during the writer's time, probably after the defeat and exile of Judah.

17:24-41 Assyrian imperial policy was not only to exile a portion of the conquered population but also to repopulate the area with people from other places in the empire. Such practice destabilized the region and fragmented loyalties. The historian here is interested primarily in the religious syncretism—that is, the combination of religious practices that resulted from this movement of peoples. This concern builds on the historian's criticism of Israelite worship of other gods prior to the Assyrian invasion and the exile of the population.

17:24 This verse seems to flow directly from 2 Kings

17:1-6, with 17:7-23 serving as a theological insertion or aside. Samaria: After Assyrian conquest of the city named Samaria, the entire region came to be called by the same name.

17:25-28 lions: These represent the ongoing involvement of God in the land even after the devastation of exile. The lion is an image of divine discipline or judgment (cf. 1 Kgs 13:23-26; 20:36; Jer 49:19). the local god: In the ancient world, gods, peoples, and lands were intimately related. To claim a god with universal sovereignty, as does the historian, was unusual (but cf. Deut 32:8-9). The solution devised by the Assyrian king is to teach the newly arrived people how to worship the god of that particular land. Although that may solve the problem of the lions, yet as the author explains, that isn't the real problem.

17:29-31 people of Samaria: Later the people of this region they lived. <sup>30</sup>The Babylonian people made the god Succoth-benoth, the Cuthean people made Nergal, and the people from Hamath made Ashima. <sup>31</sup>The Avvites made Nibhaz and Tartak. The Sepharvites burned their children alive as a sacrifice to Adrammelech and Anammelech, the Sepharvite gods. <sup>32</sup>They also worshipped the LORD, but they appointed priests for the shrines from their whole population. These priests worked in the houses at the shrines. <sup>33</sup>So they worshipped the LORD, but they also served their own gods according to the religious practices of the nations from which they had been exiled.

<sup>34</sup>They are still following their former religious practices to this very day. They don't really worship the LORD. Nor do they follow the regulations, the case laws, the Instruction, or the commandment that the LORD commanded the children of Jacob, whom he renamed Israel.

<sup>35</sup>The LORD had made a covenant with them, commanding them, Don't worship other gods. Don't bow down to them or serve them. Don't sacrifice to them. <sup>36</sup>Instead, worship only the LORD. He's the one who brought you up from the land of Egypt with great strength and an outstretched arm. Bow down to him! Sacrifice to him! <sup>37</sup>You must carefully keep the regulations and case laws, the Instruction, and the commandment that he wrote for you. Don't worship other gods. <sup>38</sup>Don't forget the covenant that I made with you. Don't worship other gods. <sup>39</sup>Instead, worship only the LORD your God. He will rescue you from your enemies' power.

<sup>40</sup>But they wouldn't listen. Instead, they continued doing their former religious practices. <sup>41</sup>So these nations worship the LORD, but they also serve their idols. The children and the grandchildren are doing the very same thing their parents did. And that's how things still are today.

Hezekiah rules Judah

18 Hezekiah, Ahaz's son, became king of Judah in the third year of Israel's King Hoshea, Elah's son. <sup>2</sup>He was 25 years old when he became king, and he ruled twenty-nine years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Abi;<sup>1</sup> she was Zechariah's daughter. <sup>3</sup>Hezekiah did what was right in the LORD's eyes, just as his ancestor David had done. <sup>4</sup>He removed the shrines. He smashed the sacred pillars and cut down the sacred pole.<sup>1</sup> He crushed the bronze snake that Moses made, because up to that point the Israelites had been burning incense to it. (The snake was named Nehushtan.)

will be called "Samaritans." Succoth-benoth: a Babylonian god, possibly the god mentioned in Amos 5:26. Nergal: god of the underworld who was responsible for famine, war, and flood. Ashima: possibly mentioned in Amos 8:14. Nibhaz and Tartak as well as Adrammelech aren't named in ancient Near Eastern literature. 17:32-39 These verses move from observations about the peoples to exhortations to Israelites (cf. the you of 17:36), both of which are repeated several times. The observations: They also worshipped the LORD... but they also served their own gods: This is a concise definition of syncretism, the blending of two forms of worship and the bringing together of the worship of multiple deities. It isn't exactly polytheism; it's more like a blend of both worldviews. The point of the matter: They don't really worship the LORD (2 Kgs 17:34). And what's more, they don't live according to the Instruction that God gave Israel. Here the author appeals to God's covenant with them and echoes instructions from Deuteronomy and Joshua about not worshipping, bowing down, or serving other gods (cf. Deut 4:19; 30:17; Josh 23:7). As if not to allow the reader to miss it, the author, in a preaching tone, remarks twice worship only the LORD (17:36, 39) and three times Don't worship other gods (2 Kgs 17:35, 37, 38). And in an obvious recollection of Deuteronomy, the author urges, Don't forget the covenant (17:38; cf. Deut 4:23). In that same chapter of Deuteronomy, the writer anticipates that God won't forget the covenant (Deut 4:31).

17:40-41 they wouldn't listen... how things still are today: Recapping the motif from 2 Kings 17:14, the author characterizes the situation as crossing the generations until the writer's own time.

18:1-20:21 Hezekiah's reign takes up a long section of 2 Kings, marking a high point in Judah's story. Although the description of Hezekiah appears positive, his story ends with a surprising twist. In shaping the story that way, the historian paints a realistic picture of the king, but it's colored by a larger theological agenda: God's supervision of the historical process and the impact and power of the prophetic word. All of 2 Kings 18:1-20:19 appears in a parallel account in Isaiah 36:1-39:8. Of the parallel in Isaiah, only 38:9-20 doesn't appear in 2 Kings. It is probable that the author of the book of Isaiah borrowed the material from 2 Kings in order to round out the context of Isaiah's prophetic ministry. 2 Chronicles 29-32 offers a fuller and different description of Hezekiah's accomplishments.

18:3-4 did... right in the LORD's eyes... ancestor David: Hezekiah is presented as similar to David, as are Asa and Josiah (1 Kgs 15:11; 2 Kgs 22:2; cf. Jehoshaphat, 1 Kgs 22:43). removed the shrines... sacred pole: Hezekiah did what none of the other kings were able to do (see notes on 1 Kings 3:2-3; 14:12-18; 14:22-24). bronze snake: Moses made this bronze replica in the wilderness (Num 21:4-9), which, over time, was honored as a symbol of healing. Nehushtan: The name is a form of the word "snake."

<sup>5</sup>Hezekiah trusted in the LORD, Israel's God. There was no one like him among all of Judah's kings—not before him and not after him. <sup>6</sup>He clung to the LORD and never deviated from him. He kept the commandments that the LORD had commanded Moses. <sup>7</sup>The LORD was with Hezekiah; he succeeded at everything he tried. He rebelled against Assyria's king and wouldn't serve him. <sup>8</sup>He struck down the Philistines as far as Gaza and its territories, from watchtower to fortified city.

<sup>13</sup>Assyria's King Sennacherib marched against all of Judah's fortified cities and captured them in the fourteenth year of King Hezekiah. <sup>14</sup>Judah's King Hezekiah sent a message to the Assyrian king at Lachish, saying, "I admit wrongdoing. Please withdraw from me, and I'll agree to whatever you demand from me." Assyria's king required Judah's King Hezekiah to pay him three hundred kikkars of silver and thirty kikkars of gold. <sup>15</sup>So Hezekiah gave him all the silver that was in the LORD's temple and in the palace treasuries. <sup>16</sup>At that time King Hezekiah had to strip down the doors and doorposts of the LORD's temple, which he had covered with gold. He gave all of it to the Assyrian king.

18:5-6 trusted...clung...kept the commandments: Hezekiah is the first of all the Judean kings who is afforded such high praise. trusted: The word is used nine times in the Hezekiah story between this verse and 2 Kings 19:10. The story of Hezekiah's engagement with the Assyrians defines the word fully. He stands in contrast to Solomon, who "clung" to his foreign women (1 Kgs 11:2). Hezekiah is a fine example of Deuteronomy's hope that God's people would cling, or hold fast, to the Lord (Deut 10:20; 11:22; 13:4; 30:20). no [king] like him...not before him and not after him: Either this is hyperbole, or the historian who writes this section is not yet aware of Josiah (cf. 2 Kgs 23:25). More likely, both Hezekiah and Josiah are models that the historian wants to elevate as examples of faithfulness. The language here expresses that most clearly. Like David, He kept the commandments, which, according to the historian, is the greatest virtue of all.

18:7-8 The Lord was with Hezekiah: Of Israel's and Judah's kings, the historian speaks about only David in this way (1 Sam 18:12, 14, 28; 2 Sam 5:10). succeeded: In addition, this verb is used only to describe the life and work of David (1 Sam 18:5, 14, 15, 30). Both Joshua and Solomon are promised such success, if only they obey the Instruction from the Lord (Josh 1:7-8; 1 Kgs 2:3). Where Joshua and Hezekiah succeed, Solomon failed. He rebelled: In this respect, Hezekiah was different from Ahaz (2 Kgs 16:7-8).

18:9-12 The author offers a summary flashback of events described earlier (2 Kgs 17:3-6). This summary points out what happens when violating treaty obligations to an imperial power like Assyria, as Hezekiah has done (2 Kgs 18:7). Verse 12 restates the longer theological explanation made in 2 Kings 17:7-17.

18:13-16 What readers know about Assyria's past imperial practices suggests that these verses describe the expected result of Hezekiah's "rebellion" (2 Kgs 18:7). Whether Sennacherib marches on Jerusalem (2 Kgs 18:17) before Hezekiah's offer of submission, or after it, is open to debate (see note on 2 Kgs 18:17). Sennacherib marched on Judah in 701 BCE. Sennacherib's own records (the Taylor Prism at the British Museum) state that he conquered 46 cities and forts, captured over 200,156 people, and made Hezekiah "a prisoner in Jerusalem...like a bird in a cage." He also notes that Hezekiah paid him a large tribute, including his daughters, other women, and male and female singers. A relief sculpture discovered at Nineveh (now in the British Museum) depicts Sennacherib's capture of Lachish, one of the key Judean towns about 30 miles southwest of Jerusalem. Hezekiah's preemptive offer of submission is a strategic move to prevent a similar all-out attack on and destruction of Jerusalem. Assyrian accounts don't mention a conquest of Jerusalem. temple...palace treasuries: See note on 2 Kings 14:14. kikkars: One kikkar is approximately 76 pounds.

18:17 Does Sennacherib's march on Jerusalem imply that he rejects Hezekiah's payment of tribute? Or is the payment of tribute actually the event that signals the outcome of the diplomatic conversation that follows in 2 Kings 18:18-37? The use of the word "rebel" by the Assyrian emissary in 2 Kings 18:20 (echoing 2 Kgs 18:7) suggests the latter. water channel of the Upper Pool: conduit for water into the city (cf. Isa 7:3). The location is uncertain. 18:18 Eliakim...Shebna...Joah: Hezekiah sends out three administrative officials to meet Sennacherib's three military officials. For Eliakim, see 1 Kings 4:6; for Shebna, see 1 Kings 4:3.

<sup>19</sup>Then the field commander said to them, “Say to Hezekiah: This is what Assyria’s Great King says: Why do you feel so confident? <sup>20</sup>Do you think that empty words are the same as good strategy and the strength to fight? Who are you trusting in that you now rebel against me? <sup>21</sup>It appears that you are trusting in a staff—Egypt—that’s nothing but a broken reed! It will stab the hand of anyone who leans on it! That’s all that Pharaoh, Egypt’s king, is to anyone who trusts in him. <sup>22</sup>Now suppose you say to me, ‘We trust in the LORD our God.’ Isn’t he the one whose shrines and altars Hezekiah removed, telling Judah and Jerusalem, ‘You must worship before this altar in Jerusalem?’

<sup>23</sup>“So now make a wager with my master, Assyria’s king. I’ll give you two thousand horses if you can supply the riders! <sup>24</sup>How will you drive back even the least important official among my master’s servants when you are relying on Egypt for chariots and riders? <sup>25</sup>What’s more, do you think I’ve marched against this place to destroy it without the LORD’s support? It was the LORD who told me, March against this land and destroy it!”

<sup>26</sup>Hilkiah’s son Eliakim, Shebna, and Joah said to the field commander, “Please speak to your servants in Aramaic because we understand it. Don’t speak with us in Hebrew, because the people on the wall will hear it.”

<sup>27</sup>The field commander said to them, “Did my master send me to speak these words just to you and your master and not also to the men on the wall? They are the ones who will have to eat their dung and drink their urine along with you.” <sup>28</sup>Then the field commander stood up and shouted in Hebrew at the top of his voice, saying, “Listen to the message of the great king, Assyria’s king. <sup>29</sup>This is what the king says: Don’t let Hezekiah lie to you. He won’t be able to rescue you from the power of Assyria’s king. <sup>30</sup>Don’t let Hezekiah persuade you to trust the LORD by saying, ‘The LORD will certainly rescue us. This city won’t be handed over to Assyria’s king.’

<sup>31</sup>“Don’t listen to Hezekiah, because this is what Assyria’s king says: Surrender to me and come out. Then each of you will eat from your own vine and fig tree, and drink water from your own well <sup>32</sup>until I come to take you to a land just like your land. It will be a land of grain and new wine, a land of bread and vineyards, a land of olive oil and honey. Then you will live and not die! Don’t listen to Hezekiah, because he will mislead you by saying, ‘The LORD will rescue us.’ <sup>33</sup>Were any of the gods of the other nations able to rescue their lands from the power of Assyria’s king? <sup>34</sup>Where are the gods of Hamath and Arpad? Where are the gods of Sepharvaim, Hena, and Ivvah? Have they rescued Samaria from my power? <sup>35</sup>Which one of any of the gods of those lands has rescued their country from my power? Why should the LORD rescue Jerusalem from my power?”

<sup>36</sup>But the people kept quiet and didn’t answer him with a single word, because King Hezekiah’s command was, “Don’t answer him!” <sup>37</sup>Hilkiah’s son Eliakim, who was the palace administrator, Shebna the secretary, and Asaph’s son Joah the recorder, came to Hezekiah with ripped clothes. They told him what the field commander had said.

18:19-25 The Assyrian diplomat uses a rhetorical device called a messenger speech, since he reports in first-person speech what Sennacherib said. This is the same kind of speech form used by the prophets when they say, “This is what the LORD says: Assyria’s Great King: a title also used in Assyrian documents. trust: Hezekiah’s trust (2 Kgs 18:5) is the theological and political key to the episode (see also 2 Kgs 18:20, 21, 22, 30; 19:10). Egypt: the other major power during this period of history, controlled by Cushite kings; see Isaiah 31:1-3 and 2 Kings 19:9. It was the LORD who told me: After asserting that trusting Egypt for help is useless, the diplomat offers a shocking assertion (cf. Isa 10:5-6). This is the most important theological question in the entire history: Is Israel’s God controlling the history of the nations or not?

18:26-28 in Aramaic... in Hebrew: Aramaic, a Semitic language that was the diplomatic language of empire. Hebrew is the local dialect. Aramaic was understood by the educated elite. Over time it became the main language of the entire region, and it continues to be a liturgical language among some Eastern churches. The Assyrians don’t comply with the request, since they want to bring pressure on the king from the entire population. eat their dung... urine: an allusion to a very long siege.

18:29-32 lie to you: The diplomat asserts that the possibility of a divine rescue is a lie. Instead, he offers an ironic promise of a better place. He uses language similar to Deuteronomy’s description of Israel’s own land (Deut 8:7-9). until I come to take you: This shouldn’t be misheard; it’s nothing but a veiled threat. live and not die!: The choice of life and death also echoes God’s offer to Israel (cf. Deut 30:15-20).

18:33-35 gods of the other nations able to rescue... rescue Jerusalem from my power?: The question offers an alternative theological claim from the one offered in 2 Kings 18:25. The Assyrian diplomat compares Israel’s God to the powerless gods of the conquered nations. If other gods couldn’t rescue their people, it’s equally unlikely that Israel’s God could do so.

18:37-19:1 ripped clothes... mourning clothes: See note on 2 Kings 5:6-7 (cf. Jehoram’s response following Benhadad’s attack on Samaria, 2 Kgs 6:30-31).

Hezekiah and Isaiah

19 When King Hezekiah heard this, he ripped his clothes, covered himself with mourning clothes, and went to the LORD's temple. <sup>2</sup>He sent Eliakim the palace administrator, Shebna the secretary, and the senior priests to the prophet Isaiah, Amoz's son. They were all wearing mourning clothes. <sup>3</sup>They said to him, "This is what Hezekiah says: Today is a day of distress, punishment, and humiliation. It's as if children are ready to be born, but there's no strength to see it through. <sup>4</sup>Perhaps the LORD your God has heard all the words of the field commander who was sent by his master, Assyria's king—how he insulted the living God—perhaps God will punish him for the words the LORD your God heard. Send up a prayer for those few people who still survive."

<sup>5</sup>When King Hezekiah's servants got to Isaiah, <sup>6</sup>Isaiah said to them, "Say this to your master: 'This is what the LORD says: Don't be afraid at the words you heard, which the officers of Assyria's king have used to insult me. <sup>7</sup>I'm about to put a spirit in him, so when he hears a rumor, he'll go back to his own country. Then I'll have him cut down by the sword in his own land.'"

Hezekiah's prayer

<sup>14</sup>Hezekiah took the letters from the messengers and read them. Then he went to the temple and spread them out before the LORD. <sup>15</sup>Hezekiah prayed to the LORD, saying, "LORD God of Israel, you sit enthroned on the winged creatures. You alone are God over all the earth's kingdoms. You made both heaven and earth. <sup>16</sup>LORD, turn your ear this way and hear! LORD, open your eyes and see! Listen to Sennacherib's words. He sent them to insult the living God! <sup>17</sup>It's true, LORD, that the Assyrian kings have destroyed many nations and their lands. <sup>18</sup>The Assyrians burned the gods of those nations with fire because they aren't real gods. They are only man-made creations of wood and stone. That's how the Assyrians could destroy them. <sup>19</sup>So now, LORD our God, please save us from Sennacherib's power! Then all the earth's kingdoms will know that you, LORD, are the only true God."

<sup>k</sup>Or the king of the city of Sepharvaim or the king of the city of Sepharvaim, Hena, and Ivvah

19:2-4 Eliakim and Shebna: See note on 2 Kings 18:18. Isaiah: See note on 2 Kings 18:1-20:21. Send up a prayer: Seeking a word from the prophet was common (cf. 1 Kgs 22:5). Hezekiah is the first king who approaches a prophet asking him to intercede with God on behalf of the people. few people who still survive: Sennacherib's destruction of Judah's towns must have brought a throng of refugees into the city.

19:5-7 This is what the Lord says: By using the form of a diplomatic messenger speech, the same rhetorical device as the Assyrian emissary uses (2 Kgs 19:19, 29), the prophet becomes God's political agent. No longer is the argument between Sennacherib and Hezekiah, but between Sennacherib and Israel's God (through their respective envoys). The prophetic announcement spells doom for the Assyrian king. put a spirit in him: Compare 1 Kings 22:22. The fulfillment of these words is reported in 2 Kings 19:36-37.

19:8 Libnah: See note on 2 Kings 8:22.

19:9 Cush's King Tirhakah: commanded the Egyptian army that moved into Palestine, perhaps coming to Judah's aid (hence the Assyrian diplomat's advice not to trust Egypt, the other superpower in the region). As the diplomat understood, Tirhakah was defeated in his battle with Sennacherib's army. He later became pharaoh in 690 BCE. The writer, reflecting a later time than the events described here, calls him by his royal title. Cush: Tirhakah was the last pharaoh over Egypt in the Nubian dynasty from the region of ancient Ethiopia.

19:10-13 A restatement of the argument in 2 Kings 18:19-35, but with a twist. Here the Assyrian diplomat claims that God, rather than Hezekiah (2 Kgs 18:29-30), is the liar seeking to persuade the people.

19:14-19 Now Hezekiah himself prays to God for help (2 Kgs 19:4). winged creatures: See note on 1 Kings 6:14-38 (cf. 1 Sam 4:3-4; 1 Kgs 8:6-7). You alone are God... the earth's kingdoms: Hezekiah's affirmation reflects the basic conviction of the historian concerning the universal scope of God's sovereignty. they aren't real gods: Israel's God, unlike the gods of the nations, isn't a tribal god. save us... all the earth's kingdoms... only true God: Hezekiah's prayer seems to draw on the hope of Solomon's prayer that "all the people of the earth" will come to recognize that "there is no other God" (cf. 1 Kgs 8:43, 60).

<sup>20</sup>Then Isaiah, Amoz's son, sent a message to Hezekiah: "This is what the LORD, Israel's God, says: I have heard your prayer about Assyria's King Sennacherib. <sup>21</sup>This is the message that the LORD has spoken against him:

The young woman, Daughter Zion, despises you and mocks you;

Daughter Jerusalem shakes her head behind your back.

<sup>22</sup>Whom did you insult and ridicule?

Against whom did you raise your voice and pridefully lift your eyes?

It was against the holy one of Israel!

<sup>23</sup>You've insulted the Lord with your messengers;

you said, 'I, with my many chariots, have gone up to the highest mountains,
to the farthest reaches of Lebanon.

I have cut down its tallest cedars, the best of its pine trees.

I have reached its most remote lodging place, its best forest.

<sup>24</sup>I have dug wells, have drunk waters in foreign lands.<sup>1</sup>

With my own feet, I dried up all of Egypt's streams.'

<sup>25</sup>Haven't you heard?

I set this up long ago;

I planned it in the distant past!

Now I have made it happen, making fortified cities collapse into piles of rubble.

<sup>26</sup>Their citizens have lost their power.

They are frightened and ashamed.

They've become like plants in a field, tender green shoots,

the grass on rooftops, burned up before it matures.

<sup>27</sup>I know where you live, how you go out and come in,

and how you rage against me.

<sup>28</sup>And because you rage against me and because your pride has reached my ears,

I will put my hook in your nose, and my bit in your mouth.

I will make you go back the same way you came.

<sup>29</sup>"Now this will be the sign for you, Hezekiah: This year you will eat what grows by itself. Next year you will eat what grows from that. But in the third year, sow seed and harvest it; plant vineyards and eat their fruit. <sup>30</sup>The survivors of the house of Judah who have escaped will take root below and bear fruit above. <sup>31</sup>Those who remain will go out from Jerusalem, and those who survive will go out from Mount Zion. The zeal of the LORD of heavenly forces<sup>m</sup> will do this.

19:20-28 Isaiah's response from the Lord is similar to other judgment speeches against the Assyrian king in the book of Isaiah (Isa 10:12-19; 14:24-27). This poem in 2 Kings shares themes common to the book of Isaiah: imperial pride over against the long-established plan of God (see notes following and in Isa 37:22-35).

19:21 Daughter Zion: often used in the OT to represent Jerusalem (e.g., Isa 52:2; Lam 1:6; Zeph 3:14; Zech 2:10; 9:9). 19:22 pridefully lift your eyes: Imperial pride (cf. 2 Kgs 19:28) is a common theme in Isaiah (Isa 2:11-12, 17; 10:12; 13:11; etc.). holy one of Israel: Compare Isaiah 1:4; 5:19, 24; 10:20. 19:23-24 A poetic mocking of Assyrian military conquests. 19:25 I set this up . . . I planned it: God's response takes up a common theme in the book of Isaiah (cf. Isa 14:24-27; 19:12, 17; 22:11; 23:8-9; 25:1; 46:11). Sennacherib's conquest has been at God's bidding.

19:28 you rage against me: The irony is profound. On the contrary, God's words through Isaiah suggest that Sennacherib is the "rod of my anger" (Isa 10:5). your pride: See note on 2 Kings 19:22. hook . . . bit: Ancient Assyrian armies led people into exile with hooks (cf. Ezek 19:4, 9; 38:4; Amos 4:2; Hab 1:15). Isaiah's words suggest a poetic justice.

19:29-31 sign: This word may also be translated "pledge." In other words, God intends full recovery from the Assyrian invasion, which devastated the countryside. But that will take at least two years. survivors: Compare Isaiah 4:2; 10:20.

<sup>32</sup>"Therefore, this is what the LORD says about Assyria's king: He won't enter this city. He won't shoot a single arrow there. He won't come near the city with a shield. He won't build a ramp to besiege it. <sup>33</sup>He will go back by the same way he came. He won't enter this city, declares the LORD. <sup>34</sup>I will defend this city and save it for my sake and for the sake of my servant David."

<sup>35</sup>That night the LORD's messenger went out and struck down one hundred eighty-five thousand soldiers in the Assyrian camp. When people got up the next morning, there were dead bodies everywhere. <sup>36</sup>So Assyria's King Sennacherib departed, returning to Nineveh, where he stayed. <sup>37</sup>Later, while he was worshipping in the temple of his god Nisroch, his sons Adrammelech and Sharezer killed him with a sword. They then escaped to the land of Ararat. His son Esarhaddon succeeded him as king.

Hezekiah's illness

20 Around that same time, Hezekiah became deathly ill. The prophet Isaiah, Amoz's son, came to him and said, "This is what the LORD says: Put your affairs in order because you are about to die. You won't survive this."

<sup>2</sup>Hezekiah turned his face to the wall and prayed to the LORD, saying, <sup>3</sup>"Please, LORD, remember how I have walked before you in truth and sincerity. I have done what is right in your eyes." Then Hezekiah cried and cried.

<sup>4</sup>Isaiah hadn't even left the middle courtyard of the palace when the LORD's word came to him: <sup>5</sup>Turn around. Say to Hezekiah, my people's leader: This is what the LORD, the God of your ancestor David, says: I have heard your prayer and have seen your tears. So now I'm going to heal you. Three days from now you will be able to go up to the LORD's temple. <sup>6</sup>I will add fifteen years to your life. I will rescue you and this city from the power of the Assyrian king. I will defend this city for my sake and for the sake of my servant David.

<sup>7</sup>Then Isaiah said, "Prepare a bandage made of figs." They did so and put it on the swelling, at which point Hezekiah started getting better.

<sup>8</sup>Hezekiah said to Isaiah, "What is the sign that the LORD will heal me and that I'll be able to go up to the LORD's temple in three days?"

<sup>9</sup>Isaiah said, "This will be your sign from the LORD that he will make his promise come true: Should the shadow go forward ten steps or back ten steps?"

<sup>10</sup>"It's easy for the shadow to go forward ten steps," Hezekiah said, "but not for the shadow to go back ten steps." <sup>11</sup>So the prophet Isaiah called on the LORD, who made the shadow go back ten steps, down the flight of stairs built by Ahaz.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>12</sup>At that time Merodach-baladan, son of Babylon's King Baladan, sent messengers to Hezekiah with letters and a gift. This was because he had heard that Hezekiah was sick. <sup>13</sup>Hezekiah granted them an audience and showed them everything in his treasury—the silver, the gold, the spices, and the fine oil. He also showed them his stock of weaponry and

19:32-34 I will defend this city... my servant David: The protection of Jerusalem, based on God's desire to preserve the divine reputation (cf. 2 Kgs 18:20-35; 19:10-13), along with God's commitments to David (1 Kgs 11:13, 32; 2 Kgs 8:19), resonates with other poetic and prophetic texts (cf. Ps 2; 46:4-7; 76; Isa 33:20; Zech 12:8).

19:35-37 the Lord's messenger: as in other texts, God's agent of death (cf. Exod 12:23; 2 Sam 24:9-16). Assyrian sources suggest that Sennacherib was assassinated in 681 BCE, some 10 to 20 years after his campaign against Judah. They indicate that he was killed by Arda-Mullissu, who may be the Adrammelech of the biblical text. Nisroch: an unknown deity not mentioned in Assyrian sources. Assyrian reports about the siege of Jerusalem don't report a massive casualty count. They assert that the Assyrian army left victoriously, but without capturing Jerusalem. Ararat: in eastern Turkey. Esarhaddon: A younger son of Sennacherib takes the throne.

20:1-11 Around that same time: This chapter provide a "backstory" to the events told in 2 Kings 18-19. It takes up the theme of the protection of Jerusalem (cf. 2 Kgs 19:34). The story of Hezekiah's illness and healing also reflects on a weakness in Hezekiah that hasn't been noted before—a slight self-assurance reflected in his characterization of himself (20:3), in his opening up of the treasury (2 Kgs 20:13-15), and in his smugness about security in his lifetime (2 Kgs 20:19).

20:12 Merodach-baladan: a self-appointed Babylonian king who ruled for 11 years after the death of Shalmaneser V (721 BCE) and again for nine months in 703 after the death of Sargon II. This visit to Hezekiah occurs around the time that Hezekiah was making plans for independence from Assyria around 705 BCE (and therefore before the events described in 2 Kgs 18-19). The Babylonian king is probably looking for allies in the west as he plots his own revolt in the east.

20:13-15 showed...everything in his treasury...They have seen everything: Hezekiah's exposure of the temple treasury (before he had stripped it to pay tribute to Sennacherib, cf. 2 Kgs 18:14-16) is itself a concern. Perhaps everything in his storehouses. There wasn't a single thing in his palace or his whole kingdom that Hezekiah didn't show them. <sup>14</sup>Then the prophet Isaiah came to King Hezekiah and said to him, "What did these men say? Where have they come from?"

Hezekiah said, "They came from a distant country: Babylon."

"They have seen everything in my palace," Hezekiah answered. "There's not a single thing in my storehouses that I haven't shown them."

<sup>16</sup>Then Isaiah said to Hezekiah, "Listen to the LORD's word: <sup>17</sup>The days are nearly here when everything in your palace and all that your ancestors collected up to now will be carried off to Babylon. Not a single thing will be left, says the LORD. <sup>18</sup>Some of your children, your very own offspring, will be taken away. They will become eunuchs in the palace of Babylon's king."

<sup>19</sup>Hezekiah said to Isaiah, "The LORD's word that you've spoken is good," because he thought: There will be peace and security in my lifetime.

<sup>20</sup>The rest of Hezekiah's deeds and all his powerful acts—how he made the pool and the channel and brought water inside the city—aren't they written in the official records of Judah's kings? <sup>21</sup>Hezekiah lay down with his ancestors. His son Manasseh succeeded him as king.

Manasseh rules Judah

21 Manasseh was 12 years old when he became king, and he ruled for fifty-five years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Hephzibah. <sup>2</sup>He did what was evil in the LORD's eyes, imitating the detestable practices of the nations that the LORD had driven out before the Israelites. <sup>3</sup>He rebuilt the shrines that his father Hezekiah had destroyed, set up altars for Baal, and made a sacred pole,<sup>o</sup> just as Israel's King Ahab had done. He bowed down to all the stars in the sky and worshipped them. <sup>4</sup>He even built altars in the two courtyards of the LORD's temple—the very place the LORD was speaking of when he said: "I will put my name in Jerusalem." <sup>5</sup>Manasseh built altars for all the stars in the sky in both courtyards of the LORD's temple. <sup>6</sup>He burned his own son alive, consulted sign readers and fortune-tellers, and used mediums and diviners. He did much evil in the LORD's eyes and made him angry.

<sup>7</sup>Manasseh set up the carved Asherah image he had made in the temple—the very temple the LORD had spoken about to David and his son Solomon, saying, In this temple and in he exposes his treasures to convince Merodach-Baladan that he would be a worthy and capable ally against Assyria. But it is a fateful showing, since it foreshadows Judah's end (cf. other earlier and unfavorable references to the treasuries, 1 Kgs 14:26; 15:18; 2 Kgs 12:18; 14:14; 16:8; 18:15). See note on 2 Kings 21:1-6 for an additional cause of the exile, which is King Manasseh's behavior, according to the historian.

20:17-18 The prophet announces that Hezekiah's exposure of the treasury will result in its loss (2 Kgs 24:13). Set in the context of the Assyrian invasion, the mention of Babylon's invasion nearly 100 years later confirms the historian's interest in demonstrating that history unfolds by the power and effectiveness of the prophetic word. See sidebar, "Fulfillment of the Prophetic Word" at 1 Kings 2.

20:19 peace... in my lifetime: Hezekiah's interest in his own well-being shows up again in his final words. This realistic picture of Hezekiah doesn't diminish his stature in the historian's eyes. It simply explains that Judah's end is yet to come.

20:20-21 pool... water inside the city: Hezekiah cut a quarter-mile-long rock tunnel from the Gihon Spring in the Kidron Valley. This tunnel, discovered in 1880, offered a secure water supply for the city during times of siege. An inscription from inside the tunnel commemorating the construction of the tunnel is now in the Istanbul Archaeology Museum. official records: See note on 1 Kings 11:41-43. 21:1-18 Manasseh enjoyed a long reign (687-642 BCE) in spite of his reputation as the worst king in Judah's history. Assyria's dominance in the entire region (during the reigns of Sennacherib, Esarhaddon, and Ashurbanipal) gave Judah a measure of security as a vassal state.

21:1-6 Manasseh... did what was evil... much evil in the LORD's eyes: The historian depicts Manasseh as the worst king of Judah, highlighting his pagan worship practices and desecrating the temple. Manasseh's practices are prohibited in Israel (cf. Lev 18:24-25; 19:26, 31; 20:2-6; Deut 12:29-31; 18:9-14; Jer 7:31; 19:5; 32:35). Such practices are cited often in the books of Kings as reasons for the demise of Israelite kings (cf. 2 Kgs 17:7-18). as Israel's King Ahab had done: Manasseh is compared to Ahab, a notorious Israelite king, as are two other Judean kings (1 Kgs 16:30-34; cf. Jehoram, 2 Kgs 8:18; Ahaziah, 2 Kgs 8:27). stars in the sky... worshipped: an allusion to the prohibition of Deuteronomy (cf. Deut 4:19; 17:13). Another common expression, "LORD of heavenly forces" (cf. 2 Sam 7:26; 2 Kgs 19:31), uses the same word as "stars" to indicate that Israel's God alone is God, without rivals and without sexual partners. my name in Jerusalem: Compare 2 Samuel 7:12-13; 1 Kings 3:2-3; 8:16, 29; 9:3; 11:36 and sidebar, "Temple and Name" at 1 Kings 8. burned his own son alive: Deuteronomy 18:10 appears to prohibit such behavior. The historian criticizes Israel and Judah for such actions (cf. 1 Kgs 16:3-4; 2 Kgs 16:3; 17:17; 23:10). made him angry: See sidebar, "Anger of God" at 1 Kings 8.

Jerusalem, which I have chosen out of all Israel's tribes, I will put my name forever. <sup>8</sup>I will never again remove Israel from the land I gave to their ancestors, provided they carefully do everything I have commanded them—keeping all the Instruction my servant Moses commanded them. <sup>9</sup>But they wouldn't listen. Manasseh led them into doing even more evil than the nations the LORD had wiped out before the Israelites.

<sup>10</sup>The LORD spoke through his servants the prophets: <sup>11</sup>Judah's King Manasseh has done detestable things, things more evil than the Amorites had done before his time. He has caused Judah to sin with his images. <sup>12</sup>Because of this, the LORD, Israel's God, has said: I'm about to bring on Jerusalem and Judah such a great disaster that the ears of anyone who hears about it will ring. <sup>13</sup>I will stretch out over Jerusalem the same line that I used to measure Samaria and the same mason's level that I used on Ahab's family. I will wipe Jerusalem clean the same way someone wipes a plate clean, wiping it clean then turning it facedown. <sup>14</sup>Whatever survives of my inheritance, I'll leave behind, handing them over to their enemies. They will be nothing but plunder and loot for every one of their enemies. <sup>15</sup>This will happen because they have done what is evil in my eyes, making me angry from the day their ancestors left Egypt until this very moment.

<sup>16</sup>Manasseh spilled so much innocent blood that he filled up every corner of Jerusalem with it. And this doesn't include the sins he caused Judah to commit so that they did what was evil in the LORD's eyes. <sup>17</sup>The rest of Manasseh's deeds, all that he accomplished, and the sin he committed, aren't they written in the official records of Judah's kings? <sup>18</sup>Manasseh lay down with his ancestors. He was buried in his palace garden, the Uzza Garden. His son Amon succeeded him as king.

Amon rules Judah

<sup>19</sup>Amon was 22 years old when he became king, and he ruled for two years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Meshullemeth; she was Haruz's daughter and was from Jobah. <sup>20</sup>He did what was evil in the LORD's eyes, just as his father Manasseh had done. <sup>21</sup>He walked in all the ways his father had walked. He worshipped the same worthless idols his father had worshipped, bowing down to them. <sup>22</sup>He deserted his ancestors' God, the LORD—he didn't walk in the LORD's way.

author emphasizes Manasseh's special action by adding the word "image" (the combination occurring in the OT only here). In that way, an allusion to the Ten Commandments becomes explicit (Exod 20:4; Deut 5:8). In this temple... my name forever. That he set up the image at this sacred site makes the act so much more scandalous.

21:8-9 never again remove... keeping all the Instruction: The historian adds an aside that reflects a perspective from the point of view of exile. It provides the rationale for the judgment about to be leveled against Manasseh. God's commitment is conditional upon human faithfulness. wouldn't listen: See note on 2 Kings 17:14-17. led them... even more evil... wiped out before the Israelites: Although the evil done by other kings is often compared to that done by other nations, no other king is said to have gone beyond them in doing evil. The addition of the destruction of the native inhabitants of the land foreshadows the same fate that awaits Judah in the near future (cf. 2 Kgs 14:24; 16:3; 17:8; 21:2).

21:10-15 the prophets: What follows isn't an exact quotation from any particular prophet. These verses announce the prophetic perspective of the author. Manasseh and his people will be wiped out, as were the land's previous inhabitants (cf. 2 Kgs 21:9). Amorites: among the original inhabitants of the land (cf. 1 Kgs 21:25-26). images: Compare Deuteronomy 29:17; 1 Kings 21:6; 2 Kings 17:12. line... mason's level: By comparing Judah to a building about to be demolished, construction tools symbolize moral measuring instruments (cf. Isa 34:11; Lam 2:8; Amos 7:7-9). making me angry from the day... this very moment: a stinging indictment on over 500 years of history. At this point the historian appears to have nothing good left to say. See sidebar, "Anger of God" at 1 Kings 8.

21:16 much innocent blood... every corner of Jerusalem: So as to emphasize again how much evil Manasseh had done, the author itemizes one more thing that goes, as it were, beyond evil (cf. Deut 19:10; 2 Kgs 24:4; Ps 106:38).

21:17-18 official records: See note on 1 Kings 11:41-43. 21:19-26 idols: Compare Deuteronomy 29:17; 2 Kings 17:12; 21:11. deserted his ancestors' God: an allusion to destruction and exile in Deuteronomy 28:20, where the word "deserted" is translated "abandoned." people of the land: See note on 2 Kings 11:14. official records: See note on 1 Kings 11:41-43.

Josiah rules Judah

22 Josiah was 8 years old when he became king, and he ruled for thirty-one years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Jedidah; she was Aaliah's daughter and was from Bozkath. <sup>2</sup>He did what was right in the LORD's eyes, and walked in the ways of his ancestor David—not deviating from it even a bit to the right or left.

<sup>3</sup>In the eighteenth year of King Josiah's rule, he sent the secretary Shaphan, Azaliah's son and Meshullam's grandson, to the LORD's temple with the following orders: <sup>4</sup>"Go to the high priest Hilkiah. Have him carefully count<sup>p</sup> the money that has been brought to the LORD's temple and that has been collected from the people by the doorkeepers. <sup>5</sup>It should be given to the supervisors in charge of the LORD's temple, who in turn should pay it to those who are in the LORD's temple, repairing the temple—<sup>6</sup>the carpenters, the builders, and the masons. It should be used to pay for lumber and quarried stone to repair the temple. <sup>7</sup>But there's no need to check on them regarding the money they receive, because they are honest workers."

<sup>8</sup>The high priest Hilkiah told Shaphan the secretary: "I have found the Instruction scroll in the LORD's temple." Then Hilkiah turned the scroll over to Shaphan, who read it.

<sup>9</sup>Shaphan the secretary then went to the king and reported this to him: "Your officials have released the money that was found in the temple and have handed it over to those who supervise the work in the LORD's temple." <sup>10</sup>Then Shaphan the secretary told the king, "Hilkiah the priest has given me a scroll," and he read it out loud before the king.

<sup>11</sup>As soon as the king heard what the Instruction scroll said, he ripped his clothes. <sup>12</sup>The king ordered the priest Hilkiah, Shaphan's son Ahikam, Micaiah's son Achbor, Shaphan the secretary, and Asaiah the royal officer as follows: <sup>13</sup>"Go and ask the LORD on my behalf, and on behalf of the people, and on behalf of all Judah concerning the contents of this scroll that has been found. The LORD must be furious with us because our ancestors failed to obey the words of this scroll and do everything written in it about us."

<sup>14</sup>So Hilkiah the priest, Ahikam, Achbor, Shaphan, and Asaiah went to the prophetess Huldah. She was married to Shallum, Tikvah's son and Harhas' grandson, who was in charge of the wardrobe. She lived in Jerusalem in the second district. When they spoke to her, <sup>15</sup>she replied, "This is what the LORD, Israel's God, says: Tell this to the man who sent you to me:

22:1–23:30 The historian gives Josiah (640–609 BCE) the highest praise of all the kings of Judah. Josiah's workers discover God's Instruction scroll while renovating the temple. Upon reading the scroll, Josiah initiates a thorough reform of the entire worship establishment. There are at least two ways of interpreting Josiah's actions: (1) Unfortunately, even his piety and his reforms weren't enough to avert the disaster that was set in motion by Manasseh, the previous king, who, according to the author, surpassed all others (including other nations) in doing evil. (2) Even after hearing the prophet's word about the impending disaster to come on his land, Josiah enacts a thorough reform of the entire worship establishment. In doing so he demonstrates his obedience to the Instruction scroll, even though disaster is around the corner.

22:2 right in the Lord's eyes... his ancestor David: The historian's description begins like introductions to Asa and Hezekiah (1 Kgs 15:11; 2 Kgs 18:3). not deviating... right or left: This remarkable addition mirrors God's instructions to Joshua (Josh 1:7) and the instructions for kings in the book of Deuteronomy (Deut 17:20; cf. Deut 28:14; Josh 23:6). It could be that the historian is deliberately comparing Josiah to Joshua, for whom the Instruction scroll is also central (see note on 2 Kgs 22:8).

22:3–7 he sent... Shaphan... honest workers: Josiah's purpose is to repair the temple (22:5), which he undertakes when he is 26 years old (622 BCE). Josiah's instructions for the renovation resemble those of Jehoash about 200 years earlier (2 Kgs 12:11–16). collected... by the doorkeepers: The system of collection that Jehoash had put in place must have been functioning, since Josiah seems already to have access to money collected (cf. 2 Kgs 12:8–11).

22:8 the Instruction scroll: Of the first five books of the Bible, only Deuteronomy uses this expression (cf. Deut 28:61; 29:21; 30:10; 31:26). It becomes a hallmark of the book of Joshua (Josh 1:8; 8:31, 34; 23:6; 24:26). Josiah's story mentions this scroll often. It is also called "the covenant scroll" (2 Kgs 23:2) and "the Instruction from Moses" (2 Kgs 23:24–25). The books of Kings mention that the Instruction scroll had been accessible in the past (1 Kgs 2:3; 2 Kgs 10:31; 11:12; 14:6; 18:6). It's never mentioned in the books of Judges and Samuel. It seems as though the books of Joshua and Kings draw attention to Joshua and Josiah as bookends in a larger story. Because the reforms Josiah implemented resemble instructions in the book of Deuteronomy, it's likely that the scroll mentioned here is some form of Deuteronomy.

22:11 ripped his clothes: See note on 2 Kings 5:6–7.

22:14 prophetess Huldah: Other OT women prophets included Miriam (Exod 15:20); Deborah (Judg 4:4); Isaiah's wife (Isa 8:3); and Noadiah (Neh 6:14). Huldah's prophecy is more or less fulfilled by events described in 2 Kings 25:9–11, 18–21. Her words continue to confirm an overarching theme in the books of Kings: the power and effectiveness of the prophetic word. See sidebar, "Fulfillment of the Prophetic Word" at 1 Kings 2.

Instruction Scroll The instruction scroll is the most concrete expression of one central theme in Kings. It appears prominently in the story about Josiah's renovation of the temple (2 Kgs 22:8, 11, 24). The scroll that was found during that renovation was probably some form of the book of Deuteronomy (cf. Deut 30:10; 31:24, 26). The only explicit quotation of the instruction scroll is from Deuteronomy (2 Kgs 14:6; Deut 24:16). And Josiah's reform of the worship establishment reflects the interests of Deuteronomy.

Josiah is said to have "fulfilled the words of the instruction written in the scroll . . . found in the LORD's temple" (2 Kgs 23:24). The author is probably alluding to the instructions for kings in Deuteronomy, where the king is commanded to write, to read, and to obey the instruction from God (Deut 17:18-19; cf. 2 Kgs 23:3). The written "instruction from Moses" appears prominently elsewhere in Kings, in David's last words to Solomon (1 Kgs 2:3), which echo God's words to Joshua (Josh 1:7-8; cf. 8:34; 23:6). The similarity suggests that, of all the kings of Israel and Judah, only Josiah fully met the expectations of Deuteronomy and of David.

Failure to obey the words of God's instruction mediated by Moses and the prophets leads to the downfall of Israel (2 Kgs 17:13). Israel's only hope after exile will be to return to God by obeying God's instruction scroll (cf. Deut 30:1-10). Only in attending to God's instruction will Israel find "life" (Deut 8:3; 30:19).

<sup>16</sup>This is what the LORD says: I am about to bring disaster on this place and its citizens—all the words in the scroll that Judah's king has read! <sup>17</sup>My anger burns against this place, never to be quenched, because they've deserted me and have burned incense to other gods, angering me by everything they have done. <sup>18</sup>But also say this to the king of Judah, who sent you to question the LORD: This is what the LORD, Israel's God, says about the message you've just heard: <sup>19</sup>Because your heart was broken and you submitted before the LORD when you heard what I said about this place and its citizens—that they will become a horror and a curse—and because you ripped your clothes and cried before me, I have listened to you, declares the LORD. <sup>20</sup>That's why I will gather you to your ancestors, and you will go to your grave in peace. You won't experience the disaster I am about to bring on this place."

Josiah's reform

23 When they reported Huldah's words to the king, <sup>1</sup>the king sent a message, and all of Judah's and Jerusalem's elders gathered before him. <sup>2</sup>Then the king went up to the LORD's temple, together with all the people of Judah and all the citizens of Jerusalem, the priests and the prophets, and all the people, young and old alike. There the king read out loud all the words of the covenant scroll that had been found in the LORD's temple. <sup>3</sup>The king stood beside the pillar and made a covenant with the LORD that he would follow the LORD by keeping his commandments, his laws, and his regulations with all his heart and all his being in order to fulfill the words of this covenant that were written in this scroll. All of the people accepted the covenant.

22:16 all the words in the scroll: Huldah confirms the consequences for covenant disloyalty. disaster: Deuteronomy includes a significant number of references to destruction and exile (Deut 4:25-27; 29:20-21, 36, 49, 63-64; 29:24-28; 30:17-18). See sidebar, "Instruction Scroll."

22:17 My anger burns . . . angering me by everything they have done: See sidebar, "Anger of God" at 1 Kings 8.

22:19-20 go to your grave in peace: Josiah's remorse means he is allowed to die before the disaster strikes. God is as strangely gracious to Josiah as to Ahab (1 Kgs 21:27-29) and Hezekiah (2 Kgs 20:2-6).

23:2-3 the king read . . . the covenant scroll: Josiah follows the instruction for kings to read the scroll (cf. Deut 17:18-19). Joshua is the only other character in the books of Joshua, Judges, Samuel, and Kings to read the scroll to the people (Josh 8:34-35). See also note on 2 Kings 22:8. made a covenant . . . accepted the covenant: Only

Joshua and Jehoiada make covenants similar to the one mentioned here (Josh 24:25; 2 Kgs 11:17). Broken covenant, according to the historian, was the main reason for the fall of the northern kingdom. That's what makes the people's accepting the covenant with Josiah (23:3) a tragically ironic episode in the sequence of events leading to the fall of Judah. In spite of Josiah's mirroring the faithfulness of Joshua, and in spite of the renewed covenant, Judah didn't stand. all his heart and all his being: These words echo the book of Deuteronomy (cf. Deut 6:5; 10:12; 11:13, 18; 26:16). Josiah is the first king of whom these words are used since David used them in his last words to his son Solomon (see note on 1 Kgs 2:4; see also Josh 22:5; 2 Kgs 23:25). These clues suggest that the historian depicts Josiah as an ideal king who stands in the tradition of Deuteronomy and Joshua, Israel's first truly faithful leader in the land.

<sup>4</sup>The king then commanded the high priest Hilkiah, the second-order priests, and the doorkeepers to remove from the LORD's temple all the religious objects made for Baal, Asherah, and all the heavenly bodies. The king burned them outside Jerusalem in the Kidron fields and took the ashes to Bethel. <sup>5</sup>He got rid of the pagan priests that the Judean kings had appointed to burn incense at the shrines in Judah's cities and the areas around Jerusalem. He did the same to those who burned incense to Baal, to the sun, to the moon, to the constellations, and to all the heavenly bodies. <sup>6</sup>He removed the Asherah image<sup>a</sup> from the LORD's temple, taking it to the Kidron Valley outside Jerusalem. There he burned it, ground it to dust, and threw the dust on the public graveyard. <sup>7</sup>The king tore down the shrines for the consecrated workers<sup>a</sup> that were in the LORD's temple, where women made woven coverings<sup>a</sup> for Asherah.

<sup>8</sup>Then Josiah brought all the priests out of Judah's cities. From Geba to Beer-sheba, he defiled the shrines where the priests had been burning incense. He also tore down the shrines at the gates at the entrance to the gate of Joshua the city's governor, which were on the left as one entered the city gate. <sup>9</sup>Although the priests of these shrines didn't go up on the LORD's altar in Jerusalem, they did eat unleavened bread with their fellow priests.

<sup>10</sup>Josiah defiled the Topheth in the Ben-hinnom Valley so no one could burn their child alive in honor of the god Molech. <sup>11</sup>He did away with the horses that Judah's kings had dedicated to the sun. They were kept at the entrance to the LORD's temple near a room in the annex<sup>a</sup> that belonged to an official named Nathan-melech. Josiah set fire to the chariots

The Reform of Josiah Josiah's worship reform is based on a scroll discovered during the renovation of the temple (2 Kgs 22:8). Josiah recognizes that failure "to obey the words of this scroll" (2 Kgs 22:13) has awful consequences (2 Kgs 18:16-17). Josiah not only reads the scroll (as mandated by Deut 17:18-19), but also makes a commitment to abide by the terms of the covenant with God as written in the scroll (2 Kgs 23:2-3).

In carrying out his reforms, he "fulfilled the words of the Instruction written in the scroll" (2 Kgs 23:24). Josiah celebrates a Passover Festival (2 Kgs 23:21) as instructed in Deuteronomy (Deut 16:1-6). He also removes all pagan worship objects, shrines, and the worship of foreign gods from Jerusalem (2 Kgs 23:4-14) and from the hills of Samaria to the north (2 Kgs 23:19). He even tears down the altar in Bethel, in the former northern kingdom (2 Kgs 23:15-17; cf. 1 Kgs 13:2, 32). In doing so Josiah reverses the practices initiated by both Solomon (1 Kgs 11:5-10) and Jeroboam (2 Kgs 12:26-33).

Josiah's "cleansing" of the temple and the worship establishment reflects Deuteronomy's interests in purity of worship in one place, and in making sure that no pagan elements remain (Deut 7:5; 12:2-7). According to the historian, impurity and improper worship are key causes of Israel's and Judah's demise (1 Kgs 14:15, 23; 2 Kgs 17:10).

Even though "the people accepted the covenant" (2 Kgs 23:3), Judah's fate had been sealed by the actions of Manasseh (2 Kgs 21:13-15; 23:26-27). The author depicts Josiah as a faithful king whose "heart was broken" and who "submitted before the LORD" (2 Kgs 22:19). He is a model of one who "turned to the LORD with all his heart, all his being, and all his strength," which is exactly what Deuteronomy counseled in case God's people ever found themselves exiled to a foreign land (2 Kgs 23:25; Deut 30:1-10). Perhaps Jehoiachin and the exiles with him (2 Kgs 25) will follow Josiah's example.

23:4-9 Josiah cleanses the temple and destroys the shrines. He removes any evidence of worship of Canaanite deities. He expels the priestly support staff. shrines: See note on 1 Kings 3:2-3. Josiah's removal of the shrines centralizes worship in Jerusalem in line with Deuteronomy 12:4-7. Baal: See note on 1 Kings 16:29-34. heavenly bodies: See note on 2 Kings 17:14-17. Asherah image: See note on 1 Kings 14:12-18. consecrated workers: See note on 1 Kings 14:22-24. Geba... Beer-sheba: the northern and southern boundaries of Judah. priests... didn't go up on the Lord's altar in Jerusalem: This action seems to contradict Deuteronomy 18:6-8, which allows such priests to sacrifice in the Jerusalem temple (cf. Ezekiel's perspective about 50 years later in Ezek 44:10-14). Apart from this matter of the priests, Josiah's reform reflects Deuteronomy's emphasis on centralization and purity of the worship establishment in Jerusalem.

23:10 Topheth in the Benhinnom Valley: Topheth is the place in the Hinnom Valley (along the western and southern sides of the city) where children were sacrificed to Molech (cf. 1 Kgs 11:7; 2 Kgs 3:26-27; 16:3; 17:17, 31; 21:6; Jer 7:31-32; 19:6-13).

that were dedicated to the sun. <sup>12</sup>The king also tore down the altars that were on the roof of Ahaz's upper story, which had been made by the Judean kings, and he did the same with the altars that Manasseh had built in the two courtyards of the LORD's temple. He broke them up there<sup>v</sup> and threw their dust into the Kidron Valley. <sup>13</sup>The king then defiled the shrines facing Jerusalem, south of the Mountain of Destruction. Solomon the king of Israel had built these for Ashtoreth, the monstrous Sidonian god, for Chemosh, the monstrous Moabite god, and for Milcom, the detestable Ammonite god. <sup>14</sup>He smashed the sacred pillars and cut down the sacred poles,<sup>w</sup> filling the places where they had been with human bones.

<sup>15</sup>Josiah also tore down the altar that was in Bethel. That was the shrine made by Jeroboam, Nebat's son, who caused Israel to sin. Josiah tore down that altar and its shrine. He burned the shrine, grinding it into dust. Then he burned its sacred pole. <sup>16</sup>When Josiah turned around, he noticed tombs up on the hillside. So he ordered the bones to be taken out of the tombs. He then burned them on the altar, desecrating it. (This was in agreement with the word that the LORD announced by the man of God when Jeroboam stood by the altar at the festival.) Josiah then turned and saw the tomb of the man of God<sup>y</sup> who had predicted these things. <sup>17</sup>"What's this gravestone I see?" Josiah asked.

The people of the city replied, "That tomb belongs to the man of God who came from Judah and announced what you would do to the altar of Bethel."

<sup>19</sup>Moreover, Josiah removed all the shrines on the high hills that the Israelite kings had constructed throughout the cities of Samaria. These had made the LORD angry. Josiah did to them just what he did at Bethel. <sup>20</sup>He actually slaughtered on those altars all the priests of the shrines who were there, and he burned human bones on them. Then Josiah returned to Jerusalem.

<sup>21</sup>The king commanded all the people, "Celebrate a Passover to the LORD your God following what is instructed in this scroll containing the covenant." <sup>22</sup>A Passover like this hadn't been celebrated since the days when the judges judged Israel; neither had it been celebrated during all the days of the Israelite and Judean kings. <sup>23</sup>But in the eighteenth year of King Josiah's rule, this Passover was celebrated to the LORD in Jerusalem.

<sup>24</sup>Josiah burned those who consulted dead spirits and the mediums, the household gods and the worthless idols—all the monstrous things that were seen in the land of Judah and in Jerusalem. In this way Josiah fulfilled the words of the Instruction written in the scroll that the priest Hilkiah found in the LORD's temple. <sup>25</sup>There's never been a king like Josiah,

23:13-14 Josiah is the first king to destroy the shrines built by Solomon (cf. 1 Kgs 11:5-7, 33).

23:15-20 altar... Bethel... altar of Bethel: Josiah desecrates and destroys the altar at Bethel that had been built by Jeroboam. The author's parenthetical comment (23:16) sees this action as a fulfillment of the word announced by the prophet (cf. 1 Kgs 13:1-2). For the background on 2 Kings 23:17-18 see 1 Kings 13:11-32.

23:19-20 shrines... cities of Samaria: Josiah takes the opportunity to move into the former area of Israel (called Samaria here), which seems to indicate a fulfillment of the prophetic word (1 Kgs 13:32). Yet this is also a political move, since Assyrian control in the region had diminished after Ashurbanipal's death and after Assyria became preoccupied with the new superpowers, Babylon to the south and the Medes to the east (about 630 BCE). made the Lord angry: See sidebar, "Anger of God" at 1 Kings 8. slaughtered... priests: These priests worked at the northern Israelite shrines (cf. 2 Kgs 23:8-9). These may have been the priests appointed by Jeroboam (cf. 1 Kgs 12:31).

23:21-23 Passover: a commemoration of the exodus (Exod 12). The Passover is celebrated according to the instructions of Deuteronomy 16:1-8. It was celebrated in Jerusalem rather than, as in earlier times, in homes. Prior to Josiah, Joshua is the only one who celebrates a Passover in the story (Josh 5:10-12). In this action, Josiah demonstrates that his faithfulness is like that of Joshua, even greater than that of David and Hezekiah. 2 Chronicles 30:12-27 describes a Passover celebrated by Hezekiah, not mentioned by the author of Kings. Perhaps Josiah's Passover is unique in that it involves all the people (23:21) as Hezekiah's didn't (2 Chron 30:10-11). The author of Kings probably omits Hezekiah's Passover in order to elevate Josiah as the greatest king ever.

23:24-25 consulted... mediums: prohibited by Deuteronomy 18:9-14 (cf. Lev 19:26, 31; 20:27). household gods: Compare Genesis 31:19, 34-35; Judges 17:5; Hosea 3:4; Zechariah 10:2. fulfilled the words of the Instruction... scroll... Instruction from Moses: In other words, Josiah has been shown to be the only king who obeyed what the Instruction scroll commanded (cf. 2 Kgs 23:3). See notes at 1 Kings 2:3; 2 Kings 14:5-6; and 2 Kings 22:8. never been a king... turned to the Lord: In spite of the same high praise of Hezekiah (2 Kgs 18:5-6), Josiah has done even better.

Joshua and Josiah Joshua is the prototype of King Josiah in 2 Kings 22–23. (1) Josiah's obedience is described in the same terms as Joshua's (2 Kgs 22:2; cf. Josh 1:7; 23:6; Deut 17:20). (2) The Instruction from God is mentioned many times in 2 Kings 22–23. In the larger history (Joshua through Kings), a similar emphasis is found only in the book of Joshua (Josh 1:8; 8:31, 34; 23:6; 24:26; cf. Josh 22:5; 2 Kgs 22:8, 11). (3) Both Joshua and Josiah are mediators of the covenant (cf. Josh 8:30–35; Josh 24; 2 Kgs 23:1–3). The covenantal language of both texts is almost identical. (4) Both Joshua and Josiah are the only ones in the larger historical narrative of Israel who celebrate the Passover (Josh 5:10–12; 2 Kgs 23:21–23; cf. 2 Chron 30).

In drawing the analogy between Joshua and Josiah, the historian has presented a typology of obedience rooted in faithfulness to God, mediated through the Instructions from God to Moses, and embodied in characteristic royal figures (Joshua, David, and Josiah). The tragedy of the history is that it ends in Babylonian exile. The hope of the historian is for a turning away from all other ultimate loyalties (cf. Josh 23:16; 2 Kgs 22:17) and for embracing again the hope of returning to the Lord “with all your heart and all your being” (cf. Deut 4:27–29; 6:5; 30:1–10, especially Deut 30:2, 6, 10; Josh 22:5; 1 Kgs 2:4; 8:46–53; 2 Kgs 23:25).

whether before or after him, who turned to the LORD with all his heart, all his being, and all his strength, in agreement with everything in the Instruction from Moses.

<sup>26</sup>Even so, the LORD didn't turn away from the great rage that burned against Judah on account of all that Manasseh had done to make him angry. <sup>27</sup>The LORD said, “I will remove Judah from my presence just as I removed Israel. I will reject this city, Jerusalem, which I chose, and this temple where I promised my name would reside.”

Jehoahaz rules Judah

<sup>31</sup>Jehoahaz was 23 years old when he became king, and he ruled for three months in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Hamutal; she was Jeremiah's daughter and was from Libnah. <sup>32</sup>He did what was evil in the LORD's eyes, just as all his ancestors had done. <sup>33</sup>Pharaoh Neco made Jehoahaz a prisoner at Riblah in the land of Hamath, ending his rule in Jerusalem. Pharaoh Neco imposed a fine on the land totaling one hundred kikkars of silver and one kikkar of gold.

The author uses the word “turned,” which is a favorite word of Deuteronomy for encouraging the people who, after the disaster of exile, might be encouraged to “turn” to the Lord (cf. Deut 4:30; 30:2–3, 10). Josiah, therefore, is a perfect example of one who did just that. Furthermore, he turns to the Lord before the disaster, even though he knows destruction is on its way (2 Kgs 22:15–17). heart... being... strength: See notes at 1 Kings 2:4 and 2 Kings 23:2–3.

23:26–27 Even so: These may be the most tragic words in the books of Kings. The author repeats the prophetic perspective already announced in 2 Kings 21:10–15 and 22:16–17. Judah's downfall is inevitable, in spite of the author's praise of Josiah (2 Kgs 23:25). From the vantage point of exile, the location of the narrator, the even so is a necessary explanation. Manasseh's actions were the proverbial straw that broke the camel's back. great rage... make him angry: See sidebar, “Anger of God” at 1 Kings 8. my name would reside: See sidebar, “Temple and Name” at 1 Kings 8.

23:28–30 official records: See note on 1 Kings 11:41–43. Pharaoh Neco: After the death of the Assyrian king Ashurbanipal (about 630 BCE), this Egyptian pharaoh aligned himself with Assyria to push back the encroaching power of Babylon. The Assyrian capital Nineveh had already succumbed to the Babylonians in 612 BCE. This battle took place in 609 BCE. It isn't clear why Josiah engaged Neco in the battle. Perhaps he was joining the Babylonian side as a way of shrugging off Judah's status as vassal to Assyria. Josiah may have made some moves in that direction by moving into Israelite territory to the north. (For more details, see 2 Chron 35:20–24.) Megiddo: a strategic site on the edge of the Jezreel Valley that controlled the coastal travel route between Egypt and Mesopotamia. people of the land: See note on 2 Kings 11:14.

23:31–25:30 Judah's story from this point spins out of control. Unthinkable things happen. Babylon becomes the imperial superpower in the region, sets up puppet kings in Judah, and eventually reduces Jerusalem to rubble and exiles much of Judah's population.

23:31–33 Jehoahaz: known as Shallum in the book of Jeremiah (Jer 22:11). Riblah: in northern Syria on the bank of the Orontes River. It's not clear why Jehoahaz traveled there or why Neco arrested him. Perhaps Neco wanted to keep Judah in line and not risk an alliance with Babylon.

Jehoiakim rules Judah

<sup>34</sup>Pharaoh Neco made Eliakim, Josiah's son, king after his father Josiah. Neco changed Eliakim's name to Jehoiakim. Neco took Jehoahaz away; he later died in Egypt. <sup>35</sup>Jehoiakim gave Pharaoh the silver and gold, but he taxed the land in order to meet Pharaoh's financial demands. Each person was taxed appropriately. Jehoiakim exacted silver and the gold from the land's people in order to give it to Pharaoh Neco. <sup>36</sup>Jehoiakim was 25 years old when he became king, and he ruled for eleven years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Zebidah; she was Pedaiah's daughter and was from Rumah. <sup>37</sup>He did what was evil in the LORD's eyes, just as all his ancestors had done.

24 In Jehoiakim's days, King Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon attacked. Jehoiakim had submitted to him for three years, but then Jehoiakim changed his mind and rebelled against him. <sup>2</sup>The LORD sent Chaldean, Aramean, Moabite, and Ammonite raiding parties against Jehoiakim, sending them against Judah in order to destroy it. This was in agreement with the word that the LORD had spoken through his servants the prophets. <sup>3</sup>Indeed, this happened to Judah because the LORD commanded them to be removed from his presence on account of all the sins that Manasseh had committed <sup>4</sup>and because of the innocent blood that he had spilled. Manasseh had filled Jerusalem with innocent blood, and the LORD didn't want to forgive that.

Jehoiachin rules Judah

<sup>8</sup>Jehoiachin was 18 years old when he became king, and he ruled for three months in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Nehushta; she was Elnathan's daughter and was from Jerusalem. <sup>9</sup>He did what was evil in the LORD's eyes, just as all his ancestors had done. <sup>10</sup>At that time, the officers of Babylon's King Nebuchadnezzar attacked Jerusalem and laid siege to the city. <sup>11</sup>Babylon's King Nebuchadnezzar himself arrived at the city while his officers were blockading it. <sup>12</sup>Judah's King Jehoiachin, along with his mother, his servants, his officers, and his officials, came out to surrender to the Babylonian king. The Babylonian king took Jehoiachin prisoner in the eighth year of Jehoiachin's rule.

evil in the Lord's eyes... ancestors had done: a standard criticism of most of the kings of Israel and Judah. kikkars: One kikkar is approximately 76 pounds.

23:34–24:7 The reign of Jehoiakim (a throne name) spells the end of Judah as it finds itself pressed in a vise between the superpowers Egypt and Babylon. Neco has made some headway in the region, but not enough to prevent an even greater power, Babylon under the leadership of King Nebuchadnezzar, from taking control of the region.

23:37 evil in the Lord's eyes... ancestors had done: a criticism leveled against many of the kings from Israel and Judah.

24:1 Jehoiakim... rebelled: Judah survives by strategic alliances. Jehoiakim, a ruler who served under Pharaoh Neco from 609 to 605 BCE (cf. 2 Kgs 23:34), made himself a subordinate of Nebuchadnezzar (604 BCE); but when Nebuchadnezzar wasn't able to defeat Egypt decisively (601 BCE) and had to stay in Babylon the next year, Jehoiakim changed sides again (cf. Jer 26:22).

24:2–4 in agreement with the word... the prophets: The historian doesn't report any such words. The point, however, is that the author believes all such actions by Judah's neighbors are ordained by the Lord. the Lord commanded: The author repeats that conviction, so that the point isn't missed. Manasseh... innocent blood: See note on 2 Kings 21:16. forgive: Apart from Naaman's request for special favor (2 Kgs 5:18), this verb appears in the books of Kings only in Solomon's prayer at the dedication of the temple (1 Kgs 8:30, 34, 36, 39, 50). Its deliberate use here, therefore, evokes a shocking awareness of the tragedy of the current situation.

24:5–6: official records: See note on 1 Kings 11:41–43. This is the last reference to these sources in Kings. No other sources are mentioned after this. Jeremiah offered a poetic reflection on Jehoiakim's death in Egypt (Jer 22:10–12).

24:7 border of Egypt... Euphrates River: The only other mention of this range of imperial control is in the description of Solomon's empire (cf. 1 Kgs 4:21–24). The mention of it here is a telling reminder of what has been truly lost. 24:8–17 Jehoiachin: also known as Jeconiah (Jer 24:1; 27:20) and Coniah (Jer 22:24–28; 37:1). He takes the throne just as the Babylonians are about to destroy Jerusalem. His surrender in 597 BCE saved the city for the time being, but led to the first exile of citizens to Babylon. Nebuchadnezzar reports the capture, plunder, and exile in what is now known as the Babylonian Chronicle.

24:9 evil in the Lord's eyes... ancestors had done: a criticism leveled against many of the kings of Israel and Judah (see note on 2 Kgs 15:9).

24:10–12 Nebuchadnezzar's attack and capture of Jehoiachin was probably a response to Jehoiakim's earlier rebellion against Babylon (2 Kgs 24:1).

<sup>13</sup>Nebuchadnezzar also took away all the treasures of the LORD's temple and of the royal palace. He cut into pieces all the gold objects that Israel's King Solomon had made for the LORD's temple, which is exactly what the LORD said would happen. <sup>14</sup>Then Nebuchadnezzar exiled all of Jerusalem: all the officials, all the military leaders—ten thousand exiles—as well as all the skilled workers and metalworkers. No one was left behind except the poorest of the land's people. <sup>15</sup>Nebuchadnezzar exiled Jehoiachin to Babylon; he also exiled the queen mother, the king's wives, the officials, and the land's elite leaders from Jerusalem to Babylon. <sup>16</sup>The Babylonian king also exiled seven thousand warriors—each one a hero trained for battle—as well as a thousand skilled workers and metalworkers to Babylon. <sup>17</sup>Then the Babylonian king made Mattaniah, Jehoiachin's uncle, succeed Jehoiachin as king. Nebuchadnezzar changed Mattaniah's name to Zedekiah.

Zedekiah rules Judah

<sup>18</sup>Zedekiah was 21 years old when he became king, and he ruled for eleven years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Hamutal; she was Jeremiah's daughter and was from Libnah. <sup>19</sup>He did what was evil in the LORD's eyes, just as Jehoiakim had done. <sup>20</sup>It was precisely because the LORD was angry with Jerusalem and Judah that he thrust them out of his presence.

The southern kingdom falls

25 Now Zedekiah rebelled against the Babylonian king. <sup>1</sup>So in the ninth year of Zedekiah's rule, on the tenth day of the tenth month, Babylon's King Nebuchadnezzar attacked Jerusalem with his entire army. He camped beside the city and built a siege wall all around it. <sup>2</sup>The city was under attack until King Zedekiah's eleventh year. <sup>3</sup>On the ninth day of the month, the famine in the city got so bad that no food remained for the common people. <sup>4</sup>Then the enemy broke into the city. All the soldiers fled<sup>a</sup> by night using the gate between the two walls near the King's Garden. The Chaldeans were surrounding the city, so the soldiers ran toward the desert plain. <sup>5</sup>But the Chaldean army chased King Zedekiah and caught up with him in the Jericho plains. His entire army deserted him. <sup>6</sup>So the Chaldeans captured the king and brought him back to the Babylonian king, who was at Riblah. There his punishment was determined. <sup>7</sup>Zedekiah's sons were slaughtered right before his eyes. Then he was blinded, put in bronze chains, and taken off to Babylon.

<sup>8</sup>On the seventh day of the fifth month in the nineteenth year of Babylon's King Nebuchadnezzar, Nebuzaradan arrived at Jerusalem. He was the commander of the guard and an official of the Babylonian king. <sup>9</sup>He burned down the LORD's temple, the royal palace, and all of Jerusalem's houses. He burned down every important building. <sup>10</sup>The whole Chaldean

24:13-16 Nebuchadnezzar... treasures of the LORD's temple... what the LORD said would happen: Hezekiah's exposure of the temple and palace treasures to Babylon's King Merodach-baladin offered readers a premonition of this event. Hezekiah's action occasioned a prophetic announcement that now becomes a reality (cf. 2 Kgs 20:12-18). Nebuchadnezzar exiled... to Babylon: The deportation didn't include all of Jerusalem but only the elites along with administrative and military personnel. The purpose was to leave the land incapable of further military responses. Unlike the Assyrians, the Babylonians didn't disperse and transfer entire populations (cf. 2 Kgs 17:4-6, 17). The prophet Ezekiel was deported along with this group of exiles (cf. Ezek 1:2-3).

24:17 Mattaniah... Zedekiah: Josiah's third son.

24:18-25:21 The historian reports about the reign of Zedekiah, the destruction of the city and temple, and the second exile of the population in 587 BCE. Other biblical texts fill out the background and provide parallels to this story (cf. Jer 39:1-4; 27-29; 52; 2 Chron 36).

24:19-20a evil in the LORD's eyes: a standard criticism of most of the kings of Israel and Judah (see note at 2 Kgs 15:9). because the LORD was angry... out of his presence: The historian takes another opportunity to remind readers that the sequence of events being reported isn't simply the result of superpower domination of the region. See sidebar, "Anger of God" at 1 Kings 8.

24:20b-25:7 Zedekiah rebelled... ninth year... eleventh year: After a 17-month siege, the city fell to the Babylonian army in 587/586 BCE. Jeremiah 27-29 tells the story of Zedekiah's plot, including Jeremiah's responses, in more detail. As is true of almost every other attack on Jerusalem, Nebuchadnezzar approaches the city at its most vulnerable point, its northern wall (cf. 2 Kgs 14:11). Zedekiah escapes and flees toward the Jordan Valley. Riblah: the Babylonian headquarters in northern Syria on the bank of the Orontes River (cf. 2 Kgs 23:33). Both Jeremiah and Ezekiel made prophetic pronouncements about Zedekiah's capture and deportation (Jer 34:3; Ezek 12:13).

25:8-12 seventh day of the fifth month: Jewish tradition commemorates the destruction of the first temple by the Babylonians and the second temple by the Romans in a 25-hour fast on the ninth of Av, the fifth month (cf. Zech 7:3; 8:19). burned down... tore down the walls: One month after the fall of Jerusalem, the Babylonians destroyed Jerusalem (587 BCE).

army under the commander of the guard tore down the walls surrounding Jerusalem. <sup>11</sup>Then Nebuzaradan the commander of the guard exiled the people who were left in the city, those who had already surrendered to Babylon's king, and the rest of the population. <sup>12</sup>The commander of the guard left some of the land's poor people behind to work the vineyards and be farmers. <sup>13</sup>The Chaldeans shattered the bronze columns, the stands, and the bronze Sea that were in the LORD's temple. They carried the bronze off to Babylon. <sup>14</sup>They also took the pots, the shovels, the wick trimmers, the dishes, and all the bronze items that had been used in the temple. <sup>15</sup>The commander of the guard took the fire pans and the sprinkling bowls, which were made of pure gold and pure silver. <sup>16</sup>The bronze in all these objects—the two pillars, the Sea, and the stands that Solomon had made for the LORD's temple—was too heavy to weigh. <sup>17</sup>Each pillar was twenty-seven feet high. The bronze capital on top of the first pillar was four and a half feet high. Decorative lattices and pomegranates, all made from bronze, were around the capital. And the second pillar was decorated with lattices just like the first.

<sup>18</sup>The commander of the guard also took away Seraiah the chief priest, Zephaniah the priest next in rank, and the three doorkeepers. <sup>19</sup>Of those still left in the city, Nebuzaradan took away an officer who was in charge of the army and five royal advisors who were discovered in the city. He also took away the secretary of the officer responsible for drafting the land's people to fight, as well as sixty people who were discovered in the city. <sup>20</sup>Nebuzaradan the commander of the guard took all of these people and brought them to the Babylonian king at Riblah. <sup>21</sup>The king of Babylon struck them down, killing them in Riblah in the land of Hamath.

So Judah was exiled from its land.

Gedaliah governs Judah

<sup>22</sup>Babylon's King Nebuchadnezzar put Gedaliah, Ahikam's son and Shaphan's grandson, in charge of the people he had left behind in the land of Judah. <sup>23</sup>All the army officers and their soldiers heard that the Babylonian king had appointed Gedaliah as governor, so they came with their men to Gedaliah at Mizpah. The officers were Ishmael, Nethaniah's son; Johanan, Kareah's son; Seraiah, Tanhumeth's son who was a Netophathite; and Jaazaniah, Maacathite's son. <sup>24</sup>Gedaliah made a solemn pledge to them and their soldiers, telling them, "Don't be afraid of the Chaldean officials. Stay in the land and serve the Babylonian king, and things will go well for you."

<sup>25</sup>But in the seventh month, Ishmael, Nethaniah's son and Elishama's grandson, who was from the royal family, came with ten soldiers, and they struck Gedaliah, and he died. They also killed the Judeans and the Chaldeans who were with him at Mizpah. <sup>26</sup>Then all the people, young and old, along with the army officers, departed for Egypt because they were afraid of the Chaldeans.

Jehoiachin in Babylon

25:13-17 On the temple furnishings mentioned here, see 1 Kings 7:15-50.

25:18-21 Judah was exiled from its land: A final tragic declaration by the historian leaves the reader wondering whether there might be any hope for Judah. Given the theological investment of the historian in the land, the temple, and the Davidic monarchy, this seems like a final punctuation mark on a long and grueling downhill slide. See map 10.

25:22-26 A first appendix continues the story of the Judeans who remained in the land. Gedaliah: related to high officials in Josiah's court (cf. 2 Kgs 22:3, 12). His father, along with Jeremiah, supported submission to the Babylonians (25:24; Jer 26:24). Mizpah: This new administrative center, about eight miles north of Jerusalem (cf. 1 Kgs 15:22), was once the place where Saul was chosen as Israel's first king (1 Sam 10:17). It's ironic that this new administrative center to the north of Jerusalem, the same place where Saul, Israel's first king, was chosen (1 Sam 10:17), is now the seat of Judah's rump government. Gedaliah . . . died: The author doesn't elaborate on the reasons for his assassination. The pro-Babylonian political counsel he provides (25:24) may have something to do with it (cf. the fuller description of events in Jer 40:13-41:18).

25:27-30 Awil-merodach . . . released . . . Jehoiachin from prison: A second appendix raises questions about whether the historian sees any special relevance in the events reported here. Does the story simply come to an end by stating, as it were, "And that's that"? Or does the release of Jehoiachin from prison imply a new hope for the Judean monarchy? Are the prophetic promises now ended, or is there still hope for the future (cf. 2 Sam 7:15-16)? In spite of holding a strong conviction that history unfolds at the initiative of the prophetic word, the author, living in exile, Jehoiachin, on the twenty-seventh day of the twelfth month. <sup>28</sup>Awil-merodach spoke kindly to Jehoiachin and seated him above the other kings who were with him in Babylon. <sup>29</sup>So Jehoiachin took off his prisoner clothes and ate regularly in the king's presence for the rest of his life. <sup>30</sup>At the king's command, a regular food allowance was given to him every day for the rest of his life.

The Ending of Kings The books of Kings end in the catastrophe of exile, against expectations shaped by God's promise to David (2 Sam 7). Yet the references to that promise in Kings are more conditional than Nathan's words to David (1 Kgs 2:2-4; 9:1-9). Solomon begins with much promise, but in the end is on a path toward tragedy (1 Kgs 9:6-9).

A large "if" lies beneath the hopeful promise of Solomon's story (cf. 1 Kgs 2:4; 3:14; 9:6). Solomon's prayer at the dedication of the temple includes hints at how the story will end (1 Kgs 8:33, 46-49). Similar anticipation is already evident in Deuteronomy's warnings (Deut 4:25-28; 28:62-64; 29:22-28).

Yet even those hints of tragedy offer insight into the salvation to be revealed on the other side of exile. Solomon implies the possibility of returning to God. He affirms the compassion and covenantal commitment of God. His prescription for hope after exile continues to be valid as readers come to the end of 2 Kings.

Both Deuteronomy and Kings endorse a double affirmation: the possibility of returning to God and God's compassionate commitment (Deut 4:30-31; cf. Deut 31:6, 8). Josiah, not Solomon, is the model for the exiles (2 Kgs 23:24-25). Attentiveness like his to God's Instruction will result in exclusive loyalty to God, and rejection of other loyalties and other gods "beyond the Euphrates" (Josh 24:2, 15). And that location is exactly where King Jehoiachin and his fellow exiles are sitting at the end of the books of Kings.

might not have had any way of knowing what the future might hold. Jeremiah's book, however, offers another perspective (cf. Jer 29). thirty-seventh year of the exile: 560 BCE. The new Babylonian king is the son of Nebuchadnezzar. He reigned from 562 to 560 BCE. spoke kindly: Some interpreters think that this idiom, similar to a Babylonian expression, represents a formal agreement that changed Jehoiachin's status and may have had an impact on the exiles as well. ate regularly in the king's presence . . . regular food allowance: The last verses of the book may imply a positive outlook not only for Jehoiachin, but also for the exilic community.

1 CHRONICLES

Beginning with Adam and ending in the reign of Persia's King Cyrus, the two books of Chronicles retell the national history of Israel. As with all retellings, the author of these books (called the Chronicler) shapes the story to fit particular concerns. These concerns reflect a Jerusalem context during the late Persian period (approximately 400–325 BCE), a time when the city was relatively small and the author's fellow followers of the Lord were scattered throughout the Near East.

The Chronicler carefully defines the community of Israel in the Persian period. In this time, the people were spread throughout the Persian Empire: some in Egypt and some remaining in Babylon, others back in the land but in the provinces of Samaria or Idumea, and still others settling around the city of Jerusalem in the traditional area of Judah. According to the books of Ezra and Nehemiah, God's people are most properly understood as those from the tribes of Benjamin and Judah who returned from exile and resettled in their traditional tribal allotments. The Chronicler considers this perspective too narrow so includes the northern tribes, united with the southern ones, as the ideal picture of the kingdom: all Israel. The ideal religious posture of all Israel is united worship at the temple in Jerusalem, the site chosen by God and linked to Solomon, David, and Moses.

The Chronicler establishes the authority of the Jerusalem temple by repeatedly saying that it is the place God has chosen over any other worship site. When David sacrifices at the threshing floor of Ornan, God marks the altar as the site of the future temple with fire from heaven (1 Chron 21:26). When Solomon later completes and dedicates the temple at the same site, God again sends the heavenly fire and fills the sanctuary with the "LORD's glory" (2 Chron 7:1-3). Soon after, God repeats the divine choice in a dream to Solomon: "I have chosen this temple and declared it holy so that my name may be there forever. My eyes and my heart will always be there" (2 Chron 7:16).

The chest containing the covenant (1 Chron 15)

The temple's special authority also comes from its links to the nation's ancient religious practices. Throughout the book the author points to the many parallels between the temple and the meeting tent that was carried through the desert by the people. Most notably, both are the house for the sacred chest (Exod 25:10-16; 2 Chron 5:7). In addition, both temple and meeting tent are cared for by priests and Levites who can trace their lineage back to the time of Moses. So those who worship at the temple in Jerusalem—or, if they are outside the land, pray towards it (2 Chron 6:34)—continue religious practices that can be traced back to the founding traditions of the nation.

David was key to the construction of this temple. Although he was ultimately prevented from building the temple because he was a "military man" who "shed blood," he provided his son Solomon with the necessary materials and building plan (1 Chron 28:2–29:9). This emphasis may represent a plea for the restoration of the Davidic monarchy in the Persian period (or even in the distant future). A more straightforward interpretation is that this simply stakes a claim on the Jerusalem temple that predates current politics. During a time when the rebuilding and upkeep of the present sanctuary, the second temple, was associated with the Persian emperor (as seen especially in the book of Ezra), the Chronicler reclaims the temple for Israel. Cyrus may have initiated the construction (2 Chron 36:22-23 = Ezra 1:1-4), and his successors may have been credited with offering financial assistance (Ezra 6:4; 7:15, 20-22, etc.), but Chronicles emphasizes the temple's link to earlier leaders of Israel. Even though Solomon's temple was rebuilt with Persian support, the building site and organization of the religious personnel can still claim Davidic roots.

The author's particular emphases are communicated by a retelling of the nation's history that makes use of preexisting sources. Most of this material is from Samuel and Kings, but other texts such as Genesis are included as well. Although it is tempting for readers to place a special value on what is unique in Chronicles, it is important to consider the material that the author chose to retain from earlier sources.

The Chronicler's work has been assessed and characterized in a variety of ways throughout history. The various titles given to this book (which had no title originally) by ancient translators and commentators reveal differences of opinion over the worth of the book. In rabbinic circles, the book is designated, "The book of the daily events." This title links it together with the official records of the royal court referred to throughout the book of Kings (see 1 Kgs 14:19; 15:7, 23). In the Septuagint (the Greek translation of the OT), the title "The things left out" highlights the material not repeated from the parallel sources in Samuel and Kings. The current English title derives from what the Christian theologian Jerome (ca. 347–420) called it: "Chronicle of the entire divine history." This title points to the long chronological scope of the work and its concern to see God's interaction throughout the retelling of past events.

1:1-2:2 The first chapter of the book establishes the family line of Israel, beginning with Adam (and the family tree continues through the first nine chapters of the book). These verses are an extremely condensed version of the genealogical material found in the book of Genesis, told in a way that highlights the connection of the nation of Israel to the other nations of the earth. (See sidebar, "Genealogy for a Purpose" at 1 Chron 3)

1:1-4 Consisting of 10 names, these verses function as an abbreviation of Genesis 5:1-39 that omits mention of other descendants, their age at death, and more.

1:4 Shem, Ham, and Japheth: This notice of Noah's three sons is the first time in the genealogy that more than one person per generation is named, pointing to the flourishing of different cultural and geographic identities in the world after the flood. Each son is associated with a different region: Shem with the lands and people east of Israel, Ham with those to the south and southwest, and Japheth with those to the north and west.

1:5-27 The presentation of Japheth's line (1:5-7) before that of his older brothers Ham (1:8-16) and Shem (1:17-27) starts a pattern of reversing the chronology followed throughout the chapter. Once the genealogies of the younger sons are briefly given, the author continues the story of the family line through a more complete presentation of the more significant branch. For a similar "table of nations" (so named because of its concern to relate the seventy nations of the earth to each other through their common father Noah), see Genesis 10:1-29.

1:5-7 Japheth's sons represent the areas north and west of Israel, and include the regions of Asia Minor (Javan), Anatolia (Tubal and Togarmah), and islands in the Mediterranean such as Cyprus (Elishah), and Rhodes (Rodanim).

1:8-16 Ham's sons represent peoples and areas south and southwest of Israel, traditionally related to Egypt. This region includes Cush to the south (Sudan and Nubia), Put to the west (Libya), and Canaan far to the north (probably included here on account of its longstanding political connection with Egypt).

1:13-16 Canaan's sons include the geographical regions of the Phoenician coast (Sidon), the inhabitants of Canaan (Heth, i.e., the Hittites; the Jebusites, the traditional inhabitants of Jerusalem; the Amorites; the Girgashites and the Hivites), as well as the inhabitants of Syria.

1:17-27 Shem's family represents areas and peoples to the west of Israel, including regions in Mesopotamia (Elam, Assur, and Arpachshad), Asia Minor (Lud and Meshech), and Syria (Aram). See also Genesis 10:21-31 and sidebar, "Genealogy for a Purpose" at 1 Chronicles 3.

1:18-19 Eber: the one from whom the Hebrew people take their name. Peleg: Perhaps the use of this name (from the Hebrew, "to divide," "split") represents a playful allusion to the dispersion of the peoples after their attempt to build the tower of Babel (Gen 11).

1:24-27 For an expanded version of Shem's family through Peleg's line, see Genesis 11:10-26.

1:27 Abram, that is, Abraham: For the change of Abram's name, see Genesis 17:5.

1:28-2:2 Although the text here names only one woman, Abraham's line continues through three different women:

Jokshan's family: Sheba and Dedan.

Zibeon's family: Aiah and Anah.

Dishon's family: Hamran, Eshban, Ithran, and Cheran.

2 This was Israel's family: Reuben, Simeon, Levi, Judah, Issachar, Zebulun, <sup>2</sup>Dan, Joseph, Benjamin, Naphtali, Gad, and Asher.

Judah's line

<sup>3</sup>Judah's family: Er, Onan, and Shelah. These three were born to him with Bath-shua the Canaanite. Although Er was Judah's oldest, the LORD considered him wicked and put Sarah (the mother of Isaac), Hagar (the mother of Ishmael), and Keturah (the mother of the children listed in 1:32-33). Following the usual style in this chapter, the secondary lines are presented before continuing with what the author considers to be the main genealogical branch, Isaac (1:34-2:2). For a fuller account of the lines of Ishmael and the sons of Keturah, see Genesis 25:1-4, 12-18.

1:34-2:2 Abraham's family through Isaac's sons Esau and Israel. Throughout the books of Chronicles, the author never uses the name Jacob. Instead, the name Israel is used, emphasizing his identity as the father of a people. See Genesis 32:28; 35:10.

1:36 Since it isn't stated in this verse, perhaps the author assumes that the readers will remember that Timna was Eliphaz's secondary wife (concubine) and the mother of Amalek according to Genesis 36:12.

1:38 Seir: The connection of Esau and Edom with mountainous region is made in Genesis 36:8.

1:43-54 the land of Edom: a list of the kings and chiefs of Edom, the nation descending from Isaac's son Esau. See also Genesis 36:31-43.

2:1-2 This record of Abraham's family through Isaac and his son Israel concludes the first section of the book and introduces the next tribal genealogies in 1 Chronicles 2-9. Except for Dan, Israel's sons are listed according to their mothers: Leah (Reuben, Simeon, Levi, Judah, Issachar, and Zebulun); Rachel (Joseph and Benjamin); Bilhah (Dan and Naphtali); and Zilpah (Gad and Asher). For a genealogy that names the sons with their mothers, see Genesis 35:23-26.

2:3-4:23 Although the material bears some stylistic similarities to 1 Chronicles 1, the focus in the next several chapters now narrows from the nations of the earth to the nation of Israel itself. Beginning with the tribe of Judah, 1 Chronicles 2-8 presents the family records of most of the twelve sons of Israel (Zebulun and Dan aren't accounted for, and Naphtali is given only passing mention in 1 Chron 7:13). The length and prominence of Judah's genealogy in 1 Chronicles 2:3-4:23 indicate the tribe's significance to the author's story of the nation. Much of the material can be found in other parts of the Bible, but in this context the author presents it in a new perspective.

2:3-4 Stories of Judah and his five sons are also found in Genesis 38.

2:3 Bath-shua, the Canaanite: The author mentions Bath-shua's non-Israelite ethnic identity without critique. This is in contrast to the books of Ezra and Nehemiah in which foreign women and their children were cast out of the community as a way to preserve the "holy descendants" of Israel (Ezra 9:2; Neh 10:30; 13:23-29; see sidebar, "Ethnic Outsiders in the Chronicler's Genealogies" at 1 Chron 6). Er's offense isn't given here or in Genesis 38:7.

<sup>7</sup>Carmi's family: Achar, who made trouble for Israel by disobeying the law dedicating war spoils to God.

<sup>9</sup>Hezron's family, who were born to him: Jerahmeel, Ram, and Chelubai. <sup>10</sup>Ram was the father of Amminadab, and Amminadab was the father of Nahshon, tribal chief of the Judeans. <sup>11</sup>Nahshon was the father of Salma, Salma was the father of Boaz. <sup>12</sup>Boaz was the father of Obed, and Obed was the father of Jesse. <sup>13</sup>Jesse was the father of Eliab his oldest son, Abinadab his second, Shimea his third, <sup>14</sup>Nethanel his fourth, Raddai his fifth, <sup>15</sup>Ozem his sixth, and David his seventh. <sup>16</sup>Their sisters were Zeruiah and Abigail.

Zeruiah's family: Abishai, Joab, and Asahel—three in all. <sup>17</sup>Abigail gave birth to Amasa, whose father was Jether the Ishmaelite.

All these were descendants of Machir, Gilead's father. <sup>24</sup>After Hezron's death, Caleb went to Ephrath. <sup>25</sup>Abijah, Hezron's wife, bore him Ashhur, Tekoa's father.

Shammai's family: Nadab and Abishur. <sup>29</sup>Abishur's wife's name was Abihail, and she gave birth to Ahban and Molid for him.

Ishi's family: Sheshan.

Sheshan's family: Ahlai.

2:4 daughter-in-law: With this straightforward title, the author alludes to Judah's misdeeds recorded in Genesis 38:12-26.

2:7 Achar: In Hebrew, this name is based on the verb "to trouble, ruin." Joshua 7 tells the longer story of when Achan (an alternative name for Achar) brought "trouble" to the nation of Israel in the form of military destruction by the Amorites. The story is preserved in the name given to the place of Achan's own destruction by the Israelites as the Achor Valley (i.e., the valley of trouble).

2:9-16 Hezron's family: The line of David, beginning with his ancestor Hezron through his son Ram, receives long and detailed treatment. A similar list of Judah's line through Tamar's son Perez concludes the book of Ruth (Ruth 4:18-22).

2:15 seventh: Here David is recorded as Jesse's seventh son, although 1 Samuel 16:10-11 and 17:12-14 name him as the eighth. Jesse was in the seventh position within the family line of Ram. The seventh position, meaning complete or even perfect, is symbolically significant. (See sidebar, "Genealogy for a Purpose" at 1 Chron 3.)

2:16 sisters: Sisters and/or daughters aren't often mentioned in the author's genealogies, and although Zeruiah and Abigail are named in other biblical texts (see 2 Sam 17:25), they are designated as David's sisters only here. The three sons of Zeruiah were known as leaders in David's army, fighting with the tribe of Judah to bring the northern part of Israel under David's leadership (2 Sam 2:8-32). In the author's account, Joab also captured Jerusalem from Jebusite control (1 Chron 11:4-6). By linking the three warriors to the king through family ties, their military victories now also transfer to the credit of their uncle, David.

2:18-20 Caleb, Hezron's son: The line of Hezron (begun in 1 Chron 2:9) continues through his son Caleb. Record of Caleb's family is also given in 1 Chronicles 2:42-55, incorporating different names. Although Caleb is primarily known for his role in spying out the land and encouraging the people to enter in (Num 13-14), here he is just a fruitful member of the family who would live in the land.

2:21 The line of Hezron (begun in 1 Chron 2:9) multiplies with the birth of another son, Segub. Machir: a name preserved in some of the oldest poetry of the Bible (Judg 5:14); the man is usually understood to be Manasseh's son (Gen 50:23; Num 32:39-40; 1 Chron 7:14).

2:25-41 The family of Jerahmeel: The line of Hezron (begun

The family of Hur, Ephrathah's oldest son: Shobal, Kiriath-jearim's father; <sup>51</sup>Salma, Bethlehem's father; and Hareph, Beth-gader's father.

<sup>52</sup>Shobal, Kiriath-jearim's father, had a family: Haroeh, and the ancestor of half of the Menuhoth. <sup>53</sup>Kiriath-jearim's clans: the Ithrites, the Puthites, the Shumathites, and the Mishraitites. From these came the Zorathites and the Eshtaolites.

David's line

3 This is David's family born to him in Hebron: the oldest Amnon, with Ahinoam the Jezreelite; the second Daniel, with Abigail the Carmelite; <sup>2</sup>the third Absalom son of Maacah, the daughter of Geshur's King Talmai; the fourth Adonijah, Haggith's son; <sup>3</sup>the fifth Shephatiah, with Abital; the sixth Ithream, with his wife Eglah. <sup>4</sup>Six were born to him in Hebron, where he reigned for seven and a half years. He also reigned in Jerusalem for thirty-three years. <sup>5</sup>These were born to him in Jerusalem: Shimea, Shobab, Nathan, and Solomon—four from Bath-shua, Ammiel's daughter; <sup>6</sup>Ibhar, Eli-shama, Eliphelet, <sup>7</sup>Nogah, Nepheg, Japhia, <sup>8</sup>Elishama, Eliada, and Eliphelet—nine in all. <sup>9</sup>This was all of David's family, except for his secondary wives' children. Tamar was their sister.

in 1 Chron 2:9) continues through his son Jerahmeel. Much of this material has no parallel in other texts.

2:34-35 Sheshan had no sons: The continuation of Sheshan's family line through his daughter and a slave has affinities with the story of the barren Sarah seeking to obtain children via her servant Hagar in Genesis 16:2. See sidebar, "Ethnic Outsiders in the Chronicler's Genealogies" at 1 Chronicles 6.

2:42-55 The line of Hebron (begun in 1 Chron 2:9) picks up again with his son Caleb, a genealogy already partially outlined in 1 Chronicles 2:18-20.

2:50b-55 Hur: Caleb's son and grandson of Hebron (1 Chron 2:18-19).

3:1-24 Due to its significance to the author, the house of David is recorded in great length in this chapter. The lineage extends in unbroken succession through the 4th century BCE and covers more generations than any other genealogical passage in the Bible.

3:1-4 A record of David's family born during his seven years in Hebron, before he was acclaimed king of Israel as well as Judah and moved to his new capital city, Jerusalem (2 Sam 5:1-10). Daniel: called Chileab in the parallel passage in 2 Samuel 3:2-6. Since he isn't mentioned outside of these two lists, perhaps he didn't survive past childhood.

3:5-9 David's family born in Jerusalem, after he took the city and was acclaimed king over all Israel and Judah. Bath-shua: known as Bathsheba in the books of Samuel and Kings. Although these sons are known from other lists in the Bible (1 Chron 14:3-7; 2 Sam 5:13-16), this is the only time Bathsheba is acknowledged to be the mother of children other than Solomon and her first son with David who died in infancy (2 Sam 12:24). Genealogy for a Purpose Although the long genealogical table that begins the books of Chronicles may seem overly dry and factual, the careful reader will notice a certain artistic shaping of the story in chapters 1-9. Through this shaping, the author makes several theological and social points about the identity of the nation and its neighbors. For example, by relating the history of the nation back to Adam (1 Chron 1:1), the author asserts that Israel isn't simply a minor player in global politics but an equal player on the world stage. It also reminds the reader that all of the nations of the earth are related to each other with ties that go deeper than current political loyalties. Moreover, tracing the various lines of succession through many generations highlights the fact that apparently rigid social rules, such as the primacy of the oldest male child, aren't set in stone. The line of Shem continues through the third son Arpachshad rather than Elam (1 Chron 1:17-18), and David had many other older brothers (1 Chron 2:15). Finally, depiction of family lines such as that of Levi, traced over six hundred years in unbroken succession, emphasizes continuity in the religious leadership of the nation that points to God's special favor.

Judah's line

4 Judah's family: Perez, Hezron, Caleb,<sup>a</sup> Hur, and Shobal.

<sup>2</sup>Shobal's son Reaiah was Jahath's father, and Jahath was the father of Ahumai and Lahad. These were the Zorathite clans.

will become king after David, it's especially curious that Solomon is named as their fourth son. Nathan is the one through whom the genealogy in Luke traces Jesus back to David (Luke 3:31; cf. Zech 12:12), whereas the book of Matthew establishes this link through Solomon (Matt 1:6).

3:10-24 This version of David's line, continuing via his son Solomon, lists the kings of Judah through the destruction of Jerusalem by the Babylonians and continues through the exilic and post-exilic periods. At points the list uses names that appear differently in the rest of the book and other passages in the Bible (Azariah in 3:12, but Uziah in 2 Chron 26 and 2 Kgs 15:13; and Jeconiah in 3:16-17, but Jehoiachin in 2 Chron 36:8-9 and 2 Kgs 26:27, 29).

3:17 Jeconiah the prisoner. This designation hints at the political events that this genealogical list doesn't make explicit, namely, the exile of the people to Babylon. For the account of this king's release from Babylonian imprisonment, see 2 Kings 25:27-30.

3:19-24 This list of David's family from Pedaiah through the family of Elioenai is found only in Chronicles. By including it in this chapter, the author can extend the line of David through the time when the exiled community is restored again to the land.

3:19 Zerubbabel, a leader of the post-exilic community associated with the initial return to the land and the preliminary restoration of the temple, is usually considered the son of Shealtiel (Ezra 3:2; 5:2; Neh 12:1).

3:22 Hattush: appears on a list of those who returned from exile in Babylon in Ezra 8:2.

4:1-23 After an entire chapter devoted to David and his family, the book returns to the other descendants of Judah's line, first begun in 1 Chronicles 2:3-4. The line first descends through Judah's son Perez (beginning in 1 Chron 2:1) and then his son Shelah (1 Chron 2:21-23).

4:1 As in 1 Chronicles 1:1-4, each name in this verse represents an entire generation.

This was the family of Hur the oldest son of Ephrathah, Bethlehem's father: <sup>5</sup>Ashhur, Tekoa's father, had two wives, Helah and Naarah. <sup>6</sup>Naarah gave birth to Ahuzzam, Hepher, Temeni, and Haahashtari for him. This was Naarah's family.

<sup>9</sup>Jabez was more honored than his brothers. His mother had named him Jabez, saying, "I bore him in pain."<sup>g</sup> <sup>10</sup>Jabez called on Israel's God: "If only you would greatly bless me and increase my territory. May your power go with me to keep me from trouble, so as not to cause me pain." And God granted his request.

This is the family of Bithiah, Pharaoh's daughter, whom Mered married. <sup>19</sup>The family of his Judean wife,<sup>u</sup> the sister of Naham, Keilah's father the Garmite and Eshtemoa the Maacathite.

Ishi's family: Zoheth and Ben-zoheth.

4:9-10 His mother had named him Jabez: The name Jabez is a wordplay on his mother's labor pains during his birth, a situation reminiscent of the curse on Eve in Genesis 3:16. He employs this same wordplay when he prays that God would keep him from pain. God's favorable answer terminates the threat of pain to Jabez, and highlights the Chronicler's theme of the effectiveness of prayer (see 1 Chron 5:20-22; 2 Chron 15:11-15, see sidebar "God's Response to Prayer in Chronicles" at 1 Chron 17).
4:18 Bithiah, Pharaoh's daughter: In keeping with the rest of the genealogies in 1 Chronicles 1-9, the author here offers no criticism of those who intermarry with other nations and tribes (see, for example, 1 Chron 2:3, 17, 34). This contrasts with the punishments for intermarriage recorded in Ezra 9-10; Nehemiah 10:30; 13:23-29.

4:21-23 The family of Shelah: The clan descending from Judah and Bathshua's oldest son Shelah (first mentioned in 1 Chron 2:3) is also referred to in a list of those who resettled in Jerusalem after the exile (Neh 11:5).

<sup>38</sup>These mentioned by name were leaders in their clans, and their households increased greatly.

<sup>39</sup>They went to the entrance of Gedor, as far as the east side of the valley, to find pasture for their flocks. <sup>40</sup>They found fertile pasture, and the land was spacious, quiet, and peaceful; the people of Ham used to live there. <sup>41</sup>These whose names were recorded, however, came in the days of Judah's King Hezekiah, attacked their tents and the Meunim<sup>a</sup> found there, and completely destroyed them, as can be seen today. They settled in their place, because there was pasture there for their flocks. <sup>42</sup>Some of them, five hundred Simeonites, went to Mount Seir, led by Pelatiah, Neariah, Rephaiah, and Uzziel, Ishi's sons. <sup>43</sup>They struck down those who were left of the Amalekites and have lived there ever since.

Lines of Reuben, Gad, and East Manasseh

5 The family of Reuben, Israel's oldest son: he was actually the oldest, but when he dishonored his father's bed his birthright<sup>a</sup> was given to the family of Joseph, Israel's son, so Reuben isn't listed as the oldest in the records. <sup>2</sup>Although Judah became the strongest among his brothers and a leader came from him, the birthright belonged to Joseph.

They lived in Aroer, as far as Nebo and Baal-meon. <sup>9</sup>They also settled in the east as far as the edge of the desert that stretches to the Euphrates River, because their livestock had increased in the land of Gilead. <sup>10</sup>In Saul's days they waged war on the Hagrites, whom they defeated. So they lived in their tents throughout the entire region east of Gilead.

<sup>14</sup>This was the family of Abihail son of Huri son of Jaroah son of Gilead son of Michael son of Jeshishai son of Jahdo son of Buz. <sup>15</sup>Ahi, Abdiel's son and Guni's grandson, was the head of their household.

<sup>16</sup>They lived in Gilead, in Bashan and in its towns, and as far as the boundaries of all the open lands of Sharon. <sup>17</sup>They were all listed in the records in the days of Judah's King Jotham and Israel's King Jeroboam. <sup>18</sup>The Reubenites, the Gadites, and half the tribe of Manasseh were warriors who carried shield and sword, drew the bow, and were trained for war—44,760 ready for military service. <sup>19</sup>When they waged war on the Hagrites (the Jeturites, of Israel, Simeon (1 Chron 2:1). Early Israelite tradition places the tribe of Simeon within the orbit of the tribe of Judah (Gen 49:5-7; Josh 15:26-32; Judg 1:1-3); and so the tribe's genealogies are placed here in the transition between the southern tribe of Judah and the tribes east of the Jordan River.

5:1-26 The relatively brief account of the tribes that settled east of the Jordan River (Reuben, Gad, and half the tribe of Manasseh; see Num 32:33-42) continues the genealogy of Israel's sons first begun in 1 Chronicles 2:1-2.

5:1-10 when he dishonored his father's bed: The line of Reuben begins with an explanation of why Israel's oldest male child wasn't granted the usual status. For a fuller story of Reuben's demotion in the family line because he had sex with his father's secondary wife Bilhah, see Genesis 35:22; 49:4. Due to this misdeed, the distinctions associated with being the oldest son moved from the eldest of Leah's sons (Reuben) to the eldest of Rebecca's (Joseph).

5:2 leader: a reference to David, the king from the tribe of Judah who ruled over the twelve tribes of Israel.

5:6 carried away into exile: In the book of Kings, Assyria's King Tiglath-Pileser III (known here as Tilgath-pilneser) deports tribes of Israel from both sides of the Jordan River (2 Kgs 15:29). In the Chronicler's version of this story, however (5:6, 22), the exile is limited to those tribes who settled on the east of the Jordan River. By neglecting to mention any deportation of the western tribes, the author suggests that the exile was limited and that most of the land continued to be occupied by Israelite tribes.

5:11-17 The line of Israel (first begun in 1 Chron 2:1-2) continues with the tribe of Gad who, with Reuben and half the tribe of Manasseh, settled on the east side of the Jordan River (Num 33:33-42).

5:18-22 The lineage of the tribes of Reuben, Gad, and half the tribe of Manasseh is interrupted with an account of their wars against various enemies.

the Naphishites, and the Nodabites),<sup>20</sup> they received help against them. The Hagrites and all who were with them were handed over to them, because they cried out to God in battle. God granted their prayer because they trusted in him.<sup>21</sup> They seized their livestock: 50,000 of their camels, 250,000 sheep and goats, 2,000 donkeys, and 100,000 captives.<sup>22</sup> Many died, because God fought the battle. They lived there in place of the inhabitants until the exile.

Epher, Ishi, Eliel, Azriel, Jeremiah, Hodaviah, and Jahdiel—mighty warriors, famous men, heads of their households.

<sup>25</sup>But they were unfaithful to the God of their ancestors and faithlessly followed the gods of the peoples of the land, whom God had destroyed before them.<sup>26</sup> As a result, Israel's God stirred up the spirit of Assyria's King Pul, otherwise known as Assyria's King Tilgath-pilneser, who led the Reubenites, the Gadites, and half the tribe of Manasseh into exile, and brought them to Halah, Habor, Hara, and the Gozan River, where they remain to this day.

Ethnic Outsiders in the Chronicler's Genealogies As a genre, genealogies might look like objective presentations of the past that rise above any contemporary concern. However, the Chronicler's genealogies can be read as responding to the issues of the day. An example of this is the treatment of non-Israelites within the genealogies of 1 Chronicles 1–9. According to the books of Ezra and Nehemiah (writings close in time to the books of Chronicles), marriage with foreign women brings great risk to the nation by polluting the “holy descendants” (the Hebrew expression is “holy seed”; Ezra 9:2; see also Neh 10:30). Such intermarriage isn't nearly as troubling for the author of Chronicles, however, as shown by the integration of different ethnicities in the genealogical record of the nation of Israel. For instance, the author records without criticism six instances of marriage with non-Israelites within Judah's line alone (including Judah's Canaanite wife, Bathshua, in 1 Chron 2:3; the marriage of David's sister Abigail to Jether the Ishmaelite in 1 Chron 2:17; and the marriage of Sheshan's daughter to Jarha the Egyptian in 1 Chron 2:34–35). This openness toward ethnic outsiders continues after the first nine chapters of genealogies with, for instance, the notation that David's fighting forces were strengthened by Ahohites, Hittites, and Moabites (1 Chron 11:12, 41, 46). In the Chronicler's presentation of Israel's history, intermarriage isn't a problem demanding a harsh response but an opportunity for the nation to grow and become stronger.

5:20 he granted their prayer: As in the account of Jabez's petition (1 Chron 4:9–10), the author emphasizes the power of prayer to God. See also 2 Chronicles 15:11–15 and sidebar, “God's Response to Prayer in Chronicles” at 1 Chron 17.

5:22 until the exile: For this version of the deportation by the Assyrians, see 1 Chronicles 5:6.

5:23–26 Alongside Gad and Reuben, part of the tribe of Manasseh settled east of the Jordan River (Num 32:33–42). For the genealogy of the part of Manasseh that settled west of the Jordan, see 1 Chronicles 7:14–19.

5:26 A reference back to the notice of exile in 1 Chronicles 5:6. These two notices to the tribe's deportation frame the account of their effective prayer to God in the midst of battle (1 Chron 5:18–22). In this presentation, God rewards the request of the faithful and punishes misdeeds.

6:1–81 Israel's family line, begun in 1 Chronicles 2:1–2, continues with a detailed account of Levi and the lineage of his three sons. In terms of length, Levi's genealogy is second only to that of Judah, which extends from 1 Chronicles 2:3–4:23. As an additional indication of the high status in which the Chronicler holds the tribe, Levi is presented center stage, right in the middle of the other accounts of the tribes of Israel. For other accounts of the family line of Levi, see Exodus 6:16–25 and Numbers 3:17–37.

6:1–15 This section traces the line of Levi through that of Kohath, the middle son and forefather of Aaron. The descendants of Aaron through the line of his grandson Phinehas were the high priests of Israel (1 Chron 6:49–53; cf. 6:18, 22–28, 33–38; 23:12–20).

6:3 Aaron, Moses, and Miriam: For additional mention of Moses and Miriam along with Aaron in biblical texts, see Numbers 12:1; 26:59; and Micah 6:4.

These are the Levites' clans according to their fathers:

<sup>29</sup>Merari's family: Mahli, his son Libni, his son Shimei, his son Uzzah, <sup>30</sup>his son Shimea, his son Haggiah, and his son Asaiah.

Levitical singers

Zadok's lineage isn't as clear in other biblical accounts, the author of Chronicles makes his linkage to Aaron explicit in this family tree.

6:10-15 Johanan (6:10) . . . Jehozadak (6:15): By including mention of the historical circumstances associated with Johanan and Jehozadak, the author charts the changing fortunes of the community from its highpoint (Solomon's temple in Jerusalem) through its low point (deportation to Babylon).

6:16-30 The line of regular Levites descending from Gershom, Kohath, and Merari (as distinct from that of the high priestly family descending from Kohath through Aaron's grandson Phinehas, given above in 1 Chron 6:1-15). For similar lists, see Exodus 6:16-29 and Numbers 3:17-20.

6:17 Gershom's family: For Levi's line through his oldest son Gershom, see also 1 Chronicles 6:20-21, 39-43, 23:7-11.

6:18 Kohath's family: For Levi's line through his middle son Kohath, see note on 1 Chronicles 6:1-15.

6:19 Merari's family: For Levi's line through his youngest son, Merari, see also 1 Chronicles 6:29-30, 44-47; 23:21-23. 6:20-21 Gershom: See note on 1 Chronicles 6:17.

6:22-28 For Levi's line through his middle son Kohath, see note on 1 Chronicles 6:1-15. Amminadab: not mentioned in the list of Kohath's sons in 1 Chronicles 6:2 or 18.

6:28 Samuel's family: With the incorporation of Samuel's line into the family of the Kohathites, the prophet associated with the reigns of Saul and David is given levitical status (this position isn't clear in other presentations of Samuel's lineage such as in 1 Sam 1:1 or 1 Sam 8:2). Clarification of Samuel's status is significant because it means that the leadership at the Shiloh temple conforms to appropriate instruction (Num 18 states that all priests must be Levites). In addition, it gives added authority to Samuel's role in anointing the future kings of Israel.

6:29-30 For Levi's line through his youngest son, Merari, see note on 1 Chronicles 6:19.

6:31-49 The institution of the levitical singers is here attributed to David. This connection with David isn't found in Samuel or Kings. For the author's version of David assigning this task after the sacred chest was placed in Jerusalem, see 1 Chronicles 16:4-6, 41.

6:32 the meeting tent: the temporary structure built by Moses for use in the wilderness (Exod 39:32; 40:2, 6, 29).

6:33-38 For the line of Kohath, see note on 1 Chronicles 6:1-15.

6:39-43 For Levi's line through his oldest son, Gershom, see note on 1 Chronicles 6:16-30.

Priests from Aaron's line

<sup>49</sup>Aaron and his sons sacrificed on the altar for entirely burned offerings and on the altar for incense, doing all the work of the holiest place, to make reconciliation for Israel, just as Moses, God's servant, had commanded.

Levitical cities

men represents the relative significance of their families in the workings of the worship institution. Heman from the line of Kohath (the second son of Levi and father of the high priests) is in focus in the middle. On either side of him are representatives from the two other sons of Levi: Asaph from the line of the eldest, Gershom, on the right, and Ethan from the line of the youngest, Merari, on the left.

6:44-47 For Levi's line through his youngest son, Merari, see note on 1 Chronicles 6:19.

6:48 the Levites were dedicated to all the services: This statement amounts to a brief summary of the function of the Levites (with a brief summary of the priests' role to follow in the next verse). the dwelling for God's house: With this simple phrase, the author links the wilderness tent stories with the Jerusalem temple stories.

6:49 sacrificed on the altar... to make reconciliation for Israel: Like the brief summary of the role of the Levites in the previous verse, this lays out a short description of the function of the priests.

6:50-53 Aaron's line continues that of his grandfather, the middle son of Levi (1 Chron 6:1). The descendants of Aaron, through the line of his grandson Phinehas, were the high priests of Israel (1 Chron 6:3-15).

6:54-81 According to tradition, the Levites weren't given ownership of a particular territory as were the other tribes. Rather, they lived in levitical cities (refuge cities,

Issachar's line

7 Issachar's family: Tola, Puah, Jashub, and Shimron—four in all.

<sup>3</sup>Uzzi's family: Izrahiah; and Izrahiah's family—Michael, Obadiah, Joel, and Isshiah—five in all, and all of them leaders. <sup>4</sup>According to the family records of their households, they had 36,000 troops in the units of their fighting force, since they had many wives and children. <sup>5</sup>Their relatives from all of Issachar's clans were 87,000 mighty warriors, all listed in the family records.

Lines of Benjamin and Naphtali

<sup>8</sup>Becher's family: Zemirah, Joash, Eliezer, Elioenai, Omri, Jeremoth, Abijah, Anathoth, and Alemeth. These were all Becher's family. <sup>9</sup>As listed in their family records by generation, as heads of their households, mighty warriors, there were 22,200.

Bilhan's family: Jeush, Benjamin, Ehud, Chenaanah, Zethan, Tarshish, and Ahishahar. <sup>11</sup>All these were Jediael's family, heads of their households, and mighty warriors. There were 17,200 ready for battle. <sup>12</sup>The Shuppites and Huppites were Ir's family, and the Hushites were Aher's family.

<sup>13</sup>Naphtali's family: Jahziel, Guni, Jezer, and Shallum. These were Bilhan's family.

Manasseh's line

6:57, 66). These were settlements scattered throughout the geographical holdings of the other tribes (Josh 21:1-42).

7:1-40 Israel's family line continues with the northern tribes on the west side of the Jordan River: Issachar, Benjamin and Naphtali, Manasseh, Ephraim, and Asher.

7:1-5 Issachar's family: The account of Issachar's line emphasizes the tribe's military might. The genealogies of other tribes such as Benjamin and Asher are treated similarly in 1 Chronicles 7:6-12 and 30, perhaps indicating that these records originated as a military census.

7:6-12 The lineage of the tribe of Benjamin is dealt with more fully in 1 Chronicles 8 (and parts of it will be repeated in 1 Chron 9:25-44). These genealogies are very different from the accounts given in Numbers 26:38-39 and Genesis 46:21.

7:13 The description of Naphtali's line is extremely short in comparison with the other tribes. In addition to Naphtali, Israel and Bilhan (Leah's servant) had another son, Dan, but information on his line is missing in 1 Chronicles.

7:14-19 Manasseh's family: This genealogy details the part of Joseph's line through his son Manasseh that settled on the west side of the Jordan River. (For the part that settled on the east of the Jordan River, see 1 Chron 5:23-24.) As with the account of Benjamin given above (1 Chron 7:6-12), this version of Manasseh's family is very different from those given in other biblical accounts such as Numbers 26:29-34 and Joshua 17:1-3.

7:14 his Aramean secondary wife: As in other genealogical summaries (1 Chron 2:3, 17, 34), the integration of non-Israelite spouses is recorded without critique, in stark contrast to the attitude adopted in the books of Ezra and Nehemiah.

7:15 Zelophehad, who had only daughters: For the story of how Zelophehad's line continued through his daughters, see Numbers 27:1-11; 36:1-12; Joshua 17:3.

Ephraim's line

Asher's line

<sup>40</sup>All these were Asher's family, heads of households, select mighty warriors, the heads of the princes. Those ready for battle listed in the records numbered 26,000.

Benjamin's line

O Benjamin was the father of Bela his oldest son, Ashbel his second son, Aharah the third, <sup>2</sup>Nohah the fourth, and Rapha the fifth.

7:20-29 Joseph's line through his son Ephraim.

7:21-23 In this story of the theft of cattle from Gath, there is the implication that Ephraim lived in the land of Israel and that his sons were born there. In other biblical accounts, however, Ephraim and his sons are born in Egypt (Gen 41:50-52; 48:5; 50:23). Such a presentation of Ephraim's family fits with the Chronicler's emphasis on the continued presence of the nation of Israel in the land.

7:23 Beriah: In Hebrew, this name is related to the noun "evil." Similar to Jabez (1 Chron 4:9-10), Beriah possesses a name that memorializes unfortunate events.

7:24 This remarkable achievement of Sheerah is unrecorded in other biblical texts. Although her name is preserved in one of the cities that she founded, its current identity is unknown. For a record of other people constructing cities, see Genesis 4:17 (where Enoch builds the city of Enoch); Genesis 10:11-12 (Nimrod builds Nineveh, Rehoboth-ir, Caleh, and Resen); Judges 1:26 (the refugee from Bethel-Luz builds a city in the land of the Hittites); 1 Kings 16:34 (Hiel of Bethel builds Jericho); and 1 Chronicles 8:12 (the sons of Elpaal build Ono and Lod).

7:27 Nun, and his son Joshua: In line with the Chronicler's emphasis on the nation's long-standing connection to the land, reference to Joshua's role in the conquest of the land isn't mentioned here (see Josh 1).

7:30-40 The line of Asher's family is found in different versions in Genesis 46:17 and Numbers 26:44-47.

8:1-40 The line of Benjamin was also set out in a briefer form in 1 Chronicles 7:6-12 and parts of it will be repeated in 1 Chronicles 9:35-44 (for other versions, see Gen 46:21 and Num 26:38-39). Given the favorable emphasis on David by the Chronicler, this focus on the line Saul and Jonathan came from might surprise the reader (only Judah and Levi have longer genealogical presentations). Indeed, by continuing the lineage up until the exile (1 Chron 8:35-38), the author preserves a tradition unknown in other sources. Maybe this prominence of the line of Benjamin in the text reflects their relative influence during the time of the Chronicler. The relative strength of the house also defends David

<sup>33</sup>Ner was the father of Kish, Kish was the father of Saul, and Saul was the father of Jonathan, Malchishua, Abinadab, and Esh-baal.

<sup>39</sup>His brother Eshek's family: Ulam his oldest, Jeush the second, and Eliphelet the third. <sup>40</sup>Ulam's family were mighty warriors and archers, having many children and grandchildren—150 in all and all were Benjaminites.

9 So all Israel was listed in the official records of Israel's kings.

from claims that he and his family cut short the line of Saul.

8:6-7 exile: here means deportation to another city within Israel.

8:28, 32 Jerusalem: on the border of Benjamin and Judah, and inhabited by members of several tribes (e.g., 1 Chron 9:3).

8:33-40 Saul's family is traced over 12 generations.

8:33-34 The author preserves what is probably the original name of Esh-baal ("man of Baal"), presented as "Ishbosheth" ("man of shame") in 2 Samuel 2:8, 4:1-12; as well as Merib-baal ("Baal contends"), presented as "Mephibosheth" ("one who spreads shame") in 2 Samuel 4:4; 9; 16:1-4. The versions of the names in the book of Samuel may reflect a desire to suppress any mention of Baal worship within Israel and to pass judgment on the line of Saul.

9:1-3 Although the exile lasted over 40 years, the Chronicler never dwells on this period, mentioning the event only a few times in the entire book (1 Chron 6:15; 2 Chron 36:20-21). In 9:1, the period is summarized very briefly and the focus quickly turns to the story of return and resettlement. Strikingly, in this account only Judah goes into exile, although mention is made of the exile of three other tribes (Reuben, Gad, and half the tribe of Manasseh) during the days of Pul (Tiglath-Pileser) in 1 Chronicles 5:22, 25-26. unfaithfulness: This term is a central concept for the Chronicler, identified as the basis for divine punishments such as the exile (here and in 2 Chron 36:14) and the downfall of Saul (1 Chron 10:13).

9:2 resettle: With this strategic term, the author emphasizes that the post-exilic period is in strict continuity with earlier times.

Judah and Benjamin

<sup>4</sup>Uthai son of Ammihud son of Omri son of Imri son of Bani from the family of Perez, Judah's son.

<sup>8</sup>Ibneiah, Jeroham's son; Elah son of Uzzi son of Michri; Meshullam son of Shephatiah son of Reuel son of Ibnijah; <sup>9</sup>and their relatives in their line of descent—956 in all. All of these were heads of their households.

Priests and Levites

<sup>10</sup>From the priests: Jedaiah, Jehoiarib, Jachin, <sup>11</sup>and Azariah son of Hilkiah son of Meshullam son of Zadok son of Meraioth son of Ahitub the leader of God's house; <sup>12</sup>Adaiah son of Jeroham son of Pashhur son of Malchijah; Maasai son of Adiel son of Jahzerah son of Meshullam son of Meshillemith son of Immer; <sup>13</sup>and their relatives, heads of their households, 1,760 capable men for the religious work of God's house.

<sup>14</sup>From the Levites: Shemaiah son of Hasshub son of Azrikam son of Hashabiah, from Merari's family; <sup>15</sup>Bakbakkar, Heresh, Galal, and Mattaniah son of Mica son of Zichri son of Asaph; <sup>16</sup>Obadiah son of Shemaiah son of Galal son of Jeduthun; and Berechiah son of Asa son of Elkanah, who lived in the settlements of the Netophathites.

Gatekeepers

<sup>22</sup>All those selected as gatekeepers at the entrances were two hundred twelve. They were listed in the family records by their settlements. David and Samuel the seer assigned them to their trusted position. <sup>23</sup>So they and their descendants were the gatekeepers guarding the LORD's house, that is, the tent. <sup>b</sup> <sup>24</sup>The gatekeepers were on the four sides: east, west, north, and south. <sup>25</sup>Their relatives came in from their settlements, from time to time, to assist them for a period of seven days. <sup>26</sup>Due to their trustworthiness, the four master gatekeepers, who were Levites, were in charge of the rooms and the treasuries of God's house. <sup>27</sup>They would spend the night patrolling God's house since they had guard duty and were responsible for unlocking it every morning. <sup>28</sup>Some of them were responsible for the worship objects; they counted them when they were brought in and taken out. <sup>29</sup>Others were appointed over the furniture, the holy equipment, the flour, wine, oil, incense, and spices. <sup>30</sup>Some of the priests

9:3 Those settling in Jerusalem: The Chronicler's emphasis on Jerusalem as the central place for all Israel is seen in this mention of the destination of portions from the tribes of Judah, Benjamin, Ephraim, and Manasseh upon their return from exile in Babylon. The city's role as the center for the nation is shown by its immediate reoccupation, and by its population consisting of tribes from both the south and the north. The author names four tribes here, and includes the Levites as well in 1 Chronicles 9:34 (note that a similar list in Neh 11:3-24 doesn't include Ephraim and Manasseh).

9:10-34 Along with a return of the northern and southern tribes to Jerusalem, the author emphasizes that the proper personnel, both priests and Levites, are also present to ensure the correct functioning of worship practices.

9:11 the leader of God's house: seems to be another way of speaking about the high priest, whose lineage was given in 1 Chronicles 6:12-15.

9:17-26 In Chronicles, gatekeepers are Levites. In other texts, however, priests also guard the temple (2 Kgs 12:9; 23:4; 25:18; Jer 35:4).

9:22 David and Samuel the seer: According to 1 Samuel 25:1; 28:3, Samuel had died before David came to rule as king, so the appearance of his name is surprising here. Since the Chronicler presents him as a member of the family of Levites (1 Chron 6:28, 33), perhaps he is mentioned as a model of dedicated service to God.

9:30 Within a section detailing the tasks of the Levites, the Chronicler reserves the role of preparing the spices to the priests (see Exod 30:22-33).

1Sa 31:1-13

blended the ointment for the spices;<sup>31</sup> and Mattithiah, one of the Levites, the oldest son of Shallum the Korahite, was entrusted with baking the flat cakes.<sup>32</sup> Also some of their Kohathite relatives were responsible for preparing the stacks of bread for each Sabbath.<sup>33</sup> The singers were the heads of the households of the Levites. They lived in temple rooms and were free from other service because they were on duty day and night.<sup>34</sup> These were the heads of the households of the Levites, according to descent. They lived in Jerusalem.

Saul's family

Zimri was the father of Moza.<sup>43</sup> Moza was the father of Binea; Rephaiah was his son, Eleasah was his son, and Azel was his son.<sup>44</sup> Azel had six sons whose names were Azrikam, Bocheru, Ishmael, Sheariah, Obadiah, and Hanan. This was Azel's family.

Saul's death

10 When the Philistines attacked the Israelites, the Israelites ran away from the Philistines, and many fell dead on Mount Gilboa.<sup>2</sup> The Philistines overtook Saul and his sons, and they killed his sons Jonathan, Abinadab, and Malchishua.<sup>3</sup> The battle was fierce around Saul, and when the archers located him, he trembled in fear.<sup>4</sup> Saul said to his armor-bearer, "Draw your sword and kill me with it! Otherwise, these uncircumcised men will come and kill me or torture me." But his armor-bearer refused because he was terrified. So Saul took the sword and impaled himself on it.<sup>5</sup> When the armor-bearer saw that Saul was dead, he also impaled himself on his sword and died with Saul.<sup>6</sup> So Saul and his three sons died; his whole household died together.<sup>7</sup> When all the Israelites who were in the valley saw that the army had run away and that Saul and his sons were dead, they abandoned their towns and fled. So the Philistines came to live in them.

9:31 flat cakes: This term is unique within the OT, used nowhere else. It is likely that they were made from the flour named in 1 Chronicles 9:29, and may be similar to the cakes made from the grain offering and baked on the griddle by priests (Lev 6:19-21).

9:32 stacks of bread for each Sabbath: In other biblical texts, the high priest is to replace the 12 loaves of bread placed before God in two rows on the altar every Sabbath. The old bread is then eaten by the priests within the holy place (Lev 24:5-9). Here the Chronicler assigns this duty to the Levites.

9:34 They lived in Jerusalem: In keeping with the focus on Jerusalem throughout the book, the Chronicler emphasizes that the Levites lived in Jerusalem. This closing of the section detailing the tasks of the priests and Levites links back to the beginning of the chapter where members of four additional tribes are said to have settled in Jerusalem: Judah, Benjamin, Ephraim, and Manasseh (see 1 Chron 9:3).

9:35-44 Beginning with the ancestor Jeiel from the tribe of Benjamin, the line of Saul is traced through his eldest son, Jonathan, to the post-exilic period. Positioning Saul's line at the end of chapter 9 anticipates his story in the next chapter. A similar genealogical record is found in 1 Chronicles 8:29-38.

10:1-14 Having just restated the genealogy of Saul's family (1 Chron 9:35-44; cf. 8:29-38), the author proceeds to tell of his death in battle. Much of this material is also found in 1 Samuel 31, although it appears in that text only after a very lengthy description of Saul's rule as king. In 1 Chronicles, the life of Saul is collapsed into a brief report about his final hours—by the fourth verse, the king has died. Significantly, more than twice as many verses relating his life are concerned with the report of his death and that of his family line, the desecration of his body, and the theological justification for his punishment (1 Chron 10:6-14). By beginning the long narrative section of Chronicles with this short story of Saul's death, the author sets the scene for the very favorable presentation of the long and fruitful reign of David.

10:1 The Philistines were traditional rivals of the Israelites, living close by in the area between Israel's western border and the Mediterranean Sea.

10:6 his whole household died: Much of the story of Saul's final battle on Mount Gilboa is taken from the account in 1 Samuel 31, but the Chronicler makes a key change by adding that his entire family died on that day. Technically, this addition is contradicted by other parts of 1 Chronicles. The genealogy of Saul continues another twelve generations in 1 Chronicles 9:39-44, and his daughter Michal is associated with David's court in 1 Chronicles 15:29. But in the death of Saul the author emphasizes that his royal dynasty has come to an end and that there is now no legitimate rival to David's monarchy.

<sup>8</sup>The next day when the Philistines came to strip the dead, they found Saul and his sons lying dead on Mount Gilboa. <sup>9</sup>They stripped him, carried off his head and armor, and sent messengers throughout the land of the Philistines to spread the news to their idols and to the people. <sup>10</sup>They placed his armor in their god's temple and displayed his skull on a pole in the temple of Dagon.

<sup>11</sup>When all the people of Jabesh-gilead heard all that the Philistines had done to Saul, <sup>12</sup>all their warriors arose and recovered the corpses of Saul and his sons. They brought them back to Jabesh, buried their bones under the oak in Jabesh, and fasted for seven days.

<sup>13</sup>Saul died because he was unfaithful to the LORD and hadn't followed the LORD's word. He even consulted a medium for guidance. <sup>14</sup>He didn't consult the LORD, so the LORD killed him and gave the kingdom to David, Jesse's son.

All Israel makes David king

11 All the Israelites gathered around David at Hebron. "We're your own flesh and blood," they said. <sup>2</sup>"In the past, even when Saul ruled over us, you were the one who led Israel. The LORD your God told you, 'You will shepherd my people Israel, and you will become a leader over my people Israel.'" <sup>3</sup>So all of Israel's elders came to the king at Hebron, and David made a covenant with them before the LORD. They anointed David to make him king over Israel, just as the LORD had promised through Samuel.

David captures Jerusalem

<sup>4</sup>Then David and all Israel marched to Jerusalem, that is, Jebus, where the Jebusites lived. <sup>5</sup>The people who lived in Jebus told David, "You'll never get in here!"

But David captured the mountain fortress of Zion, which became David's City. <sup>6</sup>David had said, "The first one to kill a Jebusite will become commander in chief!" Joab, Zeruiah's son, was the first to attack and so became commander in chief. <sup>7</sup>David occupied the fortress, so

10:9-10 The treatment of Saul's body by the Philistines mirrors the story of David and Goliath as retold in the Samuel narratives. When the young boy killed the Philistine champion, he cut off his head, brought it to Jerusalem, and placed the armor in his own tent (1 Sam 17:51, 54). Now in the Chronicler's work, the assertion of triumph through physical disrespect comes to Israel from the Philistines. This story in 1 Chronicles 10 also calls to mind another account from 1 Samuel, which relates the capture of the Lord's sacred chest by the Philistines. As a sign of triumph, the Philistines placed the chest in the temple of their god Dagon. However, as a sign of the ultimate power of God, the statue of Dagon was repeatedly found fallen on its face in the presence of the chest (1 Sam 5:1-5).

10:11-12 all the people of Jabesh-gilead: Their involvement signals the complete reversal of Saul's fate. Although the Chronicler doesn't include the story, 1 Samuel 11 relates when Nahash the Ammonite threatened to gouge out the right eye of all of the townspeople if they didn't enter into a treaty with him. Saul organized Israel and Judah to defend the city, and after they won, the people made Saul king. Now after his death, those saved by Saul retrieve and tend to his broken body and those of his sons.

10:13-14 Saul died because: The Chronicler gives the reason for Saul's death: His disobedience resulted in God's punishment. According to the author, Saul's wrongdoing included both a particular deed as well as a persistent attitude. In being unfaithful and not having followed the Lord's word, he showed repeated disobedience to God. Although the full story is only implied here, consulting the medium at Endor is named as a specific incident of sin (1 Sam 28:6-14). According to the strict requirements of the author, Saul is guilty and his sins require divine punishment. In this account, it comes by the hand of God: the Lord killed him. And in this same act of destruction God moves to rebuild: and gave the kingdom to David.

11:1-3 In their speech immediately before they anoint him king, the Israelites provide two reasons for their choice of David, one political and one theological. First, David has been functioning as the people's leader even when Saul was king. They give no direct evidence for this, but the Chronicler will soon provide flashbacks by illustrating David's military leadership during the time of Saul (1 Chron 11:13-14; 12:1-2, 15). Second, they quote a divine oracle indicating God's choice of David to be Israel's leader and shepherd.

11:4-9 As in the source material from 2 Samuel 5, the Chronicler follows the declaration of David as king over the nation with an account of the capture of Jerusalem. This allows the author to link David with the city at the very beginning of his reign. The strong bond between the king and Jerusalem will be highlighted throughout the book. The particular emphases of the author are also seen in some small but crucial changes made to the source material. In 2 Samuel 5:6, it's the king and his troops who take the city. According to 11:4, however, David leads all Israel in the charge. This dramatically changes the import of the account: The victory over the Jebusites is now not a private act of David's personal fighting force but rather a national victory in which the entire nation participates. With such a conquest, Jerusalem takes its place as a city connected to all the tribes. (See sidebar, "Comparing Two Versions of David Becoming King.")

11:4 Jebus: Within the Bible, this is the name for the city of Jerusalem before it came under Israelite control (Judg 19:10-11). Because it wasn't claimed as part of the territory of any of the 12 tribes, it's a politically neutral geography over which no tribe has greater or lesser power.

11:6 Joab, Zeruiah's son: According to 1 Chronicles 2:16, Joab is David's nephew (the son of his sister Zeruiah). Thus

Comparing Two Versions of David Becoming King In the Samuel narrative, David achieves his kingship over the nation in two steps separated by a power struggle with other rivals to the throne. After the death of Saul, he settles in the southern town of Hebron and is acclaimed king over Judah (2 Sam 2:1-4). Then, after a long war between the house of David and the remaining house of Saul, the northern tribes journey to Hebron and anoint him king over Israel (2 Sam 5:1-5). Following this, David and his men conquer Jerusalem and set it up as the capital for both Israel and Judah. The Chronicler presents a significantly different version of David's ascension in 1 Chronicles 11:1-3, making key changes that put the king in better light. The changes are primarily in the form of deletions. Absent from Chronicles is the story of Judah's acclamation of David as king, as well as the fighting between the heirs of David and Saul. In the Chronicler's version, Saul and his house die, and then "all the Israelites" acclaim David king at Hebron (1 Chron 11:1-3, 9). By omitting the events between the death of Saul and David's anointing by Israel, the transition to his kingship seems immediate and straightforward. The shortened version effectively shores up David's reputation. He engages in no messy power struggles with potential rivals but rather is immediately recognized by the entire people as the proper king.

it was renamed David's City. <sup>8</sup>He also built up the city on all sides, including its own foundations and the surrounding areas, while Joab restored the rest of the city. <sup>9</sup>David grew increasingly powerful, and the LORD of heavenly forces was with him.

David and his warriors

<sup>10</sup>These are the commanders of David's warriors who continued to support him while he was king. Together with all Israel, they made him king, as the LORD had promised Israel. <sup>11</sup>This is the list of David's warriors:

Jashobeam, a Hacmonite, was commander of the Thirty. He raised his spear against eight hundred, killing them on a single occasion.

<sup>12</sup>Next in command came Eleazar, Dodo's son the Ahohite, who was one of the three warriors. <sup>13</sup>He was with David at Pas-dammim. The Philistines were gathered there for battle, where part of a field was full of barley. When the people ran away from the Philistines, <sup>14</sup>he and David stood in the middle of the field, held their ground, and defeated the Philistines. So the LORD achieved a great victory.

<sup>15</sup>Three of the thirty commanders went down from the rock to David at the fortress* of Adullam, while the army of the Philistines camped in the Rephaim Valley. <sup>16</sup>At that time David was in the fortress, and a Philistine fort was in Bethlehem. <sup>17</sup>David had a craving and said, "If only someone could give me a drink of water from the well by the gate in Bethlehem." <sup>18</sup>So the three warriors broke through the Philistine camp and drew water from the well by the gate in Bethlehem and brought it back to David. But he refused to drink it and poured it out to the LORD.

<sup>19</sup>"God forbid that I should do that," he said. "Isn't this the blood of men who risked their lives?" So he refused to drink it. Since they had brought it at the risk of their lives, David refused to drink it.

These were the kinds of things the three warriors did.

<sup>20</sup>Abishai, Joab's brother, was chief of the Thirty.<sup>f</sup> He raised his spear against the three hundred men he had slain, but he wasn't considered one of the Three. <sup>21</sup>He was the most famous of the Thirty. He became their commander, but he wasn't among the Three.

<sup>22</sup>Benaiah, Jehoiada's son from Kabzeel, was a hero who performed great deeds. He killed two of Moab's leaders,<sup>g</sup> and on a snowy day went down into a pit where he killed a lion.

Joab's attack on Jerusalem provides another close link between David (and his family) and the city.

11:8 He also built up the city. David's connection with Jerusalem includes not only military victory but also architectural projects that strengthen the city.

11:10-47 Following the account of the capture of Jerusalem, the Chronicler provides a list of David's fighting men. The material comes from 2 Samuel 23:8-39, where it appears as an appendix to the story of David's reign. In its new context, the list now indicates the widespread support for David, not as something gained throughout time but as present from the very beginning of his reign. The list also gives the narrator a way to include stories about David before his ascension to the throne without clouding the straightforward presentation at the beginning of the chapter.

11:15-19 This story, taken from 2 Samuel 23:13-17, shines a light on the characters of both David and his soldiers. By risking everything to go behind enemy lines and return with water for their leader, the three warriors demonstrate their bravery, skill, and devotion to their leader. David demonstrates that his loyalty to his army and devotion to God come ahead of his own personal desires.

<sup>23</sup>He also killed an Egyptian seven and a half feet tall, who was holding a spear like a weaver's beam. Benaiah went down to him with a club, grabbed the spear from the Egyptian's hand, and killed him with it. <sup>24</sup>These were the exploits of Benaiah, Jehoiada's son; he wasn't considered one of the three warriors. <sup>25</sup>He was famous among the Thirty, but didn't become one of the Three. David placed him in command of his own bodyguard.

<sup>14</sup>These Gadites were military officers, the least of them ready to fight a hundred and the greatest a thousand. <sup>15</sup>These are the ones who crossed the Jordan in the first month, when it was overflowing all its banks, and chased away everyone living in the valleys to the east and the west.

<sup>16</sup>Some Benjaminites and Judahites also came to David at the fortress. <sup>17</sup>David went out to meet them and said to them, "If you've come to me with good intentions in order to help me, then we will join forces. But if you've come to betray me to my enemies, though I've done no wrong, then may our ancestors' God see it and punish you."

David, we are yours;

and on your side, Jesse's son!

May it go very well for you, and may it go well for whoever helps you!

Yes, your God has helped you.

Then David received them, and put them at the head of his troops.

<sup>19</sup>Some of the Manassites also joined David when he came with the Philistines for the battle against Saul. But he<sup>a</sup> didn't help them, because after considering the matter, the Philistine rulers sent him away. "He'll rejoin his master Saul," they said, "and it will cost us our heads." <sup>20</sup>When he went to Ziklag some joined him from Manasseh: Adnah, Jozabad, Jediahel, Michael, Jozabad, Elihu, and Zillethai, leaders of units of a thousand in Manasseh.

the time when Saul still reigned and David was amassing more and more support from the different tribes. With this positioning, the author is able to convey several ideas that put David in a positive light. These include the claim that David's kingship was part of God's plan and not the result of the political maneuvers, power struggles, and intrigues presented in the Samuel narratives. In addition, David's kingship was based on the long-standing support of the people, arising not in a power vacuum after the death of Saul but begun even while Saul was still reigning as king. Finally, because the author presents David on the run from King Saul in a flashback only after he was hailed as king by all the people, the reader is given a perspective by which to evaluate the evidence. The readers see David at his political weakest only after they know that the story will end with success, so any potential that these stories might damage David's reputation is effectively minimized.

12:1-2 Ziklag: According to the account in Samuel, the town of Ziklag was given to David by Gath's King Achish as a place of refuge from King Saul (1 Sam 27:1-7). Because the town was in the territory of the Philistines, the situation is ironic—David finds safety and amasses support only after he has left Israel and fled into enemy territory. The irony is increased with the news that Saul's own relatives came to support David. For other notices of the archery skills of the Benjaminites, see Judges 3:15; 20:16.

12:3-7 Gibeah...Gibeon: Although not all of the geographical names in this list can be identified, some such as Gibeah and Gibeon are in Benjaminite territory. Gibeah was closely associated with Saul (1 Sam 11:4; 15:34).

12:8-18 Having moved back in time from David's ascension to the throne in Hebron (1 Chron 11) to his earlier residence at Ziklag (1 Chron 12:1-7), the narrator shifts back even earlier to describe David's stint in the desert. desert fortress: This stronghold is probably the one near Adullam, described in 1 Samuel 22:1, 4-5 and 1 Chronicles 11:15, but David also lived at other sites in the wilderness (1 Sam 23:14-18; 24:1). After telling of David's growing support from the tribes of Gad, Benjamin, and Judah, the narrator will move forward in time again, returning first to David's period at Ziklag (1 Chron 12:19-22) and ending back again at Hebron with David's coronation feast (1 Chron 12:23-40).

12:18 Then a spirit took hold: In the Hebrew idiom, a spirit "clothed" Amasai, and the term is used in Chronicles when people other than professional prophets receive God's word (2 Chron 24:20, see also Judg 6:34). By indicating that their solemn pledge of support has a heavenly source, the military leader asserts both human and divine support for David.

<sup>23</sup>These are the numbers of the commanders of those armed for battle who came to David in Hebron to make sure he took over Saul's kingdom, according to the LORD's word:

<sup>24</sup>from Judah, carrying shield and spear, 6,800 troops armed for battle;

<sup>29</sup>from Benjamin, Saul's relatives, 3,000, most of whom had been loyal to Saul's household;

<sup>31</sup>from half the tribe of Manasseh, 18,000, designated by name to come and make David king;

<sup>32</sup>from Issachar, those who understood the times and what Israel should do, 200 chiefs, with all their relatives under their command;

<sup>33</sup>from Zebulun, 50,000 experienced troops, armed for battle with all the weapons of war, to help with undivided loyalty;

<sup>34</sup>from Naphtali, 1,000 officers, as well as 37,000 armed with shield and spear;

<sup>37</sup>from the other side of the Jordan, the Reubenites, Gadites, and the other half of the tribe of Manasseh, 120,000 armed with all the weapons of war.

<sup>38</sup>All these men of war, armed<sup>1</sup> for battle, came to Hebron determined to make David king over all Israel, and all the rest of Israel were fully agreed to make David king. <sup>39</sup>They were there with David for three days, eating and drinking, while their relatives provided food for them. <sup>40</sup>Even their neighbors from as far away as Issachar, Zebulun, and Naphtali were bringing food by donkeys, camels, mules, and oxen. There was an abundance of flour, fig cakes, clusters of raisins, wine, oil, oxen, and sheep, because Israel was joyful.

David's first attempt to move the chest

13 After consulting with the captains of the units of a thousand and a hundred, in fact with every leader, <sup>2</sup>David said to the entire Israelite assembly: "If you approve, and if the LORD our God agrees, let's spread the word to the rest of our relatives in all the regions of Israel, including the priests and Levites in their cities with pasturelands. Let's ask them to join us <sup>3</sup>so that we may bring the chest of our God back to us, because we didn't look for

12:21 against the raiding bands: may refer to the struggle against the Amalekites who fought Ziklag when David was absent (1 Sam 30).

12:23-37 who came to David in Hebron: This list of David's supporters names all of the tribes of Israel, indicating that David's kingship was supported and celebrated by the entire nation. The list is organized geographically: beginning with the southern tribes (Judah, Simeon, Levi), it moves to the north (Benjamin, Ephraim, Manasseh, Issachar, Zebulun, Naphtali, Dan, Asher), then crosses the Jordan River and moves southward (Reuben, Gad, and half the tribe of Manasseh). By asserting that the tribes came to David, the author indicates that their defection from Saul was due not to being conquered by military action but rather to David's growing attractiveness among the people.

12:38-40 came to Hebron determined to make David king: After a series of flashbacks, the chapter ends by returning to the scene in 1 Chronicles 11:1-3. The coronation is a joyful time of food and fellowship for the entire nation.

13:1-14 The account of David's initial effort to transfer the sacred chest from Kiriath-jearim is a retelling of 2 Samuel 6, here put into a different historical context and told with different emphases. In the Samuel narrative, David first becomes king, then captures Jerusalem and fights against the Philistines before he turns his attention to the chest in an effort to consolidate his authority (2 Sam 5). In Chronicles, however, the transfer of the chest is the first priority for the newly anointed king, coming even before military defense. Although he won't be able to build the temple, David is nevertheless presented as a king who considers the task of tending to Israel's worship rituals to be of primary importance.

13:1-2 After consulting with: Although the initial motivation to relocate the sacred chest comes from David, the narrative emphasizes the direct involvement of the larger community, including every leader, and the entire Israelite assembly.

13:3 back to us: For the Chronicler, geography usually has religious implications. Here the chest isn't simply moving to a new locale but reclaiming its central position in the spiritual life of the people. We didn't look for it in Saul's days: another negative comparison between the time of <sup>5</sup>So David assembled all Israel, from the border<sup>m</sup> of Egypt to Lebo-hamath in order to bring up God's chest from Kiriath-jearim. <sup>6</sup>Then David and all Israel went up toward Baalah, to Kiriath-jearim, which belongs to Judah, to bring up from there the chest of God, the LORD, who sits enthroned on the winged creatures, where he is called by name.<sup>n</sup> <sup>7</sup>They moved God's chest on a new cart from Abinadab's house. Uzzah and Ahio were guiding the cart, <sup>8</sup>while David and all Israel celebrated in God's presence with all their strength, accompanied by songs, zithers, harps, tambourines, cymbals, and trumpets. <sup>9</sup>When they came to Chidon's threshing floor, Uzzah reached out to the chest and grabbed it because the oxen had stumbled. <sup>10</sup>But the LORD became angry with Uzzah and struck him because he had placed his hand on the chest. He died right there before God. <sup>11</sup>David was angry that the LORD lashed out at Uzzah; and so that place is still called Perez-uzzah today. <sup>12</sup>David was frightened by God that day. "How will I ever bring God's chest home to me?" he asked. <sup>13</sup>So David didn't take the chest away with him to David's City. Instead, he had it put in the house of Obed-edom the Gittite. <sup>14</sup>God's chest stayed with Obed-edom's household for three months, and the LORD blessed Obed-edom's household and all that he had.

David's kingship established in Jerusalem

14 Tyre's King Hiram sent messengers to David with cedar logs, bricklayers, and carpenters to build David a palace. <sup>2</sup>Then David knew that the LORD had established him as king over Israel, and that his kingship was held in great honor for the sake of his people Israel. <sup>3</sup>David married more secondary wives in Jerusalem and fathered more sons and daughters. <sup>4</sup>The names of his children in Jerusalem were as follows: Shammua, Shobab, Nathan, Solomon, <sup>5</sup>Ibhar, Elishua, Elpelet, <sup>6</sup>Nogah, Nepheg, Japhia, <sup>7</sup>Elishama, Beeliada, and Eliphelet.

David and the time of Israel's earlier king, highlighting the new day of religious faithfulness that David's leadership brought. The statement also connects back to the account of Saul's death in 1 Chronicles 10:14 where he is condemned because he didn't consult the Lord.

13:5 from the border of Egypt to Lebo-hamath: By designating this large amount of territory, the author highlights the sheer scope of the people involved in the transfer of God's chest. Unlike the account in 2 Samuel 6 where David is the main actor, this version emphasizes the involvement of all of the people, representing an impressive geographic reach. Kiriath-jearim: a town located within the territory of Judah, close to the border of Benjamin, and about six miles west-northwest of Jerusalem (Josh 15:9, 10, 60; 18:14; 1 Chron 2:50-51).

13:6 sits enthroned on the winged creatures: In the Bible the sacred chest is described as a box made of acacia wood, covered with gold, and either sitting upon or adorned with gold creatures (Heb kerubim) that have animal bodies and bird's wings. For the people of Israel, this object represented the presence of God in their midst, the place where God could meet with chosen human representatives such as Moses (Exod 25:10-22).

13:8 in God's presence: This short phrase establishes the intimate connection between God and the sacred chest.

13:9 because the oxen had stumbled: The author clearly points out that Uzzah's act involved no premeditated plan to violate the holiness of the divine chest.

13:10-11 He died right there before God: Because of the chest's connection with the presence of a holy God, any removal of the holiness (even if accidental) provokes punishment. Perez-uzzah means "Uzzah's lashing" or "outburst against Uzzah" and helps remember God's act against the man (see also 1 Chron 14:11).

13:12-14 Unsure if the death of Uzzah implies that God is unhappy with the plans to relocate the chest in Jerusalem, David decides to end the procession and install the sacred object with Obed-edom the Gittite. The divine blessing that comes to enrich the household suggests that the divine wrath concerned only Uzzah's action. Later in the book, the Chronicler records that God truly blessed Obed-edom with a large family (1 Chron 26:4-11).

14:1-17 While the sacred chest waits in the house of Obed-edom (1 Chron 13:13-14), the reader can't help but reflect on God's estimation of David. Does the disaster at Perez-uzzah (1 Chron 13:10-11) imply divine displeasure for Israel's newest king? Will God turn from David as from Saul? By inserting material from 2 Samuel 5:11-25 at this point in the narrative, the author reassures the audience that David is still divinely favored (King Hiram sends valuable gifts, David has many children and defeats the Philistines). It also sets up 1 Chronicles 15, where David and the nation again seek to move the chest into Jerusalem.

14:2 Then David knew that the Lord had established him as king over Israel: The material gifts that Hiram brings indicate to David that God hasn't rejected him for any potential missteps in moving the chest from Kiriath-jearim (1 Chron 13). In a skillful parallel between architecture and authority, the Chronicler indicates that along with the building materials for a palace comes the reassurance that God indeed still recognizes David as king.

14:3-7 The sense of divine blessing associated with Hiram's supplies for a physical house (1 Chron 14:1-2) is augmented with this list of David's own growing biological house (for other records of the king's family, see 1 Chron 3:1-9 and 2 Sam 5:13-16). David's situation contrasts with that of his predecessor Saul, who died with "his whole household" in the battle on Mount Gilboa

<sup>8</sup>When the Philistines heard that David had been anointed king over all Israel, they all marched up to find him. David heard this and went out to confront them. <sup>9</sup>The Philistines had invaded and were plundering the Rephaim Valley. <sup>10</sup>David asked God for advice: "Should I attack the Philistines, and will you hand them over to me?"

The LORD answered, "Attack them, and I'll definitely hand them over to you."

David prepares to bring the chest to Jerusalem

15 After he had built houses for himself in David's City, David prepared a place for God's chest and pitched a tent for it. <sup>2</sup>David said, "Only the Levites may carry God's chest, because the LORD has chosen them to carry the LORD's chest and to minister to him forever."

<sup>3</sup>David assembled all Israel in Jerusalem to bring the LORD's chest to the place he had prepared for it. <sup>4</sup>David also gathered Aaron's family and the Levites:

(1 Chron 10:6). The list of David's children functions not simply as a standard family tree but as a sign that God still supports the new king at a time when he may have felt particularly vulnerable.

14:8-17 After the reader hears of David's growing strength in Jerusalem, the focus shifts to the reaction of the Philistines. For the neighboring nation, David's newly consolidated power (king over all Israel in 14:8) is a threat that must be curtailed by military action.

14:9 Rephaim Valley: runs southwest from Jerusalem.

14:10 David asked God for advice: Besides David's flourishing family and assurance of God's support (1 Chron 14:1-4), another contrast to Saul is revealed by David's request for advice. According to the author, Saul died because he consulted a medium rather than God (1 Chron 10:13). The negative comparison between the two kings is made even stronger by the repetition of the same verb in 1 Chronicles 14:14 when David again "asked God's advice."

14:11 By my strength... God has burst out: David's response in victory shows his ultimate allegiance to God. Baal-perazim: means "master of outbursts." This reference to the explosive power of God is reminiscent of 1 Chronicles 13:10-11, where God struck Uzzah, and the area was re-named Perez-uzzah (which means "outburst against Uzzah").

14:12 David ordered them burned: The king's treatment of the Philistines' divine images is in contrast to the parallel account in 2 Samuel 5:21 where they are only carried off. David's more extreme reaction here is in keeping with the Chronicler's strong opposition to the worship of gods other than the Lord, and the removal of the images by burning follows Deuteronomy 7:5, 25.

14:13-17 David's second war with the Philistines enhances his reputation even more.

14:14 David again asked God's advice: See the note on 1 Chronicles 14:10.

14:16 from Gibeon all the way to Gezer: David's army fought them back from the area just north of Jerusalem (Gibeon) closer to the edge of the Philistines' traditional territory.

15:1-29 The divine blessing shown both to Obed-edom (1 Chron 13:14) and David (1 Chron 14) signals again that God's anger was directed only against Uzzah (1 Chron 13:10). Thus moving the sacred chest into Jerusalem can proceed, although with strategic changes in personnel to avoid any more mishaps.

15:1 After he had built houses for himself: The installation of the chest in Jerusalem is the highpoint among several building projects, including David's houses and the city's foundations (1 Chron 11:8).

15:2 Only the Levites may carry God's chest: David carefully designates the Levites as the only ones who might come in physical contact with the chest. This limitation is consistent with how Moses regulated transportation of the chest by the Levites (Deut 10:8).

15:3 all Israel in Jerusalem: Although David changed the procession to Jerusalem by allowing only the Levites to carry the chest, the emphasis on the full participation of the nation is retained (1 Chron 13:5).

15:5-10 This careful counting of the participating priests and Levites corresponds on a literary level with the care

<sup>11</sup>David called for the priests Zadok and Abiathar, and the Levites Uriel, Asaiah, Joel, Shemaiah, Eliel, and Amminadab. <sup>12</sup>He said to them, "You are the household heads of the Levites. Make yourselves holy, you and your brothers, and then bring the chest of the LORD, Israel's God, to the place I've prepared for it. <sup>13</sup>When you weren't with us the first time, the LORD our God burst out against us because we didn't ask his advice properly." <sup>14</sup>So the priests and the Levites made themselves holy to bring up the chest of the LORD, Israel's God. <sup>15</sup>The Levites carried God's chest with poles on their shoulders, just as Moses had commanded according to the LORD's word.

<sup>21</sup>Mattithiah, Eliphelehu, Mikneiah, Obed-edom, Jeiel, and Azaziah were to lead with lyres tuned to the Sheminitah.

<sup>24</sup>The priests Shebaniah, Joshaphat, Nethanel, Amasai, Zechariah, Benaiah, and Eliezer were to blow the trumpets before God's chest. Obed-edom and Jehiah also were to be gatekeepers for the chest.

David brings the chest to Jerusalem

<sup>25</sup>Then David, along with Israel's elders and the captains of the thousands, went with rejoicing to bring up the chest containing the LORD's covenant from Obed-edom's house. <sup>26</sup>Since God had helped the Levites who were carrying the chest containing the LORD's covenant, they sacrificed seven bulls and seven rams. <sup>27</sup>David wore a fine-linen robe, as did the singers, all the Levites who were carrying the chest, and Chenaniah, the leader of transportation.<sup>r</sup> David also wore a linen priestly vest.<sup>s</sup> <sup>28</sup>So all Israel brought up the chest containing the LORD's covenant with shouts of joy, accompanied by the blast of the ram's taken on the physical level to limit those permitted to carry the chest.

15:12-24 Stress on the careful deliberation that marked this journey of the sacred chest is indicated by two sets of instructions that are immediately carried out. David instructs the priests and the Levites to Make yourselves holy, which they directly proceed to do (15:14-15). Then David instructs the Levites to choose musicians from their number to accompany the procession, and again they immediately follow the royal command (15:17-24).

15:12 Make yourselves holy: The appropriate people must also undergo appropriate preparation. (For a similar emphasis on the holiness of those who transport the chest, see Josh 3:5-6 and 2 Chron 5:11.) No details are given here about what specific requirements made one holy, but other biblical texts specify that this can include the washing of clothes and abstinence from sex (Exod 19:10-15).

15:13 the LORD our God burst out against us: an explicit reminder of the death of Uzzah when he touched the chest during the last procession (1 Chron 13:10). A similar fear accompanies the appearance of God on Mount Sinai: The priests must maintain their purity lest God "break loose against them" (Exod 19:22).

15:15 just as Moses had commanded: See Numbers 7:9 for the Levites transporting the chest on their shoulders and Exodus 25:13-15 for the specifications about the poles.

15:16-24 As with the list of those who are to carry the chest (1 Chron 15:5-10), there is a similar carefulness regarding the musicians and gatekeepers. The attention to music in public worship is a theme throughout the books of Chronicles (1 Chron 15:28; 16:42; 2 Chron 5:13; 7:6; 23:13).

15:20 Alamoth: may be a technical term whose meaning is now unknown, or it may refer to a group of young women who had a role in the music of the temple (as in Ps 68:25).

15:25 went with rejoicing: Along with music (see 1 Chron 15:16-24), the author also frequently emphasizes joy in large worship events.

15:26 Since God had helped the Levites: In contrast to the source text of 2 Samuel 6:13, which doesn't explicitly mention any divine aid, the Chronicler emphasizes that horn, by trumpets and cymbals, and playing on harps and lyres. <sup>29</sup>As the chest containing the LORD's covenant entered David's City, Michal, Saul's daughter, looked out the window. When she saw King David leaping and dancing, she lost all respect for him.

16 They brought in God's chest and placed it inside the tent David had pitched for it. <sup>1</sup>Then they brought entirely burned offerings and well-being sacrifices before God. <sup>2</sup>When David had finished offering the entirely burned offerings and the well-being sacrifices, he blessed the people in the LORD's name <sup>3</sup>and distributed a loaf of bread, a piece of meat, <sup>4</sup>and a raisin cake to every Israelite man and woman.

David establishes worship

<sup>4</sup>David appointed some of the Levites to serve before the LORD's chest in order to remember, to give thanks, and to praise the LORD, Israel's God: <sup>5</sup>Asaph was the leader, and Zechariah his assistant; also Jeiel, Shemiramoth, Jehiel, Mattithiah, Eliab, Benaiah, Obed-edom, and Jeiel with harps and lyres; Asaph sounding the cymbals; <sup>6</sup>and the priests Benaiah and Jahaziel blowing trumpets regularly before the chest containing God's covenant. <sup>7</sup>On the same day, for the first time, David ordered Asaph and his relatives to give thanks to the LORD.

David's song of praise

- <sup>8</sup>Give thanks to the LORD, call on his name; make his deeds known to all people!
- <sup>9</sup>Sing to God, sing praises to him;
dwell on all his wondrous works!
- <sup>10</sup>Give praise to God's holy name!
Let the hearts rejoice of all those seeking the LORD!
- <sup>11</sup>Pursue the LORD and his strength;
seek his face always!
- <sup>12</sup>Remember the wondrous works he has done, all his marvelous works, and the justice he declared—

even correct protocols must be supplemented with the help of God.

15:29 Michal, Saul's daughter: Although the books of Chronicles have included extensive genealogies of the families of Saul and David (1 Chron 8:29-38; 9:35-44; 3:1-9; 14:3-7), this is the first mention of Saul's daughter Michal who became David's wife (1 Sam 18:20-29). Also absent in the Chronicler's account is any reason for Michal's contempt beyond David's enthusiastic dancing. According to the 2 Samuel 6 source, she is partially offended because, when he danced wearing only a linen priestly vest, he revealed his nakedness to the serving women (2 Sam 6:14, 20). But in this account, David protects his decency by wearing the vest and a robe (1 Chron 15:27). Thus her disregard for David here doesn't stem from neglect of public decency. With the narrator omitting any specific reason for her attitude, the reader is led to associate her position with that of Saul—a father and daughter who fail to properly appreciate God's sacred chest (1 Chron 13:3).

16:1-3 After a delay of at least three months (1 Chron 13:14), the chest is brought to Jerusalem and placed inside its temporary dwelling, the tent.

16:4-7 In the parallel story of 2 Samuel about the installation of the chest in Jerusalem, the celebrations end with David blessing the people and distributing the special food (2 Sam 6:18-19). The Chronicler extends this story by adding this description of David setting up the various religious functionaries who lead worship by the sacred chest. Inserting these verses highlights two features that are important to the author: the correct functioning of the worship practices (that is, the chest must be attended by the proper personnel) and its Davidic source (that is, the job descriptions of the priests and Levites were set by Israel's ancient king).

16:4 to remember, to give thanks, and to praise the LORD: The musical service of the Levites before the sacred chest includes singing about God's deeds (remembrance and thanksgiving) and God's attributes (praise). These are all reflected in the long prayer that follows (1 Chron 16:8-36).

16:5 Asaph was the leader: The name Asaph is closely linked with Israelite worship and appears in several supercriptions to the Psalms (Pss 50, 73-83).

16:8-36 David's extended prayer is a medley of texts from three Psalms (Pss 96, 105, 106), arranged to highlight the particular interests of the Chronicler and to address the occasion when the chest entered into the tent.

16:8-22 The prayer begins with an extended quotation from Psalm 105:1-15, a long thanksgiving psalm for what God has done for the people throughout their history. It's a hopeful recitation of Israel's past that encourages the people to praise and trust in God.

16:11 Pursue the LORD and his strength: In the context of celebrating the installation of the sacred chest in Jerusalem, this command isn't simply metaphorical. Within the Bible, the Hebrew term here translated as strength (also could be "might" or "power") is associated with the chest (Pss 78:61; 132:8 = 2 Chron 6:41). In addition, the Chronicler associates the act of seeking or looking for God with care of the divine chest (1 Chron 13:3; 15:13). So in this context, the verse is a specific call to worship regularly at the sanctuary where the chest is housed in Jerusalem.

16:12 Remember the wondrous works he has done: This injunction to “remember” is frequent in the Psalms, often occurring just before the text relates events from history (Pss 74:2; 77:11; 132:1; 137:7). In this context, the command to remember is given a particular content taken from the nation’s past (e.g., the Abrahamic covenant, the wilderness wandering). Significantly, this past is usually too distant to actually have been experienced by the worshipping community that is reading the text in the present. So part of remembering includes experiencing aspects of the past that were not personally witnessed. Another part of remembering in this prayer includes a striking link between the divine and human realms, when the text also reminds the reader that “God remembers his covenant forever” (1 Chron 16:15). In this prayer the human community is commanded to remember the acts of a God who simultaneously remembers them.

16:13 the offspring of Israel: The text of Psalm 105:6 reads “the offspring of Abraham.”

16:19-22 The memory of a time when God protected the small and vulnerable nation from the power of kings would have particular resonance in the time of the Chronicler. Their province of Yehud (Judea) was an insignificant part of the powerful Persian Empire, susceptible to the emperors and administrators who ruled over them. Calling to mind the time when God didn’t let anyone oppress their ancestors is a message of encouragement in the present circumstances.

16:23-33 After an extended thanksgiving that focused on

and rejoice in your praise."

<sup>36</sup>Bless the LORD, Israel's God, from forever in the past to forever always.
And let all the people say, "Amen!"
Praise the LORD!

<sup>37</sup>Then David placed Asaph and his relatives, together with Obed-edom and sixty-eight of his relatives, to minister there continually before the chest containing the LORD's covenant, following the routines required on each day. <sup>38</sup>Obed-edom, Jeduthun's son, and Hosah served as gatekeepers. <sup>39</sup>David also placed the priest Zadok and his other priestly relatives at the LORD's dwelling at the shrine in Gibeon. <sup>40</sup>They were to offer continually, both morning and evening, entirely burned offerings to the LORD on the altar for entirely burned offerings, following the written requirements in the LORD's Instruction, which he had given Israel. <sup>41</sup>With them were Heman and Jeduthun and the rest of those chosen by name to give thanks to the LORD, because his faithful love lasts forever. <sup>42</sup>With them were also* the trumpets and the cymbals for the musicians and the instruments for God's songs. Jeduthun's family was at the gate. <sup>43</sup>Then all of the people left for their homes. And David returned to bless his household.

God's promise to David

17When David was settled into his palace,† he said to the prophet Nathan, "I'm living in a cedar palace while the chest containing the LORD's covenant is under curtains."

<sup>2</sup>Nathan replied, "Go ahead and do whatever you are thinking, because God is with you."

<sup>3</sup>But that very night God's word came to Nathan: <sup>4</sup>Go to my servant David and tell him, This is what the LORD says: You are not the one to build the temple‡ for me to live in. <sup>5</sup>In fact, I haven't lived in a temple from the day I brought Israel out until this very day. I've been God's deeds in Israel's past, the prayer takes up the words of Psalm 96:1-13 and praises God in the context of the entire cosmos.

16:34-36 At the end of a great prayer of thanksgiving and praise using texts from Psalms 105 and 96, the author uses Psalm 106:1, 47-48 to voice the main petition: Deliver us from among the nations.

16:37-42 After his long prayer, David continues in his act of installing the Levites to serve in the presence of God's sacred chest.

16:38 Obed-edom: presumably the same person who appears in 1 Chronicles 13:13-14 and who houses the chest for three months.

16:39 the shrine in Gibeon: Although this isn't clear in other biblical texts, the books of Chronicles have the shrine at Gibeon in operation even after the sacred chest has been installed in Jerusalem (1 Chron 21:29).

17:1-27 This is a central chapter in the books of Chronicles, containing God's promise to David and his house as related through Nathan's oracle. The author carries forward the significance of the promise in the rest of the book. The following chapters present David as: a warrior (establishing the military security for the nation in 1 Chron 18-20), the one who acquired the site and prepared the materials and personnel for the temple (1 Chron 21-22:5; 22:17-27:34), and selected Solomon as his successor (1 Chron 22:6-16). The chapter itself has three basic parts: David's proposal (17:1-2), God's promise (17:3-15), and David's prayer (17:16-27). (See sidebar, "God's Response to Prayer in Chronicles.")

17:1-15 When the king expresses his desire to build a temple for the sacred chest (17:1-2), God responds with an extended plan and promise for the reigns of David and his successor (17:3-15). This material is drawn from 2 Samuel 7:1-16 and retains the same play on the Hebrew term for house, a word that can have architectural and sociological significance. When David is settled in his palace (or "his house," 17:1), he contemplates building something more permanent for God's sacred chest. God responds by saying that David isn't the one to build the temple (or "the house," 17:4). Rather, God will establish a dynasty for David (or "a house," 17:10), and one from these descendants will build a temple (or "a house," 17:12).

17:1 cedar palace: David compares his own grand dwelling with the current residence of the chest (a tent). Although this is the traditional architecture for the sacred object, the king suggests that perhaps the time has come to move to something more permanent and lavish.

17:4-6 my servant David: God reassures the king of his favored status even as while rejecting the idea of a Davidic temple. The two reasons given are based on precedent (I haven't lived in a temple) and the absence of a prior request traveling from tent to tent and from dwelling to dwelling.<sup>a</sup> <sup>6</sup>Throughout my traveling with the Israelites, did I ever ask one of Israel's tribal leaders, whom I appointed to shepherd my people, Why haven't you built me a cedar temple?

<sup>7</sup>So then, say this to my servant David: This is what the LORD of heavenly forces says: I myself took you from the pasture, from following the flock, to be leader over my people Israel. <sup>8</sup>I've been with you wherever you've gone. I've eliminated all your enemies before you. Now I will make your name great—like the name of the greatest people on earth. <sup>9</sup>I'm going to provide a place for my people Israel, and plant them so that they may live there and no longer be disturbed. Cruel people will no longer trouble them as they did earlier, <sup>10</sup>when I appointed judges over my people Israel. I'll subdue all your enemies and make you great. As for a dynasty,<sup>b</sup> the LORD will build one for you! <sup>11</sup>When the time comes for you to die, I will raise up a descendant of yours after you, one of your own sons, to succeed you, and I will establish his kingship. <sup>12</sup>He is the one who will build me a temple, and I will establish his throne forever. <sup>13</sup>I will become his father and he will become my son, and I'll never withdraw my faithful love from him as I did from the one before you. <sup>14</sup>I'll install him in my house and in my kingdom forever, and his throne will be established forever.

David's prayer

<sup>16</sup>Then King David went and sat in the LORD's presence. He asked:

Who am I, LORD God, and of what significance is my family that you have brought me this far? <sup>17</sup>But even this was too small in your eyes, God. You have spoken about the future of your servant's dynasty and have chosen me as an important person, LORD God.

<sup>18</sup>What more can I say to you for honoring your servant? You yourself know your servant. <sup>19</sup>LORD, for your servant's sake and according to your will, you have done this great thing in order to make all these great things known.

<sup>20</sup>LORD, no one can compare to you, no God except you, just as we have heard with our own ears.

<sup>21</sup>Who is like your people Israel, a unique nation on the earth, that God redeemed as his own people, establishing a name for yourself by doing great and awesome things, by driving out nations before your people whom you saved from Egypt? <sup>22</sup>You established your people Israel as your own people forever, and you, LORD, became their God.

<sup>23</sup>Now, LORD, confirm forever the promise you have made about your servant and his dynasty. Do as you have promised <sup>24</sup>so that it may be established and so that your name may be made great forever when people say, "The LORD of heavenly forces, the God of Israel, is Israel's God." May your servant David's household be established before you. <sup>25</sup>You, my God, have revealed to your servant that you will build him a dynasty. That is why your servant has found the courage to pray this prayer to you. <sup>26</sup>LORD, you are truly God, and you promised this good thing to your servant. <sup>27</sup>So now willingly bless your servant's dynasty so that it might continue forever before you, because you, LORD God, have promised. Let your servant's dynasty be blessed forever by your blessing.

(did I ever ask... Why haven't you built me a cedar temple?).

Explicitly, God also questions the suitability of David to be the builder. Although no reason for this is given here, the guilt on David's hands, stained by the blood of those he has killed, will be mentioned in 1 Chronicles 22:8; 28:3.

17:7-14 The second part of God's response to David encompasses the past (I myself took you), while also looking toward David's future (I'll subdue all your enemies) and the future of his son (I will raise up a descendant of yours after you).

17:10, 12 dynasty... temple: For the wordplay involved with these two terms, see the note on 1 Chronicles 17:1-15. 17:13-14 I will become his father: The Chronicler emphasizes that God's promise to Solomon is eternal. The language of family is employed (father... son), the term forever is repeated twice, a negative comparison is made between Solomon and Saul (described as the one before you), and the conditional clause from 2 Samuel 7:14 is omitted ("whenever he does wrong, I will discipline him with a human rod"). in my house and in my kingdom: another strategic change from the source material in 2 Samuel 7:16 which reads "Your dynasty, and your kingdom." For the Chronicler, although the throne may be occupied by a member of the house of David, it ultimately belongs to God alone, and the king acts as God's vice-regent.

17:16-27 David's response to God's promise is a two-part prayer, consisting of thanksgiving for God's promise (17:16-22) and a petition that the promise be confirmed (17:23-27).

17:17-27 your servant: David echoes God's own title for the king (1 Chron 17:4) and refers to himself as God's servant four times in the first three verses. At the end of the prayer he uses the same title five more times (17:25-27).

God's Response to Prayer in Chronicles Throughout the books of Chronicles, God listens and responds to humankind. When Jabez prayed for God's blessing (1 Chron 4:10) and warriors cried for help in battle (1 Chron 5:20), God answered immediately and brought assistance. This portrait of God helps with interpreting the interchange between David and God in chapter 17. The scene begins with David pointing out the relative inequality between the buildings that house the king and the sacred chest: a cedar palace for David vs. an enclosure made of curtains for the chest (1 Chron 17:1). God then responds through Nathan the prophet and promises a dynasty to David and a son who will build a temple for God (1 Chron 17:4-14). Although it is surely significant that David himself isn't allowed to build the temple, it is also significant that God's promises to David don't come simply out of the blue but as a response to David's own observation.

The Chronicler does assert that God is free from any type of manipulation or rigid calculation on the part of humanity. The divine world can also bring about fortune or disaster unmerited by prior human activity, such as the 70,000 citizens who died when David commanded the census in 1 Chronicles 21:4 and God's acceptance of Solomon as son in 1 Chronicles 22:10; 28:6. But within this divine freedom, the author also stresses that God is influenced by the prayers and expressions of humanity.

David's wars

<sup>9</sup>When Hamath's King Tou heard that David had defeated the entire army of Zobah's King Hadadezer, <sup>10</sup>he sent his son Hadoram to King David to wish him well and to congratulate him over his battle and defeat of Hadadezer, because Tou was an enemy of Hadadezer.

18:1-17 This is part of a longer section that presents David's victories over neighboring tribes and territories (1 Chron 18-20). The material comes from the book of Samuel (1 Chron 18:1-17 = 2 Sam 8:1-18; 1 Chron 19:1-20:3 = 2 Sam 10:1-11:1; 12:26, 30, 31; 1 Chron 20:4-8 = 2 Sam 21:18-22). However, instead of interspersing the military accounts throughout the narrative, the Chronicler combines them and presents them in a single block. This arrangement highlights the fulfillment of God's promise to "subdue" David's enemies and provide a place for the nation to live in peace (1 Chron 17:9-10). The section is framed by the assertion that various enemies were "subdued" (1 Chron 18:1; 20:4). The chapters also highlight the territorial expansion of the nation in all directions: the Philistines to the west (18:1), Moab and Ammon to the east (18:2; 19), Zobah and the Arameans to the north (18:3-6; 19), and Edom to the south (18:12-13). Finally, the extended account of David's wars also explains why, as someone who had caused so much blood to be shed, the king wasn't allowed to build the temple (1 Chron 22:8; 28:3).

18:1 the Philistines: a neighboring tribe situated between Israel and the Mediterranean coast and an ongoing threat to the nation during the time of Saul and David. David's victory here dramatically contrasts with Saul's fatal defeat in 1 Chronicles 10:1-7. subdued: For the strategic use of this term as an unfolding of the divine promise in 1 Chronicles 17:10, see the note on 1 Chronicles 18:1-17.

18:2 Moab: This nation was located on the eastern side of the Dead Sea, across the Jordan River. In the parallel account in 2 Samuel 8:2, David orders that two-thirds of the Moabites be killed.

18:3 Zobah: one of the Aramean states in the north. continued to establish his control: In the Hebrew idiom the phrase read, "set up his monument," which reflects the ancient practice of marking territorial boundaries and declaring sovereignty.

18:6 The Lord gave David victory: David is the immediate actor in these military accounts, but the author emphasizes that his success is due to God's promise, "I'll subdue all your enemies" (1 Chron 17:4).

18:7-11 With the mention of loot acquired in war, the author once again points to the future temple building. David's victories not only achieve the peace necessary for pursuing his building program, they also provide the material to build the temple.

18:8 with which Solomon made the bronze basin: See 2 Chronicles 4:2-6.

Hadoram brought with him all kinds of gold, silver, and bronze objects. <sup>11</sup>King David dedicated these to the LORD along with the silver and the gold he had taken from all these nations: Edom, Moab, the Ammonites, the Philistines, and Amalek. <sup>12</sup>Abishai, Zeruiah's son, struck down eighteen thousand Edomites in the Salt Valley. <sup>13</sup>He stationed soldiers in Edom, and all the Edomites became David's slaves. The LORD gave David victory wherever he went.

David's administration

<sup>14</sup>David ruled over all Israel and maintained justice and righteousness for all his people. <sup>15</sup>Zeruiah's son Joab was in command of the army; Ahilud's son Jehoshaphat was recorder; <sup>16</sup>Ahitub's son Zadok and Abiathar's son Ahimelech<sup>a</sup> were priests; Shavsha was secretary; <sup>17</sup>Jehoiada's son Benaiah was in command of the Cherethites and the Pelethites; and David's sons were the king's chief personal advisors.

War with the Ammonites and Arameans

19 Some time later, the Ammonite King Nahash died, and his son succeeded him as king. <sup>2</sup>"I'll be loyal to Nahash's son Hanun," David said, "because his father was loyal to me." So David sent messengers with condolences about his father's death.

But when David's servants arrived in the Ammonite territory to express his sympathy to Hanun, <sup>3</sup>the Ammonite leaders asked Hanun, "Do you really believe David is honoring your father because he has sent you condolences? Of course not! His servants have come to search the city, spy it out, and overthrow it!" <sup>4</sup>So Hanun took David's servants, shaved them, cut off half their garments from their buttocks down, and sent them off.

<sup>5</sup>When this was reported to David, he sent messengers to the men because they were completely ashamed. The king said, "Stay in Jericho until your beards have grown. Then you can come back."

<sup>6</sup>When the Ammonites realized that they had offended David, Hanun and the Ammonites sent one thousand kikkars of silver to hire chariots and cavalry for themselves from Aram-naharaim, Aram-maacah, and Zobah. <sup>7</sup>They hired thirty-two thousand chariots, as well as King Maacah and his army, who came and camped in front of Medeba, while the Ammonites left their cities and came together ready for battle. <sup>8</sup>When David heard this, he sent Joab and the entire army of warriors. <sup>9</sup>The Ammonites marched out and formed a battle line at the entrance to the city, while the kings who had come remained in the countryside.

18:12-13 With this account of victory over Edom in the south, the narrator completes the circle of Israel's military triumphs to the west and east (Philistia and Moab, 1 Chron 18:1-2) and to the north and south (Aram and Edom, 1 Chron 18:3-13).

18:14-17 The administrative organization of David's kingdom combined military and religious leadership (cf. 2 Sam 8:15-18).

18:17 the Cherethites and the Pelethites: mercenary troops, probably from the area around the Aegean Sea.

19:1-19 This story of David's military victory over Ammon continues the series recounting the king's wars begun in the previous chapter. Much of this chapter is taken from the parallel account in 2 Samuel 10. See the note on 1 Chronicles 18:1-17.

19:2 I'll be loyal... because his father was loyal to me: The Bible contains no clear record of any past allegiance made between David and Nahash, king of the large territory east of the Jordan River. It may be that the two men entered into an agreement when David was on the run from Saul. (Nahash appears as an enemy of Saul in 1 Sam 11:1-13.) Regardless of the specifics of the historical background, David's solemn promise of loyalty to Hanun provides the lens through which the reader now interprets the unfolding story.

19:3 Do you really believe: Although the narrator has just assured the reader of David's honorable intentions, Hanun's advisors don't have access to this information, and they are right to be wary. Political treaties in the ancient world were usually made between heads of state, and so the death of one ruler presented new opportunities to adjust the balance of power. In addition, David has recently gone to war with neighboring peoples such as the Philistines, Moabites, Aram and the Edomites (1 Chron 18:1-2, 12-13), and a continuation of military activity into Ammon is a possibility that can't be ruled out. However, the leaders aren't simply wary but overly confident in their expectation that David is seeking an advantage over Ammon. With their assured pronouncement to Hanun (Of course not!) the advisors move from their proper role in offering sage advice to goading the new king into expecting the worst: David and his servants seek to overthrow the city.

19:4 shaved... cut off... sent them off: Though expecting the hospitality shown to visiting dignitaries, David's men are instead humiliated.

19:6 When the Ammonites realized that they had offended David: Without the necessary force already assembled, the prior advice of the Ammonite leaders seems exceptionally rash. In order to fight the impending war with Israel, Ammon prepares by hiring chariots and cavalry from territories in Aram that lay to the north.

19:7 Medeba: a Moabite city, approximately 20 miles south-southwest of Rabbah.

25a 10:15-19
20:1-3
25a 12:26:31

<sup>14</sup>When Joab and the troops who were with him advanced into battle against the Arameans, they fled from him. <sup>15</sup>When the Ammonites saw that the Arameans had fled, they also fled from his brother Abishai and retreated into the city. So Joab returned to Jerusalem.

<sup>16</sup>The Arameans saw that they had been defeated by Israel. They sent out messengers to bring Aramean reinforcements from the other side of the river, with Shophach the commander of Hadadezer's army at their head. <sup>17</sup>Upon hearing this, David gathered all Israel and crossed the Jordan. David advanced and took up positions against the Arameans to meet them in battle. After initiating the battle, <sup>18</sup>the Arameans fled before Israel, and David killed seven thousand Aramean chariot drivers and forty thousand foot soldiers. Shophach the commander of their army was killed too. <sup>19</sup>When the servants of Hadadezer saw that they had been defeated by Israel, they made peace with David and served him. Never again would the Arameans come to the aid of the Ammonites.

Defeat of the Ammonites

20 In the spring, the time when kings go to war,

<sup>19:10</sup> Israel's finest warriors: Joab recognizes that the mercenary force of the Arameans is the strongest, and thus sends his best fighters to battle them under his command. fought on two fronts: Joab turns an obvious tactical disadvantage into an advantage. Whereas the forces of the opposing armies are divided, he lines up the army so that Israel remains connected in battle.

<sup>19:13</sup> The LORD will do what is good in his eyes: Joab is a military commander who realizes that victory is ultimately in the hands of God. He is a leader who mixes military strategy with a trust in the divine will.

of the Ammonites: At the conclusion of the story, Hanun from Ammon is in a much weaker position than he was at the beginning of his reign in 1 Chronicles 19:1. By acting on his suspicion that David was trying to undermine his kingdom, he effectively strengthened Israel's hand. Aram moved from the side of Ammon to the side of Israel, effectively fortifying Israel's eastern front.

<sup>20:1-8</sup> The brevity of this chapter highlights the large amount of text that the Chronicler edited out of the source material found in 2 Samuel 11-12, much of it unflattering to David. For example, in the 2 Samuel account, David appears in the Ammonite city of Rabbah only after Joab tells Joab marched out with the army, destroyed the land of the Ammonites, and besieged Rabbah. David stayed in Jerusalem while Joab attacked Rabbah and overthrew it. <sup>2</sup>David took Milcom's<sup>f</sup> crown from his head. He found that it weighed one kikkar of gold and was set with a valuable stone. It was placed on David's head. The amount of loot David took from the city was huge. <sup>3</sup>After removing the people who were in the city, David demolished the city with saws, iron picks, and axes,<sup>g</sup> as he did to all the Ammonite cities. Then David and all his troops returned to Jerusalem.

War with the Philistines

<sup>4</sup>Once again war broke out at Gezer with the Philistines. At that time Sibbecai the Hushathite killed Sippai, one of the descendants of the Rephah,<sup>h</sup> and the Philistines were subdued. <sup>5</sup>In another war with the Philistines, Jair's son Elhanan killed Lahmi the brother of Goliath the Gittite. The shaft of his spear was like a weaver's beam. <sup>6</sup>At another war in Gath there was a huge man with six fingers on each hand and six toes on each foot, twenty-four in all, who was also descended from Raphah. <sup>7</sup>When he taunted Israel, Jonathan the son of David's brother Shimea killed him. <sup>8</sup>These were descended from the Raphah in Gath, and they fell by the hands of David and his servants.

David's census

21 A heavenly Adversary<sup>i</sup> arose against Israel and incited David to count Israel. <sup>2</sup>So David told Joab and the leaders of the people, "Go throughout all the tribes of Israel, from Dan to Beer-sheba, and take a census of the people so I know how many people there are."

<sup>3</sup>But Joab replied, "May the LORD increase his people a hundred times! Sir, aren't you the king, and aren't they all your servants? Why do you want to do this? Why bring guilt on Israel?"

him that glory for the victory will accrue to the military leader and not the king (2 Sam 12:26-31). Even more notable is the deletion of the Bathsheba story, where David, seeing the bathing wife of Uriah from his rooftop, has his servants bring her to him for sex. His cover-up of the crime rapidly devolves until he arranges to have Uriah murdered (2 Sam 11:1-25). By adapting the sources with strategic omissions, the Chronicler presents a David less violent and more admirable than he appears in Samuel-Kings. The omission of the people's support of Absalom, leading to an attempted revolt against David as well as David's execution of the remaining descendants of Saul, are other examples of the Chronicler's adaptation of the source material. In addition to providing a flattering portrait of David, the adaptation in 20:1-8 also allows the reader to see part of Nathan's oracle come to pass. As well as promising a dynasty to David, God also promised to subdue all of the people's enemies (1 Chron 17:10). By arranging the sources so that David's victories over the Ammonites and the Philistines come together in quick succession, the Chronicler emphasizes the fulfillment of the promise.

20:2 Milcom: the god of the Ammonites (1 Kgs 11:5, 33; 2 Kgs 23:13), presented here as a statue housed in the city. one kikkar of gold: about 75 pounds, the crown is astonishingly heavy.

20:3 David demolished the city with saws, iron picks, and axes: overtones of the procedure for holy war, in which the city is absolutely destroyed and the precious metals taken for use in the Lord's sacred area (see, e.g., the destruction of Jericho in Josh 6). as he did to all the Ammonite cities: Although the author only relates the destruction of Rabbah in 1 Chronicles 19, this concluding phrase joins together with the introduction to the section ("destroyed the land of the Ammonites," 1 Chron 20:1) to frame the account as only one example of the devastation of Ammon.

20:4 subdued: See the note on 1 Chronicles 18:1-17.

20:5 Elhanan killed Lahmi the brother of Goliath the Gittite: In the middle of accounts of war with the Philistines, the author attempts to clear up some details that are confusing in the Samuel narratives. In 1 Samuel 17 David kills the very tall warrior, Goliath from Gath. In 2 Samuel 21:19, however, it is Jair's son Elhanan from Bethlehem who kills Goliath from Gath. With the small insertion of Lahmi the brother of, the Chronicler provides for a correction of the accounts. 21:1-30 By winning treasure and peace through battle, the divine oracle to David is being fulfilled (1 Chron 17:3-14). Chapter 21 opens a new section of Chronicles that gives the final preparations for building the temple. Although Solomon will complete the structure, these next chapters show that David acquired the site and the building materials, and set qualified personnel in place. The section begins with an account of David's attempt to take a census of the nation, and the account includes several key changes made to the source text (2 Sam 24). This includes the strategic shaping of the story's context. The Samuel account is gathered together with several other accounts and told at the end of David's reign. For the Chronicler, however, the census is a central feature of David's time as king, leading to the choice of the temple site.

21:1 A heavenly Adversary: replaces "The LORD who burned with anger" in 2 Samuel 24:1. (See sidebar, "Satan.")

21:2 from Dan to Beer-sheba: the two cities that traditionally mark the northern and southern borders of Israel (e.g., Judg 20:1). David is emphasizing that the entire nation is to be counted.

21:3 Why bring guilt on Israel?: Joab is giving voice to the tradition that national counts were associated with great risk (Exod 30:11-16). The reason for this isn't clearly given in the Bible, but it may have to do with a connection between a census and the collection of taxes or forced labor.

Satan The Hebrew word for “Adversary” in 1 Chronicles 21:1 is satan. The use and meaning of this term develops through the centuries of the writing of the OT, and the purpose of this adversary develops further in NT times. Thus it is important to avoid the application of later meanings into earlier texts. In texts such as Zechariah 3:1-2 and Job 1-2, the term appears as “the satan” with the definite article, describing someone who is one of the “sons of God” with access to the heavenly court. This adversary functions as a divine accuser inciting God against a human. In 1 Chronicles 21:1, however, the term occurs without the definite article, and it isn’t God but rather David who is incited to count the people. For other occurrences of the term without the definite article, see Psalm 109:6; Numbers 22:23; 1 Samuel 29:4; 2 Samuel 19:22; 1 Kings 5:4; 11:14, 23, 25. Over time, of course, the figure of Satan develops into an incarnation of evil, an entity independent from God, devoted to undermining the divine will. By the 4th century CE, the figure of Satan was associated with the fallen angel of Isaiah 14:12.

<sup>4</sup>But the king overruled Joab, who left and traveled throughout all Israel. When he returned to Jerusalem, <sup>5</sup>he reported to David the total number: there were 1,100,000 men available for military service in all Israel, while Judah alone had 470,000. <sup>6</sup>He didn’t include Levi and Benjamin among them, because Joab disagreed with the king’s order.

<sup>7</sup>God was offended by this census and punished Israel. <sup>8</sup>Then David said to God, “I have sinned greatly in what I have done! Now please take away the guilt of your servant because I have done something very foolish.”

<sup>9</sup>The LORD told Gad, David’s seer: <sup>10</sup>Go and tell David, This is what the LORD says: I’m offering you three punishments. Choose one of them, and that is what I will do to you.

<sup>11</sup>When Gad came to David, he said to him, “This is what the LORD says: Take your choice: <sup>12</sup>three years of famine, three months of fleeing<sup>1</sup> from your enemies while your enemies’ sword overtakes you, or three days of the LORD’s sword, that is, plague in the land and the LORD’s messenger bringing disaster in every part of Israel. Decide now what answer I should take back to the one who sent me.”

<sup>13</sup>“I’m in deep trouble,” David said to Gad. “I’d rather fall into the hands of the LORD, who is very merciful; don’t let me fall into human hands.” <sup>14</sup>So the LORD sent a plague throughout Israel, and seventy thousand Israelites fell dead.

<sup>15</sup>Then God sent a messenger to Jerusalem to destroy it. But just as the messenger was about to destroy it, the LORD looked and changed his mind about the destruction. He said to the messenger who was destroying it, “That’s enough! Withdraw your hand!” At that time the LORD’s messenger was standing near the threshing floor of Ornan the Jebusite.

<sup>16</sup>When David looked up, he saw the LORD’s messenger stationed between the earth and the sky with a drawn sword in his hand stretched out against Jerusalem. Then David and the elders, dressed in mourning clothes, fell on their faces; <sup>17</sup>and David said to God, “Wasn’t it I who ordered the numbering of the people? I’m the sinner, the one responsible for this evil. But these sheep—what have they done? LORD, my God, turn your hand against me and my household, but spare your people from the plague.”

Or maybe the accurate calculation of military fighting units implied that victory in war depended less on God’s power and more on the size of the fighting force. A later text in Chronicles relates the friction between obtaining an accurate count of the entire nation and God’s promise to Abraham that they would be “as numerous as the stars in the sky” (1 Chron 27:23; cf. Gen 22:17).

21:6 In distinction from the source in Samuel (2 Sam 24:4-9), and in defiance of David’s instruction that the entire nation be counted (1 Chron 21:1), Joab refuses to include the tribes of Levi and Benjamin in the census. The Chronicler includes no reason for Joab’s decision. Although the book of Numbers declares that Levi is to be excluded from a military census because the tribe does not fight in battle (Num 1:49; 2:33), they can be included in a national count (Num 3:15).

21:16 dressed in mourning clothes: indicates in a public and physical way David’s sense of responsibility and a changed life.

21:18 the threshing floor of Ornan the Jebusite: In the ground. <sup>22</sup>David said to Ornan, "Give me the site of the threshing floor, charging me full price, so that I may build an altar to the LORD, and the plague among the people may come to an end."

<sup>23</sup>Ornan replied to David, "Take it for yourself, and may my master the king do what he thinks is best. I'll even provide the oxen for the entirely burned offerings, the threshing boards for wood, and the wheat for the grain offering—I'll provide everything!"

<sup>24</sup>But King David said to Ornan, "No, I will buy them from you at a fair price. I won't offer to the LORD what belongs to you nor offer an entirely burned offering that costs me nothing." <sup>25</sup>Then David gave Ornan six hundred shekels of gold by weight for the site. <sup>26</sup>David built an altar there for the LORD and offered entirely burned offerings and well-being sacrifices. He called on the LORD, who answered him with fire from heaven on the altar of the entirely burned offering, consuming the entirely burned offering.<sup>1</sup> <sup>27</sup>Then the LORD commanded the messenger to return his sword to its sheath.

Location of the future temple

<sup>28</sup>At that time, after David saw that the LORD had answered him at the threshing floor of Ornan the Jebusite, he offered sacrifices there. <sup>29</sup>The LORD's dwelling that Moses had made in the desert and the altar for entirely burned offerings were then at the shrine in Gibeon, <sup>30</sup>but David couldn't go there to seek God because he feared the sword of the LORD's messenger.

22 Then David said, "This is where the LORD God's temple will be, along with Israel's altar for entirely burned offerings."

David prepares to build the temple

<sup>1</sup>David gave orders to gather the immigrants living in the land of Israel, and he appointed masons who would cut stones for building God's temple. <sup>3</sup>David also provided a huge amount of iron for nails for the doors of the gates and for the braces, so much bronze that it couldn't be weighed, <sup>4</sup>and innumerable cedar logs from the Sidonians and the Tyrians, who gave them to David. <sup>5</sup>David thought, My son Solomon is too inexperienced to build the LORD's temple. It must be great beyond compare in order to win fame and glory throughout all lands, so I myself will prepare things for him. So David made extensive preparations before his death.

2 Chronicles 3:1, the author relates that this site is Mount Moriah where Abraham was diverted from sacrificing his son Isaac (Gen 22).

21:24 at a fair price: David's insistence on buying the property even after the owner has offered it for free is similar to Abraham's purchase of the cave of Machpelah from Ephron in Genesis 23. In both stories, a commitment to financial expenditure implies that the land is significant, that it has been honestly purchased, and that the prior owner will have no subsequent claim on the property.

21:25 six hundred shekels of gold: In both weight and quality of metal, this amount is a dramatic increase over what David paid in the parallel account (fifty shekels of silver in 2 Sam 24:24) and also what Abraham paid for the cave of Machpelah (four hundred shekels of silver in Gen 23:16). By increasing the purchase price named in the source material, the Chronicler highlights the great significance of the land and David's commitment to fulfilling what God has asked in order to avert the plague.

21:26 fire from heaven: signals God's acceptance of the site in a public and dramatic sign. This divine action also represents a key link back to the Mosaic meeting tent and forward to Solomon's temple: The dedication of all three sacred spaces were marked by fire descending from heaven (Lev 9:24; 1 Kgs 18:38; 2 Chron 7:1).

22:1 This is where the LORD God's temple will be: David's recognition of the future temple site helps to clarify the issue of Gibeon's religious significance. Although it is currently functioning as a legitimate place of worship, it is only temporary and will be replaced by the temple as a central place of worship. David's recognition also closes the account of the census and its consequences, and opens the next large part of the book, in which the king will prepare the materials and workers for the task of building the temple on this site.

22:2-19 The final eight chapters of the book of 1 Chronicles have no parallel in Samuel-Kings. Together they present an image of David in which the temple is central. Although he doesn't build the sanctuary, he assembles the proper materials, prepares the workers, and guides Solomon. Throughout these chapters the author presents David and Solomon in tandem, as they jointly build the temple, the first preparing and the second completing the construction.

22:2 immigrants living in the land of Israel: The books of Chronicles display an aversion to using Israelite labor to work on the temple at several points (see also 2 Chron 2:17-18; 8:8-9).

22:3-4 a huge amount of iron... innumerable cedar logs: Cataloging the large amounts of materials for building signals both David's hard work and the future magnificence of the temple (see 1 Chron 22:14-15 for comparable descriptions of additional materials and workers). Such magnificence would stand in sharp contrast to the second temple. According to the tradition related in Ezra 3:12,

Instructions to Solomon

<sup>6</sup>David sent for his son Solomon and instructed him to build a temple for the LORD, the God of Israel. <sup>7</sup>David said to Solomon, "My son,<sup>m</sup> I had intended to build a temple for the name of the LORD my God. <sup>8</sup>But the LORD told me: You've shed much blood and waged great wars. You won't build a temple for my name because you've spilled so much blood on the ground before me. <sup>9</sup>A son has just been born to you. He'll be a man of peace, and I'll give him peace with all his surrounding enemies. In fact, his name will be Solomon,<sup>n</sup> and I'll give Israel peace and quiet during his reign. <sup>10</sup>He will be the one to build a temple for my name. He'll become my son, and I'll become his father, and I'll establish his royal throne over Israel forever.

<sup>11</sup>"Now, my son, may the LORD be with you so that you may successfully build the temple of the LORD your God, as he promised you. <sup>12</sup>May the LORD be sure to give you insight and understanding so that when he appoints you over Israel, you will observe the Instruction from the LORD your God.<sup>o</sup> <sup>13</sup>Then, if you carefully follow the regulations and case laws that the LORD commanded Moses concerning Israel, you'll prosper. Be strong and brave. Don't be afraid or lose heart! <sup>14</sup>With great effort I've now provided for the LORD's temple one hundred thousand kikkars of gold, one million kikkars of silver, and so much bronze and iron that it can't be weighed, as well as wood and stone, though you may add to these. <sup>15</sup>You also have innumerable people to do the work: stonemasons, masons, and carpenters with every skill required for any task, <sup>16</sup>whether in gold, silver, bronze, or iron. So get to work, and may the LORD be with you."

Instructions to Israel's leaders

<sup>17</sup>Then David ordered all of Israel's leaders to help his son Solomon: <sup>18</sup>"The LORD your God is with you! He's given you peace on every side. He's placed under my power the land's people, so that the land is under the control of the LORD and his people. <sup>19</sup>Now then, dedicate yourselves to seeking the LORD your God. Get to work and build the sanctuary of the LORD God, so that the chest containing the LORD's covenant together with God's holy equipment may be brought into the temple built for the LORD's name."

David appoints the Levites

23 When David had grown old after a long life, he made his son Solomon king over Israel. <sup>2</sup>He then gathered together all Israel's leaders along with the priests and the

those who had seen Solomon's temple "wept aloud" when they rebuilt the foundations after the exile.

22:6 David... his son Solomon: The narrative presents the choice of Solomon to be the successor of David as something obvious and straightforward. This isn't so clear in the Samuel and Kings material, however, which tells of attempted takeovers by rivals such as his brothers Absalom and Adonijah (2 Sam 15; 1 Kgs 1–2), and no certain clarity as to David's own choice (he is finally prompted by Bathsheba and Nathan just before he dies in 1 Kgs 1–2). In Chronicles, however, there are no stories of rivals to the throne, and David makes several public professions that Solomon is to succeed him.

22:8 You've shed much blood: In the Chronicler's version of the divine oracle, God prohibits David's building plans with the assertion, "You are not the one to build the temple for me to live in" (1 Chron 17:4). However, no explicit reason is given. When he speaks here to Solomon, David reveals that he is disqualified due to the blood that he has shed, presumably through the many wars that he waged (1 Chron 18:1–20:8). David repeats this reason at the public assembly in 1 Chronicles 28:3.

22:9 a man of peace: Like other names that contain wordplays in the books of Chronicles (e.g., Jabez in 1 Chron 4:7), here the divine word associates the Hebrew pronunciation with Solomon (Shelomoh) with the word for peace (shalom). This marks a stark contrast between Solomon and his father David who is presented as one who shed blood in military battles (see note on 1 Chron 22:8; cf. 28:3).

22:10 He'll become my son, and I'll become his father: See note on 1 Chronicles 28:6.

22:12 May the LORD be sure to give you insight and understanding: For the Chronicler's perspective on the role of God in encouraging humanity's faithfulness, see the note on 1 Chronicles 29:18–19.

22:13 carefully follow the regulations: David's preparations for the temple include more than assembling the material resources for building. In his speech David is presented as also preparing his son Solomon to take on his responsibilities.

22:14–16 one hundred thousand kikkars of gold, one million kikkars of silver: This is a very large amount, in excess of 3,750 tons of gold and 37,500 tons of silver, along with the additional amounts of bronze and iron so vast that it can't be weighed. The very generous supply of building materials points to the future magnificence of the temple and the greatness of the God to whom it will be dedicated. It also reveals that Solomon has no financial need to go to war.

23:1–32 When David had grown old: With an introduction that speaks of the king's advancing age, the author sets the stage for the consideration of his ongoing influence even after death. Unlike the Samuel–Kings narratives, the succession of Solomon is here clearly announced by David

Levites. <sup>3</sup>When the Levites were counted, the head count of every male 30 and older totaled 38,000. <sup>4</sup>Of these, there were 24,000 to supervise the work on the LORD's temple, 6,000 officers and judges, <sup>5</sup>4,000 gatekeepers, and 4,000 praising the LORD with instruments made<sup>P</sup> for offering praise. <sup>6</sup>Then David divided them into three groups named after Levi's family members: Gershon, Kohath, and Merari.

Gershonites

<sup>11</sup>Jahath was the first, and Ziza the second; since Jeush and Beriah didn't have many children, they became a single household.

Kohathites

<sup>13</sup>Amram's family: Aaron and Moses. Aaron, together with his sons, was set apart to make the holiest objects holy, to make offerings before the LORD, to serve him, and to give blessings in his name forever.

Merarites

<sup>21</sup>Merari's family: Mahli and Mushi.

Mahli's family: Eleazar and Kish.

<sup>22</sup>Eleazar died without sons, but he did have daughters who married their relatives from Kish's family.

himself from an early time (he made his son Solomon king over Israel). With the immediate successor in place, attention turns to establishing the duties of the religious leadership who will tend to the temple and lead the nation in their worship. (See sidebar, "David's Organization of the Temple Personnel" at 1 Chron 25.)

23:2 Israel's leaders along with the priests and the Levites: The focus on the priests and Levites in this chapter is signaled at the beginning by the description of the ones attending David's gathering.

23:3 When the Levites were counted: Joab neglected to include the Levites in his count in 1 Chronicles 21:6, perhaps because of the tradition that the tribe wasn't to fight in battle (Num 1:49; 2:33). But here the count relates to temple service. David is preparing the administration of the Jerusalem temple to be followed in Solomon's time. every male 30 and older: The Bible names several different age requirements for inclusion in the active Levitical workforce and/or inclusion in the head count. It is 25 in Numbers 8:24, and 20 in Ezra 3:8. Even in the books of Chronicles the relevant number changes (20 years also in 1 Chron 23:24, 27 and 2 Chron 31:17). The flexibility might be related to the different needs of the temple personnel in terms of work force at different times. When the nation needed more Levites to perform their duties, it lowered the age so that they could be included in an official count.

23:4-5 officers...judges...gatekeepers...praising: The four groups of Levites are given in order from the largest group to the smallest: supervisors of the temple building project, officers and judges, followed by the gatekeepers and musicians. In this chapter and those to follow (1 Chron 23-27), the author will detail the composition and duties of each group.

23:7-11 The family tree of Gershon (the oldest son of Levi) is also presented in 1 Chronicles 6:17, 20-21, 39-43. The lists contain some differences, such as listing Libni as the first son of Gershon (1 Chron 6:17).

23:12-20 The family tree of Kohath (the second and middle son of Levi) is also presented in 1 Chronicles 6:1-15, 18, 22-28, 33-38.

23:13 set apart to make the holiest objects holy: Although biologically Aaron and his sons are part of the tribe of Levi, this verse sets out their special and particular job description that distinguishes them from the rest of the family.

23:21-23 The family line of Merari (the third and youngest son of Levi) is also given in 1 Chronicles 6:19, 29-30, 44-47.

Levites' duties

<sup>25</sup>David said, "Since the LORD, Israel's God, has given his people peace and has made his home in Jerusalem forever, <sup>26</sup>the Levites need no longer carry the dwelling or any of the equipment used in its service." <sup>27</sup>David's last instructions were to count the Levites 20 years old and above. <sup>28</sup>Their assignment was to be at the side of the Aaronites to serve in the LORD's temple, maintaining the courtyards and side rooms and cleansing all of the holy objects and doing whatever was needed in the service of God's temple. <sup>29</sup>They were responsible for the stacks of bread, the fine flour for grain offerings, the wafers of unleavened bread, the cakes made on the griddle, the offering mixed with oil, as well as all the measuring. <sup>30</sup>They were to be present every morning to thank and praise the LORD, and to do the same every evening. <sup>31</sup>Whenever entirely burned offerings were offered to the LORD for the sabbaths, the new moons, and festivals, a designated number were to serve in the LORD's presence continuously. <sup>32</sup>In this way they were to observe the instructions for the meeting tent, the instructions for the sanctuary, and the instructions for Aaron's family and relatives about serving in the LORD's temple.

Divisions of the priests

24 The divisions of the Aaronites:

Aaron's family: Nadab, Abihu, Eleazar, and Ithamar.

<sup>2</sup>Nadab and Abihu died before their father did, without having sons, and so Eleazar and Ithamar served as priests. <sup>3</sup>David, with the help of Zadok from Eleazar's family and Ahimelech from Ithamar's family, divided them according to their appointed duties. <sup>4</sup>Since Eleazar's family was found to have more male heads than Ithamar's family, they divided them so that Eleazar's family had sixteen household heads and Ithamar's family had eight. <sup>5</sup>They divided both groups by lots because there were holy leaders, even outstanding leaders, among 23:25 and has made his home in Jerusalem forever: This key phrase marks a new age in the understanding of the relationship between God, the people, and the city. The temporary nature of God's presence with the people was earlier seen in the use of a tent, carried by the Levites as the nation traveled through the desert. But now, with the chest present in Jerusalem, the site of the future temple marked by a bolt of lightning from heaven (1 Chron 21:26; 22:1), and with God's promise that one of David's sons would construct the temple (1 Chron 17:12), the author emphasizes that a different era has begun. By using ancient traditions (such as the image of God making a home) even in the announcement of a new age, the author links the past together with the present.

23:25-32 The rationale for the new tasks of the Levites relates to the changed worship situation outlined in the note preceding. The duties fall into three major groups: cleaning the sacred area and the holy objects, maintaining and measuring the flour products, and giving thanks and praise.

23:27 20 years old and above: For more on the age for active service and inclusion in the count of the Levites, see the note on 1 Chronicles 23:3.

23:29 For more details on the offerings, see Leviticus 1-7. 24:1-31 Having presented the families of the Levites in the previous chapter (1 Chron 23:7-23), the author now sets out the divisions of priests (24:1-19), followed by a roster of the remaining descendants of Levi (24:20-31).

24:1-6 Before the divisions of the priests are given, the chapter devotes six preliminary verses to detailing some of the organizational procedures, specifying who was responsible for the division (David, Zadok, and Ahimelech) and announcing the method of dividing (including the use of lots).

24:2 Nadab and Abihu: The story of the early death of Aaron's sons is told with more detail in Numbers 3:4. According to that account, the two men offered "an unauthorized offering to the LORD" when the nation was wandering in the desert. They were then killed. The Chronicler records their early death but avoids hinting at any improper worship practices by making one slight but strategic change. The phrase from Numbers "before the LORD" (indicating the location of their act and thus improper religious behavior) is altered to the less offensive before their father (now indicating simply the time frame of their death).

24:3 Zadok ... Ahimelech: representing two of the major families descended from Aaron.

24:3 David ... divided them: Although the king is assisted by Zadok and Ahimelech, the author emphasizes the role of David in the administrative setup of the temple (overseeing the organization of the priests in this chapter, and also the roles of the Levites in 1 Chron 23, musicians in 1 Chron 25, gatekeepers in 1 Chron 26). By associating David with the organization of the temple that is presumably in operation during the author's own day, the current structure is given the authority that comes from ancient tradition.

24:5 They divided both groups by lots: The use of lots to make decisions enabled the community to divide up groups of different sizes without privileging the larger group. Within the books of Chronicles, lots were also used to organize the Levites (1 Chron 24:31), singers (1 Chron 25:8), and gatekeepers (1 Chron 26:13). The method is also seen in Nehemiah 10:34; 11:1; Esther 3:7; 9:24.

both Eleazar's and Ithamar's descendants. <sup>6</sup>Shemaiah, Nethanel's son, the levitical scribe, recorded their names in the presence of the king; the leaders; Zadok the priest; Ahimelech, Abiathar's son; and the household heads of the priests and Levites. One household was taken from Eleazar followed by one from Ithamar.

<sup>8</sup>the third to Harim, the fourth to Seorim,

<sup>9</sup>the fifth to Malchijah, the sixth to Mijamin,

<sup>10</sup>the seventh to Hakkoz, the eighth to Abijah,

<sup>11</sup>the ninth to Jeshua, the tenth to Shecaniah,

<sup>16</sup>the nineteenth to Pethahiah, the twentieth to Jehezkel,

<sup>18</sup>the twenty-third to Delaiah, and the twenty-fourth to Maaziah.

<sup>19</sup>These were to enter the LORD's temple according to their appointed duty and by the procedure established for them by their ancestor Aaron, just as the LORD God of Israel had instructed him.

Rest of the Levites

<sup>20</sup>The rest of the Levites included:

from Amram's family: Shubael;

from Shubael's family: Jehdeiah;

<sup>21</sup>from Rehabiah and his family: Isshiah the first;

from Shelomoth's family: Jahath;

<sup>24</sup>Uzziel's family: Micah;

from Micah's family: Shamir;

<sup>25</sup>Micah's brother Isshiah;

from Isshiah's family: Zechariah;

These were the Levites according to their households. <sup>31</sup>Both the household head and his youngest brother cast lots, just as their relatives, Aaron's descendants, had done in the presence of King David, Zadok, Ahimelech, and the heads of the priestly and levitical households.

Temple musicians

25 David and the army officers* set apart Asaph's family, Heman and Jeduthun, for service to prophesy† accompanied by lyres, harps, and cymbals.

This is the list of those who performed this special service:

24:7-18 Combining the lot system with divisions based on family lines resulted in a permanent rotation of the priests who could serve the temple well into the future. The system ensured that the temple was adequately staffed at all times. It also allowed a fairly equal share of responsibility for each group.

24:19 just as the LORD God of Israel had instructed him: In the Chronicler's presentation, David could arrange for the scheduling of the priests, but the protocol for their entrance into the temple was established by God and communicated by Aaron.

24:20-31 This list of Levites repeats and enhances the one preserved in 1 Chronicles 23:7-23.

24:31 cast lots: See the note on 1 Chronicles 24:5.

25:1-31 The list of the Levites in 1 Chronicles 24:20-31 is followed by the organization of the musicians, a link that reflects the related roles of both groups. As in the previous chapter, the actual list is preceded by several verses of introductory matter specifying some of the tasks and setting out the names of the founders.

25:1 David and the army officers: As with almost everything else in the temple architecture and administration, the

<sup>5</sup>All these were the family of Heman the king's seer, according to God's promise to honor him. God gave Heman fourteen sons and three daughters. <sup>6</sup>They were all under their father's direction when singing in the LORD's temple with cymbals, harps, and lyres to provide service in God's temple, by order of the king.

As for Asaph, Jeduthun, and Heman, <sup>7</sup>the number of themselves and their relatives, who were trained in singing to the LORD and who were all skillful, was 288.

<sup>8</sup>They cast lots for their assigned duties, small as well as great, teacher and pupil alike.

<sup>9</sup>The first lot fell for Asaph to Joseph; the second to Gedaliah, his relatives, and his family, 12;

author attributes the institution of the temple musicians to David. set apart: a significant term that links the role of the temple musicians with that of the priests and Levites who are also "set apart" or "separated for their service" (1 Chron 23:13; Deut 10:8; Num 8:14; 16:9). By using the term here, the author is indicating that the role of the musicians is key to the functioning of the temple worship, as necessary as the priests and Levites. for service to prophesy accompanied by lyres, harps, and cymbals: At several points, the Bible assumes a link between musical production and prophecy (e.g., 1 Sam 10:5; 2 Kgs 3:15). In addition, there is also evidence that prophets were associated with the royal court (Nathan in 2 Sam 7:1-17 = 1 Chron 17:1-15; 1 Kgs 22:1-23 = 2 Chron 18:1-22). However, the association between prophetic musicians at the temple appointed by the king is found only in this chapter. Unfortunately, the information provided here isn't sufficient to understand the nature of such prophesying. Perhaps the prophecy is inspired by music, or maybe the music is the result of prophetic inspiration. Perhaps the prophetic task involves the composition or performance of temple music, or both. It's striking that Asaph, Heman, and Jeduthun (the last sometimes called Ethan) are named in the headings of Psalms 50, 88, 39.

25:5-6 Heman the king's seer: As in 1 Chronicles 25:1, music is linked together with prophecy. fourteen sons and three daughters: Throughout Chronicles, large families are a sign of divine blessing (1 Chron 26:4-5; 2 Chron 13:21). all under their father's direction when singing in the LORD's temple: If the daughters mentioned in the previous verse are included in this "all," this text indicates that women were part of the musical and prophetic ministry of the temple. For mention of other women singers in post-exilic texts, see Ezra 2:65 and Nehemiah 7:67.

25:7 288: This number of specially trained singers is the total of 24 choirs made up of 12 members. It represents approximately 1/16th of the total number of 4,000 levitical singers named in 1 Chronicles 23:5.

25:8 cast lots: See the note on 1 Chronicles 24:5.

25:9-31 Corresponding to the division of the priests into 24 courses listed in 1 Chronicles 24:7-18 are 24 choirs.

David's Organization of the Temple Personnel In 1 Chronicles 9:22 and throughout the book the author specifies that the post-exilic shape of the temple administration goes back to the time of David. This theme is developed in particular in 1 Chronicles 23:1–26:32, where David organizes the Levites, priests, and temple musicians. In the Chronicler's telling, such organization makes links backward and forward in time: It has many similarities to the setup of the personnel who first cared for the portable meeting tent in the time of Moses and would only be fully activated once the temple was completed in Solomon's reign. This emphasis on David's role serves three purposes. (1) It elevates David's stature to that of Moses, in that both men are responsible for setting up the administration that will tend to the Lord's place of worship. (2) It elevates the status of the temple personnel so that they can claim an ancient heritage and association with David. (3) It asserts to those living in the Chronicler's post-exilic context that they maintain a link with the nation's formative years. When they can set up their temple's administration to mirror David's instructions, they embody and assert a heritage that existed long before their Persian overlords came to rule. The heritage will survive after the empire has moved off the world stage.

Gatekeepers

<sup>2</sup>Meshelemiah's family: Zechariah the oldest, Jedaiel the second, Zebadiah the third, Jathniel the fourth, <sup>3</sup>Elam the fifth, Jehohanan the sixth, and Eliehoenai the seventh.

<sup>4</sup>Obed-edom's family: Shemaiah the oldest, Jehozabad the second, Joah the third, Sathar the fourth, Nethanel the fifth, <sup>5</sup>Ammiel the sixth, Issachar the seventh, and Peulethai the eighth. God truly blessed him. <sup>6</sup>To his son Shemaiah were born sons who ruled over their household, and because they were valiant men. <sup>7</sup>Shemaiah's family: Othni, Rephael, Obed, Elzabad, and his relatives, Elihu and Semachiah, who were valiant men. <sup>8</sup>All these were members of Obed-edom's family, they, their sons, and their relatives. They were valiant and strong in their service, 62 men belonging to Obed-edom. <sup>9</sup>Meshelemiah's family and relatives, valiant men, numbered 18.

<sup>10</sup>Hosah, one of Merari's family, also had a family: Shimri the first (though he wasn't the oldest, his father gave him that status), <sup>11</sup>Hilkiah the second, Tebaliah the third, and Zechariah the fourth. All of Hosah's family and relatives numbered 13.

<sup>12</sup>These were the divisions of the gatekeepers with their leaders, who were responsible to minister in the LORD's temple, along with their relatives. <sup>13</sup>They cast lots for each gate in the same way, whether their household was small or large. <sup>14</sup>The lot for the East Gate fell to Shelemiah. They then cast lots for his son Zechariah, a wise counselor, and his lot indicated the North Gate. <sup>15</sup>Obed-edom was assigned the South Gate, and his sons were assigned the storehouses. <sup>16</sup>Hosah<sup>c</sup> was assigned the West Gate, that is, the chamber<sup>d</sup> gate on the upper road.

26:1-32 Having listed the divisions of the Levites in chapter 23, the priests in chapter 24, and the musicians in chapter 25, the author turns to the divisions of the temple's gatekeepers (26:1-19) as well as treasurers and officials (26:20-32). The gatekeepers come from several families deriving from Levi: Meshelemiah (from the line of Korah, a descendant of Levi's second son Kohath; 1 Chron 6:22-23), and Hosah (through the line of Levi's third son Merari; 1 Chron 6:1). Obed-edom, head of the largest and most influential branch, isn't given an explicit familial connection to Levi. It was in the house of Obed-edom the Gittite that the divine chest rested after the tragic Uzzah incident (1 Chron 13:13-14). gatekeepers: the security force that guarded both religious holiness and material treasure. Within the books of Chronicles, they guard the divine chest (1 Chron 15:23), as well as the treasures and worship objects of God's house (1 Chron 9:17-32). They also prevented unclean people from entering the temple and contaminating the holy space (2 Chron 23:19). According to Nehemiah 11:19, gatekeepers aren't Levites, and the difference in status reflects a development throughout time.

26:5 God truly blessed him: Within the books of Chronicles, God's blessing is often demonstrated through fertility (see note on 1 Chron 25:5-6). For the divine blessing on Obed-edom's household, see 1 Chronicles 13:14.

26:12 responsible to minister in the Lord's temple, along with their relatives: The role of a security guard for the temple has much more than secular implications.

26:13-16 As with the priests, the allocation of the guard posts to the levitical families is by lot. See the note on 1 Chronicles 24:5.

26:14 the East Gate: requiring six gatekeepers instead of the regular four (1 Chron 26:17), this gate seems more significant, as the extra guards and title "King's Gate" (1 Chron 9:18) indicate.

The guards had the same task: <sup>17</sup>each day<sup>e</sup> the East had six, the North four, and the South four, with two at each of the storehouses. <sup>18</sup>At the courtyard on the West, there were four at the road and two at the courtyard. <sup>19</sup>These were the divisions of the gatekeepers from Korah's family and Merari's family.

<sup>20</sup>Their fellow<sup>f</sup> Levites were in charge of the treasuries of God's temple and the treasuries of the dedicated gifts: <sup>21</sup>from Ladan's family, the family of the Gershonites belonging to Ladan, and the heads of the households belonging to Ladan the Gershonite: Jehieli. <sup>22</sup>Jehieli's family: Zetham and Joel his brother were in charge of the treasuries of the LORD's temple. <sup>23</sup>From the Amramites, Izharites, Hebronites, and Uzzielites: <sup>24</sup>Shebuel, a descendant of Gershom, Moses' son, was the chief officer in charge of the treasuries. <sup>25</sup>His relatives through Eliezer included his son Rehabiah, his son Jeshaiah, his son Joram, his son Zichri, and his son Shelomoth. <sup>26</sup>This Shelomoth and his relatives were in charge of all the treasuries of the gifts dedicated by King David, by the household leaders, by the commanders<sup>g</sup> of the units of a thousand and a hundred, and by the army officers. <sup>27</sup>They had dedicated some of the valuable objects won in battle to repair the LORD's temple. <sup>28</sup>Everything that was dedicated by Samuel the seer, as well as by Saul, Kish's son; Abner, Ner's son; and Joab, Zeruah's son—in fact, anything that had been dedicated—was under the supervision of Shelomoth<sup>h</sup> and his relatives.

<sup>29</sup>From the Izharites: Chenaniah and his family had responsibilities over Israel outside the temple as officials and judges. <sup>30</sup>From the Hebronites: Hashabiah and his relatives, 1,700 capable men, were put in charge of Israel west of the Jordan concerning all of the LORD's affairs and the king's service. <sup>31</sup>From the Hebronites: Jerijah was the head of the Hebronites according to the family records of their households. In the fortieth year of David's rule, a search was made and capable men were found among them in Jazer in Gilead. <sup>32</sup>Jerijah's relatives, capable men, were 2,700 heads of households. King David put them in charge of Reuben, Gad, and half the tribe of Manasseh concerning all of God's and the king's affairs.

Divisions of the military

27 This is the list of the Israelites, the heads of households, the commanders of units of a thousand and a hundred, and their officers. They served the king in every way their divisions required, and they were on duty for a month at a time through all the months of the year. Each division numbered 24,000.

26:20 the treasuries of God's temple and the treasuries of the dedicated gifts: The difference between the two treasuries isn't clear in this verse or the following passage (26:20-28). These treasuries probably stored material items used in the temple worship, such as sacred equipment and materials for sacrifice such as flour, wine, and oil (1 Chron 9:29). treasuries of the dedicated gifts: probably stored gifts secured in war, presented to showcase God's power over Israel's enemies and their gods.

26:28 Abner: led Saul's army. Joab: led David's army (2 Sam 2:8, 13).

26:29-32 responsibilities over Israel outside the temple: The duties of the Levites in Chronicles include responsibilities outside of the temple area (see Neh 11:16). Such a setup presupposes that the entire nation, even those areas relatively far away from the temple itself, would feel the temple's influence through these officers.

26:31 fortieth year of David's rule: his last year (1 Chron 29:27). The author frames David's reign as one totally concerned to prepare for Solomon's temple building in every aspect and until the very end. He secures significant building materials throughout his reign, and spends his last years setting up the administrative structures that will ensure the temple's upkeep and security. Reports of kings plundering the treasuries after the death of Solomon highlight the misfortunes that a poorly run and poorly guarded temple could face (2 Chron 12:9; 16:2; 25:24; 28:21).

27:1-34 The end of the previous chapter, concluding as it did with a list of officials tending to duties outside the temple proper (1 Chron 26:29-32), creates a bridge to chapter 27 where non-worship personnel and arrangements come into focus. Within the narrative line of the entire book, these details conclude the larger account of David's preparation for the temple and the kingdom when his death is in view (1 Chron 23:1). As such, they bolster the depiction of stability and orderliness—this is a centralized kingdom that has been well-planned and will provide the kind of administrative structure that can support the temple far into the future.

27:1 on duty for a month at a time: The administrative structure attributed to David in the books of Chronicles employs the rhythm of twelve monthly shifts for a variety

<sup>5</sup>The third army commander for the third month was Benaiah the chief priest Jehoia-da's son. His division numbered 24,000. <sup>6</sup>This Benaiah was a warrior of the Thirty and in command of the Thirty. In command of his division was his son Ammizabad.

<sup>7</sup>The fourth for the fourth month was Asahel, Joab's brother, and after him his son Zebadiah. His division numbered 24,000.

<sup>10</sup>The seventh for the seventh month was Helez the Pelonite from Ephraim's family. His division numbered 24,000.

<sup>11</sup>The eighth for the eighth month was Sibbecai the Hushathite from the Zerahites. His division numbered 24,000.

<sup>12</sup>The ninth for the ninth month was Abiezer of Annathoth from the Benjaminites. His division numbered 24,000.

<sup>13</sup>The tenth for the tenth month was Maharai the Netophathite from the Zerahites. His division numbered 24,000.

<sup>14</sup>The eleventh for the eleventh month was Benaiah the Pirathonite from Ephraim's family. His division numbered 24,000.

<sup>15</sup>The twelfth for the twelfth month was Heldai the Netophathite from Othniel. His division numbered 24,000.

Tribal leaders

<sup>16</sup>In charge of the tribes of Israel:

for the Reubenites—the leader was Eliezer, Zichri's son;

for the Simeonites—Shephatiah, Maacah's son;

<sup>17</sup>for the Levites—Hashabiah, Kemuel's son;

for Aaron—Zadok;

<sup>18</sup>for Judah—Eliab,<sup>h</sup> one of David's relatives;

for Issachar—Omri, Michael's son;

<sup>19</sup>for Zebulun—Ishmaiah, Obadiah's son;

for Naphtali—Jerimoth, Azriel's son;

<sup>20</sup>for the Ephraimites—Hoshea, Azaziah's son;

for half the tribe of Manasseh—Joel, Pedaiah's son;

<sup>21</sup>for half the tribe<sup>l</sup> of Manasseh in Gilead—Iddo, Zechariah's son;

for Benjamin—Jaasiel, Abner's son;

These were the leaders of the tribes of Israel. <sup>23</sup>But David didn't count those younger than 20 years of age, because the LORD had promised to make Israel as numerous as the stars in the sky. <sup>24</sup>Joab, Zeruiah's son, began to count them, but he never finished. Since Israel experienced wrath because of this, the number wasn't entered into the official records of King David.

of personnel, including priests, musicians, and gatekeepers (1 Chron 24:1-19; 25:1-31; 26:1-12). This chapter divides the military forces into 12 sections as well, and comprises 288,000 troops in 12 divisions of 24,000, all headed by a single commander (27:1-15). This military preparation ensured that the king and the temple would be guaranteed steady and unbroken service.

27:16-24 In charge of the tribes of Israel: the various tribal officers who represent their families. Although the two tribes of Asher and Gad are missing from this list, the total number is increased with the inclusion of Ephraim and the two halves of the tribe of Manasseh (27:20, 21).

27:23-24 This summary of the census first related in 1 Chronicles 21 clears David from guilt by two key assertions: The king didn't count those younger than 20 years of age, and the count wasn't entered into the official records. The summary here also implies that Joab intended to complete the count, although in 1 Chronicles 21:6 he deliberately didn't include the tribes of Benjamin and Levi. According to the author, a census would effectively put a number on the nation that God promised Abraham would be as numerous as the stars in the sky (Gen 12:2; 15:5-4; 17:2-7). official records of King David: The Bible includes no other reference to this record specifically, but does mention "the official records of Israel's kings" (1 Kgs 14:19; 2 Kgs 13:8, 12; 14:15, 28) and "the official records of Judah's kings" (1 Kgs 14:29; 15:7, 23; 2 Kgs 12:19; 14:18).

Civil servants

- <sup>25</sup>in charge of the king's treasuries—Azmaveth, Adiel's son; in charge of the treasuries in the country, cities, villages, and towers—Jonathan, Uz-ziah's son;
- <sup>26</sup>in charge of agricultural workers cultivating the fertile land—Ezri, Chelub's son;
- <sup>27</sup>in charge of the vineyards—Shimei the Ramathite;
in charge of the vineyard's produce for the wine cellars—Zabdi the Shiphmite;
- <sup>28</sup>in charge of the olive and sycamore trees in the western foothills—Baal-hanan the Gederite;
- in charge of the stores of oil—Joash;
- <sup>29</sup>in charge of the cattle that grazed in Sharon—Shitrai the Sharonite;
- in charge of the cattle in the valleys—Shaphat, Adlai's son;
- <sup>30</sup>in charge of the camels—Obil the Ishmaelite;
- in charge of the female donkeys—Jehdeiah the Meronothite;
- <sup>31</sup>in charge of the flocks of sheep and goats—Jaziz the Hagrite.
- All these were stewards of King David's property.

Royal advisors

David addresses Israel's leaders

28 David assembled all of Israel's leaders in Jerusalem, the leaders of the tribes, the leaders of the divisions that served the king, the commanders of units of a thousand and a hundred, the officials in charge of all the property and livestock of the king and his sons, as well as the officers, warriors, and all the valiant men. <sup>2</sup>Then King David stood up and said:

Listen to me, my relatives and my people. I wanted to build a temple as the permanent home for the chest containing the LORD's covenant, our God's footrest. But when I prepared to build it, <sup>3</sup>God said to me, You must not build a temple for my name, because you are a military man and you've shed blood. <sup>4</sup>The LORD, the God of Israel, chose me from my whole household to become king over Israel forever. He chose Judah as leader, and 27:25-31 This list of the stewards of the royal holdings displays a kingdom whose resources are diversified and well-ordered.

27:32-34 The final list in the chapter is of influential people in the king's court, complementing the list of other administrators in 1 Chronicles 18:15-17.

27:32 Jonathan, David's uncle: unknown outside of this list, although a nephew with the same name is mentioned in 1 Chronicles 20:7.

27:33 Ahithophel: a priest and an advisor to David before he supported Absalom's unsuccessful rebellion (2 Sam 15:12). In the midst of the rebellion, David encouraged Hushai to convince Absalom that Ahithophel's solid military advice wouldn't meet with success (2 Sam 15:32-35). When Ahithophel realized that his counsel hadn't been followed, he committed suicide (2 Sam 17:23).

28:1-21 In 1 Kings 1, the feeble and dying David, lying in his room, finally announces his successor only after Adonijah stages a rebellion and Bathsheba reminds David of his earlier promise that Solomon will be the next king. In contrast, in 1 Chronicles David repeatedly announces that Solomon will succeed him, and there are no rivals to the throne. Earlier in the narrative, David told Solomon privately that God had chosen him to reign and to build the temple (1 Chron 22:7-16). In chapter 28, David now stands in front of the leaders of Israel to give an extended and public address to remind everyone of God's choice of Solomon and to give his son the written plan for building the temple. (See sidebar, "David and Moses.")

28:1 all of Israel's leaders: The previous chapter outlined the responsibilities for various officials (1 Chron 27). David here is speaking before all of these same officers, emphasizing the significance that the community had to the Chronicler.

28:2 the permanent home for the chest containing the LORD's covenant: The description of the temple in this way is unique within the Bible. It points to the new era that the temple represents in terms of God's presence with the people in Jerusalem. Once carried in the wilderness, then accompanying the people into war, the roving divine chest will now come to rest in Solomon's temple.

28:3 you are a military man: In his prior speech to Solomon, David supplied a similar reason for why he couldn't build the temple (see note on 1 Chron 22:8).

28:4 chose me from my whole household: In David's presentation, God's choice can occasionally undermine the traditional social structure that favors the oldest male child. This point is also made in the nine chapters of genealogies that open the book—Judah wasn't the oldest son (1 Chron 5:1-2), and David had older brothers (1 Chron 2:15), yet God chose them both. Likewise, David repeatedly asserts here that God chose Solomon within Judah's family, my household, and among my father's family he was pleased with me, making me king over all Israel. <sup>5</sup>And from all the many sons the LORD has given me, he has chosen my son Solomon to sit on the throne of the LORD's kingdom over Israel. <sup>6</sup>He said to me: Your son Solomon will build my temple and my courtyards, for I've chosen him to become my son even as I myself will become his father. <sup>7</sup>I'll establish his kingdom forever if he remains committed to keeping my commands and case laws as he does now.

<sup>8</sup>So now, in the presence of all the LORD's assembly<sup>a</sup> and with God as our witness, carefully observe all the commands of the LORD your God, so that you may hold on to this good land and pass it on to your children forever. <sup>9</sup>As for you, Solomon, my son, acknowledge your father's God and serve him with enthusiastic devotion, because the LORD searches every mind and understands the motive behind every thought. If you seek him, he will be found by you; but if you abandon him, he will reject you forever. <sup>10</sup>Now then, since the LORD has chosen you to build a temple for him<sup>b</sup> as the sanctuary, work hard.

<sup>11</sup>Then David gave his son Solomon the plan for the entrance hall, its buildings, treasuries, upper and inner rooms, and the room for the cover.<sup>c</sup> <sup>12</sup>He provided all of the plans he had in mind: for the courtyards of the LORD's temple, and for all its surrounding rooms where the treasures of God's temple and the dedicated gifts would be stored; <sup>13</sup>for the divisions of the priests and Levites, for all their responsibilities within the LORD's temple, and for all the equipment used in its service; <sup>14</sup>for the weight of all the gold equipment used for every kind of service, and the weight of all the silver equipment used for every kind of service; <sup>15</sup>for the weight of the gold lampstands and their gold lamps—the weight of gold for each lampstand with its lamps—and for the weight of each silver lampstand and its lamps depending on how each would be used; <sup>16</sup>for the weight of gold for each table with the stacks of bread, and the silver for the silver tables; <sup>17</sup>for the forks, bowls, and cups of pure gold; for the weight of each gold dish and the weight of each silver dish; <sup>18</sup>for the weight of the incense altar made of refined gold; and for the construction of the chariot—with the gold winged creatures spreading their wings and covering the chest containing the LORD's covenant. <sup>19</sup>All of this the LORD made clear to David<sup>d</sup> directly in a document, including the plan for all of the work.

<sup>20</sup>"Be strong and courageous," David said to his son Solomon. "Get to work. Don't be afraid or discouraged, because the LORD God, my God, is with you. He'll neither let you down nor leave you before all the work for the service of the LORD's temple is done. <sup>21</sup>Here are the

(1 Chron 28:5, 6, 10; 29:1) to succeed David as king and to build the temple.

28:5 many sons: David's mention of his offspring reminds the reader of the accounts in Samuel-Kings, where Solomon's fraternal rivals such as Amnon, Absalom, and Adonijah each attempt to take the throne. The Chronicler includes none of these stories, preferring to emphasize the divine election of Solomon (see note on 1 Chron 28:4).

28:6 my son . . . his father: This strikingly intimate imagery for God's relationship with Solomon is also found in 1 Chronicles 17:13 and 1 Chronicles 22:10. Other texts also employ father-son language to speak of God's relationship to David (2 Sam 7:14; Pss 2:7-8; 89:26) and Israel (Exod 4:22; Jer 31:9; Hos 11:1).

28:7 forever if: The requirement of continued obedience to the covenant tempers the father-son language in the previous verse. The Chronicler maintains that the divine-human relationship is marked by a certain mutuality of faithfulness.

28:8 So now . . . carefully observe: As he begins to address his son directly, the plural verbs throughout this verse indicate that David's instructions to Solomon also pertain to the community: The nation's possession of the land depends on their faithfulness to God's commands.

28:9 If you seek him, he will be found by you: Throughout Chronicles, the language of faithfulness to God is often that of seeking (2 Chron 14:7; 19:3; 20:3). As this verse indicates, God responds to this seeking.

28:11-19 In the middle of his long speech, David entrusts his plan of the temple to his son. Given the care that the Chronicler devoted to identifying the amassed building materials and administrative setup throughout the book, it comes as no surprise to the reader that David's plans are also detailed here. They include information about the architecture of the temple and its courts, the ordering and responsibilities of the priests and Levites, and even the weight and composition of various types of temple equipment. The existence of David's plan for the temple is an echo of Moses' plan for the meeting tent (Exod 25:9, 40).

28:18 the chariot—with the gold winged creatures spreading their wings and covering the chest. This description of the apparatus that surrounded the sacred chest is unique to Chronicles. winged creatures: The presence of these creatures around the chest is indicated in the ancient title for God: "the Lord of heavenly forces, who sits enthroned on the winged creatures" (2 Sam 6:2). chariot: This imagery doesn't appear frequently in the Bible, and was possibly influenced by Ezekiel's vision where the Lord is enthroned on a wheeled chariot (Ezek 1:15-28).

28:20-21 Be strong and courageous: David's final advice

David and Moses At many points, the Chronicler emphasizes the continuity between David and his successor, Solomon. The temple that Solomon builds is made out of the material that David assembled and is governed by the administrative structure that he set up (1 Chron 22:2-5; 23-28). The well-being that will mark Solomon's reign as "a man of peace" (1 Chron 22:9) was first promised by God to David (1 Chron 17:9-10). In many ways, this continuity builds upon the connection that the text makes between David and Moses, as well as their successors. Just as David prepares for the temple that he doesn't build, so Moses lays the foundation for Israel's future life in the promised land that he never enters. Just as Moses receives a generous outpouring of financial support from the people to build the meeting tent, David's request for a voluntary offering for the temple results in an overwhelmingly generous response from the people (Exod 25:1-9; 1 Chron 29:6-9). It is fitting then that David's last words to Solomon echo those of Moses to Joshua: "Be strong and courageous" (compare 1 Chron 28:20-21 with Deut 31:6, 8).

Offerings for building the temple

29 Then King David said to the whole assembly:

My son Solomon, the one whom God chose, is too inexperienced for this great task, since this temple won't be for humans but for the LORD God. <sup>2</sup>Using every resource at my disposal, I've provided everything for my God's temple: gold for gold objects, silver for silver objects, bronze for bronze objects, iron for iron objects, lumber for wooden objects, carnelian stones for settings, antimony, colorful stones, every kind of precious stone, and a large amount of marble. <sup>3</sup>What's more, because of my delight in my God's temple, I have dedicated my own private treasure of gold and silver to my God's temple, in addition to all that I've provided for the holy temple: <sup>4</sup>three thousand kikkars of gold from the gold of Ophir, seven thousand kikkars of refined silver for covering the walls of the rooms, <sup>5</sup>gold for gold objects, and silver for silver objects, to be used for everything the skilled workers will make. Who else, then, will volunteer, dedicating themselves to the LORD today?

<sup>6</sup>Then the leaders of the households, the leaders of the tribes of Israel, and the commanders of the units of a thousand and a hundred, and the supervisors of the king's work volunteered <sup>7</sup>to give five thousand kikkars and ten thousand darics of gold, ten thousand kikkars of silver, eighteen thousand kikkars of bronze, and one hundred thousand kikkars of iron for the work on God's temple. <sup>8</sup>Anyone who had precious stones donated them to the treasury of the LORD's temple under the care of Jehiel the Gershonite. <sup>9</sup>The people rejoiced at this response, because they had presented their offerings to the LORD so willingly and wholeheartedly. King David also rejoiced greatly.

Blessed are you, LORD, God of our ancestor Israel, forever and always.

to Solomon employs language very similar to Moses' final charge to Joshua (Deut 31:7-8), repeated by God as the people prepare to enter into the land (Josh 1:6-9).

29:1-30 In the final chapter, David makes his final address to the people (29:1-5) and his final prayer to God (29:10-19). The king's words are met by stirring and powerful responses by the people. They first give very generous offerings for the temple (29:6-9), and then participate in a joyous worship celebration, during which they anoint Solomon as David's successor (29:21-25). The author concludes the chapter with a summary of David's reign (29:26-30).

29:4 three thousand kikkars of gold... seven thousand kikkars of refined silver: a colossal amount of silver and gold that indicates both the king's generosity and God's greatness.

29:5 Who else, then, will volunteer: Having demonstrated his own commitment to the cause of the temple, not simply with words but with a very generous financial contribution, David asks the congregation to respond in kind.

29:6 Then the leaders... volunteered: The repeated use of the verb "volunteer" in verses 5-6 indicates the people's devotion to David and the temple. They immediately do exactly what the king requests. Their response is also similar to the voluntary offering that Moses collects from the people to fund the meeting tent in the desert (Exod 25:1-9; 35:4-29). Both temple and meeting tent are funded not solely by a single leader or from the spoils of war, but from a generous outpouring of wealth from the people.

29:7 five thousand kikkars: Like David's, the people's offering is exceedingly large. darics of gold: Darics are coins first issued by the Persian emperor Darius in the 6th century BCE, weighing approximately one third of an ounce, and mentioned in later texts such as Ezra 8:27.

29:10-19 As his final act, David prays a prayer of praise

- <sup>11</sup>To you, LORD, belong greatness and power, honor, splendor, and majesty, because everything in heaven and on earth belongs to you.
 Yours, LORD, is the kingship, and you are honored as head of all.
<sup>12</sup>You are the source of wealth and honor, and you rule over all.
 In your hand are strength and might, and it is in your power to magnify and strengthen all.
<sup>13</sup>And now, our God, we thank you and praise your glorious name.
<sup>14</sup>Who am I, and who are my people, that we should be able to offer so willingly?
 Since everything comes from you, we have given you that which comes from your own hand.
<sup>15</sup>To be sure, we are like all our ancestors, immigrants without permanent homes. Our days are like a shadow on the ground, and there's no hope.

<sup>16</sup>LORD, our God, all this abundance that we have provided to build you a temple for your holy name comes from your hand and belongs to you. <sup>17</sup>Since I know, my God, that you examine the mind and take delight in honesty, I have freely given all these things with the highest of motives. And now I've been delighted to see your people here offering so willingly to you. <sup>18</sup>LORD, God of our ancestors Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, keep these thoughts in the mind of your people forever, and direct their hearts toward you. <sup>19</sup>As for Solomon my son, give him the wholehearted devotion to keep your commands, laws, and regulations—observing all of them—and to build the temple that I have prepared.

<sup>20</sup>Then David said to the whole assembly, "Bless the LORD your God," and the whole assembly blessed the LORD, the God of their ancestors, bowed down, and worshipped before the LORD and the king. <sup>21</sup>On the very next day they offered sacrifices and entirely burned offerings to the LORD—a thousand bulls, a thousand rams, and a thousand lambs, along with their drink offerings—and many other sacrifices for all Israel's sake. <sup>22</sup>They ate and drank with great joy before the LORD that day and made David's son Solomon the king.<sup>a</sup> They anointed him<sup>b</sup> in the LORD's presence as prince, and Zadok as priest. <sup>23</sup>Thus Solomon sat on the LORD's throne as king, succeeding his father David, and he prospered. All Israel obeyed him, <sup>24</sup>and all the commanders and warriors, as well as all of King David's sons, submitted to King Solomon's authority. <sup>25</sup>Moreover, the LORD magnified Solomon before all Israel, giving him such royal majesty as no king before him<sup>c</sup> had enjoyed.

Summary of David's reign

and thanks, which ends with a final petition. Much of the structure and content of this prayer is similar to his longer prayer in 1 Chronicles 16:8-36 when the divine chest was placed in the tent in Jerusalem. These words look back to David's initial preparations for the temple. Thus the opening prayer (1 Chron 16) and the closing prayer (1 Chron 29) form an envelope around his life's work.

29:15 Our days are like a shadow: Given David's approaching death, these general words about the shortness of life take on a particular poignancy (cf. Ps 90).

29:18-19 direct their hearts toward you... give him the wholehearted devotion: In the Chronicler's portrait, God often responds to the good or evil deeds of humanity with immediate and just rewards. For example, Asa gains victory in battle when he calls on God for help (2 Chron 14:11-12), and Saul's reign ends because of his unfaithfulness (1 Chron 10:13-14). Yet there isn't always a strict or predictable connection between the actions of humans and the response of God. The author maintains God's freedom to intervene and direct the human heart towards faithfulness. In the petition that ends the prayer, David pleads that God cause devotion to flourish in the hearts both of the people and of his son Solomon. For a similar perspective, see 1 Chronicles 22:12; 28:9; 2 Chronicles 30:12. 29:22 and made David's son Solomon the king: In contrast to the story told in Samuel-Kings, the royal transition here is very smooth. After David announces several times that Solomon is the divinely chosen successor (1 Chron 22:9-10; 28:5-7), the people anoint him as king. In addition, the author stresses that his brothers all submitted to his authority (1 Chron 29:24) and God magnified the new king (1 Chron 29:25).

29:26-30 A summary and evaluation of David's reign concludes the book. (See also 1 Kings 2:10-11.)

2 CHRONICLES

2 Chronicles continues the story about the nation, which began in 1 Chronicles. The plot opens with Solomon ruling Jerusalem and concludes with Cyrus announcing the end of the people's exile in Babylon. The stories at the end of 1 Chronicles and the beginning of 2 Chronicles focus on the concerns of the combined work: the ideal unity of the nation and construction of the temple. (For a basic introduction to the entire work, see the introduction to 1 Chronicles.)

The book begins with Solomon worshipping at Gibeon, a site that will soon be replaced by the Jerusalem temple. The new King Solomon will build the Lord's house after his father David spent many years preparing the way (in 1 Chronicles). In the long prayer that marks the temple's completion, largely adapted from 1 Kings 8, Solomon sets up a protocol for how it will operate: Whenever the people pray "and spread out their hands toward this temple," then God will "listen from heaven," and "act" and "forgive" (2 Chron 6:29-30).

Significantly, the prayer looks forward to the final chapters of the book when the people go into exile. It provides a model for prayer in an exilic context: "When they sin . . . and [you] hand them over to an enemy who takes them away as prisoners to enemy territory." Solomon sets the agenda for this future time by referring to turning away from sin, pleading for divine mercy, and praying "concerning this temple," which will prompt God to forgive and restore the people (2 Chron 6:36-39). Even when they have been driven from the land, Solomon's prayer emphasizes that the temple will still continue to function as a place that draws God's special attention.

Before the exile comes the split of the kingdom into the north and the south during the reign of Solomon's son Rehoboam (2 Chron 10). In this context also the temple functions to bring the people together as God's people gathered in worship. The author greatly expands the account in 1 and 2 Kings to detail the Passover celebrations during the reigns of Hezekiah and Josiah (2 Chron 30:1–31:1 = no parallel in 1–2 Kgs; 35:1–19 = 2 Kgs 23:21–23). In this expansion, the author highlights the presence of northerners celebrating in Jerusalem (2 Chron 30:11; 35:18). For the Chronicler, the north made the wrong choice in rejecting the Davidic dynasty. The possibility of forgiveness remains, however, when they "return" and worship at the temple that David and Solomon built in Jerusalem. As Hezekiah puts it in his call to Israel: "yield yourselves to the LORD and come to his temple" (2 Chron 30:8).

The final verses of the book glance back at the beginning, when the story ends with another attempt to build the Jerusalem temple. While the people are in exile in Babylon, the Persian emperor Cyrus calls the people to rebuild God's house once again in Jerusalem: "Whoever among you belong to God's people, let them go up, and may the LORD their God be with them!" (2 Chron 36:23).

Solomon first meets God

1 Solomon, David's son, was securely established over his kingdom because the LORD his God was with him and made him very great. <sup>2</sup>Solomon summoned all Israel, including the officers of the army,<sup>3</sup> the judges, and every Israelite leader who was the head of a family. <sup>3</sup>Then Solomon, accompanied by the whole assembly, went to the shrine at Gibeon because that is where God's meeting tent was, the tent that the LORD's servant Moses had made in the wilderness. <sup>4</sup>Now David had already brought God's chest from Kiriath-jearim to the place he had prepared for it because he had pitched a tent for the chest in Jerusalem. <sup>5</sup>But the bronze altar that Bezalel, Uri's son and Hur's grandson, had made was there in front of the LORD's dwelling, so that is where Solomon and the assembly worshipped. <sup>6</sup>Solomon went there to the bronze altar in the LORD's presence at the meeting tent and offered a thousand entirely burned offerings upon it.

<sup>7</sup>That night God appeared to Solomon and said, "Ask whatever you wish, and I will give it to you."

<sup>8</sup>"You showed so much kindness to my father David," Solomon replied to God, "and you have made me king in his place. <sup>9</sup>Now, LORD God, let your promise to my father David be fulfilled because you have made me king over a people as numerous as the earth's dust. <sup>10</sup>Give me wisdom and knowledge so I can lead this people, because no one can govern this great people of yours without your help."

<sup>11</sup>God said to Solomon, "Since this is what you wish, and because you've asked for wisdom and knowledge to govern my people over whom I've made you king—rather than asking for wealth, riches, fame, victory over those who hate you, or even a long life—<sup>12</sup>your request for wisdom and knowledge is granted. But I will also give you wealth, riches, and fame beyond that of any king before you or after you." <sup>13</sup>Then Solomon went from<sup>b</sup> the shrine in Gibeon, from the meeting tent to Jerusalem where he ruled over Israel.

Solomon's wealth

<sup>14</sup>Solomon acquired more and more chariots and horses until he had fourteen hundred chariots and twelve thousand horses, which he stationed in chariot cities and with the king in Jerusalem. <sup>15</sup>In Jerusalem, the king made silver and gold as common as stones, and cedar as plentiful as sycamore trees that grow in the foothills. <sup>16</sup>Solomon's horses were imported from Egypt and Kue, purchased from Kue by the king's agents at the going price. <sup>17</sup>They would import a chariot from Egypt for six hundred pieces of silver and a horse for one hundred fifty, and then export them to all the Hittite and Aramean kings.

1:1-13 In the book of 2 Chronicles, the reign of Solomon extends from 1:1 to 9:31. Throughout the account, the author emphasizes the king's attention to the temple and religious ritual. In this way, the portrait of Solomon bears a striking resemblance to his father, David. The son brings to realization all of his father's preparations for the temple. In addition, the Chronicler emphasizes Solomon's wisdom and the prosperity of his reign, and shows how these qualities were used to build the temple and establish its services. Like his father, who at the outset of his reign gathered all Israel to bring the divine covenant chest into Jerusalem (1 Chron 13), so also Solomon's first act as king is to lead a national pilgrimage. The destination of the large group is Gibeon, the worship site that the Chronicler presents as a "stand-in" until the temple is in operation.

1:1 the Lord his God was with him and made him very great: For the Chronicler, fame, prosperity, a large family, and success are all gifts from God and signs of divine blessing. They also come with some risk, as the stories will show for successful kings who place their trust in anyone or anything but God (e.g., 2 Chron 18:34). But in the eyes of the author, Solomon's greatness involved material success and a continued reliance on God.

1:2 Solomon summoned all Israel: In the source that the Chronicler uses, Solomon's visit to Gibeon was a private visit (1 Kgs 3:4-14). Here, however, the visit is a national pilgrimage.

1:3 the shrine at Gibeon: This site is mentioned in 1 Chronicles 16:39-42; 21:29-30. It is the legitimate sanctuary that housed the Lord's dwelling and altar and functions in Chronicles as a transitional sacred site prior to the dedication of the temple.

1:4 Now David had already brought: In this aside, the author makes the parallel between Solomon and his father explicit. Just as David gathered all Israel to bring the chest into Jerusalem in his first major act as king (1 Chron 13:3; 15:13), so now King Solomon's first act is to go with the nation to God's meeting tent in Gibeon.

1:5 altar: See Exodus 38:1-8. Solomon and Hiram-abi (see 2 Chron 2:13) function creatively like Bezalel and Oholiab in Exodus 38:22-23.

1:9 as numerous as the earth's dust: an allusion to the promises to Abraham (Gen 13:16; 22:17) and Jacob (Gen 28:14). 1:14-17 Solomon acquired more and more chariots and horses: A description of the increasing wealth of Solomon (including horses, chariots, and silver) brackets the account of the king's reign (here and again in 2 Chron 9:24-28 = 1 Kgs 10:23-29). This bracket indicates the continual economic growth in Solomon's reign.

Solomon prepares to build the temple

2“Solomon gave orders to build a temple for the LORD’s name and to build a royal palace for himself. <sup>2a</sup>To work in the highlands, Solomon drafted 70,000 laborers, 80,000 stonecutters, and 3,600 supervisors. <sup>3</sup>Solomon sent the following message to King Hiram<sup>c</sup> of Tyre:

When my father David was building his palace, you sent him cedar logs. <sup>4</sup>Now as his son<sup>f</sup> I am about to build a temple in the name of the LORD my God. I will dedicate it to him to burn fragrant incense before him, to set out the bread that is regularly displayed, and to offer entirely burned offerings every morning and evening, on the sabbaths, the first of every month, and the festivals of the LORD our God, as Israel has been commanded to do forever. <sup>5</sup>The temple I am about to build must be magnificent, because our God is greater than all other gods. <sup>6</sup>But who is able to build such a temple when even the highest heaven can’t contain God? And who am I that I should build this temple for God, except as a place to burn incense in his presence? <sup>7</sup>So now send me a craftsman skilled in gold, silver, bronze, and iron, as well as in purple, crimson, and violet yarn—someone also experienced as an engraver. He will work with my craftsmen in Judah and Jerusalem who were provided by my father David. <sup>8</sup>Also send me cedar, cypress, and sandalwood logs from Lebanon. I know your servants know how to cut Lebanese timber, so my servants will work with your servants <sup>9</sup>to prepare plenty of timber for me, because the temple that I am about to build will be magnificent and amazing. <sup>10</sup>I will pay the woodcutters twenty thousand kors<sup>g</sup> of crushed wheat, twenty thousand kors of barley, twenty thousand baths<sup>h</sup> of wine, and twenty thousand baths of olive oil.

The LORD must love his people Israel because he has made you their king! <sup>12</sup>Bless the LORD, Israel’s God, who made heaven and earth. He gave King David a wise son who possesses the knowledge and understanding to build a temple for the LORD and a royal palace for himself. <sup>13</sup>I’m sending you a skilled and experienced craftsman, Hiram-abi, <sup>14</sup>whose mother is from the tribe of Dan and whose father is from Tyre. He’s skilled in working with gold, silver, bronze, iron, stone, and wood, as well as purple, violet, and crimson yarn, and fine linen. He can do any kind of engraving and make any design given to him

2:1-18 After securing wisdom, wealth, and God’s blessing in the previous chapter, Solomon now secures the workers and the timber he will need to build the temple. As in the presentation of David, the Chronicler portrays Solomon’s interest in the temple and related religious matters as the primary concern after he becomes king. The first job of both kings is to tend to God’s temple. Solomon’s task of temple building extends from 2 Chronicles 2:1-5:1.

2:2 Building projects in the ancient world needed a very large workforce. The listing of the various workers frames the chapter, as this information is repeated again in 2 Chronicles 2:18.

2:3-10 Solomon’s letter to King Hiram is based on the text of 1 Kings 5:3-6. In his version, the Chronicler expands the source text with a lengthy description of the function of the temple that links it back to the Lord’s wilderness sanctuary (Exod 25-40). The source is also adapted to emphasize Solomon’s paramount commitment to the temple: In 1 Kings, Solomon secures the lumber only after he secures his throne and organizes the administration of his kingdom (1 Kgs 2-4), but in 2 Chronicles, assembling the building material is one of the very first tasks which the new king accomplishes. In addition, in 1 Kings it is the foreign king who takes the initiative to secure the relationship (1 Kgs 5:1), but 2 Chronicles has Solomon sending the initial request for timber to the king of Tyre.

2:3 you sent him cedar logs: See 1 Chronicles 14:1 = 2 Samuel 5:11.

2:4-6 In this section, not present in 1 Kings 5:3-6, Solomon sets out three purposes for the temple, purposes that parallel the Lord’s wilderness sanctuary in the Instruction from Moses: (1) The temple is to be a place to burn fragrant incense in God’s presence (cf. Exod 25:6; 30:1-8), (2) a place to set out the bread that is regularly displayed (cf. Exod 25:30; 40:23; Lev 24:5-9), and (3) a place to offer entirely burned offerings (cf. Num 28-29). Later in Chronicles, once the temple is built and dedicated, God will appear to Solomon and declare “I have . . . chosen this place as my house of sacrifice” (2 Chron 7:12).

2:7, 14 gold, silver, bronze, and iron . . . purple, crimson, and violet yarn: These are the same materials used in the Lord’s wilderness sanctuary, and thus point to continuity in purpose for the two structures (Exod 25:3-4; 35:5-6).

2:8 cedar, cypress, and sandalwood logs: David has already amassed an extensive supply of timber (1 Chron 22:4, 14; 29:2), but Solomon’s “magnificent and amazing” temple (2 Chron 2:9, cf. 2 Chron 2:5) will need even more.

2:13-16 Hiram-abi: This same artisan is mentioned in 1 Kings 7:13-14, although his name is spelled slightly differently (“Hiram”), and his mother is from the tribe of Naphtali. His heritage in 2 Chronicles, descending from Dan, links him back to Oholiab, the chief artisan of the <sup>17</sup>Then Solomon counted all the immigrants in the land of Israel, as his father David had done, and the total was 153,600. <sup>18</sup>He made 70,000 of these immigrants laborers, 80,000 of them stonemasons in the highlands, and 3,600 of them supervisors to keep the people working.

Solomon builds the temple

3 Solomon began to build the LORD's temple in Jerusalem on Mount Moriah, where the LORD<sup>1</sup> had appeared to his father David, on the place David had prepared at the threshing floor of Ornan the Jebusite. <sup>2</sup>He began building in the second month<sup>1</sup> of the fourth year of his rule. <sup>3</sup>Solomon laid the foundations<sup>k</sup> for these structures in order to build the temple of God. The length according to the old standard of measurement was ninety feet and the width thirty feet. <sup>4</sup>Across the front of the temple<sup>1</sup> was a porch as long as the temple was and thirty feet wide, and thirty feet<sup>m</sup> high. He covered the inside walls with pure gold. <sup>5</sup>He paneled the walls of the main room with pine, covered them with fine gold, and decorated them with palm trees and chains. <sup>6</sup>He studded the room with precious stones for beauty; the gold was from Parvaim. <sup>7</sup>He covered the room, its beams, doorframes, walls, and doors with gold, and carved images of winged creatures on the walls. <sup>8</sup>Then he made the most holy place. It was as long as the temple was wide, thirty feet long and thirty feet wide. He covered it with six hundred kikkar of fine gold. <sup>9</sup>The gold nails weighed fifty shekels.<sup>n</sup> He also covered the upper rooms with gold.

<sup>10</sup>In the most holy place he formed two statues of winged creatures and covered them with gold. <sup>11</sup>Together the wingspan of these creatures was thirty feet. One of the first creature's wings was seven and a half feet long and touched the temple wall, while the other wing was seven and a half feet long, touching the wing of the other creature. <sup>12</sup>Similarly, one wing of the other creature was seven and a half feet long and touched the temple wall, while the other wing was seven and a half feet long and touched the other creature. <sup>13</sup>The wings of these creatures extended thirty feet. They stood on their feet facing the main room.

<sup>14</sup>Then he made the curtain out of fine linen and violet, purple, and crimson yarn, weaving winged creatures into it. <sup>15</sup>Then he made two columns in front of the temple, fifty-two and Lord's wilderness sanctuary, who also came from the tribe of Dan (Exod 31:6). He is mentioned again in 2 Chronicles 4:11-16.

2:17 as his father David had done: See 1 Chronicles 22:2.

2:18 This list of workers forms a bracket with 2 Chronicles 2:2 around this chapter.

3:1-14 This section is part of the longer description of the temple in 2 Chronicles 2:1-5:1, drawn from the source text in 1 Kings 6-7. Continuing with the themes of the last chapter, chapter 3 emphasizes the links of the new temple with the Lord's wilderness sanctuary and Solomon's role in completing the task that his father David had begun.

3:1 Solomon began to build: To emphasize the king's active role in the building of the temple, he is the implied subject of the verbs of construction throughout this chapter and much of the next (i.e., "he covered," "he paneled," "he made;"), on Mount Moriah, where the LORD had appeared to his father David: For 2 Chronicles, the temple was located where Abraham bound Isaac (Gen 22), the same place where the plague was stopped and David built an altar to God (2 Sam 24:16-25 = 1 Chron 21:15-22:1; note that the connection with Mount Moriah is an addition to the source text of 1 Kgs 6-7). Highlighting these earlier events that took place at the site reminds the reader that the area has physical links to the ancestors and is chosen by God as a place of divine revelation.

3:3 laid the foundations: In ancient Near Eastern building rituals the foundation laying was one of the most important milestones in the construction of a temple (see also Hag 2:15-19; Zech 4:6-10; 8:9-13). See also 2 Chronicles 8:16.

3:6 Parvaim: This difficult term is probably an unknown geographical name, although it may also indicate a certain quality of gold.

3:7 carved images of winged creatures on the walls: Composite animal images, complete with wings, were associated with divinity in the ancient world. In Solomon's temple, they are carved into the gold-covered walls of the main room, woven into the curtains that surround the most holy place (2 Chron 3:14), and fashioned as two gold-covered statues in the holy place itself (2 Chron 3:10). 3:8 the most holy place: the room where the divine covenant chest would be placed. It was at the rear of the temple, the place farthest from the entrance, and entered by passing through ever increasing gradations of holy space. 3:10 two statues of winged creatures: See note on 2 Chronicles 3:7.

3:14 the curtain: There is no mention of a curtain in the description of Solomon's temple in the 1 Kings source, where a half feet high, with a seven and a half foot cap on top of each. <sup>16</sup>Then he made chains like a necklace<sup>o</sup> and placed them on the tops of the columns. He made a hundred pomegranates and placed them into the chains. <sup>17</sup>Then he set up the pillars in front of the sanctuary, one on the south, the other on the north. The one on the south he named Jachin, and the one on the north he named Boaz.

Solomon's temple equipment

4 He<sup>p</sup> also made a bronze altar thirty feet long, thirty feet wide, and fifteen feet high. <sup>2</sup>Then he made a tank of cast metal called the Sea. It was circular in shape, fifteen feet from rim to rim, seven and a half feet high, and forty-five feet in circumference. <sup>3</sup>Under the rim were two rows of oxlike figures completely encircling it, ten every eighteen inches, each cast in its mold. <sup>4</sup>The Sea rested on twelve oxen with their backs toward the center, three facing north, three facing west, three facing south, and three facing east. <sup>5</sup>The Sea was as thick as the width of a hand. Its rim was shaped like a cup or an open lily blossom. It could hold three thousand baths. <sup>6</sup>He also made ten washbasins and put five on the south and five on the north. The items used for the entirely burned offerings were rinsed in these. The priests washed in the Sea. <sup>7</sup>He made ten gold lampstands as prescribed and put them in the sanctuary, five on the south and five on the north. <sup>8</sup>He also made ten tables and put them in the sanctuary, five on the south and five on the north, as well as a hundred gold bowls. <sup>9</sup>He made the courtyard of the priests and the great courtyard, with doors covered with bronze for the courtyard. <sup>10</sup>He placed the Sea at the southeast corner.

<sup>12</sup>two columns;

two circular capitals on top of the columns;

two networks adorning the two circular capitals on top of the columns;

the holy space there is divided from the larger court by doors (1 Kgs 6:31-32; 7:50; but cf. 2 Chron 4:22). The curtain in 3:14, embroidered with violet, purple, and crimson yarn and decorated with winged creatures is reminiscent of the curtain in the Lord's wilderness sanctuary (Exod 26:31-33). 3:17 Jachin, and . . . Boaz: The significance of these names isn't clear.

4:1-5:1 This section completes the description of the building of Solomon's temple, begun in chapter 2. The amount of gold and intricacy of design indicates that this temple was built on the grandest scale. It was also closely related to Solomon himself—although the work of the chief artisan, Hiram-abi, is described in 4:11-16, the verbs of construction in rest of the chapter (“he made,” “he placed”) implicitly present Solomon as the fabricator. As source material, the author drew on 1 Kings 7:23-26, 38-39 for the material in 2 Chronicles 4:2-6a, and 1 Kings 7:39-51 for the material in 2 Chronicles 4:10-5:1.

4:1 thirty feet long, thirty feet wide: These measurements may refer to the altar itself or the stepped base upon which it stood (cf. Ezek 43:13-17).

4:2-5 tank of cast metal called the Sea: The description here follows 1 Kings 7:23-26, although in the Kings source the rim is decorated with two rows of gourds.

4:7 ten gold lampstands also appear in 1 Kings 7:49, although the Lord's wilderness sanctuary had only one (Exod 25:31-39; 37:17-24 and cf. 2 Chron 13:11). The lampstands are also mentioned in 2 Chronicles 4:20.

4:9 courtyard of the priests and the great courtyard: The temple area had distinct areas of graduated holiness, with specific rules about who could enter each area. The larger courtyard was for the laity, and the smaller inner courtyard was for priests (see the design of the temple in Ezek 40-47. For more on the temple courts, see 1 Kgs 6:36; 7:12).

4:11 Huram, called “Hiram-abi” below in 2 Chronicles 4:16, was the chief artisan who came from Tyre (see note on 2 Chron 2:13-16).

All the things that Hiram-abi made for King Solomon for the LORD's temple were made of polished bronze. <sup>17</sup>The king cast them in clay molds in the Jordan Valley between Succoth and Zarethan. <sup>18</sup>Due to the very large number of objects, Solomon didn't even try to weigh the bronze. <sup>19</sup>Solomon also made all the equipment for God's temple: the gold altar; the tables for the bread of the presence; <sup>20</sup>the lampstands with their lamps, all of pure gold, to burn before the inner sanctuary as prescribed; <sup>21</sup>the flowers, the lamps, and the tongs of pure gold; <sup>22</sup>and the wick trimmers, bowls, ladles, and censers of pure gold. As for the temple entrance, the inner doors to the most holy place as well as the doors to the main hall were made of gold.

5 When all of Solomon's work on the LORD's temple was finished, he brought the silver, gold, and all the objects his father David had dedicated and put them in the treasuries of God's temple.

Solomon dedicates the temple

4:16 Hiram-abi: See note on 2 Chronicles 2:13-16.

4:18 Solomon didn't even try to weigh the bronze: The wealth of the temple's building material points to the grandeur of the edifice, and the preparations of David who amassed so much bronze that it "couldn't be weighed" (1 Chron 22:3; 29:7). According to 1 Chronicles 18:8, David acquired the bronze that Solomon used for the Sea (2 Chron 4:2) as war booty from Hadadezer's cities, Tibhath and Cun.

4:20 to burn before the inner sanctuary as prescribed: The fabrication and placement of the gold lampstands was mentioned earlier (2 Chron 4:7). Now the author envisions their actual use and highlights that this will be in line with the past legitimate tradition as enacted in the Lord's wilderness sanctuary. See Exodus 25:31-39; 37:13-24.

4:22 inner doors to the most holy place: In 2 Chronicles 3:14, the holy place is enclosed behind a curtain.

5:1 In parallel with the source text in 1 Kings 7:51, Solomon completes his work of the temple by bringing the treasure and furnishings assembled by David out of storage and into their true home. While making sense on a purely functional level, the move functions on other levels as well. For instance, it further solidifies the link between David and Solomon in their shared concern to build the temple. And, although he was prevented from participating in the actual construction, assembling and dedicating materials for the temple before his death speaks of David's dedication to the project. Finally, the filling up of the newly-built treasuries marks the completion of the building and provides a logical transition to the dedication ceremonies that follow in 2 Chronicles 5:2-7:22. For earlier notices of David's acquisition of gold, silver, and bronze as war booty, tribute, and voluntary offerings see 1 Chronicles 18:8, 10-11; 22:3, 14-16; 26:26-27; 29:2-9.

5:2-7:22 The newly built temple is now dedicated to God by Solomon and the gathered community of Israel. The subsection in 5:2-14 tells of the initial act of dedication: installing the divine covenant chest beneath the wings of the winged creatures that stood in the most holy place. The material in these chapters closely follows its source found in 1 Kings 8:1-11.

5:2 from Zion, David's City: Solomon's procession thus completes David's transfer of the divine covenant chest from Kiriath-jearim to its temporary resting place in a tent in Zion, and finally to its permanent dwelling a short distance away in the Jerusalem temple (1 Chron 13; 15:1-16:43).

5:3 during the festival: that is, the Festival of Booths in September–October (Lev 23:34-36).

5:4 the Levites picked up the chest: According to 1 Kings 8:3, 6, the priests carry the object, but 1 Chronicles assigns this task to the Levites (1 Chron 15:2). This links back to the wilderness period when Moses instructed the Levites to carry the chest (Deut 10:8). Significantly, because the temple is the covenant chest's final destination, this journey would be the last time that the Levites perform this service. Because only priests can enter into the most holy place, they are the ones to place the chest in its final resting place (2 Chron 5:7).

5:7 beneath the wings of the winged creatures in the inner sanctuary: In the ancient world, divinities were sometimes represented by composite animal images, complete with wings. For a longer description of the temple's most

Worship and Music In Chronicles, worship isn't fully complete without joy and music. The author describes such worship twice during the temple dedication (2 Chron 5:12-13 and 2 Chron 7:6) and mentions it repeatedly throughout the book. Examples include the journey of the chest into Jerusalem (1 Chron 15:16, 25-29), the coronation of Jehoiada (2 Chron 23:13), and Hezekiah's Passover (2 Chron 29:30; 30:21-22). Often these notices are additions to the source material from 1 and 2 Kings, indicating the integral place music had in the author's understanding of worship. They are also often reported in great detail—at times the accounts include the lyrics (i.e., "Yes, God is good!" in 2 Chron 5:13) as well as notes on the instrumentation ("cymbals, harps, and zithers" played by the Levites, and "trumpets" played by the priests in 2 Chron 5:12; cf. 1 Chron 15:16, 28). As the community directs its worship toward heaven in prayer, it takes its place alongside the tradition dating back to David, and the Chronicler emphasizes this link. According to the author, David appointed Levites "to remember, to give thanks, and to praise the LORD" with singing and instruments (1 Chron 16:4-7) and manufactured instruments (1 Chron 7:6), and, along with Asaph, wrote lyrics (2 Chron 29:30).

the chest containing the LORD's covenant to its designated spot beneath the wings of the winged creatures in the inner sanctuary of the temple, the most holy place. <sup>8</sup>The winged creatures spread their wings over the place where the chest rested, covering the chest and its carrying poles. <sup>9</sup>The carrying poles were so long that their tips could be seen from the holy place<sup>w</sup> in front of the inner sanctuary, though they weren't visible from outside. They are still there today. <sup>10</sup>Nothing was in the chest except the two stone tablets Moses placed there while at Horeb, where the LORD made a covenant with the Israelites after they left Egypt.

<sup>11</sup>Then the priests left the holy place. All the priests who were present had sanctified themselves, regardless of their divisions. <sup>12</sup>All the levitical musicians—Asaph, Heman, Jeduthun, and their families and relatives—were dressed in fine linen and stood east of the altar with cymbals, harps, and zithers, along with one hundred twenty priests blowing trumpets. <sup>13</sup>The trumpeters and singers joined together to praise and thank the LORD as one. Accompanied by trumpets, cymbals, and other musical instruments, they began to sing, praising the LORD:

Yes, God is good!

Yes, God's faithful love lasts forever!

Then a cloud filled the LORD's temple. <sup>14</sup>The priests were unable to carry out their duties on account of the cloud because the LORD's glory filled God's temple.

6 Then Solomon said, "The LORD said that he would live in a dark cloud; <sup>2</sup>but God, I have built you a lofty temple—a place where you can live forever."

<sup>3</sup>The king turned around, and while the entire assembly of Israel was standing there, he blessed them, <sup>4</sup>saying:

holy place and the statues of the winged creatures, see 2 Chronicles 3:8-13.

5:9 They are still there today: With the chest permanently installed, the carrying poles were no longer needed. However, 1 Chronicles description expresses the continuation of the command that the poles "should stay" with the chest in the rings (Exod 25:15).

5:12 All the levitical musicians: Musicians from the tribe of Levi also performed when David moved the covenant chest into the tent (1 Chron 15:16-25), marking another parallel between the two processions. See sidebar, "Worship and Music."

5:13 Yes, God is good!: The lyrics that the Levites sing are from Psalm 106:1. They were sung earlier in 1 Chronicles as part of a longer medley at the installation of the chest in the tent (1 Chron 16:34). God's faithful love lasts forever!: At a moment of worship innovation, namely, the dedication of a new temple, the community points to the ongoing love of God.

5:14 the LORD's glory filled God's temple: After the installation of the chest in the most holy place and the praise of the levitical musicians, God marks the divine approval by filling the temple with a cloud-like "glory." A thick cloud also marked the presence of God in the Mosaic meeting tent (Exod 40:34-35).

6:1-2 a place where you can live forever. With these words, Solomon announces that the physical installment of the chest in the temple has concluded and officially offers the temple to God as a permanent home. After his declaration, the dedication continues through 2 Chronicles 7:22 with various prayers, sacrifices, and celebrations.

6:3-11 Before he leads the gathered community in prayer (2 Chron 6:12-42), Solomon recounts the key events that led to this moment. He begins with God's choice of Jerusalem and David (6:4-6), moves to God's promise that David's son will build the temple (6:7-9), and ends with what has just happened: the installation of the chest in the temple (6:10-11). The speech closely follows the source text in 1 Kings 8:12-22.

Bless the LORD, the God of Israel, who spoke directly to my father David and now has kept his promise: "From the day I brought my people out of the land of Egypt, I haven't selected a city from any Israelite tribe as a site for the building of a temple for my name. Neither have I chosen anyone as prince over my people Israel. <sup>6</sup>But now I have chosen Jerusalem as a place for my name, and David as prince over my people Israel."

<sup>7</sup>My father David wanted to build a temple for the name of the LORD, Israel's God. <sup>8</sup>But the LORD said to my father David: "It is very good that you thought to build a temple for my name. Nevertheless, <sup>9</sup>you yourself won't build that temple. Instead, your very own son will build the temple for my name." <sup>10</sup>The LORD has kept his promise—I have succeeded my father David on Israel's throne, just as the LORD said, and I have built the temple for the name of the LORD, Israel's God. <sup>11</sup>There I've placed the chest that contains the covenant that the LORD made with the Israelites. <sup>12</sup>Solomon stood before the LORD's altar in front of the entire Israelite assembly and spread out his hands. <sup>13</sup>Now Solomon had made a bronze platform seven and a half feet long, seven and a half feet wide, and four and a half feet high, and he set it in the middle of the enclosure. He stood on it. Then, kneeling before the whole assembly of Israel and spreading his hands toward the sky, <sup>14</sup>he said:

LORD God of Israel, there is no god like you in heaven or on the earth. You keep the covenant and show loyalty to your servants who walk before you with all their heart. <sup>15</sup>This is the covenant you kept with your servant David my father, which you promised him. Today you have fulfilled what you promised.

<sup>16</sup>So now, LORD God of Israel, keep what you promised my father David your servant when you said to him, "You will never fail to have a successor sitting on Israel's throne as long as your descendants carefully walk according to my Instruction, just as you have walked before me." <sup>17</sup>So now, LORD God of Israel, may your promise to your servant David come true.

<sup>18</sup>But how could God possibly live on earth with people? If heaven, even the highest heaven, can't contain you, how can this temple that I have built contain you? <sup>19</sup>LORD, my God, listen to your servant's prayer and request, and hear the cry and prayer that I your servant pray to you. <sup>20</sup>Constantly watch over this temple, the place where you promised to put your name, and listen to the prayer your servant is praying concerning this place. <sup>21</sup>Listen to the request of your servant and your people Israel when they pray concerning this place. Listen from your heavenly dwelling place, and when you hear, forgive!

dedication of what will be his greatest accomplishment, Solomon's speech emphasizes that the construction of the temple was grounded on God's own pledge.

6:9 you yourself won't build that temple: Like the oracle to David in 1 Chronicles 17, no explicit reason is given for this prohibition. In other texts, David's involvement in wars disqualifies him as "a man of blood" (1 Chron 22:8; 28:3).

6:11 There I've placed the chest that contains the covenant: The placement of the chest in the temple represents a culmination of David's original observation that, while he now lives in a sumptuous palace made of cedar, "the chest containing the Lord's covenant is under curtains" (1 Chron 17:1). In addition to finally rectifying this situation, Solomon's placement of the chest together with the covenant in the temple links key aspects of the nation's tradition together in Jerusalem.

6:12-42 Like his previous speech (2 Chron 6:3-11), Solomon's prayer closely follows the source of 1 Kings 8:22-53, with the major editorial changes occurring at the beginning and the end. The majority of the prayer concerns the ongoing function of the temple, divided into several major sections, each introducing a different future scenario when prayer in or toward the temple would be appropriate. The temple is primarily depicted as a place of prayer. After notes on Solomon's position (6:12-13), the king gives thanks to God (6:14-17) and begs God to hear and forgive the prayer of the nation or an individual when they are in the temple or praying toward it (6:18-39).

6:13 This verse is an addition to the text in 1 Kings 8, inserted to clarify some potential difficulties in the interpretation of the source text. Since Solomon is a layperson, he takes his place not directly "before the LORD's altar" (2 Chron 6:12 = 1 Kgs 8:22), but farther back in the enclosure. To ensure that his voice projects as far as possible (the text notes that it is heard by "the entire Israelite assembly"), he makes use of a platform.

6:14-17 The beginning part of the prayer gives thanks for God's faithfulness to David and asks that the Davidic line continue to receive divine support.

6:18-21 how can this temple that I have built contain you?: Solomon continues the prayer with a reflection on God's ongoing relationship to the temple. God maintains a heavenly dwelling place, a point noted in 6:21 and emphasized throughout the prayer (2 Chron 6:30, 33, 39). Yet God also promised to put the divine name in the temple (6:20), and prayers are to be said by the faithful when they are either in the temple or facing toward the temple (2 Chron 6:22, 24, 29, 34). As such, the temple manifests

<sup>22</sup>If someone wrongs another and must take a solemn pledge asserting his innocence before your altar in this temple, <sup>23</sup>then listen from heaven, act, and decide which of your servants is right. Condemn the guilty party, repaying them for their conduct, but justify the innocent person, repaying them for their righteousness.

<sup>24</sup>If your people Israel are defeated by an enemy because they have sinned against you, but then they change their hearts, give thanks to your name, and ask for mercy in your presence at this temple, <sup>25</sup>then listen from heaven and forgive the sin of your people Israel. Return them to the land you gave to them and their ancestors.

<sup>26</sup>When the sky holds back its rain because Israel has sinned against you, but they then pray concerning this place, give thanks to your name, and turn away from their sin because you have punished them for it, <sup>27</sup>then listen from heaven and forgive the sin of your servants, your people Israel. Teach them the best way for them to follow, and send rain on your land that you gave to your people as an inheritance.

<sup>28</sup>Whenever there is a famine or plague in the land, or whenever there is blight, mildew, locusts, or grasshoppers, or whenever someone's enemies attack them in their cities, or any plague or illness comes, <sup>29</sup>whatever prayer or petition is made by any individual or by all of your people Israel—because people will recognize their own pain and suffering and spread out their hands toward this temple—<sup>30</sup>then listen from heaven where you live. Forgive, act, and repay each person according to all their conduct because you know their hearts. You alone know the human heart! <sup>31</sup>Do this that they may revere you by following your ways all the days they live on the fertile land that you gave to our ancestors.

<sup>32</sup>Listen also to the foreigner who isn't from your people Israel, but who comes from a distant country because of your great reputation, your great power, and your outstretched arm. When they come and pray toward this temple, <sup>33</sup>then listen from heaven where you live, and do everything the foreigner asks. Do this so that all the people of the earth may know your reputation and revere you, as your people Israel do, and recognize that this temple I have built bears your name.

<sup>34</sup>When your people go to war against their enemies, wherever you may send them, and they pray to you toward this city that you have chosen and concerning this temple that I have built for your name, <sup>35</sup>then listen from heaven to their prayer and request and do what is right for them.

<sup>36</sup>When they sin against you, for there is no one who doesn't sin, and you become angry with them and hand them over to an enemy who takes them away as prisoners to enemy territory, whether distant or nearby, <sup>37</sup>if they change their heart in whatever land they are held captive, turning back and begging for your mercy,<sup>a</sup> saying, "We have sinned, we have done wrong, and we have acted wickedly!" <sup>38</sup>and if they return to you with all their heart and all their being in the enemy territory where they've been taken captive, and pray concerning their land, which you gave to their ancestors, concerning the city you have chosen, and concerning this temple I have built for your name, <sup>39</sup>then listen to their prayer and request from your heavenly dwelling place. Do what is right for them, and forgive your people who have sinned against you.

<sup>40</sup>Now, my God, may your eyes be open and your ears attentive to the prayers of this place. <sup>41</sup>And now go, LORD God, to your resting place, you and your mighty chest. May your priests, LORD God, be clothed with salvation; may those loyal to you rejoice in what is good. <sup>42</sup>LORD God, don't reject your anointed one.<sup>a</sup> Remember your faithful loyalty to your servant David.

6:41-42 At the end of his prayer, Solomon returns to the immediate context of the temple's dedication with a paraphrase of Psalm 132:8-10 that isn't found in the parallel text of 1 Kings 8. The verses call upon God to inhabit the temple as a resting place, and highlight God's faithful loyalty to David and his lineage. 7As soon as Solomon finished praying, fire came down from heaven and consumed the entirely burned offering and the sacrifices, while the LORD's glory filled the temple. 2The priests were unable to enter the LORD's temple because the LORD's glory had filled the LORD's temple. 3All the Israelites were watching when the fire fell. As the LORD's glory filled the temple, they knelt down on the pavement with their faces to the ground, worshipping and giving thanks to the LORD, saying, "Yes, God is good! Yes, God's faithful love lasts forever!"

4Then the king and all the people sacrificed to the LORD. 5King Solomon sacrificed twenty-two thousand oxen and one hundred twenty thousand sheep when the king and all the people dedicated God's temple. 6The priests stood at their posts, as did the Levites with the LORD's musical instruments, which King David had made for giving thanks to the LORD, saying, "Yes, God's faithful love lasts forever!" and which David had used when he gave praise. Across from them, the priests were blowing trumpets while all Israel was standing.

7Solomon also dedicated the middle of the courtyard in front of the LORD's temple. He had to offer the entirely burned offerings and the fat of the well-being sacrifices there because the bronze altar Solomon had made was too small to contain the entirely burned offerings, the grain offerings, and the pieces of fat.

8At that time Solomon, together with all Israel, celebrated the festival for seven days. It was a very large assembly that came from Lebo-hamath to the border<sup>b</sup> of Egypt. 9On the eighth day there was a gathering. They had dedicated the altar for seven days and celebrated the festival for another seven days. 10On the twenty-third day of the seventh month,<sup>c</sup> Solomon dismissed the people to their tents, happy and content because of the goodness the LORD had shown to David, to Solomon, and to his people Israel. 11In this way, Solomon finished the LORD's temple and the royal palace. He successfully accomplished everything he intended for the LORD's temple and his own palace.

Solomon again meets God

12Then the LORD appeared to Solomon at night and said to him: I have heard your prayer and have chosen this place as my house of sacrifice. 13When I close the sky so that there is no rain or I order the locusts to consume the land or I send a plague against my people, 14if my people who belong to me will humbly pray, seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways, then I will hear from heaven, forgive their sin, and heal their land. 15From now on my eyes will be open and my ears will pay attention to the prayers offered in this place, 16because I have chosen this temple and declared it holy so that my name may be there forever. My eyes and my heart will always be there. 17As for you, if you will walk before me just as your father David did, doing all that I have commanded you and keeping my regulations and case laws, 18then I will establish your royal throne, just as I promised your father David: You will never fail to have a successor ruling in Israel. 19But if any of you ever turn away from and abandon the regulations and commands that I have given you, and go to serve other gods and worship them, 20then I will uproot you<sup>d</sup> from my land that I gave you, and I will reject this temple

7:1-11 After Solomon's long prayer in the previous chapter, the temple's dedication concludes with a dramatic sign of divine approval (7:1-3) and the people's celebration (7:4-11). The account is based on the material in 1 Kings 8:62-9:1, with the significant additions of 2 Chronicles 7:1-3, 6, 11.

7:1 fire came down from heaven: In an addition to the parallel account in 1 Kings 8, God sends a dramatic sign of commitment to Solomon's temple. This is similar to earlier occasions where God also has fire descend from heaven to indicate the divine endorsement of the temple site (1 Chron 21:26) and the Lord's wilderness sanctuary (Lev 9:24).

7:3 All the Israelites were watching: When God's glory filled the temple earlier in the dedication ceremonies, the cloud was so thick that it affected the ability of the priests to carry out their duties (2 Chron 5:14). Now God's physical endorsement of the temple in the form of fire coming from heaven is visible to the people as well: Everyone present has witnessed God's approval of the new temple. 7:6 This verse is another addition to the source in 1 Kings 8, and reflects the ongoing prominence that the Chronicler gives to music and praise in worship. See sidebar, "Worship and Music" at 2 Chronicles 5. For David's establishment of the temple's musical leadership, see 1 Chronicles 6:31-32; 23:5; 25:1-6.

7:8-10 At that time Solomon...celebrated the festival: The author associates the dedication of the temple with the Festival of Booths in 2 Chronicles 5:3 (see also Deut 16:13-15).

7:12-22 God's revelation to Solomon at night affirms the divine choice of the temple as a house of sacrifice (7:12) and a place where prayers will be heard (7:13-16). The conditional promises to the Davidic monarchy are also confirmed, with a particularly vivid warning about the consequences of abandoning God's commands (7:17-22).

that I made holy for my name. I will make it a joke, insulted by everyone. <sup>21</sup>Everyone who passes by this temple—so lofty now—will be shocked and will wonder, Why has the LORD done such a thing to this land and temple? <sup>22</sup>The answer will come, Because they abandoned the LORD, the God of their ancestors, who brought them out of Egypt. They embraced other gods, worshipping and serving them. This is why God brought all this disaster on them.

Solomon's buildings and prosperity

OAfter twenty years of building the LORD's temple and his royal palace, <sup>2</sup>Solomon next rebuilt the cities Hiram had given him, and he settled Israelites there.

<sup>3</sup>Solomon went to Hamath-zobah and seized it. <sup>4</sup>He fortified Tadmor in the wilderness, along with all the storage cities he had built in Hamath. <sup>5</sup>Solomon also built Upper Beth-horon and Lower Beth-horon as fortress cities with walls, gates, and crossbars; <sup>6</sup>Baalath; all the cities he used for storage; and all the cities used for chariots and cavalry—along with everything else he wanted to build in Jerusalem, Lebanon, and throughout his kingdom.

<sup>7</sup>Any non-Israelite people who remained of the Hittites, Amorites, Perizzites, Hivites, and Jebusites—<sup>8</sup>that is, the descendants of such people who were still in the land because the Israelites weren't able to destroy them—Solomon forced into the labor gangs that are still in existence today. <sup>9</sup>However, Solomon didn't force the Israelites to work as slaves; instead, they became warriors, chief officers, and the commanders of his chariots and cavalry. <sup>10</sup>And Solomon had two hundred fifty chief officers* who were in charge of the people.

<sup>11</sup>Solomon brought Pharaoh's daughter from David's City to a palace he had built for her, because he said, "My wife mustn't live in the palace of Israel's King David, because the places where the LORD's chest has been are holy."

<sup>12</sup>Then Solomon offered entirely burned offerings to the LORD on the LORD's altar that Solomon had built in front of the porch, <sup>13</sup>as each day required, according to the commandment of Moses for sabbaths, new moon festivals, and the three annual festivals—Unleavened Bread, Weeks, and Booths. <sup>14</sup>Just as his father David had ordered, Solomon set up the divisions of the priests for their services and the Levites to their posts for offering praise and ministering in front of the priests, doing what needed to be done each day; as well as the gatekeepers in their divisions at each gate, because this was what David the man of God had commanded. <sup>15</sup>They didn't deviate in any way from the king's commands

See sidebar, "Acceptable Temple Worship" at 2 Chronicles 29. This warning foreshadows the judgment that eventually falls on the nation in 2 Chronicles 36. The parallel account of 2 Chronicles 7:12-22 is 1 Kings 9:2-9.

8:1-18 Like the next chapter, this account of Solomon's various building projects (8:1-6), faithfulness in worship and the administration of the sanctuary (8:12-16), and collection of gold from Ophir (8:17-18) manifests the king's ongoing success and power. The material in this chapter is taken from 1 Kings 9:10-28, with some alteration.

8:2 rebuilt the cities Hiram had given him: For earlier correspondence between Solomon and Tyre's King Hiram, see 2 Chronicles 2:3-16. In 1 Kings 9:11 Solomon gave the king (referred to as Hiram) 20 cities.

8:3 and seized it: Throughout the tradition, Solomon is generally regarded as "a man of peace" (e.g., 1 Chron 22:9). This account of his campaign against Hamath-zobah, unrecorded elsewhere, puts the king in a different perspective.

8:4 Tadmor in the wilderness: a site 140 miles northeast of Damascus. According to this verse, Solomon's kingdom extends north into Syria.

8:5 Upper Beth-horon and Lower Beth-horon: towns northwest of Jerusalem.

8:7-8 Hittites, Amorites, Perizzites, Hivites, and Jebusites: the traditional names of the Canaanite people groups in the land when the ancestors of Israel arrived in the land (Gen 15:18-21). Solomon forced into the labor gangs: The use of foreign workers for laborers is also seen in 1 Chronicles 22:2 and 2 Chronicles 2:17-18.

8:9 Solomon didn't force the Israelites to work as slaves: Nevertheless, when his son succeeded him on the throne, the people complained to Rehoboam that "Your father made our workload very heavy" (2 Chron 10:4).

8:11 Pharaoh's daughter: The books of 1 and 2 Kings attributes many foreign wives to Solomon, and mentions Pharaoh's daughter several times (1 Kgs 3:1; 7:8; 9:16, 24; 11:1-8). Chronicles, however, names only two of Solomon's wives, and they both appear only once in the narrative: Pharaoh's daughter here in 8:11, and "Naamah from Ammon," the mother of Rehoboam in 2 Chronicles 12:13. Although the Chronicler includes several foreign women in the genealogy of the nation without any censure (including 1 Chron 2:3, 17), Solomon's connection to non-Israelite women and their unorthodox religious practices is decidedly underplayed.

8:12-16 This section is a sizable expansion of 1 Kings 9:25, reflecting the Chronicler's interest in ritual.

8:13 The ritual calendar outlined here consists of sacrifices made every day (as each day required), with additional ones at the weekly celebration of the Sabbath, the monthly new moon festival, and the three annual pilgrimage festivals.

8:14 Just as his father David had ordered: For more on this, see 1 Chronicles 23-27.

concerning the priests, the Levites, or the treasuries. <sup>16</sup>All Solomon's work was carried out from the day the foundation of the LORD's temple was laid until its completion. Then the LORD's temple was completely finished.

<sup>17</sup>Then Solomon went to Ezion-geber and Eloth on the coast in the land of Edom. <sup>18</sup>Huram had his servants bring ships to Solomon, along with crews of expert sailors. They went with Solomon's servants to Ophir and imported four hundred fifty kikkars of gold, which they brought back to King Solomon.

Queen of Sheba

9When the queen of Sheba heard reports about Solomon, she came to Jerusalem to test Solomon with riddles. Accompanying her was a huge entourage, with camels carrying spices, large amounts of gold, and precious stones. After she arrived, she told Solomon everything that was on her mind. <sup>2</sup>Solomon answered all her questions; nothing was too difficult for him to answer. <sup>3</sup>When the queen of Sheba saw how wise Solomon was, the palace he had built, <sup>4</sup>the food on his table, his servants' quarters, the function and dress of his attendants, his cupbearers and their dress, and the entirely burned offerings he offered at the LORD's temple, <sup>5</sup>it took her breath away.

<sup>5</sup>"The report I heard about your deeds and wisdom when I was still at home is true," she said to the king. <sup>6</sup>"I didn't believe it until I came and saw it with my own eyes. In fact, the half of it wasn't told to me! You have far more than I was told. <sup>7</sup>Your people and these servants who continually serve you and get to listen to your wisdom are truly happy! <sup>8</sup>Bless the LORD your God because he was pleased to put you on the throne as king for the LORD your God. Because your God loved Israel and wanted to establish them forever, he has made you their king to uphold justice and righteousness."

<sup>9</sup>Then she gave the king one hundred twenty kikkars of gold, a great quantity of spices, and precious stones. Never again has such a quantity of spice come to Israel as when the queen of Sheba gave this gift to King Solomon.

<sup>10</sup>In addition, Huram's servants and the servants of Solomon, who had brought gold back from Ophir, also brought al gum wood and precious stones. <sup>11</sup>The king made steps <sup>8</sup> for the LORD's temple and for the royal palace with the al gum wood, as well as lyres and harps for the musicians. Never before had anything like them been seen in the land of Judah. <sup>12</sup>King Solomon gave the queen of Sheba everything she wanted, even more than she had brought the king. Then she and her servants returned to her homeland.

Solomon's wealth

<sup>8</sup>LXX, Syr, Vulg, 1 Kgs 10:5; MT how he processed (or went up) to the LORD's temple. <sup>8</sup>LXX, Vulg; Heb uncertain

8:16 from the day the foundation of the Lord's temple was laid: The building begins in 2 Chronicles 3:1 (see note on 2 Chron 3:3).

8:17-18 Huram: See 2 Chronicles 2:3-16 and 1 Kings 9:26-28.

9:1-31 The account of Solomon's prosperity and success continues from the last chapter into chapter 9. The material points to the fulfillment of David's charge to his son: "if you carefully follow the regulations and case laws that the LORD commanded Moses concerning Israel, you'll prosper" (1 Chron 22:13). In this chapter the author first describes the visit of the queen of Sheba (9:1-12), then Solomon's great wealth (9:13-28), and concludes with a summary of his reign (9:29-32). The material closely parallels 1 Kings 10:1-29.

9:1-12 When the queen of Sheba heard reports about Solomon: When he set out to build the temple, Solomon received a letter from Tyre's King Hiram, complimenting his wisdom and understanding: "The LORD must love his people Israel because he has made you their king!" (2 Chron 2:12). Now with the temple completed, the author indicates that Solomon's fame has also extended to the south and into the royal court of Sheba in Arabia.

9:8 and wanted to establish them forever: The queen's summary of God's purpose for Israel is an addition to the text of 1 Kings 10 and fits the Chronicler's hopes for the post-exilic community.

9:9 Never again has such a quality of spice come to Israel: The great generosity of the queen's gift, of a size never to be matched, is a fitting physical representation of the literary account of her visit. Throughout the story, she appears as the active partner to Solomon's more passive character. Although the two rulers are presented as evenly matched (she tells the king "everything that was on her mind" and he "answered all her questions"; 2 Chron 9:1-2), she is the more dynamic participant. She is the subject of most of the verbs (she "heard," "came," "told," "gave," and more), and it is only her speech that is quoted (2 Chron 9:5-8). Although the author writes that Solomon was also generous in his gifts (2 Chron 9:12), her present of gold and spices of an amount that were never again imported into the country is a fitting representation of her prominent place in this story. 9:10 For more on King Hiram, see 2 Chronicles 2:3-16; 8:18. 9:13-28 The numerous references to huge amounts of gold and silver throughout this section points to the king's the land also brought Solomon gold and silver. <sup>15</sup>King Solomon made two hundred body-sized shields of hammered gold, using fifteen pounds<sup>b</sup> of hammered gold in each shield; <sup>16</sup>and three hundred small shields of hammered gold, using seven and a half pounds<sup>d</sup> of hammered gold in each shield. The king placed these in the Forest of Lebanon Palace.

<sup>17</sup>The king also made a large ivory throne and covered it with pure gold. <sup>18</sup>Six steps led up to the throne, which had a gold footrest attached. Two lions stood beside the armrests on both sides of the throne. <sup>19</sup>Another twelve lions stood on both sides of the six steps. No other kingdom had anything like this.

<sup>20</sup>All King Solomon's drinking cups were made of gold, and all the items in the Forest of Lebanon Palace were made of pure gold, not silver, since even silver wasn't considered good enough in Solomon's time! <sup>21</sup>The royal fleet sailed to Tarshish with the servants of Hiram, returning once every three years with gold, silver, ivory, monkeys, and peacocks.<sup>1</sup>

Solomon's remaining days

How Rehoboam lost the kingdom

10 Rehoboam went to Shechem, where all Israel had come to make him king. <sup>2</sup>When Jeroboam, Nebat's son, heard the news, he returned from Egypt where he had fled great wealth. For the Chronicler, wealth is a sign of God's blessing, and an indication that Solomon is fulfilling the covenant regulations (see note at 2 Chron 9:1-12).

9:15-16 two hundred body-sized shields of hammered gold... three hundred small shields of hammered gold: Given the relative expense and softness of gold, as well as the weight of each shield (15 and 7.5 pounds respectively), these items would appear to be purely ceremonial. Later in the narrative, King Shishak of Egypt takes them as booty when he attacks Jerusalem (2 Chron 12:9). the Forest of Lebanon Palace: For a fuller description of this building, see 1 Kings 7:1-12.

9:26 from the Euphrates to the Philistines' land and the border of Egypt: These expansive borders of Solomon's kingdom are reminiscent of those of David, his father (1 Chron 13:5). The large geographical extent is a sign of God's blessing. See also 1 Kings 4:21.

9:29-31 In the Chronicler's version of Solomon's reign, the king dies as a paragon of virtue, completing the temple and strengthening the kingdom during his 40-year reign. In order to hone this presentation, the Chronicler omits retelling 1 Kings 11, where, because Solomon worshipped the gods of his foreign wives, God decided to "tear the kingdom" out of the hands of his son (1 Chron 11:12). the records of the prophet Nathan: As sources for the account, the Chronicler names the records of prophets associated with Solomon's reign: Nathan (1 Kgs 1:11-40) and Ahijah from Shiloh (1 Kgs 11:29-39). For the seer Iddo, see 2 Chronicles 12:15; 13:22.

10:1-12:16 After his death, Solomon is succeeded by his son Rehoboam. The united kingdom that lasted for 80 years under David and Solomon quickly fragments when the north doesn't choose to support the new king (1 Chron 29:27; 2 Chron 9:30; 10:16-17). From this point, the kingdom is divided and will remain so until the fall of the north in 722 BCE. For the Chronicler, the north still remains part of the nation of Israel, but its people can't be fully restored until they again support the Davidic king and worship at the Jerusalem temple. (See sidebar, "God's People, North or South" at 2 Chron 10.) For the rest of the narrative, the author keeps the literary focus on the southern kingdom, retelling the events about the north from the books of 1 and 2 Kings only when they also involve Judah. The story of Rehoboam, the first king of the south in the divided kingdom, begins in 10:1 and continues through 12:16. Although it parallels the source material in 1 Kings 12 and 14, the Chronicler makes some strategic additions. 10:1 Shechem: a traditional religious center for Israel in the north (Josh 24:1-27), and the future capital of Jeroboam's kingdom (1 Kgs 12:25).

10:2 he returned from Egypt: The Chronicler's version of Solomon's reign omits the fuller story of when Jeroboam, a royal official, received a prophecy from Ahijah that the people's worship of foreign gods would result in the from King Solomon. <sup>3</sup>The people sent and called for Jeroboam, who along with all Israel came and said to Rehoboam, <sup>4</sup>"Your father made our workload<sup>1</sup> very heavy; if you will lessen the demands your father made of us and lighten the heavy workload he demanded from us, then we will serve you."

<sup>6</sup>King Rehoboam consulted the elders who had served his father Solomon when he was alive. "What do you advise?" Rehoboam asked. "How should I respond to these people?"

<sup>7</sup>"If you are kind to these people and try to please them by speaking gently with them," they replied, "they will be your servants forever."

<sup>8</sup>But Rehoboam ignored the advice the elders gave him and instead sought the counsel of the young advisors who had grown up with him and now served him. <sup>9</sup>"What do you advise?" he asked them. "How should we respond to these people who said to me, 'Lighten the workload your father demanded from us?'"

<sup>10</sup>The young people who had grown up with Rehoboam said to him, "This people said to you, 'Your father made our workload heavy. Lighten it for us!' Now this is what you should say to them, 'My baby<sup>m</sup> finger is thicker than my father's waist! <sup>11</sup>So if my father made your workload heavy, I'll make it even heavier! If my father disciplined you with whips, I'll do it with scorpions!'"

<sup>12</sup>Jeroboam and all the people returned to Rehoboam on the third day, just as the king had specified when he said, "Come back in three days." <sup>13</sup>The king then answered the people harshly. He ignored the elders' advice, <sup>14</sup>and instead followed the young people's advice. He said, "My father made your workload heavy, but I'll make it even heavier; my father disciplined you with whips, but I'll do it with scorpions!"

<sup>15</sup>The king didn't listen to the people because this turn of events came from God so that the LORD might keep his promise concerning Jeroboam, Nebat's son, which God delivered through Ahijah from Shiloh. <sup>16</sup>When all Israel saw<sup>m</sup> that the king wouldn't listen to them, the people answered the king,

"Why should we care about David?

We have no stake in Jesse's son!

Go back to your homes, Israel!

You better look after your own house now, David!"

Then all Israel went back to their homes, <sup>17</sup>and Rehoboam ruled over only the Israelites who lived in the cities of Judah.

<sup>18</sup>When King Rehoboam sent Hadoram to them (he was the leader of the work gang), the Israelites stoned him to death. King Rehoboam quickly got into his chariot and fled to Jerusalem. <sup>19</sup>And so Israel has been in rebellion against David's dynasty to this day.

division of the kingdom. According to the account in Kings, Jeroboam fled to Egypt when Solomon heard that the royal official would be the king of the 10 northern tribes (1 Kgs 11:26-40). The Chronicler also alludes to the story in 2 Chronicles 10:15.

10:5 Come back in three days: Rehoboam seems to think, incorrectly as it turns out, that his options are open and that he can choose not to lessen the workload that his father laid upon the people (2 Chron 10:4).

10:7 If you are kind to these people: Solomon's advisors present a policy that is both relevant to the specific situation and a rational ongoing policy for all rulers. The source found in 1 Kings 12:7 includes the term "today" after this phrase. With the omission, the Chronicler indicates that royal benevolence shouldn't be temporarily adopted simply to gain power and then abandoned, but it is an enduring way of life in a strong kingdom.

10:11 If my father disciplined you with whips, I'll do it with scorpions! The advice of Rehoboam's younger colleagues (which he himself repeats to the people in 2 Chron 10:14) is reminiscent of Pharaoh's unsympathetic position expressed in Exodus 5:6-9: When the people complain that they want to stop making bricks for a time in order to worship God in the wilderness, the Pharaoh increases their burden by making them "gather straw for themselves."

10:15 this turn of events came from God: This verse, repeating the source in 1 Kings 11:4, gives a retrospective theological claim about the account of Rehoboam's foolishness. Although the story has unfolded via human action, at the conclusion the author attributes its impetus to divine initiative. The move is reminiscent of Joseph's words when he is reunited with his family in Pharaoh's court. Even though the brothers intended to harm him by selling him into slavery, Joseph maintains that "God sent me before you to save lives" (Gen 45:5). keep his promise concerning Jeroboam: For the longer story, see 1 Kings 11:26-40, and the note on 2 Chronicles 10:2.

10:16 Why should we care about David?: Given the story so far, the north's reaction to Rehoboam isn't entirely unexpected. The poetic fragment that marks the division of the kingdom is reminiscent of that which marked its very beginning (1 Chron 12:18).

God's People, North or South After Solomon's death, the northern tribes revolt against Solomon's successor Rehoboam and split from the southern kingdom. For the Chronicler, this is a "rebellion against David's dynasty" (2 Chron 10:19). For the remainder of the narrative, the focus will be on the southern kingdom, with the author omitting the accounts of the northern kingdom preserved in 1 and 2 Kings, except when they involve the south. But the lack of focus on the north doesn't mean that they are without hope. The author asserts that the northern tribes are still the people of God and can turn away from sin to rejoin the south. Although the genealogical links aren't highlighted to the extent seen in 1 Chronicles, the two nations are still called "relatives" several times (2 Chron 11:4; 28:8, 11). In addition, as in 1 Chronicles, the second part of the book emphasizes the joint acts of the two nations at key points, such as the dedication of the temple (2 Chron 12; 7:8) and the Passovers celebrated during the reigns of Hezekiah and Josiah (2 Chron 30; 35:1-19).

11:1-12:1 The story of Rehoboam's reign, extending from 10:1 to 12:16, continues in this chapter. The account begins with material largely dependent on 1 Kings 12:21-24, and then, after Shemaiah's prophecy in 11:4, the Chronicler adds additional material in 11:5-12:1.

11:1 Comparison with the parallel account in Kings reveals a typical editorial move of the Chronicler—the notice that Jeroboam has been crowned king over the northern tribes has been omitted (1 Kgs 12:20). The narrative in 2 Chronicles will continue to leave out information about the northern kingdom except when it explicitly touches upon events in the southern kingdom.

11:2 But the LORD's word came to Shemaiah the man of God: Throughout the books of 1 and 2 Chronicles, God sends messages to various prophets or people of God who relay them to the king. The divine oracles are often tests, and the king's obedience or disregard indicates the nature of their faith in God and of their ultimate success as leaders (see also 2 Chron 20:15-23; 25:7-16). Shemaiah also appears in 2 Chronicles 12:5, 7, and 15.

11:4 When they heard the LORD's words, they abandoned their attack: Rehoboam's obedience to the oracle delivered by Shemaiah in 2 Chronicles 11:3-4 will be rewarded with a flourishing kingdom and large family (2 Chron 11:5-23).

11:5-12:1 With material not found in the Kings account, 2 Chronicles relates how Rehoboam's obedience to God's word spoken through Shemaiah (2 Chron 11:3-4) is first rewarded with the successful fortification of cities in the south (11:5-12), then with the support of the priests and Levites from the north (11:13-17), and finally with a large family (11:18-23).

11:15 the shrines and the goat and calf idols he had made: As king of the northern kingdom, Jeroboam establishes religious practices that are independent of the Jerusalem temple in the south. The exodus of the priests and Levites publically indicates that these innovations are considered

<sup>23</sup>He wisely placed some of his sons in every region of Judah and Benjamin, in every fortified city, and gave them plenty of food and sought many wives for them.

12 But as soon as Rehoboam had secured his royal power, he, along with all Israel, abandoned the LORD's Instruction.

Rehoboam rules

<sup>6</sup>Then the leaders of Israel and the king submitted. "The LORD is right," they said.

<sup>7</sup>When the LORD saw that they had submitted, the LORD's word came to Shemaiah: Since they have submitted, I won't destroy them. I will deliver them in a little while, and I won't use Shishak to pour out my anger against Jerusalem. <sup>8</sup>Nevertheless, they will be subject to him so that they learn the difference between serving me and serving other nations.

<sup>9</sup>Egypt's King Shishak attacked Jerusalem and seized the treasures of the LORD's temple and the royal palace. He took everything, even the gold shields Solomon had made. <sup>10</sup>King Rehoboam replaced them with bronze shields and assigned them to the officers of the guard who protected the entrance to the royal palace. (<sup>11</sup>Whenever the king entered the LORD's temple, the guards would carry the shields and then return them to the guardroom.) <sup>12</sup>When Rehoboam submitted, the LORD was no longer angry with him, and total destruction was avoided. There were, after all, some good things still in Judah.

<sup>13</sup>So King Rehoboam was securely established in Jerusalem. Rehoboam was 41 years old when he became king, and he ruled seventeen years in Jerusalem, the city the LORD had chosen from all the tribes of Israel to put his name. His mother's name was Naamah from Ammon. <sup>14</sup>But Rehoboam did what was evil because he didn't set his heart on seeking the LORD. <sup>15</sup>The deeds of Rehoboam, from beginning to end, aren't they written in the records corrupt. For additional references to worship in the north, see 2 Chronicles 13:8-9; 1 Kings 12:26-33; 13:33; 14:9.

12:1 But as soon as Rehoboam had secured his royal power. In the Chronicler's perspective, obedience to God brings about blessings such as military security, material wealth, and large families. And such blessings themselves bring their own dangers. Here Rehoboam's success is the context for his subsequent fall: he, along with all Israel, abandoned the LORD's Instruction. No explicit details are given regarding what exactly this abandonment entailed, but the author uses the term elsewhere to speak of unsanctioned worship (2 Chron 13:10, 11) or the worship of other gods outside of the Jerusalem temple (2 Chron 7:19, 22; 24:18; 34:25). When the next scene opens with Shishak's attack on Judah, the reader who is familiar with the Chronicler's perspective isn't surprised: Success is achieved and maintained only through a continued reliance upon God. 12:2-16 In this final chapter of Rehoboam's reign, the 2 Chronicles reworks and expands the briefer report in 1 Kings 14:21-31 to emphasize that unfaithfulness to God will be punished, and turning away from sin will be rewarded. In the context of 2 Chronicles 12:1, the reader is led to understand that Shishak's invasion is a punishment for unfaithfulness.

12:2 Egypt's King Shishak. This ruler is known elsewhere as Shoshenq I, and reigned from 945 to 925 BCE. An inscription at Kamak records Shoshenq's capture of 150 localities, including sites in northern Israel. Israel had been unfaithful to the LORD. For the use of this strategic term, see also 1 Chronicles 10:13; 2 Chronicles 26:16, 18; 28:19, 22; 29:19.

12:4 He captured the fortified cities of Judah: This seems to be a reference to the defensive cities that Rehoboam built in Benjamin and Judah, listed in 2 Chronicles 11:6-10.

12:5 Since you have abandoned me, now I am abandoning you: For other messages from God delivered through Shemaiah, see 2 Chronicles 11:3-4; 12:7-8.

12:6-7 submitted: The humble attitude of Israel's leaders and their king enacts the first part of God's pledge to Solomon in 2 Chronicles 7:14. Exactly as God promised, such submission to God brings forth an immediate expression of divine forgiveness: I will deliver them in a little while (see also the repetition of the term in 2 Chron 12:12).

12:9 the gold shields Solomon had made: See 2 Chronicles 9:15-16.

12:12 When Rehoboam submitted: This verse isn't in the source for 2 Chronicles. The addition is consistent with the Chronicler's understanding that people generally get what they deserve (see, e.g., 2 Chron 19:3).

12:13-14 This material is based on 1 Kings 14:21-22. Naamah from Ammon: The mention of Rehoboam's mother is just one of two acknowledgements by the Chronicler that Solomon had foreign wives (see 2 Chron 8:11, and compare 1 Kgs 11:1-10).

12:14 But Rehoboam did what was evil: This is a slight but strategic variant on the parallel text in 1 Kings 14:22, which asserts that "Judah did evil in the LORD's eyes."

12:15 For additional references to Shemaiah and Iddo see 2 Chronicles 9:29; 11:2; 12:5, 7; 13:22. The Chronicler here cites different sources for the record of Rehoboam's reign than are cited in 1 Kings 14:29. continual warfare: Military of the prophet Shemaiah and the seer Iddo, including the genealogical records? There was continual warfare between Rehoboam and Jeroboam. <sup>16</sup>Rehoboam lay down with his ancestors and was buried in David's City. His son Abijah<sup>o</sup> succeeded him as king.

Abijah rules Judah

<sup>4</sup>Abijah stood on the heights of Mount Zemaraim in Ephraim's highlands and said:

<sup>5</sup>Listen to me, Jeroboam and all Israel! <sup>5</sup>Surely you know that the LORD, Israel's God, made an unbreakable covenant<sup>q</sup> with David and his descendants that they would rule Israel forever. <sup>6</sup>It was Jeroboam, Nebat's son, the servant of Solomon, David's son, who rebelled against his master. <sup>7</sup>When some useless, worthless people joined his cause, they overpowered Rehoboam, Solomon's son, who was too young and timid to resist them. <sup>8</sup>And now do you intend to challenge the LORD's royal rule, entrusted to David's descendants? You may have a numerical advantage, as well as the gold calves Jeroboam made for you as gods. <sup>9</sup>But you've banished the LORD's priests, Aaron's sons, along with the Levites, so that you could appoint your own priests as other countries do. Now anyone who shows up with a young bull and seven rams can become a priest of these phony gods!

<sup>10</sup>But us? The LORD is our God, and we haven't abandoned him. Aaron's descendants serve as the LORD's priests, assisted in the work by the Levites. <sup>11</sup>Every morning and every evening they offer entirely burned offerings and fragrant incense to the LORD, and set out bread in stacks upon a clean table. At night they light the lamps on the gold lampstand. Yes, while you are abandoning the LORD our God, we are doing what he requires.

<sup>12</sup>Listen! God is on our side, at our head, along with his priests, who are ready to sound the battle trumpets against you. So, Israelites, don't fight against the LORD, the God of your ancestors, for you won't succeed!"

<sup>13</sup>Meanwhile, Jeroboam had sent troops around behind them for an ambush so that the main force was in front of Judah while the ambush was behind. <sup>14</sup>When Judah looked around and suddenly realized that they were surrounded, they cried out to the LORD while the priests sounded the trumpets <sup>15</sup>and raised the battle cry. When they raised the battle cry, engagement between the north and the south continued through the reigns of Abijah and Asa (2 Chron 13:2-19, 16:1-5), ceasing only under Jehoshaphat.

13:1-14:1a The Chronicler's glowing version of Abijah's reign is very different than the briefer parallel account in 1 Kings 15:1-8. In Kings he is named Abijam and described as a king who "didn't follow the Lord his God with all his heart" (1 Kgs 15:3).

13:2 His mother's name was Micaiah: Abijah's mother is named "Maacah" in 2 Chronicles 11:20-22 and 1 Kings 15:2.

13:4 on the heights of Mount Zemaraim: This site was on the northern border of the southern kingdom.

13:4-12 Listen to me: Abijah's speech to the northern king and his troops reiterates two significant themes that are repeated throughout the books of 1 and 2 Chronicles: The Davidic dynasty is the only legitimate monarchy, and worship in the Jerusalem temple, led by the Aaronic priesthood, is the only legitimate form of religious practice. Abandoning both David and the temple means, in the Chronicler's view, that the north is abandoning the Lord (13:11).

13:5 an unbreakable covenant with David: The Hebrew expression is a "covenant of salt." The Hebrew idiom is unclear to us in English, but the emphasis is probably on preserving the eternal nature of the covenant (Lev 2:13; Num 18:19). The everlasting nature of the Davidic covenant is also emphasized in 1 Chronicles 17:14; 28:7; 2 Chronicles 6:42. According to the Chronicler, God wants David's sons to rule. Thus to reject the Davidic king is to reject God.

13:6 Jeroboam . . . servant of Solomon: For the longer story of Jeroboam, not retold in 1 and 2 Chronicles, see 1 Kings 11:26-40.

13:7 useless, worthless people: See the version of this story in 2 Chronicles 10:1-19.

13:8 You may have a numerical advantage: In 2 Chronicles 13:3, the large army from the south outnumbered the north by a ratio of two to one.

13:8-9 the gold calves Jeroboam made for you as gods. But you've banished the Lord's priests: For more details on Jeroboam's development of worship practices in the north, see 2 Chronicles 11:14-15; 1 Kings 12:26-33.

13:10-12 Aaron's descendants serve as the Lord's priests: Abijah's description of religious practice in the south is similar to the Chronicler's presentation of the worship during the time of David and Solomon (1 Chron 15-16; 23-29; 2 Chron 2-4), with links back to Moses' time as well (Exod 25:30-40; 29:1-9, 38-42; 30:7-10; Lev 24:3-9; Num 8:2-4; 28:3-8).

13:12 who are ready to sound the battle trumpets against you: For more of the priests' use of trumpets in warfare and at festivals, see Numbers 10:1-10; 31:6; 1 Chronicles 16:6.

God defeated Jeroboam and all Israel before Abijah and Judah. <sup>16</sup>So the Israelites fled before Judah, and God gave Judah the victory. <sup>17</sup>Abijah and his people struck them severely: five hundred thousand select warriors were killed. <sup>18</sup>Israel was subdued on that occasion, and Judah succeeded because they relied on the LORD, the God of their ancestors. <sup>19</sup>Abijah pursued Jeroboam and took these cities away from him: Bethel, Jeshanah, and Ephron,<sup>2</sup> along with their villages. <sup>20</sup>Jeroboam failed to regain power during the time of Abijah. The LORD finally struck him down, and he died. <sup>21</sup>Abijah, however, grew strong. He married fourteen wives; he had twenty-two sons and sixteen daughters. <sup>22</sup>The rest of Abijah's deeds, what he did and what he said, are written in the account of the prophet Iddo. <sup>1</sup>Abijah lay down with his ancestors and was buried in David's City. His son Asa succeeded him as king.

Asa rules Judah

<sup>7</sup>"Let's build up these cities," Asa told Judah. "We'll surround them with walls, towers, gates, and crossbars while the land is still ours, because we sought the LORD our God and he sought us" and surrounded us with rest." As a result, the people successfully completed their building projects.

Judah defeats Cush

13:17 five hundred thousand select warriors were killed: This represents over half of the north's army, and a considerable feat for the much smaller southern force fighting with a tactical disadvantage (2 Chron 13:3, 13).

13:18 Judah succeeded because they relied on the Lord: Throughout the books of 1 and 2 Chronicles, military victory comes not from overwhelming force or shrewd strategy but through trust in God. See also 2 Chronicles 14:11-12.

13:19 Bethel, Jeshanah, and Ephron: These were all north of Mount Zemaraim (2 Chron 13:2), and thus the battle extended the territory of the southern kingdom.

13:21 Abijah, however, grew strong: As is typical in the Chronicler's presentation, a sign of a king's strength and blessedness is a large family (see also 2 Chron 11:18-23).

13:22 the account of the prophet Iddo: The records of Iddo relating to the reigns of Jeroboam and Rehoboam are mentioned in 2 Chronicles 9:29; 12:15.

14:1a A similar summary of Abijah's reign concludes the account in 1 Kings 15:8.

14:1b-16:14 As in Rehoboam's reign, the Chronicler's presentation of the kingship of Asa demonstrates that reliance on God will bring blessing, while disobedience will result in disaster. The story is told in two major parts. The first consists of a long period of faithfulness, which is rewarded with military victory, peace, and prosperity (14:1b-15:19). Then comes a short period of disobedience that ends with a crippling foot disease (16:1-14). The account is an expansion of the much shorter report of Asa's reign found in 1 Kings 15:9-24.

14:1b the land had peace: The absence of war is a divine reward for faithfulness throughout the books of 1 and 2 Chronicles (see 1 Chron 22:9; 2 Chron 20:30).

14:3 foreign altars and shrines... sacred pillars... sacred poles: With all the focus on the temple, this is the first time the Chronicler mentions worship in Judah outside Jerusalem. For prohibitions against such practices, see Deuteronomy 7:5; 12:3; 16:21-22. For another account of similar reforms in Jerusalem, see 2 Chronicles 31:1.

14:4 to seek the Lord: For the Chronicler, this is the main duty of humanity and the key to a king's successful reign (1 Chron 28:9; 2 Chron 14:7; 19:3; 20:3; 26:5).

14:6-7 he built fortified cities... there was no war... the people successfully completed their building projects: In Chronicles, building programs and the lack of war are God-given rewards for faithfulness (2 Chron 11:5-12). See also the note on 2 Chronicles 14:1.

14:8-15 Outside the Bible, there is no additional evidence for this military engagement, and the account supplies no reason for Cush's offensive attack on Judah. As in the story of Judah's fight against Israel in the previous chapter (2 Chron 13:14-16), the narrative is an example of the Chronicler's belief that reliance on God can bring about surprising victories.

14:8-9 body-sized shields and spears... small shields and bows: The two different sizes of shields and weapons represent two different types of fighting. The larger and bulkier body-sized shields along with the stronger and heavier spears were best suited for defensive maneuvers. The lighter small shields, in concert with the bows, were much army of one million men and three hundred chariots. When he got as far as Mareshah, <sup>10</sup>Asa marched against him, setting up for battle in a valley north<sup>m</sup> of Mareshah.

<sup>11</sup>Then Asa cried out to the LORD his God, "LORD, only you can help the weak against the powerful.<sup>a</sup> Help us, LORD our God, because we rely on you and we have marched against this multitude in your name. You are the LORD our God. Don't let a mere human stand against you!"

<sup>12</sup>So the LORD struck the Cushites before Asa and Judah, and the Cushites fled. <sup>13</sup>Asa and his troops chased them as far as Gerar. The Cushites fell until there were no survivors. They were completely crushed by the LORD and his army, who carried off a huge amount of loot, <sup>14</sup>and attacked all the cities surrounding Gerar who were terrified of the LORD. They plundered all these cities as well because there was a great amount of loot in them. <sup>15</sup>They also attacked the herdsman's camps, taking many sheep and camels before returning to Jerusalem.

15 When God's spirit came upon Azariah, Oded's son, <sup>2</sup>he confronted Asa: "Listen to me, Asa and all Judah and Benjamin," he said. "The LORD is with you as long as you are with him. If you seek him, he will be found by you; but if you abandon him, he will abandon you. <sup>3</sup>For a long time Israel was without the true God, without a priest to teach them, and without the Instruction. <sup>4</sup>But in their time of trouble they turned to the LORD, Israel's God. They sought him and found him! <sup>5</sup>At that time, it wasn't safe to travel because great turmoil affected all the inhabitants of the area. <sup>6</sup>Nation was crushed by nation and city by city, as God troubled them with every kind of problem. <sup>7</sup>But as for you, be brave and don't lose heart, because your work will be rewarded!"

Asa's reforms

<sup>8</sup>As soon as Asa heard these words and the prophecy of Azariah, Oded's son,<sup>7</sup> he felt brave and removed the detestable idols from all of Judah and Benjamin, as well as from the cities he had captured in Ephraim's highlands, and he repaired the LORD's altar that stood before more maneuverable and better in offensive operations. However, even though Asa led a large army capable of taking advantage of several different fighting strategies, his troops were greatly outnumbered by Zerah's army of one million men and three hundred chariots.

14:9-10 Mareshah: This city was fortified by Jeroboam, according to 2 Chronicles 11:8.

14:11 Help us, LORD our God, because we rely on you: Asa prays on behalf of himself and the people for God's help in a dire military situation. This event will be retold in 2 Chronicles 16:7-9 in a dramatically different context. Given that they are about to face each other in battle, Asa's portrayal of Zerah along with his force of one million men and three hundred chariots as a mere human is striking.

14:12 So the LORD struck the Cushites: God's response to Asa's prayer is immediate and powerful. Greatly outnumbered and without any clear military strategy, Israel's victory over Zerah's army seems clearly sent from God. The steadfast reliance on God and God's swift response here is similar to the account of the war between the forces of Abijah and Rehoboam in 2 Chronicles 13:3-18.

15:1-7 By bridging the victory over Zerah (2 Chron 14:9-15) and the later work of Asa (2 Chron 15:8-19), God relays a message through Azariah that the people should continue in their faithfulness. Azariah's address, not present in the 1 Kings material, highlights the Chronicler's ongoing emphasis on God's responsiveness: If you seek him, he will be found by you. See sidebar, "Only God Brings Security."

15:1 God's spirit came upon: The Chronicler employs this expression several times to describe the overpowering force associated with divine inspiration (1 Chron 12:18; 2 Chron 20:14; 24:20). It is reserved to describe the experience of nonprofessional prophets.

15:2 If you seek him, he will be found by you: This is a general theme sounded throughout the books of 1 and 2 Chronicles (e.g., 1 Chron 28:9), and also the particular lesson that can be learned from the recent experience of Judah (2 Chron 14:4, 7). Fittingly, it will also be repeated in 2 Chronicles 15:15. Although the Chronicler ultimately maintains that God is free from human calculation, there is also a sense in the book that the fate of humanity is influenced by their conduct (2 Chron 12:5; 24:20).

15:4 But in their time of trouble they turned to the LORD: This cycle of distress and deliverance is a recurrent theme in the book of Judges (e.g., Judg 3:9).

15:8-19 As soon as Asa heard these words... he... removed the detestable idols: The king's response to Azariah's oracle is immediate and includes worship reform (15:8, 16) and the handing over of war booty to God's temple (15:11). Divine oracles occur throughout the books of 1 and 2 Chronicles, and the kings' responses to them will largely determine the success or failure of their reign (e.g., 2 Chron 16:10; 20:15-30; 25:15-24). In the context of the story of Asa, the oracle and his response cause the reader to re-evaluate the account of his prior victory in war (2 Chron 14:8-15). Winning the battle over Zerah and the Cushites is now not the conclusion of the narrative but rather more of a trial that has been passed with success. Having fully trusted God, Asa and the nation must now faithfully tend to their post-war lives.

15:8 the cities he had captured in Ephraim's highlands: The books of 1 and 2 Chronicles includes no earlier reference to this territorial expansion. he repaired the LORD's altar: As

Only God Brings Security In Chronicles, prophecy reminds the human community that God honors their reliance upon God alone, warning against any attempt to find security elsewhere. For example, Azariah tells King Asa and the people that “If you seek [God], he will be found by you” (2 Chron 15:2). The divinely sent message comes just after the nation’s victorious battle with Cush, brought about by God because Asa trusted in God (2 Chron 14:8-15). The king and the people heed Azariah’s message and reform their worship by removing idols throughout the land, repairing the Lord’s altar, and renewing their commitment “to seek the LORD . . . with all their heart and all their being” (2 Chron 15:8-18). Later, Asa is warned by Hanani the seer that relying on political agreements with other kings will only bring insecurity: “Your foolishness means that you will have war on your hands from now on” (2 Chron 16:7-9). Instead of changing his ways, however, Asa greets this message with anger and throws the prophet in jail (2 Chron 16:10). For this, the king is rewarded with a “severe foot disease” (2 Chron 16:11-12). Other examples abound in Chronicles, and the repetition emphasizes the author’s firm view: When people heed the voice of the prophet, God brings victory and/or prosperity (i.e., 2 Chron 20:15-23). But ignoring God’s word spoken by a prophet is always punished, either by sickness, military defeat, or finally exile (2 Chron 24:20-22; 25:15-16; 36:12, 15-17).

the LORD’s entrance hall. <sup>9</sup>Then Asa gathered all Judah and Benjamin, along with those who were living among them as immigrants from Ephraim, Manasseh, and Simeon, because many people from Israel had joined up with him when they saw that the LORD his God was with him. <sup>10</sup>They gathered in Jerusalem in the third month of the fifteenth year of Asa’s rule. <sup>11</sup>On that day they sacrificed to the LORD part of the loot they had taken: seven hundred oxen and seven thousand sheep. <sup>12</sup>They made a covenant to seek the LORD, the God of their ancestors, with all their heart and all their being. <sup>13</sup>They agreed that anyone who refused to seek the LORD, Israel’s God, would be put to death, whether young or old, male or female. <sup>14</sup>They swore this to the LORD with a loud voice, shouts of joy, and blasts from trumpets and horns. <sup>15</sup>All Judah was delighted with the solemn pledge because they had sworn it with all their hearts. When they enthusiastically sought God, he was found by them, and the LORD gave them peace on every side. <sup>16</sup>Asa the king even removed his grandmother Maacah from the position of queen mother because she had made an image of Asherah. Asa cut down her image, pulverized it, and burned it in the Kidron Valley. <sup>17</sup>Although the shrines weren’t removed from Israel, Asa nevertheless remained committed with all his heart throughout his life. <sup>18</sup>He brought into God’s temple the various silver and gold objects that he and his father had dedicated. <sup>19</sup>There was no war until the thirty-fifth year of Asa’s rule.

Aram invades Judah

16 In the thirty-sixth year of Asa’s rule, Israel’s King Baasha attacked Judah and fortified Ramah to prevent Judah’s King Asa from moving into that area. <sup>2</sup>Asa took silver with the withholding of the news that Judah engaged in nonsanctioned worship with pillar and poles until the notice that Asa abolished it, the reader is informed of the damage to the Lord’s altar only after the king made the repairs.

15:9 The king’s inclusion of representatives from both the south and the north in a religious event celebrated in Jerusalem is a theme highlighted throughout the book (1 Chron 13:1-5; 2 Chron 11:13-17). The emphasis reflects the belief that the nation in its ideal state consists of both the northern and the southern tribes.

15:10 They gathered in Jerusalem in the third month: The occasion may have been related to the Festival of Weeks (Exod 23:16; Lev 23:15-21; Num 28:26; Deut 16:9-10), or the commemoration of God’s appearance at Sinai (Exod 19:1).

15:13 Anyone who refused to seek the LORD . . . would be put to death: This harsh agreement reflects the severity of penalty clauses in ancient covenants (see Deut 13:6-10; 17:2-7), and points to the radical solidarity of the community in their religious fervor. Other Persian period texts speak of penalties that were similarly extreme (Ezra 7:26; 10:8).

15:15 When they enthusiastically sought God, he was found by them: See note on 2 Chronicles 15:2.

15:16-18 This material is taken from 1 Kings 15:13-15 and points to the fulfillment of the covenant made earlier in 2 Chronicles 15:12-14.

15:16 queen mother: In line with some of Israel’s neighbors, the queen mother may have fulfilled an official position of great power (perhaps with influence concerning worship), that was second in authority only to the king.

16:1-14 The final chapter in Asa’s reign brings the story of the king’s longstanding faithfulness (2 Chron 14:1b-15:19) to a relatively swift and unhappy demise. It adopts much of the material from 1 Kings 15:17-24, and expands this source with the story about Hanani’s oracle and Asa’s response (2 Chron 16:7-10). See sidebar, “Only God Brings Security” at 2 Chronicles 15.

16:1 In the thirty-sixth year of Asa’s rule: There is some confusion here as 1 Kings 16:6, 8 has Baasha dying as early as the 26th year of Asa. fortified Ramah: This site lay about eight miles from Jerusalem, so Baasha’s building program poses a significant threat to the south.

16:2 Asa took silver and gold from the treasuries: In the Chronicler’s retelling, the king’s plundering of the treasuries isn’t as extreme as in the account in 1 Kings where he and gold from the treasuries of the LORD's temple and the royal palace and sent them to Aram's King Ben-hadad, who ruled in Damascus, with the following message: <sup>3</sup>"Let's make a covenant similar to the one between our fathers. Since I have already sent you silver and gold, break your covenant with Israel's King Baasha so that he will leave me alone." <sup>4</sup>Ben-hadad agreed with King Asa and sent his army commanders against the cities of Israel, attacking Ijon, Dan, Abel-maim, and all the store-cities of Naphtali. <sup>5</sup>As soon as Baasha learned of this, he stopped building Ramah and abandoned his work. <sup>6</sup>Then King Asa had all Judah carry away the stone and timber that Baasha was using to build Ramah, and King Asa used it to build Geba and Mizpah. <sup>7</sup>At that time Hanani the seer came to Judah's King Asa and said to him, "Because you relied on Aram's king and not on the LORD your God, the army of Aram's king has slipped out of your grasp. <sup>8</sup>Weren't the Cushites and the Libyans a vast army with chariots and horsemen to spare? Still, when you relied on the LORD, he delivered them into your power, <sup>9</sup>because the LORD's eyes scan the whole world to strengthen those who are committed to him with all their hearts. Your foolishness means that you will have war on your hands from now on." <sup>10</sup>Asa was angry with the seer. Asa was so mad he threw Hanani in jail and took his anger out on some of the people.

Asa's disease and death

Jehoshaphat rules Judah

17 Asa's son Jehoshaphat succeeded him as king. Jehoshaphat strengthened his position against Israel <sup>2</sup>by stationing troops in the fortified cities of Judah and placing soldiers

"took all the silver and gold that remained in the treasuries" (1 Kgs 15:18). Aram's King Ben-hadad: Aram was a nation that lay to the north of Israel. It had been increasing in strength since the days of Solomon (1 Kgs 11:23-25), and would come to occupy Samaria (1 Kgs 20).

16:3-5 Let's make a covenant: Asa's strategy doesn't involve a direct military encounter with Israel but rather diplomatic agreements with a third party. Ben-hadad would go on to attack several major sites in Israel (Ijon, Dan, Abel-maim, and all the store-cities of Naphtali), causing Baasha to retreat from Ramah.

16:6 and King Asa used it to build Geba and Mizpah: Strategically, Asa rerouted the building material assembled by Baasha to sites in Benjaminite territory, thus strengthening the defenses of the south.

16:7-9 At that time, Hanani the seer came to Judah's King Asa: Right when Asa's diplomatic ingenuity has saved Judah from certain war, God sends him a message through the words of Hanani. In many ways, this encounter is a direct reversal of the time when Asa was confronted with another divine message in the previous chapter (2 Chron 15:1-7). At that point in the narrative, Asa had just won an improbable victory over the much larger forces of Cush because he relied on God's help (2 Chron 14:11). When Azariah reminded the king that he must remain faithful to God, Asa instituted a thorough religious reform (15:8-18). Now the divine word again comes to Asa, but with a very different message. Hanani declares that the king's reliance on Aram rather than God to defeat Israel was foolishness and will be punished with more military encounters: you will have war on your hands from now on (16:9).

16:7 the army of Aram's king has slipped out of your grasp: This message is somewhat unexpected, given that Judah and Aram have just set up a successful political alliance, and there is no military engagement between them on the horizon (2 Chron 16:3-4). The oracle places Asa's recent success in the context of its long-range consequences, where Aram will become a real threat to Israel and Judah. 16:10 Asa was angry with the seer: The king who had been so faithful throughout his 35-year reign now disregards God's invitation to turn away from sin. Throughout the books of 1 and 2 Chronicles, divine oracles function as warnings to kings, and the royal response prompts a reciprocal action on the part of God. The emphasis placed in this verse on Asa's furious response to the oracle (angry... so mad... anger) leads the reader to expect that the king will soon be punished. For more on the response to divine oracles throughout the books of 1 and 2 Chronicles, see note on 2 Chronicles 15:8-19.

16:11 the official records of Israel's and Judah's kings: Previously, the Chronicler has referred to sources associated with the prophets (2 Chron 9:29; 12:15; 13:22).

16:12 even in his illness he refused to seek the LORD: For the biblical author, Asa's ailment functions as a punishment for not heeding God's word spoken through Hanani (2 Chron 16:7-9) and brings another opportunity to seek God. Parallel with his stubborn response to the prophet, however (2 Chron 16:10), Asa continues to seek guidance elsewhere.

16:14 He was buried in the tomb he had prepared: In this lengthy and detailed description of the king's funeral service (the longest recorded for any king in the Bible), Asa's final fate reflects the long years of faithfulness to God.

17:1-21:1 The Chronicler's version of the reign of Jehoshaphat, extending over four chapters, represents a considerable expansion of the source material. In 1 and throughout the land of Judah and in the cities of Ephraim that his father Asa had captured. <sup>3</sup>The LORD was with Jehoshaphat because he followed the earlier ways of his father<sup>a</sup> by not seeking Baal. <sup>4</sup>Instead, he sought the God of his father, and unlike Israel, he followed God's commandments. <sup>5</sup>The LORD gave him firm control over the kingdom, and all Judah brought Jehoshaphat tribute, so that he had abundant riches and honor. <sup>6</sup>Jehoshaphat took pride in the LORD's ways and again removed the shrines and the sacred poles<sup>a</sup> from Judah.

<sup>10</sup>All the kingdoms surrounding Judah were afraid of the LORD and didn't wage war against Jehoshaphat. <sup>11</sup>Some of the Philistines brought a load of silver as tribute to Jehoshaphat. The Arabians also brought flocks to Jehoshaphat: seventy-seven hundred rams and seventy-seven hundred goats. <sup>12</sup>As Jehoshaphat grew increasingly powerful, he built fortresses and storage cities in Judah <sup>13</sup>and had many supplies in the cities of Judah. He also had an army of mighty warriors in Jerusalem, <sup>14</sup>registered by their clans as follows: Judah's officers over units of a thousand included Commander Adnah with three hundred thousand soldiers; <sup>15</sup>next to him was Commander Jehohanan with two hundred eighty thousand soldiers; <sup>16</sup>at his side was Amasiah, Zichri's son, who volunteered for the LORD with two hundred thousand soldiers. <sup>17</sup>From Benjamin came a valiant warrior: Eliada, together with two hundred thousand armed with bow and shield; <sup>18</sup>next to him was Jehozabab, together with one hundred eighty thousand soldiers. <sup>19</sup>These were the individuals who served the king in addition to those the king placed in the fortified cities throughout Judah.

Jehoshaphat and Ahab

18 Even though Jehoshaphat already had great wealth and honor, he allied himself with Ahab through marriage. <sup>2</sup>A few years later, while Jehoshaphat was visiting Ahab in

2 Kings, accounts of the southern king are mostly linked to his involvement with the military strategy of the north (i.e., 1 Kgs 22:1-38 concerns Jehoshaphat's coalition with Ahab against Aram, and 2 Kgs 3:4-27 relates the coalition with Joram against Moab). In the Chronicler's expansion, Jehoshaphat emerges as a figure in his own right and institutes several significant reforms in the religious and legal life of the southern kingdom.

17:5 all Judah brought Jehoshaphat tribute: Although the bringing of tribute was a standard practice between foreign states, this is the only time in the Bible where a king receives such payment from his own people. The Chronicler also mentions that the Philistines and Arabians brought to the king tribute in 2 Chronicles 17:11. he had abundant riches and honor: This presentation of Jehoshaphat, combined with the later notices of his concern for proper worship and his maintenance of peace (2 Chron 17:6, 10), is reminiscent of the author's portrayal of Solomon (see 2 Chron 9:13-28).

17:6 again removed the shrines and the sacred poles from Judah: This text stands in tension with 2 Chronicles 20:33, which claims that Jehoshaphat "didn't remove the shrines." The eradication or refurbishment of such objects will be a standard feature in 2 Chronicles' description and evaluation of the southern kings (2 Chron 28:2; 33:3; 34:3-4, 33).

17:7-9 Jehoshaphat's initiative to have the people taught the LORD's Instruction scroll is striking, as is the composition of the teaching groups (two priests, thirteen Levites, as well as lay members). The closest biblical parallel is in the book of Ezra when King Artaxerxes commanded Ezra to "appoint supervisors and judges to adjudicate among all the people" and to teach God's laws to "those who did not know them" (Ezra 7:25). There is no other parallel text that describes the king's first reform. For other references to "the instruction scroll," see 2 Kings 14:6; 22:8 = 2 Chronicles 34:15; Deuteronomy 17:18-20; 28:61; Nehemiah 9:3.

17:10-19 As with the rest of the chapter, there is no biblical parallel for this material. In the Chronicler's view, Jehoshaphat's prosperity is a sign of divine blessing.

17:10 were afraid of the Lord: A similar summary is found at the end of Jehoshaphat's reign in 2 Chronicles 20:29.

18:1-19:3 In the first war of his reign, Jehoshaphat joins forces with Ahab against Aram at Ramoth-gilead. Most of this material is adopted from 1 Kings 22:1-36, but given a new introduction (18:1-2) and conclusion (19:1-3).

18:1 Even though Jehoshaphat already had great wealth and honor: In the Chronicler's own introduction, Jehoshaphat's material prosperity is highlighted, and given an ominous presentation. he allied himself with Ahab through marriage: Ahab was the king in the north, and his daughter Athaliah married Jehoshaphat's son Jehoram (2 Chron 21:6; 2 Kgs 8:18, 26). Kings would often marry for political reasons or to acquire a sizable dowry, but here the Chronicler clearly doesn't approve of such calculations.

18:2 to persuade him to attack Ramoth-gilead: Given the subtle negative judgment in 18:1 ("Even though"), the reader notes the use of the term to persuade with some amount of dread. Even without a clear sense of the military context (might this be a good move for Judah?), the legitimacy of the engagement is cast in doubt by the Samaria, Ahab slaughtered many sheep and oxen for Jehoshaphat and those who were with him in order to persuade him to attack Ramoth-gilead. <sup>3</sup>“Will you go with me to Ramoth-gilead?” Israel’s King Ahab asked Judah’s King Jehoshaphat.

Jehoshaphat replied, “I and my people will be united with you and your people in battle. <sup>4</sup>But,” Jehoshaphat said to Israel’s king, “first, let’s see what the LORD has to say.” <sup>5</sup>So Israel’s king gathered four hundred prophets and asked them, “Should we go to war with Ramoth-gilead or not?”

“Attack!” the prophets answered. “God will hand it over to the king.”

<sup>6</sup>But Jehoshaphat said, “Isn’t there any other prophet of the LORD around whom we could ask?”

<sup>7</sup>“There’s one other man who could ask the LORD for us,” Israel’s king told Jehoshaphat, “but I hate him because he never prophesies anything good about me, only bad. His name is Micaiah, Imlah’s son.”

“The king shouldn’t speak like that!” Jehoshaphat said.

<sup>11</sup>The other prophets agreed: “Attack Ramoth-gilead and win! The LORD will hand it over to the king!”

<sup>12</sup>Meanwhile, the messenger who had gone to summon Micaiah said to him, “Listen, the prophets all agree that the king will succeed. You should say the same thing they say and prophesy success.”

<sup>13</sup>But Micaiah answered, “As surely as the LORD lives, I will say only what God tells me to say.”<sup>b</sup>

<sup>14</sup>When Micaiah arrived, the king asked him, “Micaiah, should we go to war with Ramoth-gilead or not?”

“Attack and win!” Micaiah answered. “The LORD will hand it over to the king.”

<sup>15</sup>But the king said, “How many times must I demand that you tell me the truth when you speak in the LORD’s name?”

<sup>16</sup>Then Micaiah replied, “I saw all Israel scattered on the hills like sheep without a shepherd! And then the LORD said: ‘They have no master. Let them return safely to their own homes.’”

alliance with the northern king and his need to convince Jehoshaphat. Ramoth-gilead, or “Heights of Gilead,” was a border town on the eastern bank of the Jordan River.

18:4 In answering Ahab’s request to join in the military engagement, it is significant that Jehoshaphat first promises his support (“I and my people will be united with you and your people,” 2 Chron 18:3), and only then asks for prophetic guidance: let’s see what the Lord has to say. Inquiring of God with the help of the prophets before deciding on military action was standard practice in the ancient world (e.g., 1 Chron 14:10).

18:5 Israel’s king gathered four hundred prophets: Because of the ongoing need to seek God’s advice, large royal courts could engage a significant number of prophets.

18:6 Isn’t there any other prophet?: Given the immediate context (having already heard from 400 prophets), Jehoshaphat’s request points to his distrust of the diviners associated with the northern royal courts.

18:9 dressed in their royal robes: The biblical text rarely makes note of apparel, but this detail will set up the ironic reversal later in the story where Ahab vainly attempts to use clothing to subvert prophecy.

18:10 With these horns you will gore the Arameans: This is an example of sign prophecy, where the diviners enact the future with symbolic signs or actions (see also 1 Kgs 18:28; Jer 51:59-61).

18:14 Attack and win!: Micaiah’s immediate response to the king is an echo of what the king’s prophets have already declared: “Attack!... God will hand it over to the king” (2 Chron 18:5). In the 2 Kings source, his answer is even closer to that of the court prophets (“Attack Ramoth-gilead and win!” 2 Kgs 22:12, 15). Perhaps the small changes in 2 Chronicles reflect the author’s unease with God’s prophet being totally aligned with what will turn out to be false prophecy.

18:16 They have no master. Let them return safely: The prophet’s response to the king’s demand that he speak the truth as to whether the nation should go to war is indirect and ironic. The safe return of the sheep seems to be a positive sign, but the absence of a shepherd implies something dire.

18:17 Didn’t I tell you?: Throughout the rest of the narrative, Ahab no longer talks to Micaiah directly. In addition, Jehoshaphat will remain silent and, by not supporting

<sup>23</sup>Zedekiah, Chenaanah's son, approached Micaiah and slapped him on the cheek. "Just how did the LORD's spirit leave me to speak to you?" he asked.

<sup>24</sup>Micaiah answered, "You will find out on the day you try to hide in an inner room."

<sup>25</sup>"Arrest him," ordered Israel's king, "and turn him over to Amon the city governor and to Joash the king's son. <sup>26</sup>Tell them, 'The king says: Put this man in prison and feed him minimum rations of bread and water until I return safely.'"

<sup>27</sup>"If you ever return safely," Micaiah replied, "then the LORD wasn't speaking through me." Then he added, "Mark my words, every last one of you!"

<sup>28</sup>So Israel's king and Judah's King Jehoshaphat attacked Ramoth-gilead. <sup>29</sup>Israel's king said to Jehoshaphat, "I will disguise myself when we go into battle, but you should wear your royal attire." When the king of Israel had disguised himself, they entered the battle.

<sup>30</sup>Meanwhile, Aram's king had commanded his chariot officers, "Don't bother with anyone big or small. Fight only with Israel's king." <sup>31</sup>When the chariot officers saw Jehoshaphat, they assumed that he must be Israel's king, so they turned to attack him. But when Jehoshaphat cried out, the LORD helped him, and God lured them away from him. <sup>32</sup>When the chariot officers realized that he wasn't Israel's king, they stopped chasing him.

<sup>33</sup>Someone, however, randomly shot an arrow that struck Israel's king between the joints in his armor. "Turn around and get me out of the battle," the king told his chariot driver. "I've been hit!" <sup>34</sup>While the battle raged all that day, Israel's king stood propped up in his chariot facing the Arameans. But that evening he died, just as the sun was going down.

19 Upon the safe arrival of Judah's King Jehoshaphat to his palace in Jerusalem, <sup>2</sup>Jehu son of Hanani the seer came out to meet him and said, "Why did you help the wicked? Why have you loved those who hate the LORD? This is why the LORD is angry with you. <sup>3</sup>Nevertheless, there is some good to be found in you, in that you have removed the sacred poles<sup>c</sup> from the land and set your mind to seek God."

God's prophet or his message, implicitly indicate his allegiance with the northern king.

18:18 I saw the LORD enthroned: Micaiah's vision is a heavenly mirror of the royal court on earth, with the king sitting in a throne encircled by servants. For a similar vision of the divine world, see Isaiah 6:1-2.

18:21 God's declaration that the lying spirit in the mouths of all [Ahab's] prophets would certainly work in "persuading" the king to go to war and thus cause his own death is a poignant echo of Ahab's own attempt to "persuade" Jehoshaphat to attack Ramoth-gilead (2 Chron 18:2).

18:22 So now: In the interpretation of his heavenly vision, Micaiah pronounces that, although the prophet's vision came from God, it nevertheless represents the words of a lying spirit.

18:27 Mark my words: As he goes off to prison to await the time until Ahab returns "safely" (2 Chron 18:26), Micaiah's command to remember his words is more than a little ironic.

18:28-19:3 So Israel's king and Judah's King Jehoshaphat attacked: The rather slow-moving narrative now speeds quickly to its tragic end. In spite of all that transpired in the previous verses, the two kings pursue the same policy that was set out in 2 Chronicles 18:3.

18:29 I will disguise myself: Although his attack on Ramoth-gilead represents Ahab's disregard of Micaiah's prophecy, adopting a disguise indicates some lingering doubt.

18:30 Fight only with Israel's king: The command of Aram's leader extends the sense that Ahab's ruse may work.

18:31 the LORD helped him: Even in the most impossible of situations (that is, elite soldiers meeting up with the one person with whom they believe they are to fight), God intervenes and saves. This verse is an addition to the account in 1 Kings 22 and reflects the Chronicler's emphasis on the efficacy of prayer even in desperate military contexts (e.g., 2 Chron 14:11-12).

18:33-34 I've been hit! Believing that the threat came from an army that could be deceived by a disguise, Ahab's final words emphasize the author's belief that any attempt to outmaneuver God is a shallow conceit. As the king slowly dies, propped up in his chariot facing the battle, the reader sees Micaiah's prophecy coming true (2 Chron 18:16).

19:2 Why have you loved those who hate the LORD?: Although he has made a safe arrival back to his palace, Jehu provides a critical theological commentary on Jehoshaphat's allegiance with the northern king. In the ancient world, the terms love and hate related to both political as well as emotional spheres.

19:3 Nevertheless, there is some good to be found in you:

Jehoshaphat's reforms

<sup>4</sup>Though Jehoshaphat lived in Jerusalem, he regularly went out among the people between Beer-sheba and Ephraim's highlands, and encouraged them to return to the LORD, the God of their ancestors. <sup>5</sup>He appointed judges throughout the land in each of the fortified cities of Judah, <sup>6</sup>instructing them, "Be careful when you pass judgment. You aren't dispensing justice by merely human standards but for the LORD, who is with you. <sup>7</sup>Therefore, respect the LORD and act accordingly, because there can be no injustice, playing favorites, or taking bribes when it comes to the LORD our God."

<sup>8</sup>Jehoshaphat also appointed judges in Jerusalem from among the Levites, the priests, and the family heads of Israel to administer the LORD's Instruction and to settle disputes among those living<sup>d</sup> in Jerusalem. <sup>9</sup>He instructed them, "You must respect the LORD at all times, in truth, and with complete integrity. <sup>10</sup>In any case that comes before you from a fellow citizen in an outlying town, whether it involves bloodshed or is an issue of instruction, commandment, regulations, or case laws, you must warn them not to sin against the LORD, consequently making him angry with both you and your fellow citizen. Do this, and you won't sin. <sup>11</sup>Amariah the chief priest will be in charge of all religious matters, and Zebadiah, Ishmael's son, the leader of Judah's house, will be in charge of all civil matters. The Levites will serve as your officers of the court. Carry out your duties with confidence, and may the LORD be with those who do good."

Jehoshaphat's victory

20Some time later, the Moabites and the Ammonites, along with some of the Meunites,<sup>e</sup> attacked Jehoshaphat. <sup>2</sup>Jehoshaphat was told, "A large army from beyond the sea, from Edom,<sup>f</sup> is coming to attack you. They are already at Hazazon-tamar!" (that is, En-gedi). <sup>3</sup>Frightened, Jehoshaphat decided to seek the LORD's help and proclaimed a fast for all Judah. <sup>4</sup>People from all of Judah's cities came to ask the LORD for help. <sup>5</sup>Then Jehoshaphat stood up in the congregation of Judah and Jerusalem in the LORD's temple in front of the new courtyard. <sup>6</sup>"LORD, the God of our ancestors, you alone are God in heaven. You rule all the kingdoms of the nations. You are so powerful that no one can oppose you. <sup>7</sup>You, our God, drove out the inhabitants of this land before your people Israel and gave this land to the descendants of your friend Abraham forever. <sup>8</sup>They have lived in it and have built a

Just as Jehu's pronouncement criticizes any action that indicates a lack of trust in God, so also his words highlight the significance of faithful deeds.

19:4-11 The king who has forged international alliances, achieved military victories, and instituted religious renewal, now turns again to restructuring the legal system. It consists of a basic two-pronged strategy, with judges in the outlying cities tending to local cases (19:5-7) and judges in Jerusalem tending not only to local matters but also to more complicated cases that come up from the fortified centers (19:8-11). This account of the establishment of the judicial system has certain links with Deuteronomy 1:13-17; 16:18; 17:8-12.

19:4 between Beer-sheba and Ephraim's highlands: This represents an extensive scope of the territory under Jehoshaphat's control.

19:5 fortified cities of Judah: These were the administrative and economic centers of the kingdom.

19:11 religious matters . . . civil matters: This distinction is absent outside the books of 1 and 2 Chronicles and Ezra. For a similar perspective, see 1 Chronicles 26:30, 32; Ezra 7:26.

20:1-30 This account of Jehoshaphat's victory over the eastern coalition of the Moabites and Ammonites (20:1-30) is the second recorded military conflict in his reign (for the first one, see 2 Chron 18:1-19:3) and represents the longest and most detailed account of a war in the books of 1 and 2 Chronicles. The story has no parallel in the book of 1 and 2 Kings.

20:1 the Moabites and the Ammonites: These were tribes dwelling to the east. The identity of the Meunites isn't certain.

20:2 En-gedi: a site near the middle of the Dead Sea's western shore.

20:3 to seek the LORD's help: In a time of crisis, with a large army close to Jerusalem, the king's immediate response isn't to consider military action but to turn to God. Throughout the books of 1 and 2 Chronicles, military crises function as a test of a king's faithfulness to God (2 Chron 14:11-12, etc.). The news here, that Jehoshaphat chose to seek the LORD's help instead of considering military or diplomatic strategies, reveals his loyalty to God. It also allows the author to reduce the importance of the account of Jehoshaphat's earlier attempt to strengthen his position via a marriage alliance with the north (2 Chron 18:1).

20:5 stood up . . . in the LORD's temple: The king's recourse to the temple for prayer during a time of crisis echoes what Solomon envisioned in his dedicatory prayer (2 Chron 6:14-42; cf. 2 Chron 7:12-16). the new courtyard: This was either a third outer court or a newly formed area within the second court where the laity were admitted.

20:6-12 Jehoshaphat's prayer appeals to God's power over the nations as well as God's mercy and past acts of salvation.

Just take your places, stand ready, and watch how the LORD, who is with you, will deliver you, Judah and Jerusalem. Don't be afraid or discouraged! Go out tomorrow and face them. <sup>l</sup>"Then Jehoshaphat bowed down with his face to the ground, and all Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem fell before the LORD in worship. <sup>m</sup>"Levites from the lines of Kohath and Korah stood up to loudly praise the LORD, the God of Israel.

20:9 If calamity, sword, flood: This is what Solomon envisioned in his prayer of dedication (2 Chron 6:14-42) and what God promised to answer (2 Chron 7:12-16).

20:10 wouldn't let Israel invade: See Numbers 20:14-21; Deuteronomy 2:26-30; Judges 11:12-21.

20:11 to drive us out of your possession: In his characterization of the looming attack of the eastern coalition, Jehoshaphat envisions not simply a small grab of territory but the total extinction of Israel's land and heritage.

20:12 We are powerless: At the close of his prayer, the king's assertion of the people's lack of power alludes to the opening when he acknowledged the overwhelming power of God (2 Chron 20:6). Given that Jehoshaphat has taken care to build fortresses and storage cities throughout Judah and has recruited a very large army (2 Chron 17:12-19), this claim of weakness points to more than a straightforward lack of military defenses. Rather, in the Chronicler's presentation, the king knows that strength can't succeed if it isn't supported by God.

20:14-17 God's response to the king's prayer consists of an oracle of salvation through Jahaziel the Levite.

20:15 Don't be afraid: Jahaziel's words echo those of Moses as the people awaited God's miracle on the shores of the Reed Sea (Exod 14:13-14), by this great army: The people's confidence doesn't come from the underestimation of danger but rather in their confidence that the battle belongs to God!

20:16 Jeruel wilderness: This site is otherwise unknown, but the plan seems to represent an excellent military strategy: Israel will march a short distance to a place where they will be situated above the invading troops who will be tired from their long march.

20:20-28 The description of the battle doesn't describe the size of Judah's forces but rather their participation in a religious procession led by musicians praising God.

20:21 Give thanks to the Lord: The lyrics are reminiscent of the citation of Psalm 106:1 in 1 Chronicles 16:34 and 2 Chronicles 5:13.

20:22-24 The invading forces are felled by a surprise attack of God, and they kill each other in an act of self-destruction. Judah's utter lack of participation in the fighting is emphasized by describing their arrival at their station when all they see are corpses lying all over the ground.

valuables—much more than they could carry. In fact, there was so much it took three days to haul it away. <sup>26</sup>On the fourth day they assembled in Blessing Valley, where they blessed the LORD. That's why it is called Blessing Valley to this day. <sup>27</sup>Then everyone from Judah and Jerusalem, with Jehoshaphat at their head, joyfully returned home to Jerusalem because the LORD had given them reason to rejoice over their enemies. <sup>28</sup>They entered Jerusalem accompanied by harps, lutes, and trumpets, and they went to the LORD's temple.

<sup>29</sup>The fear of God came on all the surrounding kingdoms when they heard how the LORD had fought against Israel's enemies. <sup>30</sup>As a result, Jehoshaphat's rule was peaceful because his God gave him rest on all sides.

Jehoshaphat's last days

<sup>31</sup>Jehoshaphat ruled over Judah. He was 35 years old when he became king, and he ruled for twenty-five years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Azubah; she was Shilhi's daughter. <sup>32</sup>Jehoshaphat walked in the way of his father Asa and didn't turn aside from it, doing what was right in the LORD's eyes, <sup>33</sup>with the exception that he didn't remove the shrines. The people were still not committed with all their hearts to the God of their ancestors. <sup>34</sup>The rest of Jehoshaphat's deeds, from beginning to end, are written in the records of Jehu, Hanani's son, which are included in the records of Israel's kings.

21 Jehoshaphat died and was buried with his ancestors in David's City. His son Jehoram succeeded him as king.

Jehoram rules

<sup>1</sup>Jehoram's brothers, the other sons of Jehoshaphat, were Azariah, Jehiel, Zechariah, Azariah, Michael, and Shephatiah. All of these were the sons of Israel's King Jehoshaphat. <sup>2</sup>Their father had given them many gifts of silver, gold, and other valuables, along with fortified cities in Judah, but he gave the kingdom to Jehoram because he was the oldest son.

<sup>3</sup>When Jehoram had taken control of his father's kingdom, he established his rule by killing all his brothers, along with some other leaders of Israel. <sup>4</sup>Jehoram was 32 years old when he became king, and he ruled for eight years in Jerusalem. <sup>5</sup>He walked in the ways of Israel's kings, just as Ahab's dynasty had done, because he married Ahab's daughter. He did what was evil in the LORD's eyes. <sup>6</sup>Nevertheless, because of the covenant he had made with David, the LORD wasn't willing to destroy David's dynasty. He had promised to preserve a lamp for David and his sons forever. <sup>7</sup>During Jehoram's rule, Edom rebelled against Judah's power and appointed its own king. <sup>8</sup>Jehoram, along with all his chariots, crossed

20:28 they went to the Lord's temple: Given that their first response to the news of the attack was to pray in the temple (2 Chron 20:5), their return at the end of the successful battle makes a fitting conclusion.

20:30 God gave him rest: The absence of war in a king's reign is a sign of blessing throughout the books of 1 and 2 Chronicles (see 2 Chron 14:1b; 1 Chron 22:9).

20:31–21:1 In the conclusion of Jehoshaphat's reign, the author returns to the source material in 1 Kings 22:42–50, making some changes.

20:37 Because you have formed an alliance: As is typical in the narratives in 1 and 2 Chronicles, faithful kings don't rely on military strategy or political alliances but rather on the help of God alone. Jehoshaphat, of course, had followed this strategy of faithfulness in his last battle (2 Chron 20:12), but he had also brokered a marriage alliance with the northern kingdom (2 Chron 18:1). The parallel text in 1 Kings 22:47–49 preserves a different version of Judah's coalition with Israel to build ships.

21:2–22:1 The final assessment of Jehoshaphat, a king who exhibited faithfulness throughout much of his reign, is followed by an account of his faithless son Jehoram. This is the first Davidic ruler to be judged entirely negatively by the Chronicler. The account is an expansion of 2 Kings 8:16–24, with new material added at the beginning and the end (21:2–4, 10b–22:1).

21:4 killing all his brothers, along with some other leaders of Israel: Fratricide secures Jehoram's grip on the throne, but at the same time makes the Davidic monarchy vulnerable to extinction. His extreme violence will be matched by his wife Athaliah after his death (2 Chron 22:10).

21:6 Ahab's daughter: The marriage of Jehoram to Athaliah was already mentioned with a sense of foreboding in 2 Chronicles 18:1.

21:7 because of the covenant he had made with David: See 1 Chronicles 17:10–14; 2 Chronicles 6:16. See sidebar, "Surprised By Mercy" at 2 Chronicles 22. David's dynasty: This is a change from "Judah" in the source text of 2 Kings 8:19. promised to preserve a lamp for David and his sons forever: For the language of lamp in connection with an unbroken line of rulers from David's family on the throne, see also Psalm 132:17.

over to Zair.<sup>1</sup> The Edomites, who had surrounded him, attacked at night, defeating him<sup>b</sup> and his chariot officers. <sup>10</sup>So Edom has been independent of Judah to this day. Libnah rebelled against Jehoram's rule at the same time because he had abandoned the LORD, the God of his ancestors. <sup>11</sup>As if that wasn't enough, Jehoram constructed shrines throughout Judah's highlands, encouraged Jerusalem's citizens to be unfaithful, and led Judah astray.

<sup>12</sup>A letter from the prophet Elijah came to Jehoram that read, "This is what the LORD, the God of your ancestor David, says: Because you haven't walked in the ways of your father Jehoshaphat or the ways of Judah's King Asa, <sup>13</sup>but have walked in the ways of Israel's kings and have encouraged Judah and Jerusalem's citizens to be unfaithful, just as the house of Ahab did, and because you have even murdered your own brothers, your father's family, who were better than you, <sup>14</sup>the LORD will now strike your family, your children, your wives, and all your possessions with a heavy blow. <sup>15</sup>You yourself will become deathly ill with a chronic disease that will cause your intestines to fall out."

<sup>16</sup>Then the LORD made the Philistines and the Arabs, who lived near the Cushites, angry with Jehoram. <sup>17</sup>They attacked Judah, broke down its defenses, and hauled off all the goods that were found in the royal palace, along with the king's children and wives. Only Jehoahaz, Jehoram's youngest son, was spared. <sup>18</sup>After all this, the LORD struck Jehoram with an incurable intestinal disease. <sup>19</sup>For almost two years he grew steadily worse, until two days before his death, when his intestines fell out, causing him to die in horrible pain. His people didn't make a fire in his honor as they had done for his ancestors. <sup>20</sup>He was 32 years old when he became king, and he ruled for eight years in Jerusalem. No one was sorry he died. He was buried in David's City but not in the royal cemetery.

22 The inhabitants of Jerusalem made his youngest son Ahaziah succeed him as king because the raiding party that had invaded the camp with the Arabs had killed all the older sons. So Ahaziah, Jehoram's son, became king of Judah.

Ahaziah rules

21:10 because he had abandoned the LORD: The first part of this verse is taken from the source in 2 Kings 8:22, but the Chronicler adds a theological cause for the loss of territory. 21:11 encouraged Jerusalem's citizens to be unfaithful: This material isn't found in the Chronicler's source, and the enthusiasm that it attributes to the king in the encouragement of sin is particularly striking.

21:12-15 The prophet Elijah is associated with the northern kingdom, where he spent his time railing against the worship of Baal (for more, see 1 Kgs 17-19; 21; 2 Kgs 1-2). In this account, the significance of Jehoram's sins is so great that they occasioned a written oracle of judgment from the great prophet.

21:14 the LORD will now strike your family: According to the divine oracle, the king's sins concerning worship practices, as well as killing his brothers, won't stand without penalty. Jehoram's sins will be punished with an attack on Judah, the kidnapping of his family, and his own painful death (2 Chron 21:16-19).

21:19-20 His people didn't make a fire in his honor: The Chronicler often uses funerary rites to signal an assessment of the king's reign. In this account, Jehoram wasn't given a fire, the people didn't mourn, and he wasn't buried in the royal cemetery. In addition, the author omits the usual notice found in 1 and 2 Kings that the rest of Jehoram's deeds are "written in the official records of Judah's kings" (1 Kgs 8:23; see for other kings, 2 Chron 9:29; 12:15; 13:22). Such an omission implies that the wicked reign is best left unremembered.

22:1 his youngest son Ahaziah: In the announcement of his successor, the author reminds the reader of the violent punishment inflicted on Jehoram's house, which left only the youngest boy to live. The story was initially told in 2 Chronicles 21:16-17, where the son's name is given as Jehoahaz.

22:2-9 The Chronicler considers the rule of Ahaziah (named Jehoahaz in 2 Chron 21:17) to be a time of extreme wickedness, in which the corrupt northern influence on the south continues from the reign of Jehoram. At the end of his reign, Ahaziah had no biological relatives left who were strong enough to rule the kingdom (22:9). The account in 2 Chronicles includes additions to the parallel text of 2 Kings 8:26-29 (= 2 Chron 22:2-6), and a summary of 2 Kings 9 (= 2 Chron 22:7-9).

22:4 they gave him advice that led to his downfall: As with the young advisors who encouraged Rehoboam to increase the people's workload (2 Chron 10:10-11), the counselors here present ill-considered advice that is followed by the king.

22:5 he went with Israel's King Joram... to fight against Aram's King Hazael: In the perspective of the Chronicler, working with the northern kingdom brings destruction.

Surprised by Mercy For the Chronicler, life is generally fair—retribution for good or evil deeds usually comes quickly, and people usually get what they deserve. David, Solomon, and Hezekiah were devout kings rewarded with long rules, large families, and prosperity. And when Ahaz refused to heed God's instruction, and engaged in nonsanctioned worship such as child sacrifice, he met with military defeat (2 Chron 28:1-5).

Occasionally this tidy schema is disrupted by acts of mercy. Although Ahaziah had lived his life doing "what was evil in the Lord's eyes," the people give him a decent burial in honor of his grandfather: "He was the grandson of Jehoshaphat, who sought the Lord with all his heart" (22:9). The people's kindness here mirrors God's own acts of mercy that sometimes surface within the books of 1 and 2 Chronicles. For example, even though Jehoram killed all of his brothers and other leaders in Israel in order to secure the throne, God refused to bring about the final end to the dynasty "because of the covenant he had made with David" (2 Chron 21:7). And when notorious evildoers such as Manasseh pray for forgiveness, God hears and restores them again (2 Chron 33:10-13). Although the Chronicler generally presents a moral universe in which justice prevails, there is still room for surprising acts of grace. The divine and human communities are free to violate the strict standards of "fairness" to extend mercy.

went with Israel's King Joram,<sup>m</sup> Ahab's son, to fight against Aram's King Hazael at Ramoth-gilead, where the Arameans wounded Joram. <sup>n</sup>Joram returned to Jezreel to recover from the wounds he suffered at Ramah in his battle with Aram's King Hazael. Then Judah's King Ahaziah,<sup>n</sup> Jehoram's son, went down to visit Joram, Ahab's son, at Jezreel because he had been wounded. <sup>7</sup>But God used this visit to Joram to bring about Ahaziah's downfall. After his arrival, Ahaziah went with Joram to meet Jehu, Nimshi's son, whom the LORD had anointed to destroy Ahab's dynasty. <sup>8</sup>While Jehu was executing judgment on Ahab's dynasty, he discovered the princes of Judah, Ahaziah's nephews, serving Ahaziah, and Jehu killed them. <sup>9</sup>Jehu went looking for Ahaziah, who was captured while hiding in Samaria. He was then brought to Jehu and executed. He was given a decent burial, however, because people said, "He was the grandson of Jehoshaphat, who sought the LORD with all his heart."

There were now no members of Ahaziah's dynasty strong enough to rule the kingdom.

Queen Athaliah rules Judah

<sup>m</sup>Or Jehoram (also in 22:6-7); the king's name is variously spelled in either long Jehoram or short Joram form.

<sup>n</sup>LXX, Syr, Vulg; MT Azariah <sup>o</sup>Or Joash; the king's name is variously spelled in either long Jehoash or short Joash form in 2 Kgs.

See, for example, Jehoshaphat's experience in 2 Chronicles 18:1-19:3. at Ramoth-gilead, where the Arameans wounded Joram: The story of Jehoshaphat's coalition with the north finds additional parallels in this account: Ahab fell in the battle at Ramoth-gilead (2 Chron 18:33-34), and now Ahab's son is injured there as well.

22:7 But God used this visit: In an addition to the source text in 2 Kings 9, the Chronicler emphasizes that it is God alone who controls events. Jehu, Nimshi's son: This figure hasn't been introduced previously in Chronicles. For more information, see the account of the prophet Elisha anointing Jehu as king over Israel and instructing him to kill Ahab's house in 2 Kings 9:1-28.

22:8 Jehu killed them: Because of the tragically close allegiance between both houses, Jehu's instruction to kill the house of Ahab now results in the killing of Ahaziah's nephews as well.

22:9 He was given a decent burial: It is quite typical for the Chronicler to highlight the close relationship between one's behavior and fate: Ahab's corruption results in defeat and death (2 Chron 18:33-34), and Asa's faithful prayer is immediately answered with God sending military victory

(2 Chron 14:11-12). There are points, however, where the author preserves a certain freedom from such precise moral calculation. Although Ahaziah "did what was evil in the Lord's eyes" throughout his reign and aligned himself with the northern kingdom (2 Chron 22:4-5), his burial was decent thanks to the faithfulness of his grandfather Jehoshaphat (2 Chron 17:1-21:1). See sidebar, "Surprised by Mercy." It is fitting however that in place of the formula that usually concludes the accounts of Judah's kings ("the rest of ____'s deeds are written in the official records of Israel's and Judah's kings"), the author includes the startling pronouncement: There were now no members of Ahaziah's dynasty strong enough to rule the kingdom.

22:10-12 The account of Athaliah's six-year rule in Judah is intricately linked to the rule of the next king and Davidic heir, Jehoash. The queen receives none of the standard opening or closing formulae (i.e., "So ____ became ruler over Judah"), and her reign is presented as the time in which the very existence of the next legitimate king of Judah is first threatened and then preserved. The story closely follows the parallel in 2 Kings 11:1-3.

daughter of King Jehoram, the wife of the priest Jehoiada and the sister of Ahaziah, hid Jehoash from Athaliah so she couldn't murder him. <sup>12</sup>He remained hidden with them in God's temple for six years while Athaliah ruled the country.

23 But in the seventh year Jehoiada boldly formed a conspiracy with the following unit commanders: Jeroham's son Azariah, Jehohanan's son Ishmael, Obed's son Azariah, Adaiah's son Maaseiah, and Zichri's son Elishaphat. <sup>2</sup>They went throughout Judah recruiting the Levites from all the cities of Judah, as well as the family heads of Israel, who then came to Jerusalem. <sup>3</sup>The entire assembly made a covenant with the king in God's temple. Jehoiada said, "Look! Here is the king's son. He must be king, just as the LORD promised about David's descendants. <sup>4</sup>This is what you must do: A third of you priests and Levites coming on sabbath duty will guard the gates, <sup>5</sup>another third will be at the royal palace, and another third will be at the Foundation Gate. Meanwhile, all the people will be in the courtyards of the LORD's temple. <sup>6</sup>Don't enter the LORD's temple, because only the priests or Levites on duty can do that. They are allowed to enter because they are holy, but the rest of the people must follow the LORD's requirements. <sup>7</sup>The Levites must surround the king, each with his weapons drawn. Whoever comes near your ranks must be killed; stay near the king wherever he goes."

<sup>8</sup>The Levites and all Judah did everything that the priest Jehoiada ordered. They each took charge of those men reporting for duty on the Sabbath, as well as those going off duty, since Jehoiada hadn't released any divisions from duty. <sup>9</sup>Then the priest Jehoiada gave the unit commanders King David's spears and large and small shields that were kept in God's temple. <sup>10</sup>He positioned all the people, each with their weapons drawn, near the altar and the temple, stretching from the south side of the temple to the north side, so as to protect the king. <sup>11</sup>Then they brought out the king's son, crowned him, gave him the royal law,<sup>P</sup> and made him king. Jehoiada and his sons anointed him as everyone cried out, "Long live the king!"

<sup>12</sup>When Athaliah heard the noise made by the people running and cheering the king, she went to the people at the LORD's temple <sup>13</sup>and saw the king standing by the royal pillar at the entrance, with the commanders and trumpeters beside the king. All the people of the land were rejoicing and blowing trumpets, and singers accompanied by musical instruments were leading the praise. Athaliah ripped her clothes and screamed, "Treason! Treason!"

<sup>14</sup>Then the priest Jehoiada brought out the unit commanders who were in charge of the army. "Take her out under guard,"<sup>Q</sup> he told them, "and kill anyone who follows her." This was because the priest had said, "She must not be executed in the LORD's temple." <sup>15</sup>They arrested her when she reached the entrance of the Horse Gate at the royal palace. She was executed there.

Ahaziah's son: Ironically, Jehoshabeath probably survived Athaliah's purge because she was a woman and thus not a threat to Athaliah's own claim upon the throne. Now she uses her liberty to save the ruling queen's greatest threat: Ahaziah's heir.

23:1-24:27 But in the seventh year. The attention of the narrative moves from Athaliah's rule to Jehoiada's attempt to gain the throne for Jehoash, following this with an account of Jehoash's reign. The story in 2 Chronicles parallels the account in 2 Kings 11:4-12:21, although with a greater emphasis on the role of the people and the specification that the military force consists of Levites.

23:3 The entire assembly made a covenant with the king: Although the boy isn't yet crowned, the author asserts his authority over Athaliah by calling him "king." Also, in contrast to the source in 2 Kings 11, the Chronicler emphasizes the central role of the people in the overthrow of Athaliah. In 2 Kings, the coup is largely the work of Jehoiada and the military, and the civilian people are mentioned only after the boy is crowned (2 Kgs 11:13). In Chronicles, however, the family heads from Judah and Israel are also involved from the very beginning and join with the military in making a solemn agreement with Jehoash (23:2-3), just as the LORD promised about David's descendants: The preservation of the Davidic monarchy, assured by God in texts such as 1 Chronicles 22:10 and 28:4-7, is highlighted here by the author.

23:5 all the people: For the emphasis on the involvement of the people in Jehoash's coronation, see the note on 2 Chronicles 23:3.

23:9 King David's spears and large and small shields that were kept in God's temple: If these are the gold votive gifts referred to in 1 Chronicles 18:7, the symbolism is fitting: David's weapons acquired in war and dedicated to the temple are used to secure his dynasty. Weapons made of gold, however, are probably too soft to be very practical.

23:13 rejoicing and blowing trumpets, and singers accompanied by musical instruments: The Chronicler has added additional musicians to the account in 1 Kings (1 Kgs 11:14), reflecting the author's emphasis on joyous music at ceremonies. See sidebar, "Worship and Music" at 2 Chronicles 5. Athaliah ripped her clothes: This is usually a sign of mourning or turning away from sin (2 Kgs 19:1). and screamed, "Treason! Treason!": Because of the music, it isn't clear that her cries could even be heard.

<sup>16</sup>Jehoiada then made a covenant between himself, all the people, and the king, that they would be the LORD's people. <sup>17</sup>Then all the people went to Baal's temple and tore it down, smashing its altars and images into pieces. They executed Baal's priest Mattan in front of the altars. <sup>18</sup>Jehoiada appointed the priests and<sup>d</sup> Levites in charge of the LORD's temple, and then appointed the divisions of the priests and Levites<sup>e</sup> that David had assigned to the LORD's temple to offer entirely burned sacrifices to the LORD, as written in the Instruction from Moses, with rejoicing and singing, just as David had ordered. <sup>19</sup>He posted guards at the gates of the LORD's temple so that no one who was unclean in any way could enter. <sup>20</sup>Then he took the unit commanders, the officials, the rulers of the people, and all the people of the land, and they led the king down from the LORD's temple, processing through the Upper Gate to the palace, where the king sat upon the royal throne. <sup>21</sup>All the people of the land rejoiced, and the city was at peace now that Athaliah had been executed at the palace.

Jehoash rules

24 Jehoash<sup>f</sup> was 7 years old when he became king, and he ruled for forty years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Zibiah; she was from Beer-sheba. <sup>2</sup>Jehoash did what was right in the LORD's eyes as long as Jehoiada the priest was alive. <sup>3</sup>Jehoiada had him marry two wives, and Jehoash fathered sons and daughters.

<sup>4</sup>Sometime later, Jehoash wanted to renovate the LORD's temple. <sup>5</sup>He gathered the priests and the Levites and said, "Go to the cities of Judah and collect the annual tax of silver due from all Israel for the upkeep of God's temple. Do it right away."

But the Levites procrastinated. <sup>6</sup>So the king summoned the chief priest Jehoiada and asked him, "Why haven't you required the Levites to bring in from Judah and Jerusalem the tax imposed by the LORD's servant Moses and the Israelite assembly for the covenant tent?" (<sup>7</sup>Now wicked Athaliah and her followers had broken into God's temple and used all the holy objects of the LORD's temple in their worship of the Baals.) <sup>8</sup>So at the king's command a box was made and placed outside the gate of the LORD's temple. <sup>9</sup>Then a proclamation was issued throughout Judah and Jerusalem requiring the people to bring to the LORD the tax that God's servant Moses had imposed on Israel in the wilderness. <sup>10</sup>This so pleased all the leaders and all the people that they gladly dropped their money in the box until it was full. <sup>11</sup>Whenever the box was brought by the Levites to the royal accountants, as soon as they saw that a large amount of money was in the box, the royal scribe and the representative of the high priest would come, empty the box, and return it to its place. This took place day after day, and a large amount of money was collected. <sup>12</sup>The king and Jehoiada would give it to those in

23:16-21 Jehoiada then made a covenant: The earlier agreement to enthrone the Davidic monarch (2 Chron 23:3) now results in renewal of the community to be the LORD's people. This renewed identity leads to the destruction of the Baal cult and restoration of the worship prescribed by Moses and David (23:17-20). The peace that the city enjoys (23:21) is a mark of God's blessing (as in 2 Chron 14:6; 15:15; 20:30).

24:1-27 The reign of Jehoash begins a pattern of faithful kings who subsequently turn away from God (Jehoash is followed by Amaziah and Uzziah). While the priest Jehoiada was alive, Jehoash did what was right in the LORD's eyes (24:2). But after he dies, Jehoash abandons proper worship upon the advice of the leaders of Judah (24:17). His military defeat and death at the hands of his own officials brings his reign to a dismal end (24:23-27). The account is a close parallel to 2 Kings 12:1-21, although at times the Chronicler makes some strategic alterations.

24:2 as long as Jehoiada the priest was alive: This comment sets up the two-part division with which the Chronicler presents the king's reign: faithfulness during Jehoiada's lifetime (24:2-16), and unfaithfulness after his death (24:17-27). A similar comment occurs in 24:14. The schema is strengthened by the displacement of 2 Kings 12:3, which relates that worship continued at the shrines even at this point in the narrative—the Chronicler will add it back into the narrative after Jehoiada dies (2 Chron 24:18).

24:5 collect the annual tax of silver: In Exodus 30:13, Moses sets out a stipulation that the people should pay half a shekel at the time of the census as "a gift offering to the LORD." In Nehemiah 10:32, the people agree to pay an annual tax of one-third a shekel "for all the work of our God's house." See also 2 Chronicles 24:9.

24:7 Athaliah and her followers had broken into God's temple: This aside about Athaliah's reign, told to motivate the need for financial contributions, is an addition to the account in 2 Kings 12.

24:9 the tax that God's servant Moses had imposed: See note on 2 Chronicles 24:5.

24:10 they gladly dropped their money in the box: Changes to the structure and geography of collection (a box outside the temple for the offering replaces the Levites going throughout Judah) results in an enthusiastic response. This scene is reminiscent of the joyful and generous outpouring of the leaders when David called for a voluntary offering to support the temple in 1 Chronicles 29:6-9.

charge of the work on the LORD's temple who in turn hired masons and carpenters to renovate the LORD's temple, as well as metalworkers for the iron and bronze to repair the LORD's temple. <sup>13</sup>The workers labored hard, and the restoration progressed smoothly under their control until they had brought God's temple back to its original state and reinforced it. <sup>14</sup>As soon as they finished, they brought the remaining money to the king and Jehoiada. They used it to make equipment for the LORD's temple, including what was used for the service and the entirely burned offerings, pans, and other objects made of gold and silver. As long as Jehoiada lived, the entirely burned offerings were regularly offered in the LORD's temple.

<sup>15</sup>Jehoiada grew old, and when he reached the age of 130, he died. <sup>16</sup>He was buried among the kings in David's City because of his exemplary service to Israel, God, and God's temple.

<sup>17</sup>After Jehoiada's death, however, the leaders of Judah came and bowed before the king, and the king listened to them. <sup>18</sup>They abandoned the temple of the LORD, their ancestors' God, and worshipped sacred poles<sup>a</sup> and idols. Anger came upon Judah and Jerusalem as a consequence of their sin, <sup>19</sup>and though God sent prophets to them to bring them back to the LORD and to warn them, they refused to listen. <sup>20</sup>Then the spirit of God enwrapped Zechariah the son of the priest Jehoiada. Standing before the people, he told them, "This is what God says: Why do you defy the LORD's commands and keep yourselves from prospering? Because you have abandoned the LORD, he has abandoned you!" <sup>21</sup>But the people plotted against Zechariah, and at the king's command stoned him to death in the courtyard of the LORD's temple. <sup>22</sup>King Jehoash failed to remember the loyalty that Jehoiada, Zechariah's father, had shown him and murdered Jehoiada's son, who cried out as he lay dying, "May the LORD see and seek vengeance!"

<sup>23</sup>That spring the Aramean army marched against Jehoash. They attacked Judah and Jerusalem, destroyed all the people's leaders, and sent all the loot to the king of Damascus. <sup>24</sup>Although the Aramean forces were relatively small, the LORD handed over to them a very large army, because the people of Judah had abandoned the LORD, their ancestors' God. Jehoash was justly punished. <sup>25</sup>The Arameans left him badly wounded, but his own officials

24:14 They used it to make equipment for the LORD's temple: This notice stands in tension with 2 Kings 12:13-14, which specifies that the people's offering "was not used to make . . . any gold or silver object for the LORD's temple" but rather given to those making repairs. The change points to the Chronicler's overwhelming concern to rectify all of the possible damage made to the temple and its proper operation during Athaliah's reign (2 Chron 24:7). 24:14 As long as Jehoiada lived: The ominous asides to Jehoash's reign after the death of Jehoiada bookends the first part of his reign (see note on 2 Chron 24:2).

24:16 buried among the kings in David's City: The significance of Jehoiada to the Chronicler is such that the literary account of the priest's life concludes with an adapted regnal formula, with his age replacing the standard account of the length of the king's reign. In addition, his burial rites and interment are similar to other kings whose faithfulness received God's blessing (see, e.g., 2 Chron 9:30-31). 24:17-22 The Chronicler adds this material to the account in 2 Kings as a way to explain the military failure and sad death of Jehoash.

24:17 and the king listened to them: The influence of the counselors over the king to ill effect has parallels in the reign of Rehoboam (2 Chron 10:14). 24:18 They abandoned the temple of the LORD: This is an ironic state of affairs since Jehoash's life was preserved by being hidden in the temple (2 Chron 22:12), and the king spent some effort restoring it after the reign of Athaliah (24:12-14). The drastic consequences for such "abandoning" will be spelled out explicitly in 2 Chronicles 24:20, 24.

24:19 God sent prophets to them to bring them back to the LORD: Messages from God encouraging the people to return occur throughout the books of 1 and 2 Chronicles. Sometimes they are acknowledged (2 Chron 12:5-8; 15:1-8; 20:14-18), but often the warnings are ignored and disaster ensues (2 Chron 16:7-10; 36:12-17).

24:20 the spirit of God enwrapped Zechariah: For similar scenarios see 2 Chronicles 15:1 and note on 1 Chronicles 12:18. defy the LORD's commands: The people's defiance of God's commands stands in stark opposition to their obedience to those of the king, which are obeyed in the next verse as they put Zechariah to death (24:21). keep yourselves from prospering?: For the Chronicler, obedience to God often brings blessing. See 1 Chronicles 22:13; 2 Chronicles 20:20; 26:5. See sidebar, "Only God Brings Security" at 2 Chronicles 15. Because you have abandoned: This is a standard pattern; see 2 Chronicles 15:2; 24:18, 24.

24:21 in the courtyard: Ironically, Zechariah's death desecrates the sacred space that his father had attempted to keep free from a similar pollution when Athaliah died (2 Chron 23:14).

24:23-27 Jehoash's end comes in two dismal parts. First, God intervenes to have his forces lose a war with the Arameans (24:23-24), and then his officials kill him in revenge for the death of Zechariah (24:25).

24:24 Although the Aramean forces were relatively small: The victory of the Arameans represents an inverse of the usual turn of events. Typically, God saves Israel when they are greatly outnumbered (2 Chron 13:3, 13-18; 14:8-13; 20:2, 20-23). Here God works against their numerically superior forces. because the people of Judah had abandoned: See note on 2 Chronicles 24:20.

24:25-26 The Chronicler inserts a motivation for Jehoash's officials that isn't found in 2 Kings 12:20-21: They take plotted against him for murdering the son<sup>7</sup> of the priest Jehoiada. So they killed him in his bed. He died and was buried in David's City but not in the royal cemetery. <sup>26</sup>Those who plotted against him were the Ammonite Zabad, Shimeath's son, and the Moabite Jehozabad, Shimrith's son. <sup>27</sup>The list of Jehoash's sons, the many prophecies against him, and the account of his restoration of God's temple are written in the comments on the records of the kings. His son Amaziah succeeded him as king.

Amaziah rules

25 Amaziah was 25 years old when he became king, and he ruled for twenty-nine years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Jehoaddan; she was from Jerusalem. <sup>2</sup>He did what was right in the LORD's eyes but not with all his heart. <sup>3</sup>Once he had secured control over his kingdom, he executed the officials who had assassinated his father the king. <sup>4</sup>However, he didn't kill their children because of what is written in the Instruction scroll from Moses, where the LORD commanded, Parents shouldn't be executed because of what their children have done; neither should children be executed because of what their parents have done. Each person should be executed for their own guilty acts.<sup>w</sup>

<sup>5</sup>Amaziah gathered the people of Judah, organizing them into family units under captains of thousands and hundreds for all Judah and Benjamin. He summoned everyone 20 years old and older and found that there were three hundred thousand select troops, ready for service and able to handle spears and body-sized shields. <sup>6</sup>He also hired one hundred thousand warriors from Israel for one hundred kikkars of silver.

<sup>7</sup>But a man of God confronted him. "King," he said, "the troops from Israel must not go with you, because the LORD isn't on the side of Israel or any Ephraimite. <sup>8</sup>Should you go with them anyway, even if you fight fiercely, God will make you stumble before the enemy, because God has the ability to either help or make someone stumble."

<sup>9</sup>Amaziah asked the man of God, "What about the hundred kikkars I paid for the Israelite troops?"

"God can give you much more than that," the man of God replied.

24:27 in the comments on the records of the kings: This is the only mention of this source in the Bible.

25:1-28 The story of Amaziah presents another king of Judah who started out in faithfulness to the LORD, but then practiced unsanctioned worship and rejected God's warning sent through the prophets. Like the reigns of Jehoash before him and Uzziah after (2 Chron 24:1-27; 26:1-23), Amaziah's reign ends with military defeat and tragedy. The Chronicler's version closely follows the parallel in 2 Kings 14:1-22, but includes additional material here in 25:5-16.

25:2 but not with all his heart: This small alteration to 2 Kings 14:3 helps to make theological sense of the arc of Amaziah's reign—the king's eventual downfall is attributed to his half-hearted faithfulness to the Lord.

25:4 The quotation from Deuteronomy 24:16 sets out a basic tenant of the Chronicler: justice means having people suffer for their own sins. Unfortunately, this will rebound to Ahaziah's detriment, as he will suffer for his sins at the end of his life (see also Ezek 18:20). The independence of each generation in terms of payment for its own sins isn't a strict principle throughout the book, however, as the generous burial of Ahaziah in honor of his grandfather's legacy exemplifies (2 Chron 22:9).

25:5-16 In this material, an expansion of the single verse 2 Kings 2:14, Amaziah prepares for war using conscripted troops from Judah and mercenary troops from Israel.

25:6 also hired one hundred thousand warriors from Israel: Although Amaziah already had a strong army from Judah and Benjamin consisting of "three hundred thousand select troops" (25:5), he makes a fatal mistake by relying on additional military strength and the support of the north.

25:7-8 a man of God confronted him: As is typical in Chronicles, God gives a misguided king an opportunity to change course by sending a message from the heavenly realm (see note on 2 Chron 11:2). In his short speech the man gives two reasons for not taking the southern troops into war: the LORD isn't on the side of Israel or any Ephraimite, and regardless of the number of troops, God has the ability to either help or make someone stumble. The books of 1 and 2 Chronicles contain many stories to indicate that numbers don't matter in war (e.g., 2 Chron 13:3-16; 14:8-15).

25:14 He set them up as his own gods: The worship of gods whose people have just lost a military battle is unusual.

defeating the Edomites, he brought the gods of the people of Seir. He set them up as his own gods, bowed down before them, and burned incense to them. <sup>15</sup>As a result, the LORD was angry with Amaziah and sent a prophet to him.

"Why do you seek the gods of this people?" the prophet asked. "They couldn't even deliver their own people from you!"

<sup>16</sup>"Since when do you give me advice?" Amaziah interrupted. "You better quit before you end up dead!"

So the prophet stopped, but not until he said, "I know God plans to destroy you because you've done this and because you've refused to listen to my advice."

<sup>17</sup>After Judah's King Amaziah consulted with his advisors, he sent a challenge to Israel's King Joash, Jehoahaz's son and Jehu's grandson. "Come on," he said, "let's go head-to-head!"

<sup>18</sup>Israel's King Joash sent the following reply to Judah's King Amaziah: "Once upon a time, a thistle in Lebanon sent a message to a cedar: 'Give your daughter to my son as a wife.' But then a wild beast in Lebanon came along and trampled the thistle. <sup>19</sup>Do you think that because you've defeated Edom, you can arrogantly seek even more? Stay home! Why invite disaster when both you and Judah will fall?" <sup>20</sup>But Amaziah wouldn't listen, because God intended to use this to destroy them since they had sought Edom's gods. <sup>21</sup>So Israel's King Joash moved against Judah's King Amaziah and went head-to-head in battle at Beth-shemesh in Judah. <sup>22</sup>Judah was defeated by Israel, and everyone ran home. <sup>23</sup>At Beth-shemesh, Israel's King Joash captured Judah's King Amaziah, Jehoash's<sup>a</sup> son and Ahaziah's<sup>7</sup> grandson. Joash brought him to Jerusalem and broke down six hundred feet of the Jerusalem wall from the Ephraim Gate to the Corner Gate. <sup>24</sup>Joash took<sup>k</sup> all the gold and silver, and all the objects he could find in God's temple in the care of Obed-edom, and in the treasuries of the palace, along with some hostages. Then he returned to Samaria.

Uzziah rules Judah

26 Then all the people of Judah took Uzziah,<sup>b</sup> who was 16 years old, and made him king after his father Amaziah. <sup>2</sup>He rebuilt Eloth, restoring it to Judah after King Amaziah had lain down with his ancestors.

Not only does Amaziah turn away from the Lord, he worships the gods his army has just defeated.

25:16 Amaziah interrupted: The king's disdain for God's prophet is such that the prophet wasn't even allowed to complete his speech.

25:17 consulted with his advisors: Ironically, the king refuses to hear the advice of God delivered through the prophet (2 Chron 25:16), turning instead to the royal counselors.

25:18 Once upon a time: Joash's reply is in the form of a fable that doesn't seem exactly to respond to Amaziah's proposal of war. Instead, Joash teases Amaziah for acting presumptuously, like a thistle who proposes a marriage alliance with a cedar.

25:20 because God intended to use this to destroy them: This is a strategic insertion by the Chronicler into the narrative in 2 Kings 24:8-14, and it clearly shows the author's theology.

25:23 and broke down six hundred feet of the Jerusalem wall: With the battle already won, and the king and royal heirs captured, this additional destruction seems useless.

Perhaps the city mounted an additional defense, or Joash wanted simply to inflict some additional punishment.

25:25 after the death of Israel's King Joash: See the notice in 2 Kings 14:15-16.

25:27 From the time Amaziah turned away from the Lord: As is typical in Chronicles, continued disobedience brings punishment. When kings like Amaziah refuse to listen to the messages sent from God (2 Chron 25:16), they suffer defeat in war, physical illness, or other maladies. Here Amaziah is frightened by some people conspiring against him in Jerusalem. When he seeks safety in another city, they murder him in Lachish, a fortified royal city 30 miles southwest of Jerusalem in the western foothills (also called the Shephelah).

26:1-23 The reign of Uzziah is marked with great success at the beginning. He restored the strategic Red Sea port of Eloth to Judah, achieved many military victories, tended to livestock and crops, and reigned for 52 years (26:2-15). But when he spurns proper worship behaviors, God afflicts him with a disabling skin disease (26:16-21). His reign marks the third in a row of kings who begin with <sup>3</sup>Uzziah was 16 years old when he became king, and he ruled for fifty-two years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Jecoliah; she was from Jerusalem. <sup>4</sup>He did what was right in the LORD's eyes, just as his father Amaziah had done. <sup>5</sup>He sought God as long as Zechariah, who instructed him in the fear<sup>c</sup> of God, was alive. And as long as he sought the LORD, God gave him success. <sup>6</sup>He marched against the Philistines and broke down the walls of Gath, Jabneh, and Ashdod. Then he rebuilt towns near Ashdod and elsewhere among the Philistines. <sup>7</sup>God helped him against the Philistines, the Arabs who inhabited Gur,<sup>d</sup> and the Meunites. <sup>8</sup>The Meunites<sup>e</sup> paid taxes to Uzziah, whose fame spread even to Egypt because he had grown so powerful. <sup>9</sup>He built towers in Jerusalem, at the Corner Gate, the Valley Gate, and at the Angle, and reinforced them. <sup>10</sup>He also built towers in the wilderness and dug many wells for his large herds in the lowlands and the plain. He had many workers who tended his farms and vineyards, because he loved the soil. <sup>11</sup>Uzziah had a standing army equipped for combat whose units went to war according to the number determined by the scribe Jeiel and Maa-seiah, an officer under the authority of Hananiah, one of the king's officials. <sup>12</sup>The grand total of family heads in charge of these courageous warriors was twenty-six hundred. <sup>13</sup>They commanded an army of three hundred seven thousand five hundred. They formed a powerful force that could support the king against the enemy. <sup>14</sup>Uzziah supplied the entire force with shields, spears, helmets, armor, bows, and sling stones. <sup>15</sup>He set up clever devices in Jerusalem on the towers and corners of the wall designed to shoot arrows and large stones. And so Uzziah's fame spread far and wide, because he had received wonderful help until he became powerful.

<sup>16</sup>But as soon as he became powerful, he grew so arrogant that he acted corruptly. He was unfaithful to the LORD his God by entering the LORD's sanctuary to burn incense upon the faithfulness and triumph, but ultimately meet with disaster (i.e., Jehoash and Amaziah in 2 Chron 24–25). The Chronicler's account of Uzziah follows the parallel in Kings at the beginning and end (26: 1–4 = 2 Kgs 14:21–22; 15:2–3; and most of 26:20b–23 = 2 Kgs 15:5–7). The king's name appears as the variant form of Azariah in the 2 Kings material, as well as 1 Chronicles 3:12.

26:2 He rebuilt Eloth: This was a strategic port on the Red Sea (also called "Elath" in Deut 2:8 and 2 Kgs 14:22), lost to the Edomites in the reign of Ahaz (2 Kgs 16:6). Given that the Chronicler often highlights the relationship between faithfulness and success, this early achievement is a good sign for the rest of his kingship.

26:3 he ruled for fifty-two years: Like the reference to the rebuilding of Eloth in 26:2, the narrator begins the account of his reign with signs of success. In terms of the length of reign, Uzziah is surpassed only by Manasseh (2 Chron 33:1).

26:4 He did what was right in the LORD's eyes: Given the previous notices of his success (rebuilding Eloth in 26:2 and reigning for 52 years in 26:3), the news of King Uzziah's faithfulness to God isn't surprising.

26:5–20a This long stretch of 15 verses isn't in Kings (see note on 2 Chron 26:1–23). Although it adds additional information about the king's success, it also provides a motivation for his affliction at the end.

26:5 He sought God as long as Zechariah... was alive: This initial notice about Uzziah's faithfulness during the lifetime of Zechariah is particularly ominous, and reminiscent of the presentation of his grandfather Jehoash in 2 Chronicles 24:2. For the use of the significant phrase sought God to describe the life of the righteous, see 2 Chronicles 14:7; 19:3; 20:3.

26:7 the Philistines, the Arabs who inhabited Gur, and the Meunites: After the territorial losses suffered by Jehoram

(2 Chron 21:8–10, 16–17), Uzziah now resecures the land to the west and east.

26:8 whose fame spread even to Egypt: Uzziah's conquests, noted in 26:7–8, result in far-reaching renown. The description, repeated in 2 Chronicles 26:15, is significant, because typically fame is only used to describe the achievements of David (1 Chron 14:17, a text with no parallel in the 2 Samuel source).

26:9 He built towers in Jerusalem: Just as Uzziah restored the territorial losses sustained by Jehoram (2 Chron 21:8–10, 16–17; 26:7–8), the king now tends to the damage inflicted by Joash of Israel during the reign of Amaziah (2 Chron 25:23).

26:10 he loved the soil: the only instance of this desire in the Bible.

26:11–15 Uzziah's military victories are supported by a large, well-ordered, and well-supplied army. In addition, the king himself is credited with designing innovative defensive machinery in Jerusalem.

26:15 fame: See note on 2 Chronicles 26:8. he had received wonderful help: The assertion that Uzziah's success was based on divine help frames the account of his early success (26:7, 15).

26:16–21 The Chronicler's own material continues in this next section that sets out Uzziah's pride and eventual downfall. The author returns to the Kings material at the end of 16:20 (2 Chron 26:20b–23 = 2 Kgs 15:5–7).

26:16 But as soon as he became powerful: This observation links back to the beginning of Uzziah's reign, when the author notes that the king encountered success "as long as he sought the LORD" (2 Chron 26:5). It is also reminiscent of the reigns of kings such as Rehoboam, who, as soon as he secured his power, "abandoned the LORD's instruction" (2 Chron 12:1). Although the Chronicler associates blessing with faithfulness throughout the narrative, the text incense altar. <sup>17</sup>The priest Azariah, accompanied by eighty other of the LORD's courageous priests, went in after him <sup>18</sup>and confronted King Uzziah.

"You have no right, Uzziah," he said, "to burn incense to the LORD! That privilege belongs to the priests, Aaron's descendants, who have been ordained to burn incense. Get out of this holy place because you have been unfaithful! The LORD God won't honor you for this."

<sup>21</sup>King Uzziah had skin disease until the day he died. He lived in a separate house,<sup>g</sup> diseased in his skin, because he was barred from the LORD's temple. His son Jotham supervised the palace administration and governed the people of the land. <sup>22</sup>The rest of Uzziah's deeds, from beginning to end, were written down by the prophet Isaiah, Amoz's son. <sup>23</sup>Uzziah died and was buried with his ancestors in a field belonging to the kings, because people said, "He had skin disease." His son Jotham succeeded him as king.

Jotham rules

27 Jotham was 25 years old when he became king, and he ruled for sixteen years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Jerushah; she was Zadok's daughter. <sup>2</sup>Jotham did what was right in the LORD's eyes, just as his father Uzziah had done. Unlike Uzziah, Jotham didn't enter the LORD's temple. But the people continued their crooked practices. <sup>3</sup>Jotham rebuilt the Upper Gate of the LORD's temple and did extensive work on the wall of the elevated fortress. <sup>4</sup>He built towns in Judah's highlands and fortresses and towers in the wooded areas. <sup>5</sup>He fought against the king of the Ammonites and defeated the Ammonites. They paid him one hundred kikkars of silver, ten thousand kors<sup>1</sup> of wheat, and ten thousand kors of barley that year and for the next two years. <sup>6</sup>Jotham was securely established because also points to the risk of an ill-conceived self-reliance that it may bring.

26:18 "You have no right, Uzziah": In the eyes of Azariah and the other priests, the king is violating God's Instruction by being in a place where he isn't allowed (the Lord's sanctuary), and conducting acts that he isn't allowed to do (burning incense on the incense altar). For more on the proper use of incense, see Exodus 30:7-9. you have been unfaithful!: The priest announces what the narrator has already asserted in 26:16. The two-part emphasis is ominous, and the reader is reminded of the evaluation of Saul: "Saul died because he was unfaithful to the LORD" (1 Chron 10:13). See also the use of the term in 2 Chronicles 28:19.

26:19 skin disease erupted on his forehead: While manifesting several signs of his own sense of entitlement (standing in the holy place, holding a censer, and fuming at the priests), the king is suddenly marked with a highly visible sign of God's displeasure and ritual uncleanness (see Lev 13:42-46).

26:20 Uzziah also was anxious to leave: Although previously he was ready to stand his ground even against the objections of the priests, the king now quickly aligns himself with their goal and rushes out of the temple.

26:22 written down by the prophet Isaiah: See also 2 Chronicles 32:32.

26:23 in a field belonging to the kings: Uzziah's burial may reflect an extension of the rule that unclean people with skin disease were excluded from the community until they were healed (Lev 13:42-46; 14:1-32).

27:1-9 The brief account of Jotham's 16-year reign tells of a time of prosperity when building projects were completed and military engagements won, and thus stands in contrast to the next story of Ahaz's reign (1 Chron 28). The narrative is adopted from 2 Kings 15:32-38, elaborated with the material in 2 Chronicles 27:3b-6. Strategically, the Chronicler omits the notice that it was in Jotham's reign that Aram's King Rezin and Israel's King Pekah began their offensive against Judah (2 Kgs 15:37).

27:2 didn't enter the LORD's temple: For this story, see 2 Chronicles 26:16-20. But the people continued their crooked practices: This is the only negative note in the account of Jotham's reign.

27:3b-6 This account, added to the narrative of 2 Kings 15:32-38, highlights the king's successful building and military campaigns. Both are signs of God's blessing throughout the book of Chronicles (e.g., 2 Chron 11:5-12; 13:18).

27:5 defeated the Ammonites: After the territorial losses suffered by Jehoram (2 Chron 21:8-10, 16-17), Uzziah re-secured lands mainly to the west (2 Chron 26:7). Now Uzziah's son secures eastern territory.

27:6 securely established: In the account of Uzziah's reign, the narrator follows the assertion of the king's power with an ominous glance to the future: as soon as he became powerful, "he grew so arrogant that he acted corruptly" (2 Chron 26:16). The reign of Jotham follows a much different course because, as the narrator emphasizes he maintained a faithful life before the LORD his God: For other kings who became too self-reliant, see 2 Chronicles 12:1; 32:25, as well as the warning in Deuteronomy 8:11-18.

he maintained a faithful life before the LORD his God. <sup>7</sup>The rest of Jotham's deeds, including all his wars and accomplishments, are written in the official records of Israel's and Judah's kings. <sup>8</sup>He was 25 years old when he became king, and he ruled for sixteen years in Jerusalem. <sup>9</sup>Jotham lay down with his ancestors and was buried in David's City. His son Ahaz succeeded him as king.

Ahaz rules

28 Ahaz was 20 years old when he became king, and he ruled for sixteen years in Jerusalem. He didn't do what was right in the LORD's eyes, unlike his ancestor David. <sup>2</sup>Instead, he walked in the ways of Israel's kings, making images of the Baals <sup>3</sup>and burning incense in the Ben-hinnom Valley. He even burned his own sons alive, imitating the detestable practices of the nations the LORD had driven out before the Israelites. <sup>4</sup>He also sacrificed and burned incense at the shrines on every hill and beneath every shady tree. <sup>5</sup>So the LORD his God handed him over to Aram's king, who defeated him and carried off many prisoners, bringing them to Damascus. Ahaz was also handed over to Israel's king, who defeated him with a severe beating. <sup>6</sup>In Judah, Pekah, Remaliah's son, killed one hundred twenty thousand warriors in the course of a single day because they had abandoned the LORD, God of their ancestors. <sup>7</sup>An Ephraimite warrior named Zichri killed the king's son Maaseiah, the palace administrator Azrikam, and Elkanah, the king's second in command. <sup>8</sup>The Israelites took captive two hundred thousand women, boys, and girls from their Judean relatives and seized enormous amounts of plunder, which they took back to Samaria.

<sup>9</sup>One of the LORD's prophets named Oded lived in Samaria. When the army arrived there, he went to meet them and said, "Don't you see that the LORD God of your ancestors was angry with Judah and let you defeat them? But look what you've done! Your merciless slaughter of them stinks to high heaven! <sup>10</sup>And now you think you can enslave the men and women of Judah and Jerusalem? What about your own guilt before the LORD your God? <sup>11</sup>Listen to me! Send back the captives you took from your relatives, because the LORD is furious with you."

27:7 the official records of Israel's and Judah's kings: a source named in other accounts throughout Chronicles (e.g., 2 Chron 28:26).

28:1-27 In between the reigns of two good kings (Jotham in 2 Chron 28 and Hezekiah in 2 Chron 29-32), the reign of Ahaz is a story of unmitigated disaster. As the kingdom comes under threat from all sides, the king's unfaithfulness causes God to become very angry (28:25). The chapter is based on 2 Kings 16, following the source text most closely in 2 Chronicles 27:1-4, 26-27.

28:1 He didn't do what was right in the LORD's eyes: In the Chronicler's presentation, a few kings such as David and Solomon are exemplars of faithfulness to God. Most, however, present a mixed record of faithfulness and failing (e.g., Uzziah, Amaziah, and Jehoshaphat). But Ahaz is presented as thoroughly bad, and during his reign Judah suffers sharp decline.

28:2 walked in the ways of Israel's kings: For a similar description of Jehoram and Ahaziah, see 2 Chronicles 21:6; 22:3-4.

28:3 burned his own sons alive: Even though the Chronicler has linked other kings with the corrupt practices of the northern kingdom before (see note on 2 Chron 28:2), this charge is new. It makes a connection between Ahaz and the worship of Molech as represented in 1 Kings 11:7; Leviticus 18:21; Jeremiah 32:35. With the change to the plural sons (it appears as a singular in 2 Kgs 16:3), the Chronicler intensifies Ahaz's deeds. A similar charge of child sacrifice will be levied against Manasseh in 2 Chronicles 33:6.

28:4 shrines on every hill and beneath every shady tree: A similar type of religious practice was also mentioned for the reign of Jeroboam in 2 Chronicles 21:11.

28:5-7 In a strategy aimed to strengthen their defense against Assyria, Israel and Aram formed a coalition. When Judah refused their "invitation" to join, the northern alliance attacked Jerusalem. The Bible contains several different accounts of this complicated conflict, all with their own theological and political emphases. See, for example, 2 Kings 15:37; 16:5; Isaiah 7; and Hosea 5:8-6:6. In the retelling here, the attack of the enemies is described separately (Aram in 28:5a, then Israel in 28:5b-7), but attributed to the same cause: Ahaz was "handed . . . over" by God as punishment for his sins.

28:6 because they had abandoned the LORD: The high number of casualties in Judah isn't attributed to the enemies' superior might or to the sin of Ahaz but to the religious impropriety of the people themselves. Ironically, the Chronicler describes the north in similar terms in 2 Chronicles 13:11-12.

28:9 the LORD God of your ancestors: Because they rejected the Davidic monarchy and the Jerusalem temple, the Chronicler understands that the north is under judgment. But the author also insists that the northern kingdom is still part of God's people. The same sense is indicated with the designation of the southern prisoners as "relatives" in 2 Chronicles 28:8, 11. See sidebar, "God's People, North or South" at 2 Chronicles 10.

28:11 Send back the captives you took: The request to repatriate the prisoners of war is a dubious military strategy, but, as is typical in Chronicles, theological reasoning must be considered. Although it might strengthen their position, Oded insists that Israel's punishment of Judah was far in excess of their crime before God (2 Chron 28:9). In addition, the north must consider its own guilt before God (2 Chron 28:10).

<sup>12</sup>At this, some of the Ephraimite leaders—Johanan's son Azariah, Meshillemoth's son Berechiah, Shallum's son Jehizkiah, and Hadlai's son Amasa—confronted those returning from battle. <sup>13</sup>"Don't bring the captives here," they told them. "Your plan will only add to our sin and guilt before the LORD. We're already guilty enough, and great anger is already directed at Israel." <sup>14</sup>So the warriors released the captives and brought the loot before the officers and the whole assembly. <sup>15</sup>Then people named for this task took charge of the captives and dressed everyone who was naked with items taken from the loot. They gave them clothing, sandals, food and drink, and bandaged their wounds. Everyone who couldn't walk they placed on donkeys, and they brought them to Jericho, Palm City, near their Judean relatives. Then they returned to Samaria.

28:13-15 Don't bring the captives here: Remarkably, Oded's argument convinces the Ephraimite leaders, and the prisoners are returned to the south.

28:16-21 In a time of great crisis, when Judah is being invaded by Edom from the southeast (28:17) and the Philistines from the west (28:18), Ahaz appeals for help from the strongest power currently on the world stage: Tiglath-pileser III of Assyria.

28:18 Beth-shemesh, Aijalon: Considered together, this collection of sites represents a considerable amount of territory, from Gimzo in the north to Soco in the south. In addition, several of the sites are particularly strategic: Timnah guards the valley of Sorek, and Soco is in the Elah valley.

28:19 utterly unfaithful: Ahaz's great defeat is attributed to the same cause as the earlier downfalls of Saul and Uzziah: "unfaithfulness" (1 Chron 10:13; 2 Chron 26:16, 18; and see 2 Chron 28:22; 29:19).

28:21 it was of no help: Although appealing to the ruler of Assyria may have represented sound strategy (2 Chron took items from the LORD's temple, the royal palace, and the officials to buy off the king of Assyria, it was of no help.

<sup>22</sup>It was during this troubled time that King Ahaz became even more unfaithful to the LORD <sup>23</sup>by sacrificing to the gods of Damascus, who had defeated him.

"Since the gods of Aram's kings are helping them," he said, "I'll sacrifice to them too, so that they will help me."

But they became the ruin of both him and all Israel. <sup>24</sup>Ahaz gathered the objects from God's temple, cut them up, shut the doors of the LORD's temple, and made himself altars on every corner in Jerusalem. <sup>25</sup>He made shrines in all the towns of Judah for burning incense to other gods. This made the LORD, the God of his ancestors, very angry.

<sup>26</sup>The rest of Ahaz's deeds, from beginning to end, are written in the official records of Israel's and Judah's kings. <sup>27</sup>Ahaz lay down with his ancestors and was buried in the city, in Jerusalem, but not in the royal cemetery of Israel's kings. His son Hezekiah succeeded him as king.

Hezekiah rules

29 Hezekiah became king when he was 25 years old, and he ruled for twenty-nine years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Abijah; she was Zechariah's daughter. <sup>2</sup>He did what was right in the LORD's eyes, just as his ancestor David had done. <sup>3</sup>In the very first year of his rule, during the first month, Hezekiah reopened the doors of the LORD's temple, having repaired them. <sup>4</sup>Then he brought in the priests and Levites and assembled them in the eastern square.

<sup>5</sup>"Listen to me, you Levites!" he said. "Make yourselves holy so you can make holy the temple of the LORD God of your ancestors by removing from the sanctuary any impure thing. <sup>6</sup>Our ancestors were unfaithful and did what was evil in the LORD our God's eyes. They abandoned him, they ignored the LORD's dwelling, and they defied him. <sup>7</sup>They even closed the doors of the entrance hall, snuffed out the lamps, and stopped burning incense and offering entirely burned offerings in the sanctuary of the God of Israel. <sup>8</sup>This angered the LORD so much that he made Judah and Jerusalem an object of terror and horror, something people hiss at, as you can see with your own eyes. <sup>9</sup>That's why our ancestors died violent deaths, while our sons, daughters, and wives were taken captive. <sup>10</sup>But now I intend to make a covenant with the LORD, Israel's God, so God will no longer be angry with us. <sup>11</sup>Don't be careless, my sons! The LORD has chosen you to stand in his presence to serve him, so that you can be his servants and burn incense to him."

28:16), the Chronicler has repeatedly emphasized that such "help" must come from God alone (1 Chron 5:20; 2 Chron 14:11; 18:31; 25:8; 26:7; 32:8). It comes as no great surprise, then, to read that Ahaz's strategy didn't work.

28:23-25 Since the gods of Aram's kings are helping them: In a time of national disaster, Ahaz changes from his diplomatic strategy of seeking support from Assyria to a religious strategy that seeks support from the gods of Damascus. Yet his zeal is misplaced. In his frantic destruction of the Jerusalem temple and simultaneous institution of incense altars for the worship of other gods throughout Judah, Ahaz ends his reign by spurning his only chance for true help and making God very angry (28:25).

28:27 but not in the royal cemetery of Israel's kings: In addition to military defeat and loss of territory, Ahaz's sins are punished by keeping his body out of the royal cemetery. See the similar fate of Jehoram, Jehoash, and Uzziah in 2 Chronicles 21:20; 24:25; 26:23.

29:1-32:33 The book of Chronicles devotes more space to describing Hezekiah's reign over Judah—four chapters—than any other king, with the exception of David and Solomon. The relative length signals his significance to the author as the king who most closely measured up to the nation's two greatest kings. With the exception of the deletion of 2 Kings 18:9-12, the Chronicler reuses much of the material in the Kings source (2 Kgs 18-20). The author also makes significant additions in 2 Chronicles 29:3-30:27; 31:2-19; 32:27-30.

29:2 He did what was right . . . just as his ancestor David had done: At the very beginning of the account, the narrator sets out two major themes that animate the presentation of Hezekiah: The king stands in marked contrast to his father Ahaz, and reigns instead like another David or Solomon. After the fall of the north during Ahaz's reign (not mentioned in 2 Chron 28), the Davidic dynasty has no rival reigning, and Hezekiah is able to reassemble the nation in worship at Jerusalem.

29:3-36 reopened the doors of the Lord's temple: Hezekiah's physical act in 29:3 announces the literary focus of the section: the restoration of the temple. In reopening the doors he effectively reverses his father's acts of destruction and desecration (2 Chron 28:24; cf. 29:7, 19). See sidebar, "Acceptable Temple Worship."

29:5-11 Make yourselves holy: Hezekiah instructs the Levites to undo the desecration brought on in the days of Ahaz (2 Chron 28:24-25).

29:6-9 Our ancestors were unfaithful: After his initial command to purify the temple, Hezekiah motivates the follow through with a recitation of past history. First he tells of the unfaithfulness of the past generation (29:6-7), and God's angry response (29:8-9).

<sup>12</sup>Then the following Levites got up:

from the descendants of the Kohathites: Mahath, Amasai's son, and Joel, Azariah's son;
from the descendants of Merari: Kish, Abdi's son, and Azariah, Jehallelel's son;
from the Gershonites: Joah, Zimmah's son, and Eden, Joah's son;

<sup>13</sup>from the descendants of Elizaphan: Shimri and Jeuel;

from the descendants of Asaph: Zechariah and Mattaniah;

and from the descendants of Jeduthun: Shemaiah and Uzziel.

<sup>15</sup>These men gathered their relatives, made themselves holy, and went in to purify the LORD's temple by obeying the king's command as the LORD had told him. <sup>16</sup>The priests went in to purify the inner portion of the LORD's temple. They brought out to the courtyard of the LORD's temple all the impurities they discovered inside. Then the Levites took them out to the Kidron Valley. <sup>17</sup>They began to make things holy on the first day of the first month.<sup>1</sup> On the eighth day of the month they reached the LORD's entrance hall. They made holy the LORD's temple for eight days, finishing on the sixteenth day of the first month.

<sup>18</sup>Then they went before King Hezekiah. "We have purified the LORD's entire temple," they said, "and the altar for the entirely burned offering together with all its equipment, and the table for the stacks of bread together with all its equipment. <sup>19</sup>We have also restored and made holy all the items King Ahaz threw out during his rule in his unfaithfulness. They are now before the LORD's altar."

Hezekiah rededicates the temple

<sup>20</sup>Early the next morning Hezekiah gathered the city leaders and went to the LORD's temple. <sup>21</sup>They brought seven bulls, seven rams, and seven lambs, along with seven male goats, for a purification offering on behalf of the kingdom, the sanctuary, and Judah. Hezekiah ordered the priests, Aaron's sons, to offer them up on the LORD's altar. <sup>22</sup>When they slaughtered the bulls, the priests took the blood and splashed it against the altar. Next they slaughtered the rams and splashed their blood against the altar, and also slaughtered the lambs, splashing their blood against the altar as well. <sup>23</sup>Finally, they brought the goats for the purification offering before the king and the assembly. After laying their hands on them, <sup>24</sup>the priests slaughtered them and smeared the blood on the altar as a purification offering to take away the sin of all Israel, because the king had specifically ordered that the entirely burned sacrifice and the purification offering should be on behalf of all Israel. <sup>25</sup>Hezekiah had the Levites stand in the LORD's temple with cymbals, harps, and zithers, just as the LORD had ordered through David, the king's seer Gad, and the prophet Nathan. <sup>26</sup>While the Levites took their places holding David's instruments, and the priests their trumpets, <sup>27</sup>Hezekiah ordered the entirely burned offering to be offered up on the altar. As they began to offer the entirely burned offering, the LORD's song also began, accompanied by the trumpets and the other instruments of Israel's King David. <sup>28</sup>The whole congregation worshipped with singing choirs and blaring trumpets until the end of the entirely burned offering. <sup>29</sup>After the entirely burned offering was complete, the king and all who were with and punishments suffered by the ancestors, Hezekiah sets out a new course of action: making a covenant with the LORD that he hopes will assuage God's anger. For other covenants, see 2 Chronicles 15:12, 23:16; 34:31.

29:12–14 Then the following Levites got up: In response to Hezekiah's speech (2 Chron 29:5–11), the Levites act. The list of Levites represents the main branches of their tribe, along with the choral families (see 1 Chron 15:5–9).

29:15–19 made themselves holy: The theme of holiness announced at the beginning of Hezekiah's speech (29:5) is emphasized by the repeated use of the verbs "to make holy" and "to purify" throughout the description of the priest's and Levite's response.

29:19 all the items King Ahaz threw out: See 2 Chronicles 28:24; 29:7; 2 Kings 16:14–15.

area, the king and the leaders gather at the temple to reinstitute the sacrificial practices and bring animals for a purification offering on behalf of the kingdom, the sanctuary, and Judah.

29:22 In the first part of the rite, bulls, rams, and lambs are slaughtered and the blood splashed on the altar to purify it. For more on this ritual, see Leviticus 1:3–13.

29:23 After laying their hands on them: This is an act of self-identification with the victim.

29:24 The goats are then slaughtered, with the blood smeared on the altar to take away the sin of all Israel. For more on this ritual, see Leviticus 4:1–5:13.

29:25–30 Then the animals are offered up as an entirely burned offering upon the altar to the sound of joyous music. Throughout this section, the emphasis on Hezekiah's faithful reconstruction of David's plans for Heze-

Acceptable Temple Worship In the extended account of Hezekiah's reign, the Chronicler includes many details concerning the ancient practice of religion in Judah, engaged in by both the priests and laypeople. Central to the author's portrayal of religious practice is the role of the temple. This was the unique place God chose as "my house of sacrifice," and where God placed the divine name "forever" (2 Chron 7:12, 16). Given this special relationship between God and the temple, it follows that the Chronicler places particular emphasis on Jerusalem as a place for worship. In Jerusalem the priests and Levites offer incense and entirely burned sacrifices (2 Chron 29:7, 11, 22-24, 27, 31-35; 30:16-17; 31:2), and the nation gathers to celebrate the festivals of Passover and Unleavened Bread (2 Chron 30:6-9, 13). The worship itself was marked by Levites making music (2 Chron 29:25-28; 30:21) and blessing the people (2 Chron 30:27). Both the clergy and the laypeople "bow" in worship (2 Chron 29:29-30). In addition, the author makes note of several of the prayers of the king, including his intercessions for the gathered community, the safety of the nation under military threat, and his own sickness (2 Chron 30:18; 32:20, 24). Finally, the account also mentions several practices in which the nation engaged, but that the author considered illegitimate, including the abandonment of the temple (2 Chron 29:6), the use of alternative altars and incense altars in Jerusalem (2 Chron 30:14; 32:12), as well as the use of sacred pillars, poles, shrines, and altars throughout the countryside (2 Chron 31:1).

him bowed down in worship. <sup>30</sup>Then King Hezekiah and the leaders ordered the Levites to praise the LORD by using the words of David and the seer Asaph. They did so joyously; then they bowed down in worship too.

<sup>31</sup>"Now that you have dedicated yourselves to the LORD," King Hezekiah told them, "bring sacrificial thank offerings to the LORD's temple." So the assembly brought sacrificial thank offerings, with some people volunteering to provide entirely burned offerings. <sup>32</sup>All in all, the congregation brought seventy bulls, a hundred rams, and two hundred lambs as entirely burned offerings for the LORD. <sup>33</sup>as well as six hundred bulls and three thousand sheep as holy offerings. <sup>34</sup>Unfortunately, there weren't enough priests to skin all these entirely burned offerings. So their relatives the Levites (who had been more conscientious about preparing themselves than the priests) stepped in and helped them until the work was done or additional priests had made themselves holy. <sup>35</sup>In addition to the wealth of entirely burned offerings, there was the fat of the well-being sacrifices and drink offerings accompanying the entirely burned offerings. In this way, the service of the LORD's temple was restored, <sup>36</sup>and Hezekiah and all the people rejoiced at what God had done for them, since it had happened so quickly.

Hezekiah's Passover

30 Then Hezekiah sent word to all Israel and Judah, and wrote letters to Ephraim and Manasseh as well, inviting them to the LORD's temple in Jerusalem to celebrate the Passover of the LORD God of Israel. <sup>2</sup>The king, his officials, and the entire Jerusalem congregation had decided to celebrate Passover in the second month.<sup>m</sup> <sup>3</sup>They had been unable to celebrate it at the usual time because the priests had failed to make themselves holy in music provides additional links between the two kings (1 Chron 15:16-21; 23:5; 25:1-7; 2 Chron 7:6; see sidebar, "Worship and Music" at 2 Chron 5).

29:31-36 bring sacrificial thank offerings: In the final act of worship, the people present voluntary offerings as an expression of their personal devotion. Their enthusiastic generosity is reminiscent of their voluntary contributions when Moses asked the community to donate to the sacred dwelling and when David asked for contributions for the temple (Exod 25:1-9; 35:4-29; 1 Chron 29:5-9).

30:1-31:1 The celebration of Passover in Jerusalem by the northern and southern tribes is a continuation of Hezekiah's restoration of the temple worship rituals. See sidebar, "God's People, North or South" at 2 Chronicles 10. The chapter breaks into two halves: 30:1-14 describes the preparation for the event, including the decision to celebrate it, and the invitation throughout Israel and Judah; and 30:15-27 relates the joyous event itself. None of this material is included in the account about Hezekiah in Kings.

30:1 sent word to all Israel and Judah: The narrative repeatedly emphasizes the inclusion of the northern tribes along with the south. At this point in history, the northern kingdom had fallen to the Assyrian invaders in 722 BCE, and so the vision of both kingdoms joined together in worship is especially significant. The fall of the north is alluded to in 2 Chronicles 30:6 (see the note there).

30:3 at the usual time: The traditions surrounding the celebration of Passover and the Feast of Unleavened Bread show some amount of change and development within the Pentateuch. The description in 2 Chronicles 30 best fits the rulings about the date and location given in Leviticus 23:5-8 and Deuteronomy 16:1-8, where the celebrations are to take place at the central sanctuary instead of in the sufficient numbers, and the people hadn't gathered at Jerusalem. <sup>4</sup>Since the plan seemed good to the king and the entire congregation, <sup>5</sup>they made arrangements to circulate an announcement throughout all Israel, from Beer-sheba to Dan, to come to Jerusalem to celebrate the Passover of the LORD God of Israel, because they hadn't often kept it as written. <sup>6</sup>Under the authority of the king, runners took letters from the king and his officials throughout all Israel and Judah, which read:

People of Israel! Return to the LORD, the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, so that he may return to those of you who remain, who have escaped capture by the Assyrian kings. <sup>7</sup>Don't be like your ancestors and relatives, who were unfaithful to the LORD, the God of their ancestors, so that he made them an object of horror as you can see for yourselves. <sup>8</sup>So don't be stubborn like your ancestors. Surrender to the LORD! Come to God's sanctuary, which he has made holy forever, and serve the LORD your God so that he won't be angry with you any longer. <sup>9</sup>When you return to the LORD, your relatives and your children will receive mercy from their captors and be allowed to return to this land. The LORD your God is merciful and compassionate. He won't withdraw his presence from you if you return to him.

<sup>10</sup>So the runners went from town to town in Ephraim and Manasseh, all the way to Zebulun. But they were laughed at and made fun of. <sup>11</sup>Even so, some people from Asher, Manasseh, and Zebulun were submissive and came to Jerusalem. <sup>12</sup>Moreover, God's power was at work in Judah, unifying them to do what the king and his officials had ordered by the LORD's command.

home (as in Exod 12:1-27). Also, Numbers 9:1-12 allows for a delay in the celebration until the second month if the people are away on a journey or ritually impure.

30:5 from Beer-sheba to Dan: Again the narrative emphasizes the inclusion of all Israel in the celebration. Here the two cities represent the traditional southern and northern borders of Israel at the nation's maximum geographic reach (1 Chron 21:2). For more, see note on 2 Chronicles 30:1.

30:6b-10 Hezekiah's letter emphasizes the need for turning away from sin and the certainty of divine forgiveness: Return to the LORD . . . so that he may return to . . . you (30:6, 9). Given the occasion, the call to return implies more than a spiritual attitude—the king is calling for a physical journey to Jerusalem.

30:6 the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Israel: The last term deviates from the more typical biblical expression, "the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob" (see, e.g., Exod 3:6, 15). Referring to the patriarch "Jacob" as "Israel" is typical for the Chronicler and emphasizes the unity of the north and south through their shared ancestor. who have escaped capture by the Assyrian kings: The northern kingdom fell to the Assyrians in 722 BCE. Although the Chronicler doesn't provide details of this event, more information is given in 2 Kings 15:29; 18:9-12.

30:8 Come to God's sanctuary: In the actual invitation to celebrate Passover, the letter emphasizes the geographic connotations of returning to God: The people must refrain from sin and must worship in Jerusalem.

30:11 some people from Asher: Later in the account, Issachar is also included in the list of participants (2 Chron 30:18), indicating a sizable inclusion of the northern tribes.

30:12 God's power was at work in Judah, unifying them: In divine human relations, the Chronicler often shows how God will respond favorably to the right human behavior: "Return to the LORD . . . so that he may return to . . . you" (30:6, 9). Yet the author also asserts that God can intervene and encourage faithfulness. See also 1 Chronicles 22:12; and note on 1 Chronicles 29:18-19.

30:14 removed the altars: The people's purification of the city, desecrated when Ahaz installed altars "on every corner" (2 Chron 28:24-25), parallels the earlier purification of the temple area by the priests and Levites (2 Chron 29:5-19).

30:16 splashed the blood . . . against the altar: For more on this act of the priests, see Leviticus 1:5; 11; 3:2, 8, 13.

30:17 the Levites slaughtered the Passover lambs: According to the instruction in Exodus 12:6, it is the laity who are to slaughter the Passover lamb. But here, because not enough people had sanctified themselves, the Levites take on this act as an emergency measure. The Chronicler clearly indicates that this is a unique predicament, much like when the Levites skinned the sacrificial animals in 2 Chronicles 29:34 when there weren't enough priests. But by 2 Chronicles 35:6, Josiah instructs the Levites to slaughter the Passover lambs in a nonemergency situation and includes no explanatory comment, a situation which may indicate that the Chronicler is claiming new roles for the Levites in the practice of sacrifice.

ceremonially clean. <sup>16</sup>This included most of those who had come from Ephraim, Manasseh, Issachar, and Zebulun—people who hadn't purified themselves and so hadn't eaten the Passover meal in the prescribed way. But Hezekiah prayed for them: "May the good LORD forgive <sup>19</sup>everyone who has decided to seek the true God, the LORD, the God of their ancestors, even though they aren't ceremonially clean by sanctuary standards." <sup>20</sup>The LORD heard Hezekiah and healed the people. <sup>21</sup>So the Israelites in Jerusalem joyfully celebrated the Festival of Unleavened Bread for seven days, with the Levites and the priests praising the LORD every day, accompanied by the LORD's mighty instruments. <sup>22</sup>Hezekiah congratulated all the Levites who had performed so skillfully for the LORD. They feasted throughout the seven days of the festival, sacrificing well-being offerings and praising the LORD, the God of their ancestors.

<sup>23</sup>Then the whole congregation agreed to celebrate another seven days, which they joyfully did. <sup>24</sup>Judah's King Hezekiah contributed one thousand bulls and seven thousand sheep for the congregation, while the officials provided another thousand bulls and ten thousand sheep, and great numbers of priests made themselves holy. <sup>25</sup>Then the whole congregation of Judah rejoiced, as did the priests and the Levites, the whole congregation from Israel, the immigrants who had come from the land of Israel, and those who lived in Judah. <sup>26</sup>There was great joy in Jerusalem. Nothing like this had taken place in Jerusalem since the days of Israel's King Solomon, David's son. <sup>27</sup>Then the levitical priests blessed the people, and their voice was heard when their prayer reached God's holy dwelling in heaven.

31 When all of these things were finished, all of the Israelites who were present went out to the cities of Judah, smashed the sacred pillars, cut down the sacred poles,<sup>a</sup> and completely destroyed the shrines and altars throughout Judah as well as Benjamin, Ephraim, and Manasseh. Then all the Israelites returned to their individual homes in their own cities.

Hezekiah's reform

<sup>1</sup>Hezekiah reappointed the priests and the Levites, each to their divisions and their tasks, to make entirely burned offerings and well-being sacrifices, to serve, to give thanks, and to offer praise in the gates of the LORD's camp. <sup>2</sup>As his portion, the king personally contributed the entirely burned offerings for the morning and evening sacrifices, as well as the entirely burned offerings for the Sabbaths, new moons, and festivals, as written in the LORD's instruction. <sup>3</sup>He ordered the people living in Jerusalem to provide the required portion for the priests and the Levites so they could devote themselves to the LORD's instruction. <sup>4</sup>As soon as the order was issued, the Israelites generously gave the best of their grain, new wine, oil, honey, and all their crops—a tenth of everything, a huge amount. <sup>5</sup>The people of Israel and Judah, living in the cities of Judah, also brought in a tenth of their herds and flocks and a tenth of the items that had been dedicated to the LORD their God, stacking it up in piles. <sup>6</sup>They began stacking up the piles in the third month<sup>b</sup> and finished them in the seventh.<sup>c</sup>

<sup>7</sup>When Hezekiah and the officials saw the piles, they blessed the LORD and his people Israel. <sup>8</sup>When Hezekiah asked the priests and Levites about the piles, <sup>9</sup>the chief priest Azariah, who was from Zadok's family, answered, "Ever since the people started bringing 30:18–20 even though they aren't ceremonially clean by sanctuary standards: The rule for uncleanness is set out in Leviticus 7:19–21: Any unclean person who eats the sacrifice will be "cut off from their people." From a theological perspective, Hezekiah's plea involves great risk, as the tragic story of Uzzah indicates (1 Chron 13:9–10). But over against ritual protocol and historical precedent, God relented and "healed" the gathered community in order to avert deadly threat.

30:26 since the days of Israel's King Solomon: The spontaneous enthusiasm that lengthened the celebration by an additional seven days (2 Chron 30:23), the great number of sacrifices presented by the king and the leaders (30:24), along with the great joy that permeated the festivities, is reminiscent of Solomon's temple dedication (2 Chron 7:8–10).

31:2–21 After the death of Ahaz, Hezekiah implemented a series of reforms to undo the damage to the temple that his father had done (2 Chron 28:4). In 2 Chronicles 31, the king's temple restoration continues with reforms to ensure the funding of temple worship and personnel with the offerings of the king and the people.

31:3–4 the king personally contributed the entirely burned offerings: In the Chronicler's schema, the king provides the sacrifices for the temple rituals, while the people support the priests and Levites with the required portion. For a similar provision by the national leader, see 2 Chronicles 8:12–13; Ezekiel 45:17; Ezra 6:9–10. In Nehemiah 10:32–39, however, the laity pledge to provide for various offerings. See also Numbers 18:8–32.

31:7 in the third month... in the seventh: The ingathering of offerings relates to the agricultural calendar and the religious festivals. The Harvest Festival is celebrated in the third month at the beginning of the harvest, during which portions of the new grain are offered. In the seventh month, the community celebrates the harvest of grapes contributions to the LORD's temple we've had enough to eat with plenty to spare. The LORD has definitely blessed his people! There's a lot left over."

<sup>11</sup>So Hezekiah ordered them to prepare storerooms in the LORD's temple. When they finished preparing them, <sup>12</sup>the priests conscientiously brought in the contributions, the tenth-part gifts, and the dedicated things. Conaniah, a Levite, was put in charge, assisted by his brother Shimei, <sup>13</sup>while Jehiel, Azariah, Nahath, Asahel, Jerimoth, Jozabad, Eliel, Ismachiah, Mahath, and Benaiah served as supervisors under them, as appointed by King Hezekiah and Azariah the official in charge of God's temple. <sup>14</sup>The Levite Kore, Imnah's son, who was keeper of the east gate, was in charge of the spontaneous gifts to God. He was responsible for distributing the contribution reserved for the LORD and the dedicated gifts. <sup>15</sup>Eden, Miniamin, Jeshua, Shemaiah, Amariah, and Shecaniah faithfully assisted him regarding<sup>a</sup> the priests by distributing the portions to their relatives, old and young alike, by divisions. <sup>16</sup>Additionally, they also distributed daily rations to those males, registered by genealogy, three years old and older, all who entered the LORD's temple to carry out their daily duties as their divisions required. <sup>17</sup>They also distributed to those priests registered by their families, and to Levites 20 years of age and older according to their divisional responsibilities. <sup>18</sup>The official genealogy included all their small children, their wives, their sons, and their daughters—the entire congregation—for they had faithfully made themselves holy. <sup>19</sup>As for Aaron's descendants, the priests who lived in the outskirts of the cities, men were assigned to distribute portions to every male among the priests and to every Levite listed in the genealogical records. <sup>20</sup>This is what Hezekiah did throughout all Judah, doing what the LORD his God considered good, right, and true. <sup>21</sup>Everything that Hezekiah began to do for the service of God's temple, whether by the Instruction or the commands, in order to seek his God, he did successfully and with all his heart.

Sennacherib's invasion

32 After these things and these faithful acts, Assyria's King Sennacherib invaded Judah and attacked its fortified cities, intending to capture them. <sup>2</sup>When Hezekiah realized that Sennacherib also planned on fighting Jerusalem, <sup>3</sup>he consulted with his officials and soldiers about stopping up the springs outside the city, and they supported him. <sup>4</sup>A large force gathered to stop up all the springs and the streams that flowed through the land. "Why should the kings of Assyria come and find plenty of water?" they asked. <sup>5</sup>Hezekiah vigorously rebuilt all the broken sections of the wall, erected towers, constructed another wall and fruits with a Festival of Gathering (also called the Festival of Booths), and offers a portion of the crop to God (Exod 23:16; Lev 23:15-21, 33-36).

31:11-13 ordered them to prepare storerooms: The enthusiastic response to Hezekiah's reform of the offering system (2 Chron 31:2-10) necessitates a supplementary reform of building space and personnel. See sidebar, "Acceptable Temple Worship" at 2 Chronicles 29.

31:13 as appointed by King Hezekiah: The king's arrangement of Levites to oversee the temple storerooms is reminiscent of the earlier organization of clerical duties set up by David and implemented by Solomon (1 Chron 16:37-42; 23:5; 28:21; 2 Chron 8:14).

31:14 keeper of the east gate: See 1 Chronicles 26:14, 17.

31:16 three years old and older: At the traditional age of weaning, the provisions for boys in priestly families are supplemented by the larger community.

31:20-21 For the evaluation of Hezekiah's reign, the Chronicler moves to 2 Kings 18:5-6. The repetition of "did" and "do" throughout these verses gestures toward the king's many accomplishments recounted in 2 Chronicles 29-31.

32:1-23 The Chronicler's version of the invasion of Sennacherib, king of the Assyrians, is a highly reworked version of 2 Kings 18:13-20:21 (see also Isa 36-39). Consistently, the author portrays Hezekiah in a good light by omitting references to the king's questionable behavior (i.e., plundering the temple in the hopes of appeasing the Assyrians; 2 Kgs 18:13-16) and adding passages that showcase his abilities (i.e., strategically preparing for the siege in 32:3-8).

32:1 After . . . these faithful acts: With this small addition reminding the reader of Hezekiah's prior obedience to God, the Chronicler strategically frames the account of the Assyrian invasion not as a punishment for sin but as a test by which the king can exhibit even more faithfulness. intending to capture them: According to 2 Kings 18:13 and Sennacherib's own inscriptions, the Assyrians conquered all of the fortified cities in Judah. The Chronicler's subtle presentation here blunts an explicit parallel with Shishak's capture of these cities during Rehoboam's reign (2 Chron 12:2-4).

32:3 stopping up the springs: Assuming that the Assyrian forces would lay siege to the city, Hezekiah's defense plan includes obstructing the enemy's water supply. This act is somewhat related to 2 Chronicles 32:30, where Hezekiah supplies water to Jerusalem.

32:5 constructed another wall outside the first: In addition to other military defenses, Hezekiah also creates a new wall. See Isaiah 22:11 for a mention of two walls around Jerusalem.

outside the first, reinforced the terrace of David's City, and made a large supply of weapons and shields. <sup>6</sup>He appointed military officers over the troops, assembled them in the square of the city gate, and spoke these words of encouragement: <sup>7</sup>"Be brave and be strong! Don't let the king of Assyria and all those warriors he brings with him scare you or cause you dismay, because our forces are greater than his." <sup>8</sup>All he has is human strength, but we have the LORD our God, who will help us fight our battles!"

The troops trusted Judah's King Hezekiah.

<sup>9</sup>After this Assyria's King Sennacherib, who was attacking Lachish with all his forces, sent his servants to Jerusalem with the following message for Judah's King Hezekiah and all the people of Judah who were in Jerusalem:

<sup>10</sup>This is what Assyria's King Sennacherib says: What makes you so confident that you stay put in Jerusalem while it is being attacked? <sup>11</sup>Obviously, Hezekiah has fooled you into surrendering yourselves to death by hunger and thirst when he says, "The LORD our God will rescue us from Assyria's king." <sup>12</sup>Isn't this the same Hezekiah who got rid of his shrines and altars, and then demanded of Judah and Jerusalem, "You must worship and burn incense before only one altar"? <sup>13</sup>Don't you know what I and my predecessors have done to the people of other nations? Were any of the gods of these other nations able to rescue their lands from my power? <sup>14</sup>Which one of any of the gods of these nations that my predecessors destroyed was able to rescue them from my power? So why should your god be able to rescue you from my power? <sup>15</sup>Don't let Hezekiah seduce you like fools. Don't believe him! No god of any other nation or kingdom has been able to rescue their people from me or from my predecessors. No, your gods won't rescue you from my power.

<sup>16</sup>The Assyrian king's servants continued to make fun of the LORD God and his servant Hezekiah. <sup>17</sup>He wrote other letters insulting the LORD God of Israel, defying him by saying, "Just as the gods of the nations in other countries couldn't rescue their people from my power, Hezekiah's god won't be able to rescue his people from my power." <sup>18</sup>Then they shouted loudly in Hebrew<sup>a</sup> at the people of Jerusalem gathered on the wall, in an attempt to frighten and demoralize them, in order to capture the city. <sup>19</sup>They spoke about the God of Jerusalem as though he were the work of human hands, like the gods of the other peoples of the earth. <sup>20</sup>King Hezekiah and the prophet Isaiah, Amoz's son, prayed about this, crying out to heaven. <sup>21</sup>Then the LORD sent a messenger who destroyed every warrior, leader, and officer in the camp of the Assyrian king. When Sennacherib went home in disgrace, he entered the temple of his god, and his own sons killed him with a sword. <sup>22</sup>This is how the LORD rescued Hezekiah and the citizens of Jerusalem from the power of Assyria's King Sennacherib, and all others, giving them rest<sup>b</sup> on all sides. <sup>23</sup>Many people brought offerings to the LORD in Jerusalem and costly gifts to Judah's King Hezekiah, who was highly regarded by all the nations from then on.

Hezekiah's illness

<sup>24</sup>Around that same time, Hezekiah became deathly ill and prayed to the LORD, who answered him with a miraculous sign. <sup>25</sup>But Hezekiah was too proud to respond appropriately to the kindness he had received, and he, along with Judah and Jerusalem, experienced anger.

<sup>a</sup>Or there is greater power with us than with him <sup>b</sup>Or the language of Judah <sup>c</sup>LXX; MT he led them

32:7-8 Be brave and be strong! In his speech to the military, Hezekiah echoes the encouraging speeches of David and Solomon (1 Chron 22:13), the LORD our God, who will help us fight our battles!: The Chronicler emphasizes that the king's military strategy is combined with a firm trust in God.

32:9 Lachish: This was a royal fortified city 30 miles southwest of Jerusalem, so the danger was close at hand.

32:10-19 In the presentation of Assyria's attempts to have Jerusalem surrender (a compression of 2 Kgs 18:17-35), the Chronicler emphasizes the enemy's faith in the historical precedent of subduing other nations and their gods: No god of any other nation or kingdom has been able to rescue their people from me or my predecessors (32:15).

32:20 Hezekiah and the prophet Isaiah, Amoz's son, prayed about this: Although the Chronicler doesn't include any of the content of this prayer, the king's words and God's reply are presented in 2 Kings 19:14-34 = Isaiah 37:14-35.

32:21 Then the Lord sent a messenger who destroyed every warrior. Without respect for the Assyrians' prior experience with other nations and their gods (2 Chron 32:10-19), here the Lord responds with quick and decisive action, he entered the temple of his god, and his own sons killed him with a sword. Given his misconceived confidence that Israel's God couldn't save the nation, Sennacherib's death at the hands of his sons in his own god's temple is tragic and ironic.

32:24-33 The final section on Hezekiah's reign describes his illness (32:24-26), ongoing success (32:27-31), and the notice of his death and burial (32:32-33). For more, see 2 Kings 20:1-21.

<sup>26</sup>However, Hezekiah and the citizens of Jerusalem humbled themselves in their pride, and so they didn't experience the LORD's anger for the rest of Hezekiah's reign.

<sup>27</sup>Hezekiah became very wealthy and greatly respected. He made storehouses for his silver, gold, precious stones, spices, shields, and other valuables. <sup>28</sup>He made barns to store the harvest of grain, wine, and olive oil; stalls for all kinds of cattle; and pens for flocks. <sup>29</sup>He acquired towns for himself and many flocks and herds because God had given him great wealth. <sup>30</sup>Hezekiah was the one who blocked the upper outlet of the waters of the Gihon Spring, channeling them down to the west side of David's City. Hezekiah succeeded in all that he did, <sup>31</sup>even in the matter of the ambassadors sent from Babylonian officials to find out about the miraculous sign that occurred in the land, when God had abandoned him in order to test him and to discover what was in his heart.

<sup>32</sup>The rest of Hezekiah's deeds, including his faithfulness, are written in the vision of the prophet Isaiah, Amoz's son, in the records of Israel's and Judah's kings. <sup>33</sup>Hezekiah lay down with his ancestors and was buried in the upper area of the tombs of David's sons. All Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem honored him at his death. His son Manasseh succeeded him as king.

Manasseh rules

33 Manasseh was 12 years old when he became king, and he ruled for fifty-five years in Jerusalem. <sup>2</sup>He did what was evil in the LORD's eyes, imitating the detestable practices of the nations that the LORD had driven out before the Israelites. <sup>3</sup>He rebuilt the shrines that his father Hezekiah had destroyed, set up altars for the Baals, and made sacred poles. <sup>4</sup>He bowed down to all the stars in the sky and worshipped them. <sup>5</sup>He even built altars in the LORD's temple, the very place the LORD was speaking about when he said, "My name will remain in Jerusalem forever." <sup>6</sup>Manasseh built altars for all the stars in the sky in both courtyards of the LORD's temple. <sup>7</sup>He burned his own sons alive in the Ben-hinnom Valley, consulted sign readers, fortune-tellers, and sorcerers, and used mediums and diviners. He did much evil in the LORD's eyes and made him angry.

<sup>8</sup>Manasseh set up the carved image he had made in God's temple, the very temple God had spoken about to David and his son Solomon, saying: In this temple and in Jerusalem, which I have selected out of all Israel's tribes, I will put my name forever. <sup>9</sup>I will never again remove Israel from the fertile land I gave to your ancestors, provided they carefully do everything

32:27 became very wealthy and greatly respected: The detailed listing of luxury products (silver, gold, precious stones, spices, shields) is reminiscent of the description of Solomon in 2 Chronicles 9:9, 15-16, 24.

32:30 channeling them down to the west side: The supply of a constant water supply during the time of Hezekiah is probably related to the construction of the Siloam tunnel in Jerusalem. Hezekiah succeeded in all that he did: This summary of Hezekiah's economic and building programs echoes that of his success in his various religious reforms in 2 Chronicles 31:21. It also makes another link between the king and Solomon (see 1 Chron 22:11; 29:23; 2 Chron 7:11).

33:1-20 The 55-year reign of Manasseh is the longest in the history of Judah. In the presentation in Kings, Manasseh is notorious as the most wicked of kings, whose idolatry ushered in the exile of a subsequent generation (2 Kgs 21:1-18; 24:3). The Chronicler tempers this presentation, however, by following a description of Manasseh's apostasy (33:2-9) with a depiction of his reformation (33:10-17). By including an account of the king's changed heart and life, the author makes more straightforward sense of the king's longevity and more firmly identifies the cause of the exile as the sin of those who experienced it. See sidebar, "Responsibility for Sin."

33:2-9 He did what was evil: Like his grandfather Ahaz, Manasseh's early reign is marked by religious transgression, including the rebuilding of shrines (2 Chron 28:2-4). In addition, although both kings engage in the detestable practices of the nations that Deuteronomy 18:9-14 prohibits, namely child sacrifice, Manasseh's sin escalates to include divination as well.

33:3 that his father Hezekiah had destroyed: See 2 Chronicles 30:14, bowed down to all the stars in the sky: This is the first time that the Chronicler attributes any king with this kind of worship, but it is mentioned in other texts such as Zephaniah 1:5 and Jeremiah 8:2.

33:4 He even built altars in the LORD's temple: As with the practice of divination and star worship, Manasseh's religious aberrations outdo those of Ahaz. Whereas the earlier king built altars on "every corner in Jerusalem" (2 Chron 28:24), Manasseh moves the polluting objects into the temple itself. Later in the chapter Manasseh will remove such objects (2 Chron 33:15), although in 2 Kings this worship purification doesn't occur until the reign of Josiah (2 Kgs 23:12). My name will remain: God made this promise in response to Solomon's prayer at the dedication of the temple (2 Chron 7:16).

33:6 He burned his own sons alive: See the similar act of Ahaz in 2 Chronicles 28:3, and see note there.

33:7-8 As in 2 Chronicles 33:4, Manasseh's sin involves setting up unacceptable objects within the temple itself.

Responsibility for Sin For the author of 1 and 2 Kings, Manasseh is Judah's absolute worst king: He committed many and grievous sins concerning the practice of religion, led the nation in the same, and died without changing his ways (2 Kgs 21). Indeed, the Lord was so angry about the king's deeds that they form the grounds for the exile years later: God had Nebuchadnezzar invade Judah "on account of all the sins that Manasseh had committed and because of the innocent blood that he had spilled" (2 Kgs 24:3-4; cf. 2 Kgs 23:26-27).

The presentation in 2 Chronicles is different (2 Chron 33:1-20). To be sure, Manasseh commits the same kind of ritual sins attributed to him in 2 Kings, such as setting up altars for foreign gods and practicing child sacrifice. But while being punished in exile, he seeks and receives God's forgiveness. After he is restored to the land, he spends the rest of his reign removing the foreign altars.

In such a presentation, the Chronicler makes several key points that are sounded throughout the book. The first has to do with the immediacy of retribution: The generation who went into exile are themselves to blame and shouldn't blame the past deeds of a long-dead king (see more on 2 Chron 36:6, 14, 15). The second has to do with hope: If even such an evil king as Manasseh can be forgiven and restored to the land, then those after him who languish in exile can certainly expect that their prayers will likewise be favorably received.

I have commanded them—keeping all the Instruction, the regulations, and the case laws given through Moses. <sup>9</sup>In this way Manasseh led Judah and the residents of Jerusalem into doing even more evil than the nations that the LORD had wiped out before the Israelites.

<sup>10</sup>The LORD spoke to Manasseh and his people, but they wouldn't listen. <sup>11</sup>So the LORD brought the army commanders of Assyria's king against them. They captured Manasseh with hooks, bound him with bronze chains, and carried him off to Babylon. <sup>12</sup>During his distress, Manasseh made peace with the LORD his God, truly submitting himself to the God of his ancestors. <sup>13</sup>He prayed, and God was moved by his request. God listened to Manasseh's prayer and restored him to his rule in Jerusalem. Then Manasseh knew that the LORD was the true God.

<sup>14</sup>After this, Manasseh rebuilt the outer wall of David's City, west of the Gihon Spring in the valley, extending as far as the entrance of the Fish Gate, enclosing the elevated fortress<sup>v</sup> and greatly increasing its height. He also installed military commanders in all the fortified cities of Judah. <sup>15</sup>He removed the foreign gods and the idol from the LORD's temple, as well as all the altars he had built on the hill of the LORD's temple and in Jerusalem, dumping them outside the city. <sup>16</sup>He restored the LORD's altar, offered well-being sacrifices and thank offerings on it, and ordered the people of Judah to worship the LORD, Israel's God. <sup>17</sup>The people, however, still sacrificed at the shrines, but only to the LORD their God. <sup>18</sup>The rest of Manasseh's deeds, including his prayer to God and what the seers told him in the name of the LORD, Israel's God, are found in the records of Israel's kings. <sup>19</sup>Manasseh's prayer and its answer, all his sin and unfaithfulness, and the locations of the shrines, sacred poles,<sup>w</sup> and idols he set up before he submitted are written in the records of Hozai. <sup>20</sup>Manasseh lay down with his ancestors and was buried in his palace. His son Amon succeeded him as king.

Amon rules

<sup>21</sup>Amon was 22 years old when he became king, and he ruled for two years in Jerusalem.

33:11 carried him off to Babylon: Manasseh's exile isn't included in the parallel account in Kings, nor in any currently known Assyrian records. Although the author indicates that the people joined the king in his ritual sins and didn't heed the Lord's warning (2 Chron 33:9-10), only the king is punished here.

33:12-13 During his distress, Manasseh made peace with the Lord: The Chronicler includes two possible responses to divine punishment: Kings such as Ahaz and Amon are stubborn and refuse to heed (2 Chron 28:22; 33:23), while kings such as Rehoboam turn away from sin (2 Chron 12:12). For the author's audience that is living in exile, the significance of a changed heart and life in Babylon, and God's immediate forgiveness and restoration to the land, would be particularly poignant. See sidebar, "Surprised By Mercy" at 2 Chronicles 22.

33:14 By prefacing the account of Manasseh's successful building and religious reforms with the phrase After this, the Chronicler presents his work as a response to God's forgiveness. As with the account of his exile, the parallel account in 2 Kings 21:1-18 makes no mention of these good deeds. rebuild the outer wall of David's City: This continues his father's acts as described in 2 Chronicles 32:5.

33:21-25 Unlike the reign of his father, Manasseh (2 Chron 33:1-2), the reign of Amon is short and absent of spiritual reform. The source material is from 2 Kings 21:19-25.

to all the idols his father had made and worshipped them. <sup>23</sup>But unlike his father Manasseh, Amon didn't submit before the LORD; instead, Amon increased his guilt. <sup>24</sup>His own officials plotted against him and killed him in his palace. <sup>25</sup>The people of the land then executed all those who had plotted against King Amon and made his son Josiah the next king.

Josiah rules

34 Josiah was 8 years old when he became king, and he ruled for thirty-one years in Jerusalem. <sup>2</sup>He did what was right in the LORD's eyes and walked in the ways of his ancestor David, not deviating from it even a bit to the right or left. <sup>3</sup>In the eighth year of his rule, while he was just a boy, he began to seek the God of his ancestor David, and in the twelfth year he began purifying Judah and Jerusalem of the shrines, the sacred poles,† idols, and images. <sup>4</sup>Under his supervision, the altars for the Baals were torn down, and the incense altars that were above them were smashed. He broke up the sacred poles, idols, and images, grinding them to dust and scattering them over the graves of those who had sacrificed to them. <sup>5</sup>He burned the bones of the priests on their altars, purifying Judah and Jerusalem. <sup>6</sup>In the cities of Manasseh, Ephraim, and Simeon, all the way up to Naphtali, he removed their temples,‡ <sup>7</sup>tore down the altars and sacred poles, ground the idols to dust, and smashed all the incense altars throughout the land of Israel. Then Josiah returned to Jerusalem.

Josiah repairs the temple

<sup>8</sup>In the eighteenth year of his rule, after he had purified the land and the temple, Josiah sent Azaliah's son Shaphan, Maaseiah the mayor of the city, and Joahaz's son Joah the secretary to repair the LORD his God's temple. <sup>9</sup>When they came to the high priest Hilkiah, they delivered the money that had been collected in God's temple by the levitical gatekeepers from Manasseh, Ephraim, and the rest of Israel, as well as from Judah, Benjamin, and the residents of Jerusalem. <sup>10</sup>They handed it over to the supervisors* in charge of the LORD's temple, who in turn paid it to those working on, repairing, and restoring the LORD's temple. <sup>11</sup>They then gave it to the carpenters and the builders to pay for quarried stone and lumber for rafters and beams in the buildings the kings of Judah had neglected. <sup>12</sup>The men worked conscientiously under the supervision of Jahath and Obadiah, who were Levites descended from Merari, and Zechariah and Meshullam from the Kohathites. The Levites, all of whom were accomplished musicians, <sup>13</sup>were also in charge of the laborers and all the workers, no matter what their jobs, while some of the Levites served as scribes, officials, and guards.

The Instruction scroll

<sup>14</sup>While they were bringing out the money that had been brought into the LORD's temple, Hilkiah the priest found the Instruction scroll that the LORD had given through Moses. <sup>15</sup>Hilkiah told the secretary Shaphan, "I have found the Instruction scroll in the LORD's temple."

33:25 and made his son Josiah the next king: The revolution attempted by Amon's commanders is reversed by the people when they put the slain king's eight-year-old son on the throne.

34:1–35:26 Following that of the unforgiven Amon, the reign of Josiah is marked by restoration and religious renewal. The text is a major reworking of the material in Kings, with changes in the timing and scope of Josiah's reform (34:1-2 = 2 Kgs 22:1-2; 34:3-7 = no parallel; 34:8-33 = 2 Kgs 22:3-23:23), and a dramatic expansion of the Passover celebration (35:1-19 = 2 Kgs 23:21-23).

34:3b-7 In the twelfth year he began purifying Judah and Jerusalem of the shrines: This material outlining Josiah's ritual reforms prior to his 18th year has no parallel in the Kings material. By including it, the Chronicler highlights the reforming work of the king throughout his reign. The author puts in context the later finding of the Instruction scroll as a result of these reforms, rather than as their cause.

34:3-4 shrines, the sacred poles, idols, and images: Josiah's destruction of these objects is similar to the earlier reforms of Asa, Hezekiah, and Manasseh (2 Chron 14:3-5; 30:14; 33:19).

34:4-5 scattering them over the graves... burned the bones: By associating the religious objects with dead bodies, Josiah causes their ultimate defilement.

34:6 In the cities of Manasseh, Ephraim, and Simeon... Naphtali: Throughout the account of Josiah, the Chronicler emphasizes the geographic scope of the king's reforms (see also 2 Chron 4:7, 9, 21).

34:8-13 after he had purified the land and the temple: Six years after he began purifying the worship behaviors, Josiah begins to repair the temple.

34:14-21 The Chronicler's account of the discovery of the Instruction scroll closely follows the account in 2 Kings 22:8-13, although see note on 2 Chronicles 34:3b-7 for how the Chronicler's context reframes its significance.

34:14 Both accounts in 2 Chronicles and 2 Kings refer to the newly discovered scroll as the Instruction scroll (2 Chron 34:14, 15; 2 Kgs 22:8, 11) or "the covenant scroll" (2 Chron 34:30; 2 Kgs 23:2). The additional description that explicitly connects the text containing the covenant to Moses (that

Then Hilkiah turned the scroll over to Shaphan, <sup>16</sup>who brought it to the king with this report: "Your servants are doing everything you've asked them to do. <sup>17</sup>They have released the money that was found in the LORD's temple and have handed it over to the supervisors and the workers." <sup>18</sup>Then the secretary Shaphan told the king, "The priest Hilkiah has given me a scroll," and he read it out loud before the king.

<sup>19</sup>As soon as the king heard what the Instruction scroll said, he ripped his clothes. <sup>20</sup>The king ordered Hilkiah, Shaphan's son Ahikam, Micah's son Abdon, the secretary Shaphan, and the royal officer Asaiah as follows: <sup>21</sup>"Go and ask the LORD on my behalf, and on behalf of those who still remain in Israel and Judah, concerning the contents of this scroll that has been found. The LORD must be furious with us because our ancestors failed to obey the LORD's word and do everything written in this scroll."

<sup>22</sup>So Hilkiah and the royal officials went to the prophetess Huldah. She was married to Shallum, Tokhath's son and Hasrah's grandson, who was in charge of the wardrobe. She lived in Jerusalem in the second district. When they spoke to her, <sup>23</sup>she replied, "This is what the LORD, Israel's God, says: Tell this to the man who sent you to me: <sup>24</sup>This is what the LORD says: I am about to bring disaster on this place and its citizens—all the curses written in the scroll that they have read to Judah's king. <sup>25</sup>My anger burns against this place, never to be quenched, because they've deserted me and have burned incense to other gods, angering me by everything they have done.<sup>b</sup> <sup>26</sup>But also say this to the king of Judah, who sent you to question the LORD: This is what the LORD, Israel's God, says about the message you've just heard: <sup>27</sup>Because your heart was broken and you submitted before the LORD when you heard what he said against this place and its citizens,<sup>c</sup> and because you ripped your clothes and cried before me, I have listened to you, declares the LORD. <sup>28</sup>I will gather you to your ancestors, and you will go to your grave in peace. You won't experience the disaster I am about to bring on this place and its citizens."

When they reported Huldah's words to the king, <sup>29</sup>the king sent a message and gathered together all the elders of Judah and Jerusalem. <sup>30</sup>Then the king went up to the LORD's temple, together with all the people of Judah and all the citizens of Jerusalem, the priests and the Levites, and all the people, young and old alike. There the king read out loud all the words of the covenant scroll that had been found in the LORD's temple. <sup>31</sup>The king stood in his place and made a covenant with the LORD that he would follow the LORD by keeping his commandments, his instructions, and his regulations with all his heart and all his being, in order to fulfill the words of the covenant that were written in this scroll. <sup>32</sup>Then he made everyone found in Jerusalem and Benjamin join in a similar promise. The citizens of Jerusalem lived according to the covenant made with God, the God of their ancestors. <sup>33</sup>Josiah got rid of all the detestable idols from all the regions that belonged to the Israelites, and he made everyone who lived in Israel serve the LORD their God. As long as Josiah lived, they didn't turn away from following the LORD God of their ancestors.

Josiah's Passover

35 Then Josiah celebrated the LORD's Passover in Jerusalem. They slaughtered the Passover lambs on the fourteenth day of the first month.<sup>d</sup> <sup>2</sup>He assigned the priests to their posts, encouraging them to fulfill their responsibilities in the LORD's temple.

the LORD had given through Moses) is only found here. The scroll is either a version of the book of Deuteronomy or the entire Pentateuch (Genesis–Deuteronomy).

34:21 those who still remain in Israel and Judah: The account in Kings only mentions "Judah" here (2 Kgs 22:13). The addition of Israel highlights the Chronicler's ongoing emphasis on the geographic scope of the Josiah's reforms. See note on 2 Chronicles 34:6.

34:22–28 Instructed by the king to determine the scroll's authority ("ask the LORD . . . concerning the contents of this scroll," 2 Chron 34:21), Hilkiah and the royal advisors consult the prophetess Huldah. The oracle she presents anticipates a coming time of disaster in which God will enact the scroll's curses (cf. Deut 27–28) upon those who have deserted God and burned incense to other gods. In recompense for the king's own acts of contrition, he will go to his grave in peace and avoid the calamity (but see further on 2 Chron 35:24).

34:29 the king sent a message: Huldah's prophecy asks nothing of the king or the people—the coming disaster is assured. Nevertheless, Josiah gathers the people and makes a covenant to obey the words of the scroll.

34:33 from all the regions that belonged to the Israelites: Josiah's reforms affect the nation's maximum reach and, as such, show the extent of his devotion.

35:1–19 Following on his earlier religious reforms throughout the land (2 Chron 34), Josiah now celebrates the Passover in Jerusalem. The text is a major expansion of 2 Kings 23:21–23, highlighting the prominence of the Levites and the focus on authoritative tradition.

<sup>3</sup>Next Josiah ordered the Levites, who were holy to the LORD and who instructed all Israel: "Put the holy chest in the temple built by Israel's King Solomon, David's son. You don't need to carry it around on your shoulders anymore. Now serve the LORD your God and his people Israel. <sup>4</sup>Organize yourselves by families according to your divisions, as directed by Israel's King David and his son Solomon. <sup>5</sup>Stand in the sanctuary, according to the family divisions of your relatives the laypeople, so that there can be Levites for each family division." <sup>6</sup>Slaughter the Passover lambs and prepare the holy sacrifices<sup>f</sup> for your relatives in order to celebrate according to the LORD's word through Moses."

<sup>7</sup>On behalf of the laypeople, Josiah donated from his personal holdings thirty thousand lambs and young goats, and three thousand bulls, all for the Passover offerings. <sup>8</sup>His officials also provided spontaneous gift offerings for the people, the priests, and the Levites. Hilkiah, Zechariah, and Jehiel, the ones in charge of God's temple, gave two thousand six hundred Passover lambs and three hundred bulls for the priests. <sup>9</sup>Conaniah and his brothers Shemaiah and Nethanel, along with Hashabiah, Jeiel, and Jozabab, the leaders of the Levites, provided the Levites with five thousand lambs and five hundred bulls as Passover sacrifices. <sup>10</sup>When everything was ready, the priests and the Levites took their places as the king had ordered. <sup>11</sup>Then they slaughtered the Passover lambs, and the priests splashed the blood<sup>g</sup> while the Levites skinned the animals. <sup>12</sup>Next they divided the entirely burned offerings among the laypeople by their families to sacrifice to the LORD as written in the scroll from Moses, and they did the same with the bulls. <sup>13</sup>They roasted the Passover lambs in the fire as instructed, cooked the holy offerings in pots, kettles, and pans, and brought them quickly to all the laypeople. <sup>14</sup>Next they prepared food for themselves and for the priests. Since the priests, Aaron's descendants, were busy offering up the entirely burned offerings and fat pieces until nighttime, the Levites prepared food for themselves and for the priests, Aaron's descendants. <sup>15</sup>The Asaphite singers also remained at their stations as ordered by David, Asaph, Heman, and the king's seer Jeduthun, as did the guards at the various gates. They didn't need to leave their tasks because their fellow Levites prepared food for them. <sup>16</sup>So on that day all of the LORD's service was prepared for celebrating Passover and offering up entirely burned offerings on the LORD's altar, just as King Josiah had ordered. <sup>17</sup>The Israelites who were present celebrated the Passover at that time, and observed the Festival of Unleavened Bread for seven days. <sup>18</sup>Not since the days of the prophet Samuel had such a Passover been celebrated in Israel. And no other king of Israel had celebrated a Passover like the one Josiah celebrated with the priests, the Levites, all the people of Judah and Israel who were present, and the residents of Jerusalem. <sup>19</sup>This Passover was celebrated in the eighteenth year of Josiah's rule.

35:1 in Jerusalem: The celebration of Passover at the central sanctuary conforms to Deuteronomy 16:5-6 and parallels Hezekiah's earlier celebration narrated in 2 Chronicles 30. However, the venue differs from that in the tradition found in Exodus 12:14-28, which stipulates that Passover is to be celebrated by the family at home.

35:3-6 Now serve the Lord your God and his people Israel: Josiah employs David's precedent of assigning new roles to the Levites once the chest containing the covenant was installed (1 Chron 16:4) to expand their role in the Passover festival. Additionally, in the account of Hezekiah, the Levites slaughtered the Passover lambs when not enough lay people "made themselves holy" (2 Chron 30:17). Now Josiah institutes an earlier response to a unique occasion as standard behavior.

35:4 as directed by Israel's King David and his son Solomon: See 1 Chronicles 23-27 and 2 Chronicles 8:14. Throughout the account of Josiah's Passover, the Chronicler emphasizes that the protocol is rooted in the commands of the nation's authorities, including David and Solomon (2 Chron 35:4, 15), Moses (2 Chron 35:6, 12), and Josiah himself (2 Chron 35:10, 16).

35:5 Levites for each family division: This allocation of the Levites gestures to a family context for celebrating the Passover in Exodus 12:3-4.

35:7-9 In Exodus 12:5, the Passover sacrifice is taken either "from the sheep or from the goats." Deuteronomy 16:2 expands the options, allowing a sacrifice "from the flock or from the herd." Including bulls along with lambs and goats in 2 Chronicles 35:7-9 reflects either the Deuteronomy legislation or an additional sacrifice to supplement the Passover offering.

35:11 they slaughtered the Passover lambs: For the expanded role of the Levites in this Passover sacrifice, see note on 2 Chronicles 35:3-6.

35:15 as ordered by David: Compare 1 Chronicles 16:37-42; 2 Chronicles 5:12; and the note on 2 Chronicles 35:4.

35:17-18 For the Chronicler's emphasis on the geographic scope of Josiah's reforms, see the note on 2 Chronicles 34:6.

35:18 Not since the days of the prophet Samuel had such a Passover been celebrated in Israel: The Chronicler's account of Hezekiah's Passover in 2 Chronicles 30 has many similar features to that of Josiah's, so perhaps this assertion of novelty refers to the expanded role of the Levites and/or the participation of more people ("the priests, the Levites,

Josiah's death

<sup>20</sup>After all of these things, when Josiah had finished restoring the temple, Egypt's King Neco marched against Carchemish by the Euphrates, and Josiah marched out against him.

<sup>21</sup>But Neco sent messengers to Josiah. "What do you want with me, king of Judah?" he asked. "I haven't come to attack you today. I'm after the dynasty that wars with me. God told me to hurry, and he is on my side. Get out of God's way, or he will destroy you."

<sup>22</sup>But Josiah wouldn't turn back. Instead, he camouflaged himself in preparation for battle, refusing to listen to Neco's words from God's own mouth, and went to fight Neco on the plain of Megiddo. <sup>23</sup>When archers shot King Josiah, he said to his servants, "Take me away; I'm badly wounded!" <sup>24</sup>So his servants took him out of his chariot, placed him in another one, and brought him to Jerusalem, where he died and was buried in the tombs of his ancestors. All Judah and Jerusalem mourned for Josiah. <sup>25</sup>Jeremiah composed a funeral song<sup>b</sup> for Josiah, and to this day every singer, man or woman, continues to remember Josiah in their funeral songs. They are now traditional in Israel and are written down among the funeral songs.

<sup>26</sup>The rest of Josiah's deeds, including his faithfulness in acting according to what is written in the LORD's Instruction, <sup>27</sup>and everything else he did, from beginning to end, are written in the official records of Israel's and Judah's kings.

Jehoahaz rules

36 The people of the land took Jehoahaz, Josiah's son, and made him the next king in Jerusalem. <sup>2</sup>Jehoahaz was 23 years old when he became king, and he ruled for three months in Jerusalem. <sup>3</sup>The king of Egypt removed him from office in Jerusalem. The Egyptian king imposed a fine on the land totaling one hundred kikkar of silver and one kikkar of gold. <sup>4</sup>Then the king of Egypt made Jehoahaz's brother Eliakim king of Judah and Jerusalem, and changed his name to Jehoikim. Neco took his brother Jehoahaz prisoner and carried him off to Egypt.

Jehoiakim rules

<sup>5</sup>Jehoiakim was 25 years old when he became king, and he ruled for eleven years in Jerusalem. He did what was evil in the LORD's eyes. <sup>6</sup>Babylon's King Nebuchadnezzar attacked him, bound him with bronze chains, and took him to Babylon. <sup>7</sup>Nebuchadnezzar also took all the people of Judah and Israel who were present, and the residents of Jerusalem"; cf. 2 Chron 30:10-11).

35:20-25 The account of Josiah's death is an expanded version of 2 Kings 23:29-30a, and the additions highlight the king's refusal to heed the divinely sent warning as a contributing cause of his untimely death.

35:20 Egypt's King Neco marched against Carchemish: The details not entirely clear, but he was likely going to reinforce Assyrian allies who were fighting the Babylonians. 2 Kings 23:29, in contrast, says that Neco was going to fight against the king of Assyria.

35:21 God told me to hurry: In the account of Josiah's untimely death in 2 Kings 23:29-30, Neco's link with God's will is much less explicit than it is in 2 Chronicles.

35:22 Instead, he camouflaged himself: Given the assertion of Neco's association with God and God's will, it comes as no great surprise that Josiah's disobedience to Neco's warning is subject to divine punishment. In addition, the fact that the doomed king Ahab also went into battle wearing a "disguise" doesn't bode well (2 Chron 18:29).

35:24 and brought him to Jerusalem, where he died: By changing the place of death from the battlefield at Megiddo in 2 Kings 23:29 to Jerusalem, the Chronicler aligns the fate of Josiah more closely with Huldah's prophecy: "you will go to your grave in peace" (2 Chron 34:28).

36:1-21 In the final chapter of the book, the Chronicler gives a quick recounting of the last four kings of Judah and the destruction of Jerusalem and the temple. In addition, even as it tells of the exile of the kings and the people, it simultaneously presents the hope of return. The material is an abbreviation of 2 Kings 23-24, with some strategic alterations and additions (esp. in 36:12b-21).

36:3 The Egyptian king imposed a fine: The imposition of a fine during the reign of Jehoahaz is reminiscent of Shishak's looting of Jerusalem and the temple in 2 Chronicles 12:1-12.

36:4 carried him off to Egypt: All four of the last kings in Judah will be deported either to Egypt or to Babylon (2 Chron 36:6, 10, 20).

36:6 Babylon's King Nebuchadnezzar attacked him: By retaining the notice of Jehoiakim's evil deeds from the account in 2 Kings (2 Kgs 23:37 = 2 Chron 34:5), the Chronicler provides a cause for this punishment. But the Chronicler also omits an additional cause presented in 2 Kings: "this happened to Judah . . . on account of all the sins Manasseh had committed" (2 Kgs 24:4). This selective use of the material from 2 Kings manifests the Chronicler's tendency to locate judgment on the offender rather than an earlier or later generation. See sidebar, "Responsibility for Sin" at 2 Chronicles 33.

36:6 Babylon's King Nebuchadnezzar: This powerful king reigned in Babylon from 605 to 562 BCE and invaded a great swath of territory, including Tyre and Egypt (see Ezek 27:12; 29:19-21).

36:7 Nebuchadnezzar also took some equipment from the LORD's temple to Babylon and placed them in his own temple:

some equipment from the LORD's temple to Babylon and placed them in his own temple there. <sup>8</sup>The rest of Jehoiakim's deeds, including his detestable practices and all that was charged against him, are written in the official records of Israel's and Judah's kings. His son Jehoiachin succeeded him as king.

Jehoiachin rules

<sup>9</sup>Jehoiachin was 18<sup>l</sup> years old when he became king, and he ruled for three months<sup>j</sup> in Jerusalem. He did what was evil in the LORD's eyes. <sup>10</sup>In the springtime, King Nebuchadnezzar sent for him to be brought to Babylon, along with valuable equipment from the LORD's temple. Then he made Zedekiah his uncle the next king of Judah and Jerusalem.

Zedekiah rules

<sup>11</sup>Zedekiah was 21 years old when he became king, and he ruled for eleven years in Jerusalem. <sup>12</sup>He did what was evil in the LORD his God's eyes and didn't submit before the prophet Jeremiah, who spoke for the LORD. <sup>13</sup>Moreover, he rebelled against King Nebuchadnezzar, despite the solemn pledge Nebuchadnezzar had forced him to swear in God's name. He became stubborn and refused to turn back to the LORD, Israel's God. <sup>14</sup>All the leaders of the priests and the people also grew increasingly unfaithful, following all the detestable practices of the nations. They polluted the LORD's temple that God had dedicated in Jerusalem. <sup>15</sup>Time and time again, the LORD, the God of their ancestors, sent word to them through his messengers because he had compassion on his people and his dwelling. <sup>16</sup>But they made fun of God's messengers, treating God's words with contempt and ridiculing God's prophets to such an extent that there was no hope of warding off the LORD's rising anger against his people.

Jerusalem destroyed

<sup>17</sup>So God brought the Babylonian<sup>k</sup> king against them. The king killed their young men with the sword in their temple's sanctuary, and showed no pity for young men or for virgins, for the old or for the feeble. God handed all of them over to him. <sup>18</sup>Then the king hauled everything off to Babylon, every item from God's temple, both large and small, including the treasures of the LORD's temple and those of the king and his officials. <sup>19</sup>Next the Babylonians burned God's temple down, demolished the walls of Jerusalem, and set fire to all its palaces, destroying everything of value. <sup>20</sup>Finally, he exiled to Babylon anyone who survived the killing so that they could be his slaves and the slaves of his children until Persia

This loss of vessels corresponds to God's withdrawal from the temple as well as to the growing power of the foreign king. More temple items are taken in 2 Chronicles 36:10, 18. For more on Nebuchadnezzar and the temple equipment, see Daniel 1:1-2.

36:9-10 With his evil deeds and deportation, as well as the loss of temple property to the invaders, the reign of Jehoiachin is reminiscent of his father's (2 Chron 36:5-8).

36:10 sent for him to be brought to Babylon: The book of 2 Kings relates that the elites of Jerusalem were also exiled along with Jehoiachin in 597 BCE (2 Kgs 24:14-16).

36:11-21 The comparatively lengthy description of Zedekiah's rule highlights the growing unfaithfulness in Judah, which finally results in destruction and exile.

36:12 didn't submit before the prophet Jeremiah: The king's refusal to listen to the words of God's prophet is a repeated scene throughout the books of 1 and 2 Chronicles, and always ushers in disaster. See sidebar, "Only God Brings Security" at 2 Chronicles 15. For a fuller description of Zedekiah's interactions with Jeremiah, see Jeremiah 37:1-38:28.

36:13 despite the solemn pledge... in God's name... refused to turn back to the Lord: In addition to disregarding the words of Jeremiah, the king is also accused of two additional offenses.

36:15 sent word to them through his messengers: As is usual throughout 1 and 2 Chronicles, warning precedes punishment (see note on 2 Chron 36:12).

36:16 treating God's words with contempt and ridiculing God's prophets: The people's choice to persist in sin is emphasized by the several forceful verbs that describe their reception to the divinely sent warnings.

36:15-17 So: In the parallel account in the book of 2 Kings, God sends the exile partially because of the sins of Manasseh (2 Kgs 23:26-27; 24:3-4). By omitting any reference to this long-dead king, and by preceding the description of the exile with a description of the people's sins (2 Chron 36:12-16), the Chronicler more clearly associates the punishment with those who offended (see also note on 2 Chron 36:6). God brought the Babylonian king against them: As opposed to exiling only the king (2 Chron 36:4, 6, 10), the punishment now comes upon the people as well. 36:17 The extent of God's rejection is revealed both by brutal violence as well as the poignant use of possessive suffixes: The place that God had called "my house of sacrifice" is now their temple's sanctuary, and the nation God had called "my people" is now represented by their young men (see 2 Chron 7:12-13).

36:20 until Persia came to power: Cyrus the Great of Persia defeated the major players on the world stage (including

Cyrus' decree

<sup>22</sup>In the first year of Persia's King Cyrus, to carry out the LORD's promise spoken through Jeremiah, the LORD moved Persia's King Cyrus to issue the following proclamation throughout his kingdom, along with a written decree:

<sup>23</sup>This is what Persia's King Cyrus says: The LORD, the God of heaven, has given me all the earth's kingdoms and has instructed me to build a temple for him at Jerusalem in Judah. Whoever among you belong to God's people, let them go up, and may the LORD their God be with them!

God Ends the Exile The book of 2 Chronicles ends the same way that the book of Ezra begins: King Cyrus of Persia announces that the people can leave their exile in Babylon and return to their homeland. Specifically, the emperor associates his rise to power with the Lord's activity and allows God's people to go up to Jerusalem in order to rebuild the temple. It isn't clear whether this portion of 2 Chronicles was original to the work or was a secondary addition. Perhaps the author of 2 Chronicles wanted explicitly to link the literary presentation of Israel's history that begins with Adam (1 Chron 1:1) to the ongoing story of the post-exilic nation in the book of Ezra. Or maybe a later editor, dismayed by the overly pessimistic tone conveyed with the people lingering in Babylon, decided to inject a sense of hope with an official announcement of the exile's end. At any rate, the conclusion of Chronicles deftly reiterates the author's ongoing emphasis on the possibility of God's forgiveness and enduring concern for Jerusalem and its temple. With the announcement of Cyrus, the people can return along with the holy temple equipment and rebuild God's temple in Jerusalem.

Babylon and Media) in the middle of the 6th century BCE. The strategic use of until within this announcement of exile provides an element of hope alongside the dire news.

36:21 the Lord's word spoken by Jeremiah: The glimmer of hope seen in 36:20 continues with two implications that the exile will be of limited duration. The book of Jeremiah prophesies that the people will return, and Babylon will be punished after 70 years (Jer 25:11-12; 29:10-14). In addition, the reference to the land enjoying its sabbath rest (see Lev 26:34-45) points to the hope that the people will return after a season.

36:22-23 In the first year of Persia's King Cyrus: The final two verses of the book overlaps with Ezra 1:1-3a and tells of the official declaration that the people can return from Babylon back to the land of Judah. See sidebar, "God Ends the Exile."

Ezra–Nehemiah was originally a single book in the Hebrew scriptures, though it's now two books in Christian Bibles. It was written around 400 BCE and is a narrative account of the restoration of the temple and community in Jerusalem after the exile in Babylon. The return from Babylon happened in stages, and scholars have found it difficult to determine the exact chronology in Ezra–Nehemiah. However, the book of Ezra likely covers the history of Judah between 538 and 457 BCE. Nehemiah's account begins around 445 BCE, when Nehemiah became governor of Judah.

Together, Ezra and Nehemiah see the universal scope of God's power in how God uses the world's most powerful rulers for God's own purpose. The Babylonian exile and the fall of Jerusalem happened because the people of Judah didn't follow God's Instruction (see Neh 9:29–31). After giving many warnings through the prophets, God finally used the Babylonian Empire to judge Judah for sins like idolatry. Yet, prophets like Jeremiah also gave signs of hope that God's mercy and faithfulness would persist on the other side of exile (see Ezra 1:1; Jer 29:10).

A new era dawned for the people of Judah when Persia's leader, Cyrus the Great, took over a vast territory from the hands of the Babylonians in 539 BCE. The territories Cyrus inherited from the Babylonian regime included the small western province of Judah, among many others. Between 538 and 515 BCE, a couple of waves of exiles from Babylon returned to the ancestral land of Judah. They attempted to rebuild the Jerusalem temple, which had been lying in ruins since 587 BCE. Finally, with the encouragement of the prophets—such as Haggai and Zechariah—and also thanks to the support of the Persian imperial administration, the Judean community rebuilt the temple in 515 BCE (Ezra 6:15).

Ezra and Nehemiah came back from Babylon—most likely in 458 and 445 BCE respectively. They carried out a series of reforms and policies geared toward reestablishing regular worship practices in the Jerusalem temple. They also undertook some measures that were aimed at the physical, spiritual, and social rebuilding of the community of Judah. Ezra and Nehemiah returned to Judah under the sponsorship of the Persian imperial administration. The Persian emperors provided financial and legislative support to the Jerusalem temple (Ezra 6–7).

Ezra and Nehemiah themselves resided in Judah only temporarily, because they came to Judah as royal envoys. However, the books of Ezra and Nehemiah record the long list of those who returned and became permanent residents of Judah (Ezra 2; Neh 7). Despite high enthusiasm and the best of intentions, life in Judah was filled with challenges. The political tensions recorded here attest to the obstacles that these community leaders faced from inside and outside of Judah.

Those who returned from the exile were the new Israel. They held the view that Judah must renew her allegiance to the Lord in order to continue her existence in the land God had promised to their ancestors. God's faithfulness to God's people is demonstrated in the fulfillment of the words of the prophet Jeremiah concerning the restoration of the exiles' fortune. God had promised that the people would be allowed to return to the land of their ancestors after 70 years in captivity (Jer 25:11; 29:10). This understanding of history sees God's Instruction as authoritative over communal and individual Jewish life.

In order to avoid another catastrophe (the loss of homes and temple), leaders in the books of Ezra and Nehemiah believed they needed to set the Jewish people apart for the Lord. The prophets Haggai and Zechariah encouraged the reconstruction of the Jerusalem temple. Ezra built a spiritual wall around the people when he taught them the Lord's Instruction. Nehemiah focused on repairing the literal wall around Jerusalem, as well as increasing its population. The separation of the Judean community from her non-Jewish neighbors was intended to protect and maintain a distinctive spiritual, cultural, and ethnic identity.

Ezra is known as a sort of second Moses because of his commitment to teaching and obeying "the Instruction from Moses, which the LORD, the God of Israel, had given" (Ezra 7:6; see also 7:10). Moses had mediated the covenantal relationship between God and Israel on Mount Sinai. In the post-exilic age, the renewal of the covenantal relationship between God and the people is facilitated through the divine Instruction in Ezra's hand.

Permission to return to Jerusalem

1 In the first year of King Cyrus of Persia's rule, to fulfill the LORD's word spoken by Jeremiah, the LORD stirred up the spirit of Persia's King Cyrus. The king issued a proclamation throughout his kingdom (it was also in writing) that stated:

<sup>2</sup>Persia's King Cyrus says: The LORD, the God of heaven, has given me all the kingdoms of the earth. He has commanded me to build him a house at Jerusalem in Judah. <sup>3</sup>If there are any of you who are from his people, may their God be with them! They may go up to Jerusalem in Judah and build the house of the LORD, the God of Israel—he is the God who is in Jerusalem. <sup>4</sup>And as for all those who remain in the various places where they are living, let the people of those places supply them with silver and gold, and with goods and livestock, together with spontaneous gifts for God's house in Jerusalem.<sup>a</sup>

Preparing to return

<sup>5</sup>Then the heads of the families of Judah and Benjamin, and the priests and the Levites—everyone whose spirit God had stirred up—got ready to go up and build God's house in Jerusalem. <sup>6</sup>All their neighbors assisted them with silver equipment, with gold, with goods, livestock, and valuable gifts, in addition to all that was freely offered. <sup>7</sup>King Cyrus brought out the equipment of the LORD's house—those items that Nebuchadnezzar brought from Jerusalem and placed in the house of his gods. <sup>8</sup>Persia's King Cyrus handed them over to Mithredath the treasurer, who counted them out to Sheshbazzar the prince of Judah. <sup>9</sup>This was the count: thirty gold dishes, one thousand silver dishes, twenty-nine knives,<sup>b</sup> <sup>10</sup>thirty gold bowls, four hundred ten larger<sup>c</sup> silver bowls, and one thousand other objects. <sup>11</sup>The total of the gold and silver objects numbered five thousand four hundred. Sheshbazzar brought up all of these when the exiles went up from Babylonia to Jerusalem.

Support from Persia The Persian rulers' support of the restoration of the temple was accompanied by royal permission for the Judean exiles to return to Judah. Thus Cyrus' and Darius' attention toward this province was channeled toward rebuilding the ruined infrastructure of the sanctuary and repopulating Jerusalem. Three waves of exiles returned over several generations—under the leadership of Sheshbazzar, Zerubbabel, and Ezra. Cyrus delivered to Sheshbazzar the temple equipment that the Babylonians had carried away in 587 BCE (Ezra 1:7; 5:14; 6:5). This statement conflicts with 2 Kings 24:13, which says that the king of Babylon "cut into pieces" all the gold objects from the temple. Assuming that the Persian king returned any of the objects that had been taken away by the Babylonians, such a gesture would have created a sense of continuity. Given that the temple had occupied a vital place in Judah, the royal action would have restored hope for glorious times to return. Cyrus seemingly understood that reestablishing regular worship activities at the temple included the return of the traditional sacred equipment. The Persian imperial government provided financial support by permitting the returning exiles to raise funds for the maintenance of the worship center in Judah.

1:1-11 King Cyrus: Cyrus the Great was the first Persian emperor (580–529 BCE) of the Achaemenid dynasty. He gave permission to the exiled Jews in Babylonia to return to their ancestral land, Judah. In Ezra, this Gentile king is depicted as giving enthusiastic support for the Jewish cult in Jerusalem. Cyrus authorizes the rebuilding of the Lord's temple and he even animates the fund-raising efforts by encouraging the exiles to make donations to the reconstruction project. The Persian king also returns the Jerusalem temple equipment, which had been taken away by the Babylonians.

1:1 to fulfill the LORD's word spoken by Jeremiah: Jeremiah prophesied concerning the judgment against the Babylonian Empire, the return of the exiles, and the restoration of God's people after seventy years of desolation (see Jer 25:12; 29:10). the LORD stirred up the spirit: The Gentile king's benevolent acts on behalf of the Jews are attributed to divine favor.

1:2-3 The LORD, the God of heaven: According to the writer,

Cyrus acknowledges that the Lord is ruler over all people and nations. The Lord's authority is not limited to the small province of Judah. Cyrus proclaims that it was the Lord who entrusted him with all the kingdoms of the earth. This statement provides political legitimacy to Cyrus' claim to Judah and the rest of the subjects and territories across the empire. The Cyrus Cylinder, a famous Persian document (today housed at the British Museum), records Cyrus' announcement to the Babylonians assuring them that his conquest of their country was authorized by none other than their own god Marduk.

1:4 Cyrus encourages the exiles remaining in Babylon to contribute financially.

1:7-11 King Cyrus brought out the equipment of the LORD's house: The book of Chronicles reports that Nebuchadnezzar took the precious equipment of the temple to Babylon (2 Chron 36:7, 10, 18). However, 2 Kings 24:13 indicates that Nebuchadnezzar cut in pieces all the gold temple equipment. See 2 Chronicles 36:19.

<sup>70</sup>The priests, the Levites, some of the people, the singers, the gatekeepers, and the temple servants settled in their own towns, and all Israel in their towns.

Rebuilding the altar

3 When the seventh month<sup>d</sup> came and the Israelites were in their towns, the people gathered together as one in Jerusalem. <sup>2</sup>Then Jeshua, Jozadak's son along with his fellow priests, and Zerubbabel, Shealtiel's son along with his kin, started to rebuild the altar of Israel's God so that they might offer entirely burned offerings upon it as prescribed in the Instruction from Moses the man of God. <sup>3</sup>They set up the altar on its foundations,<sup>e</sup> because they were afraid of the neighboring peoples,<sup>f</sup> and they offered entirely burned offerings upon it to the LORD, both the morning and the evening offerings.

<sup>4</sup>They celebrated the Festival of Booths, as prescribed. Every day they presented the number of entirely burned offerings required by ordinance for that day. <sup>5</sup>After this, they presented the continual burned offerings, the offerings at the new moons, and at all the sacred province, and Jeshua the high priest. Also Ezra, Nehemiah, and Zechariah record the prominent role this duo played in the restoration period.

2:68-70 The reconstruction and refurbishing of the temple was funded by the generous and voluntary gift of the community members. The first time the temple was built, King Solomon was mainly responsible for funding and carrying out the building project (1 Kgs 6-7). When the meeting tent was built, gift offerings were brought by the people in the community (Exod 25:2-9; 35:21-29).

3:1-7 After a long hiatus, worship resumes in Jerusalem.

3:1 seventh month: In the month of Tishri (September/October) of 538 BCE, the people assemble in unity in Jerusalem.

3:2 The leaders of the community, headed by Jeshua and Zerubbabel, rebuild the altar in order to resume offering sacrifices, as prescribed in the Instruction from Moses the man of God: The Instruction stipulated that the altar must be built of stones that hadn't been cut with iron tools (Exod 20:25; Deut 27:5-6).

3:3 They set up the altar on its foundations: In order for the altar and the worship to be legitimate, the continuation of the tradition was essential. The maintenance of spiritual well-being was considered to be important in order to ensure the divine protection against the threat posed by the hostile forces.

3:4 They celebrated the Festival of Booths: This is one of the three major Jewish festivals (along with Passover and Weeks). It commemorates the temporary shelters the Israelites lived in during their 40-year wandering in the wilderness. It is a reminder of the Lord's faithfulness and provision. The seven-day celebration is appropriate here feasts of the LORD, and the offerings of everyone who brought a spontaneous gift to the LORD. <sup>6</sup>From the first day of the seventh month, they began to present entirely burned offerings to the LORD.

However, the foundation of the LORD's temple had not yet been laid. <sup>7</sup>So they gave money to the masons and carpenters; and food, drink, and oil to the Sidonians and the Tyrians to bring cedarwood by sea from Lebanon to Joppa, according to the authorization given them by Persia's King Cyrus.

Laying the foundations of God's house

<sup>8</sup>In the second month of the second year after their arrival at God's house in Jerusalem, Zerubbabel, Shealtiel's son, and Jeshua, Jozadak's son and the rest of their kin—the priests and the Levites and all who had come from the captivity to Jerusalem—made a beginning. They appointed Levites 20 years old and above to oversee the work on the LORD's house. <sup>9</sup>Then Jeshua with his sons and his kin, Kadmiel and his sons, Binnui and his sons, the sons of Judah, along with the sons of Henadad, the Levites, and their sons and kin, collaborated to supervise the workers in God's house.

<sup>10</sup>When the builders laid the foundation of the LORD's temple, the priests clothed in their vests and carrying their trumpets, and the Levites the sons of Asaph with cymbals, arose to praise the LORD according to the directions of Israel's King David. <sup>11</sup>They praised and gave thanks to the LORD, singing responsively, "He is good, his graciousness for Israel lasts forever."

All of the people shouted with praise to the LORD because the foundation of the LORD's house had been laid. <sup>12</sup>But many of the older priests and Levites and heads of families, who had seen the first house, wept aloud when they saw the foundation of this house, although many others shouted loudly with joy. <sup>13</sup>No one could distinguish the sound of the joyful shout from the sound of the people's weeping, because the people rejoiced very loudly. The sound was heard at a great distance.

Facing opposition

4 When the enemies of Judah and Benjamin heard that the returned exiles were building a temple for the LORD, the God of Israel, <sup>2</sup>they came to Zerubbabel and the heads of the families and said to them, "Let's build with you, for we worship your God as you do, and we've been sacrificing to him ever since the days of Assyria's King Esarhaddon, who brought us here."

<sup>3</sup>But Zerubbabel, Jeshua, and the rest of the heads of the families in Israel replied, "You'll have no part with us in building a house for our God. We alone will build because the LORD, the God of Israel, and Persia's King Cyrus commanded us."

because it symbolizes new beginnings. The requirement of the holy gathering and entirely burned offerings are detailed in Leviticus 23:34-36. It is a joyous festival (Deut 16:13-15). The voluntary spirit is emphasized. The offering is stipulated by Deuteronomy: "They must not appear before the LORD's presence empty-handed. Each one should have his gift in hand, in precise measure with the blessing the LORD your God gives you" (Deut 16:16b-17). After the completion of the temple, Solomon celebrated the Festival of Booths (2 Chron 5).

3:8-13 Preparations are made for the work in God's house.
3:8 In the second month of the second year. In 537 BCE, Zerubbabel and Jeshua, along with other Jews who had returned from the captivity, start the reconstruction work. There is no mention of the Jews (actually a majority) who had been allowed by the Babylonians to remain in Judah. Levites 20 years old and above. See 1 Chronicles 23:24, 27; 2 Chronicles 31:17.

3:10 according to the directions of Israel's King David. See 2 Chronicles 29:25-26.

3:11 "He is good, his graciousness for Israel lasts forever":

This doxology is found in Psalms 106:1; 107:1; 118:1, 29; 136:1. This verse is chanted in response by a choir consisting of two parts. This is one of the favorite refrains of the author of 1 and 2 Chronicles (1 Chron 16:34; 2 Chron 5:13; 2 Chron 7:3).

3:12 the first house: The first temple was destroyed in 587 BCE, 50 years before.

4:1-5 The rebuilding of the temple stops because of the opposition from the neighboring peoples (who are considered enemies).

4:1 the enemies: the northern neighbors (Ezra 4:4).

4:2 King Esarhaddon: The people who asked to participate in the rebuilding of the temple are the descendants of the captives whom the Assyrian king had brought from the various territories across the empire and settled in Samaria, northern Israel, after 721 BCE. These people's worship combined the worship of Yahweh with that of other gods from their native lands. See 2 Kings 17:24-34.

4:4 discouraged: In devious ways the people of Samaria attempt to demoralize the community of Judah.

Writing to King Artaxerxes

<sup>6</sup>In the rule of Ahasuerus, at the beginning of his rule, they composed an indictment against those who lived in Judah and Jerusalem. <sup>7</sup>In the days of Artaxerxes, Bishlam, Mithredath, Tabeel, and the rest of their associates wrote to Persia's King Artaxerxes. The letter was written in Aramaic and translated.<sup>b</sup> <sup>8</sup>Rehum the royal deputy and Shimshai the scribe wrote a letter concerning Jerusalem to King Artaxerxes as follows:

<sup>9</sup>From Rehum the royal deputy and Shimshai the scribe and the rest of their colleagues, the judges, the administrators, the officials, the Persians, the people of Erech, the Babylonians, the people of Susa (that is, the Elamites), <sup>10</sup>and the rest of the nations whom the great and famous Osnappar deported and settled in the cities of Samaria and in the rest of the province Beyond the River.

To King Artaxerxes from your servants, the people of the province Beyond the River. <sup>12</sup>May it be known to the king that the Jews who left you and came to us have arrived in Jerusalem. They are rebuilding the rebellious and wicked city; they are completing the walls and repairing the foundations. <sup>13</sup>May it be known to the king that if this city is rebuilt and the walls completed, they will not pay tribute or tax or dues, and the royal revenue will be reduced.

<sup>14</sup>Since we receive our salary from the palace,<sup>i</sup> and since it is not fitting for us to witness the king's dishonor, we now send this letter<sup>j</sup> and inform the king <sup>15</sup>so that you may search the records of your ancestors. You will discover in the records that this is a rebellious city, harmful to kings and provinces, and that it has been in revolt over a long period of time. As a result, this city was laid waste. <sup>16</sup>We tell the king that if this city is rebuilt and its walls completed, you will then have no possession in the province Beyond the River.

Artaxerxes responds

Greetings to Rehum the royal deputy and Shimshai the scribe and the rest of their colleagues who live in Samaria and elsewhere in the province Beyond the River. <sup>18</sup>The entire letter that you sent to us has been read in translation for me. <sup>19</sup>I issued an order; they searched and discovered that this city has revolted against kings over a long period of time. There has been much rebellion and revolt there. <sup>20</sup>However, there have been mighty kings over Jerusalem who also ruled over the whole province Beyond the River. Tribute and taxes and dues were paid to them.

<sup>21</sup>Therefore, issue an order to stop these people: this city is not to be rebuilt until I make a decree. <sup>22</sup>Be sure to carry out this order! Why should danger grow and threaten the king?

<sup>23</sup>When the copy of King Artaxerxes' letter was read before Rehum and Shimshai the scribe and their colleagues, they hurried to Jerusalem to oppose the Jews and made them stop by force of arms.<sup>k</sup> <sup>24</sup>At that time the work on God's house in Jerusalem stopped and was suspended until the second year of the rule of Persia's King Darius.

Work on God's house continues

5 Then the prophet Haggai and the prophet Zechariah, Iddo's son, prophesied to the Jews who were in Judah and Jerusalem in the name of Israel's God who was over them.

<sup>2</sup>Subsequently, Zerubbabel, Shealtiel's son, and Jeshua, Jozadak's son, began to rebuild God's house in Jerusalem. God's prophets were with them, helping them.

Writing to King Darius

<sup>6</sup>This is a copy of the letter that Tattenai, the governor of the province Beyond the River, and Shethar-bozenai and his colleagues the officials who were in the province Beyond the River sent to King Darius. <sup>7</sup>In the message they sent him, the following was written:

To King Darius, all peace! <sup>8</sup>Let the king know that we went to the province of Judah, to the house of the great God. It is being built with dressed stone and with timber set into the walls. This work makes good progress and prospers in their hands. <sup>9</sup>We asked those elders, "Who authorized you to build this house and to complete the preparation of this material?" <sup>10</sup>We also asked them their names so that we could write down the names of the leaders for your information.

<sup>11</sup>This was their reply to us: "We are the servants of the God of heaven and earth. We are rebuilding the house that was built many years ago, which a great king of Israel built and completed. <sup>12</sup>But because our ancestors angered the God of heaven, he gave them over into the power of Babylon's King Nebuchadnezzar, the Chaldean, who destroyed this house and deported the people to Babylonia. <sup>13</sup>However, in the first year of his rule, Babylon's King Cyrus issued a decree to rebuild this house of God. <sup>14</sup>King Cyrus also took the gold and silver equipment from God's house out of the temple in Babylon (the ones that Nebuchadnezzar took from the temple in Jerusalem and placed in the temple in Babylon) and gave them to a man named Sheshbazzar, whom he had appointed governor. <sup>15</sup>Cyrus said to him, "Take this equipment and go and put it in Jerusalem's temple, and let God's house be rebuilt on its original site." <sup>16</sup>Then Sheshbazzar came and laid the foundations of God's house in Jerusalem. From then until now the rebuilding work has continued but is not yet complete."

<sup>17</sup>And now, if it seems good to the king, may a search be made in the royal archives in Babylon to see if King Cyrus had issued a decree to rebuild this house of God in Jerusalem. Then may the king be pleased to send us his decision about this matter.

Darius responds

GThen King Darius made a decree, and they searched the archives where the documents were stored in Babylon. <sup>2</sup>But a scroll was found in Ecbatana, the capital of the province of Media, on which was written the following:

5:1 Haggai and Zechariah: These two prophets were particularly concerned about the rebuilding of the temple and regularization of the worship in the temple. See the books of Haggai and Zechariah.

5:2 God's prophets were with them: Prophetic support is crucial for the work on the temple to resume.

5:5 Their God looked after the elders of the Jews: Divine favor is over the building project. Despite an intimidating inspection from the ruling authorities, the Jews continue their work unafraid.

5:6-17 The authorities ruling a region called Beyond the River write a letter to King Darius requesting an inquiry into the building permission. A response from the elders of Judah is quoted within this letter addressed to the imperial administration (5:11-16).

5:11 a great king of Israel: Solomon.

5:12 But because our ancestors angered the God of heaven: The destruction of the temple and the exile of the people happened because of the sinful ways of God's people. This theological interpretation is consistent with the perspective of the book of Deuteronomy, which says that disobedience to the instruction from God results in judgment and punishment, particularly expulsion from the God-given land. Nebuchadnezzar ruled over the Babylonian Empire between 605 and 562 BCE. He captured Jerusalem in 597 and again in 587 BCE. See 1 Kings 24–25.

5:13 a decree: See Ezra 1:1; 6:3.

5:16 Sheshbazzar: It was Zerubbabel who laid the foundations of the temple (see Ezra 3:10). Governor Zerubbabel, along with the high priest Jeshua, is consistently named as the leader of the building project (Ezra 3:2; 4:3; 5:2; Hag 1:14; Zech 4:9). Sheshbazzar was the one who was entrusted by Cyrus with transporting and delivering the temple equipment back to Jerusalem (Ezra 1:7-11). With Sheshbazzar returned a group of compatriots to Jerusalem. Later, another wave of exiled Jews came back with Zerubbabel. A prolonged period of time elapsed since the initial effort to restore the temple. Zerubbabel continued the work Sheshbazzar had begun.

6:1-12 King Darius responds. The Persian ruler issues a

A memorandum—<sup>3</sup>In the first year of his rule, King Cyrus made a decree: Concerning God's house in Jerusalem: Let the house at the place where they offered sacrifices be rebuilt and let its foundations be retained. Its height will be ninety feet and its width ninety feet, <sup>4</sup>with three layers of dressed stones and one<sup>e</sup> layer of timber. The cost will be paid from the royal treasury. <sup>5</sup>In addition, the gold and silver equipment from God's house, which Nebuchadnezzar took out of the temple in Jerusalem and brought to Babylon, is to be restored, that is, brought back to Jerusalem and put in their proper place in God's house.

<sup>6</sup>Now you, Tattenai, governor of the province Beyond the River, Shethar-bozenai, and you, their colleagues, the officials in the province Beyond the River, keep away! <sup>7</sup>Leave the work on this house of God alone. Let the governor of the Jews and the elders of the Jews rebuild this house of God on its original site.

<sup>8</sup>I also issue a decree about what you should do to help these elders of the Jews as they rebuild this house of God: The total cost is to be paid to these people, and without delay, from the royal revenue that is made up of the tribute of the province Beyond the River. <sup>9</sup>And whatever is needed—young bulls, rams, or sheep for entirely burned offerings to the God of heaven, wheat, salt, wine, or oil, as requested by the priests in Jerusalem—let that be given to them day by day without fail <sup>10</sup>so that they may offer pleasing sacrifices to the God of heaven and pray for the lives of the king and his sons.

<sup>11</sup>I also decree that if anyone disobeys this edict, a beam is to be pulled out of the house of the guilty party, and the guilty party will then be impaled upon it. The house will be turned into a trash heap.

<sup>12</sup>May the God who has established his name there overthrow any king or people who try to change this order or to destroy God's house in Jerusalem. I, Darius, have decreed it; let it be done with all diligence.

God's house is completed and dedicated

<sup>13</sup>Then Tattenai, the governor of the province Beyond the River, Shethar-bozenai, and their colleagues carried out the order of King Darius with all diligence. <sup>14</sup>So the elders of the Jews built and prospered because of the prophesying of the prophet Haggai and Zechariah, Iddo's son. They finished building by the command of Israel's God and of Cyrus, Darius, and King Artaxerxes of Persia. <sup>15</sup>This house was completed on the third day of the month of Adar,<sup>f</sup> in the sixth year of the rule of King Darius.

<sup>16</sup>Then the Israelites, the priests and the Levites, and the rest of the returned exiles joyfully celebrated the dedication of this house of God. <sup>17</sup>At the dedication of this house of God, decree making allowance for a generous support on behalf of the Jerusalem temple. The decree not only grants permission for the work to continue but it also specifies the material support for the construction from the royal coffer as well as provisions for the regular sacrificial worship at the temple.

6:2-5 Darius' letter quotes an earlier decree of Cyrus. In this letter, unlike the one in Ezra 1:2-4, Cyrus doesn't command the Jewish community to raise funds for building the temple.

6:4 The cost: Cyrus declares that the Persian government will pay for the construction of the Jerusalem temple.

6:5 the gold and silver equipment: The holy objects used at the temple are returned to their original place.

6:6-7 keep away: Based on the older decree of Cyrus, Darius orders the top officials of the region to leave the Jews alone so they may go about their own business.

6:8 tribute of the province Beyond the River: The financial provision for the Jerusalem temple is not from the central Persian government, but specifically from the revenue collected within governor Tattenai's province.

6:9 whatever is needed: The Persian king commands that the daily sacrificial offerings that are made in the Jerusalem temple be supplied with a generous and regular contribution. This familiarity with the Jewish worship indicates that the letter was drafted by a Jewish scribe.

6:10 pray for the lives: The Jews are expected to pray for the Persian king and his sons.

6:12 the God who has established his name there: This is a central theological notion concerning the Jerusalem temple from Deuteronomy 12:11.

6:13-22 The temple is finally completed and dedicated.

6:14 because of the prophesying: Haggai and Zechariah persuaded the people to build the house of God. by the command of: With the sanction of both the divine and earthly authorities, the Jerusalem temple project prospered.

6:16 the Israelites: Technically, by this time the northern kingdom had long ceased to exist. With the Assyrian capture of Samaria, 10 tribes disappeared. However, the biblical writer refers to the community of Judah as Israel to emphasize the unity of God's people. and the rest of the returned exiles: The society of Judah consisted of only three tribes: Judah, Benjamin, and Levi. The constituents of the community considered themselves proudly as the genuine Israel. See note on Ezra 3:8. joyfully celebrated: Also at the inauguration of the first temple, Solomon and the people rejoiced greatly and praised the Lord. See 2 Chronicles 7:10.

<sup>19</sup>On the fourteenth day of the first month,* the returned exiles celebrated the Passover. <sup>20</sup>All of the priests and the Levites had purified themselves; all of them were clean. They slaughtered the Passover animals for all the returned exiles, their fellow priests, and themselves. <sup>21</sup>The Israelites who had returned from exile, together with all those who had joined them by separating themselves from the pollutions of the nations of the land to worship the LORD, the God of Israel, ate the Passover meal.†

<sup>22</sup>They also joyfully celebrated the Festival of Unleavened Bread for seven days, because the LORD had made them joyful by changing the attitude of the king of Assyria toward them so that he assisted them in the work on the house of God, the God of Israel.

Introduction to Ezra

7After this, in the rule of Persia's King Artaxerxes, Ezra son of Seraiah son of Azariah son of Hilkiah <sup>2</sup>son of Shallum son of Zadok son of Ahitub <sup>3</sup>son of Amariah son of Azariah son of Meraioth <sup>4</sup>son of Zerariah son of Uzzi son of Bukki <sup>5</sup>son of Abishua son of Phinehas son of Eleazar son of Aaron the chief priest—<sup>6</sup>this Ezra came up from Babylon. He was a scribe skilled in the Instruction from Moses, which the LORD, the God of Israel, had given. Moreover, the king gave him everything he requested because the LORD his God's power was with him.

<sup>7</sup>Some of the Israelites and some of the priests and the Levites, the singers and gatekeepers and the temple servants also came up to Jerusalem in the seventh year of King Artaxerxes. <sup>8</sup>They reached Jerusalem in the fifth month, in the seventh year of the king. <sup>9</sup>The journey from Babylon began on the first day of the first month, and they came to Jerusalem on the first day of the fifth month, for the gracious hand of his God was upon him. <sup>10</sup>Ezra had determined to study and perform the LORD's Instruction, and to teach law and justice in Israel.

Letter from Artaxerxes

to Ezra the priest, the scribe of the Instruction from the God of heaven. Peace!‡

And now <sup>13</sup>I decree that any of the people of Israel or their priests or Levites in my kingdom who volunteer to go to Jerusalem with you may go. <sup>14</sup>You are sent by the king and second temple resembles the celebration of the first temple built by Solomon. However, the offering is noticeably modest in comparison to Solomon's (1 Kgs 8; 2 Chron 7:4–7).

6:18 the priests... and the Levites: Moses established the office of the priests and Levites (Exod 29; Lev 8; Num 3; 4; 8). David assigned the division of the temple officials according to their functions (1 Chron 23–26).

6:19–22 After the completion and dedication of the temple, the people celebrate the Passover and the Festival of Unleavened Bread. Two earlier purifications and reforms of the temple, those of King Hezekiah (739–687 BCE) and King Josiah (648–609 BCE), were completed with the observance of the Passover (see 2 Chron 30; 35).

6:22 Unleavened Bread: Bread that symbolizes misery. It is a reminder that the Israelites fled Egypt in a great hurry (Deut 16:3).

7:1–10 Ezra and his work are introduced. Ezra is viewed as a second great teacher (like Moses) of God's Instruction. He brought the Instruction from Babylon. Thus he reintroduces God's word to the people of Judah and reorients them to the covenant with the Lord. His visit to Judah is of great significance. Ezra is an expert on the Instruction from Moses. He is an authority on matters concerning the customs and beliefs that characterize Jewish life and faith.

7:1–5 Ezra's genealogy shows that he belonged to a high-priestly family.

7:1 After this: The author introduces a new narrative with this connecting phrase, giving the impression that not much time elapsed between them. In fact, some 60 years between the completion of the temple and Ezra's return are not accounted for in the narrative.

7:6 scribe: an expert in writing and copying the Instruction from Moses. See Ezra 7:11.

7:7 seventh year of King Artaxerxes: Artaxerxes I, 458 BCE.

7:11–26 The letter from Artaxerxes authorizes Ezra's return to Judah. The Persian king gives permission to Ezra and any Jews in Babylon who wish to return to Jerusalem. Given Ezra's particular expertise on the Judean teaching, he is expected to teach and safeguard the Instruction and order in the province. Ezra's trip also entails the delivery of some royal donations to the Jerusalem temple to ensure a regular sacrificial worship.

7:13 the people of Israel or their priests or Levites: the division by which the community members are identified—the lay people and two categories of the clergy.

7:14 seven counselors: The ancient Greek historian his seven counselors to investigate Judah and Jerusalem according to the instruction from your God, which is in your hand.

<sup>15</sup>You should bring the silver and gold that the king and his counselors have freely offered to the God of Israel, whose dwelling is in Jerusalem, <sup>16</sup>together with any of the silver and gold that you find in the entire province of Babylonia. You should also bring the spontaneous gifts of the people and the priests, given freely for God's house in Jerusalem. <sup>17</sup>With this money you will be careful to buy bulls, rams, and lambs, as well as their grain offerings and their drink offerings. And you will offer them on the altar of God's house in Jerusalem. <sup>18</sup>As long as it is God's will, you and your colleagues may do what you think best with the rest of the silver and gold. <sup>19</sup>You will deliver the equipment that has been given to you for the service of God's house to the God of Jerusalem. <sup>20</sup>If anything else is required for God's house that you are responsible to provide, you may provide it from the royal treasury.

<sup>21</sup>I, King Artaxerxes, decree to all of the treasurers in the province Beyond the River: Whatever Ezra the priest and scribe of the Instruction from the God of heaven requires of you, it must be provided precisely, <sup>22</sup>even up to one hundred kikkars of silver, one hundred kors of wheat, one hundred baths<sup>a</sup> of wine, one hundred baths of oil, and unlimited salt. <sup>23</sup>Whatever the God of heaven commands will be done carefully for the house of the God of heaven, or wrath will come upon the realm of the king and his heirs. <sup>24</sup>You must also know that it is illegal for you to charge tribute, custom, or dues on any of the priests and Levites, the singers, the doorkeepers, the temple servants, or other servants of this house of God.

<sup>25</sup>And you, Ezra, based on the divine wisdom that you have, appoint supervisors and judges to adjudicate among all the people in the province Beyond the River who know the laws of your God. You will also teach those who do not know them. <sup>26</sup>Let judgment be strictly carried out upon anyone who does not obey the Instruction from your God and the law of your king, including death, banishment, confiscation of property, or imprisonment.

Ezra prepares to leave

<sup>27</sup>Bless the LORD, the God of our ancestors, who has moved the king to glorify the LORD's house in Jerusalem, <sup>28</sup>and who has demonstrated his graciousness for me before the king and his counselors and all the king's mighty officers. I took courage because the LORD my God's power was with me. I gathered leaders from Israel to go up with me.

Herodotus explains that the Persian king entered into marriage only with seven leading royal families. Also see Esther 1:14. to investigate: Ezra is commissioned to investigate whether the inhabitants of Judah are abiding by their traditional set of norms—the Instruction, which is in your hand: Ezra brought the Instruction with him from Babylon. This Instruction is possibly the Pentateuch (the first five books of the OT).

7:15-16 Artaxerxes and his government offer financial contribution to the Jerusalem temple. They also give permission to Ezra to collect donations from the Babylonian Jewish community.

7:20 The king authorizes an unrestricted amount of provision for the Jerusalem temple to be disbursed from the imperial coffers.

7:21-24 Artaxerxes also gives Ezra a letter for the authorities in Beyond the River. They are commanded to provide Ezra with anything he requests for the sacrifice at the Jerusalem temple.

7:23 the God of heaven: The Persian king refers to the God of the Jews as a deity whose sovereignty extends beyond

Free to Worship the Lord The Persians understood that one of the most effective ways to gain the approval and loyalty of the native people was to show deference to their traditions. The imperial administration also recognized that temples were centers of communal life. Temples united and organized various segments of society, and the priests provided guidance and leadership to the community. Houses of worship possessed human, technical, and infrastructural resources. The restoration of a temple meant injecting life into virtually all aspects of the community.

the small confines of the Judean province. The Persians typically called their own god, Ahura Mazda, the Creator of Heaven and Earth. wrath: Artaxerxes' grandfather Darius supported the worship in Jerusalem so prayers on behalf of the imperial family might be offered. Artaxerxes makes generous contributions to the God of the Jews in order to avert any divine wrath.

7:24 illegal for you to charge tribute, custom, or dues . . . servants of this house of God: The Persian king grants tax-exempt status to the Jerusalem temple functionaries.

7:25 Ezra, as a priest and scribe, is commanded to organize the judicial system and teach the Instruction from the Lord to the Jews in Beyond the River. Priests were responsible for teaching the instructions from the Lord to the people (see 2 Kgs 17:26-28; 2 Chron 15:3; Mic 3:11).

7:27-28 Ezra prepares for the journey to Jerusalem. He praises the Lord for granting him favor with the Persian imperial government. He sets out to his ancestral land with confidence, knowing that God's hand was over the expedition to Judah. The people who volunteered to join Ezra were prominent members of the exiled community.

Voyage to Jerusalem

<sup>15</sup>I gathered them by the river that runs to Ahava, and there we camped for three days.

As I reviewed the people and the priests, I found no Levites there. <sup>16</sup>So I called for Eliezer, Ariel, Shemaiah, Elnathan, Jarib, Elnathan, Nathan, Zechariah, and Meshullam, all leaders, together with Joiarib and Elnathan, who were wise. <sup>17</sup>I sent them<sup>8</sup> to Iddo, the leader at the place named Casiphia, telling them what to say to Iddo and his colleagues the temple servants at Casiphia, namely, to send us ministers for God's house. <sup>18</sup>Because we were favored by God, they brought us Sherebiah, a skillful man of the family of Mahli, Levi's son and Israel's grandson, together with his sons and relatives so that there were eighteen in total. <sup>19</sup>They also brought us Hashabiah and with him Jeshaiiah of the family of Merari, together with his relatives and their sons so that there were twenty in total. <sup>20</sup>In addition, there were two hundred twenty temple servants whom David and the princes had appointed to serve the Levites. These were all recorded by name.

<sup>21</sup>Then I called for a fast there at the Ahava River so that we might submit before our God and ask of him a safe journey for ourselves, our children, and all our possessions. <sup>22</sup>I had been ashamed to ask the king for a group of soldiers and cavalry to help us in facing enemies on the way, because we had told the king, "The power of God favors all who seek him, but his fierce wrath is against all who abandon him." <sup>23</sup>So we fasted and prayed to our God for this, and he responded to us.

<sup>24</sup>Then I selected twelve of the leading priests, Sherebiah and Hashabiah and ten of their relatives with them. <sup>25</sup>I weighed out to them the silver and the gold and the equipment, the offering for the house of our God that the king, his counselors, his officials, and all Israel

8:1-14 Ezra returns to Judah with a sizeable company of volunteers—around 1,500. These people must have been highly motivated and zealous for Jerusalem and its temple, given the political and economic vulnerability they would experience in the backwater country.

8:1 went up: To go up means to go to Jerusalem, the holiest city of all. Jerusalem is the Lord's sacred earthly home (1 Kgs 8:1-13).

8:15-31 Voyage to Jerusalem.

8:15-20 Ezra finds no Levites among the recruits. The situation is quickly remedied when Mahli and his extended family members join Ezra and his company.

8:17 to send us ministers for God's house: The presence of the Levites is very important. The right personnel attending to the sacrificial worship at the temple authenticates the worship affairs at the holy place.

8:21 fast: to make oneself vulnerable, in supplication for divine mercy and help. Ezra proclaims a collective fast before setting out on a pivotal journey, in order to seek divine protection for the long road ahead. Fasting may also be motivated by the desire to purify oneself by the act of depriving one of the most elementary human pleasures. According to Deuteronomy 23:14, in order for the Lord to travel with the Israelites, the camp must be holy. The journey from east to west posed potential safety challenges. Ezra was nervous about the possibility that the caravan might encounter marauding bandits on the prolonged journey. Especially, since Ezra and his company were transporting gold, silver, and other valuable goods, they were mindful of the possible attacks from robbers on the road. See Ezra 8:31. A similar reasoning for fasting may be found also in 2 Chronicles 20:3, "Frightened, Jehoshaphat decided to seek the Lord's help and proclaimed a fast for all Judah."

8:24 twelve of the leading priests: symbolic of the 12 tribes of Israel.

8:25-30 The priests and Levites are entrusted with guarding the gift offerings that had been donated by the present there had offered. <sup>26</sup>I weighed out into their keeping six hundred fifty kikkars of silver, one hundred silver containers weighing a certain number of kikkars, one hundred kikkars of gold, <sup>27</sup>twenty gold bowls worth one thousand darics, and two containers of highly polished copper, which were as precious as gold. <sup>28</sup>I said to them, “You are holy to the LORD, and the equipment is holy; the silver and the gold are a spontaneous gift to the LORD, the God of your ancestors. <sup>29</sup>Guard them carefully until you weigh them out in Jerusalem before the officials of the priests, the Levites, and the heads of the families of Israel, within the rooms of the LORD’s house.” <sup>30</sup>So the priests and the Levites received the silver and the gold and the utensils as they were weighed out, in order to bring them to Jerusalem, to our God’s house.

<sup>31</sup>Then we left the Ahava River on the twelfth day of the first month<sup>a</sup> to go to Jerusalem. The power of our God was with us; he saved us from the power of the enemy and ambushes along the way.

Finishing the journey

<sup>32</sup>After arriving in Jerusalem, we rested there three days. <sup>33</sup>On the fourth day, the silver and the gold and the equipment were weighed out in our God’s house into the care of the priest named Meremoth, Uriah’s son, together with Eleazar, Phinehas’ son; and the Levites, Jozabad, Jeshua’s son, and Noadiah, Binnui’s son. <sup>34</sup>Everything was counted and weighed, and the total weight was recorded.

<sup>35</sup>At that time, those who had come from the captivity, the returned exiles, offered as entirely burned offerings to the God of Israel twelve bulls for all Israel, ninety-six rams, seventy-seven lambs, and twelve male goats as a purification offering. All this was an entirely burned offering to the LORD. <sup>36</sup>They also delivered the king’s orders to the royal chief administrators and governors of the province Beyond the River, who supported the people and God’s house.

Facing a communal problem

9 When these tasks were finished, the officials approached me and said, “The people of Israel, the priests, and the Levites haven’t kept themselves separate from the peoples of Persian king, his officials, and the Jewish community in Babylon.

8:28 holy: The objects that had been donated were destined for a sacred purpose. Therefore, Ezra commissions the priests and Levites, people who are dedicated to a sacred office, to take charge of the goods set apart for God’s house.

8:31 we left... on the twelfth day of the first month: The journey from Babylon to Judah took about four months. They departed two days before the Passover. The timing is significant. The departure from Babylon, the land of captivity, parallels the exodus from Egypt, the land of slavery. Ezra and his company reached Jerusalem in the fifth month, in the seventh year of the king (Ezra 7:8). Despite the lack of military escort, they arrived safely in Jerusalem with the treasures (see Ezra 8:22). The account of the journey concludes with Ezra’s declaration of God’s power and salvation—a testimony of divine favor upon the trip.

8:32-36 The treasures collected from Babylon are delivered to the Jerusalem temple.

8:35 those who had come from the captivity, the returned exiles: This parallel description of the group that arrived from Babylon seems redundant. It stresses that the life they left behind was one in captivity. They have now arrived to embrace permanent home and freedom. At the same time, this sentence underscores that only the returnees celebrated the sacrifice of entirely burned offerings to the Lord. No local Judean participated in this symbolic event.

8:36 the royal chief administrators and governors... supported the people and God’s house: The divine favor also manifested through the supportive approval from the regional officials.

9:1-15 The joy of arrival and celebration doesn’t last long. Some of the officials bring to Ezra’s attention a matter that causes him great concern and distress. Jewish men had been marrying foreign women from the surrounding nations. Perhaps the mixed marriages occurred due to the gender imbalance in Judah. The returnees from Babylon were not accompanied by females. The leaders of the community led the way in this behavior. The Instruction sternly warned against entering into marriage alliances with the local peoples. People from other cultures worshipped their respective gods, and their religious practices would steer Jews from their own faith. The Instruction compared falling in such idolatrous behavior to prostitution (Exod 34:16). Apparently, the foreign women who married these Jewish men maintained their religious practice in Judah. From Ezra’s perspective, these women endangered the religious and cultural identity of Judah, and their idolatry wasn’t to be tolerated. Especially after returning from exile, from Ezra and Nehemiah’s perspective, the Judean community needed to set itself apart from other cultures and religious practices and solidify its covenantal commitment with the Lord. These men thought that the future of the Jewish identity must not be compromised by lax attitudes toward assimilation. Ezra and Nehemiah’s priority was to instruct, exhort, and persuade the people to comply with the Instruction.

9:1-4 Officials of Judah inform Ezra that Israelite men are marrying outside the Jewish community. The violation of the neighboring lands with their detestable practices; namely, the Canaanites, the Hittites, the Perizzites, the Jebusites, the Ammonites, the Moabites, the Egyptians, and the Amorites. <sup>2</sup>They've taken some of their daughters as wives for themselves and their sons, and the holy descendants have become mixed with the neighboring peoples. <sup>b</sup>Moreover, the officials and leaders have led the way in this unfaithfulness."

<sup>3</sup>When I heard this, I tore my clothes and cloak, pulled out hair from my head and beard, and sat down in shock. <sup>4</sup>Then all those who trembled at the words of the God of Israel gathered around me on account of the transgression of the returned exiles while I remained sitting in shock until the evening sacrifice.

Ezra prays

<sup>5</sup>At the time of the evening sacrifice, I ended my penitential acts. While still wearing<sup>c</sup> my torn clothes and cloak, I fell upon my knees, spread out my hands to the LORD my God, <sup>6</sup>and said,

"My God, I'm too ashamed to lift up my face to you. Our iniquities have risen higher than our heads, and our guilt has grown to the heavens.

<sup>7</sup>"From the days of our ancestors to this day, we've been deep in guilt. On account of our iniquities we, our kings, and our priests have been handed over to the kings of the lands, to the sword, to captivity, to plundering, and to utter shame, as is now the case.

<sup>8</sup>"But now, for a brief while the LORD our God has shown favor in leaving us survivors and in giving us a stake in his holy place. Our God cheered us<sup>d</sup> and revived us for a little while in our slavery. <sup>9</sup>Even though we are slaves, our God hasn't abandoned us in our slavery. Instead, he's shown us his graciousness before Persia's kings by reviving us to set up our God's house, to repair its ruins, and to give us a wall in Judea and Jerusalem.

<sup>10</sup>"And now, our God, what will we say after this? We have abandoned your commandments, <sup>11</sup>which you commanded through your servants the prophets, saying: 'The land which you are about to enter to possess is a land polluted by the impurity of the neighboring peoples.'<sup>e</sup> Their detestable practices have filled it with uncleanness from end to end.

the Instruction has been committed particularly by some of the prominent citizens of Judah. Ezra laments that the covenant has been broken. Ezra rejects mixed marriages because assimilation to other cultures poses a challenge to a cohesive Jewish identity.

9:1 When these tasks were finished: Ezra and his companions successfully deliver the temple treasures and money. They also present to the regional authorities the Persian imperial decree, which certifies that Ezra's work in Judah is backed by the central government's support. the officials: the lay rulers of the community, the chief administrators. detestable practices: abhorrent acts that are particularly related to idolatry. the Canaanites, the Hittites, the Perizzites, the Jebusites, the Ammonites, the Moabites, the Egyptians, and the Amorites: The Israelites had been instructed by God to utterly destroy the seven Canaanite nations. These seven nations were seen as the source of idolatry and constant threat to engage Jews in the same practice. Deuteronomy 7:1-4 explicitly prohibits marriage with the seven nations. The Ammonites and Moabites might have been added to the list by Ezra, based on Deuteronomy 23:3. There these two ethnic groups are banned from being admitted to the Lord's presence. The inclusion of the Egyptians and Edomites in the ban may be due to Deuteronomy 23:7-8. Entering into marriage alliances with these foreign nations had political and economic implications. During the exilic and post-exilic time, there was a power vacuum in the province of Judah. Ezra might have felt that the political vulnerability of Judah was further compromised by a political and cultural encroachment from the neighboring nations.

9:3 I tore my clothes and cloak, pulled out hair from my head and beard: signs of great mourning. Plucking the hair expresses great anguish and pain.

9:4 I remained sitting in shock until the evening sacrifice: Ezra takes the transgression so seriously that he is speechless. Judah had been dealt with harshly by the Lord due to their transgression of the Instruction in the first place. Ezra had returned to his ancestral land purposefully to restore Judah's commitment to God's commandments. Yet the heads of the community were committing egregious violations of the Instruction.

9:6-15 Ezra's penitential prayer intercedes on behalf of the community. In his prayer of corporate confession of sin, Ezra identifies himself with the community. He doesn't remove himself from the guilty party. His intercessory prayer is similar to that of Moses (Exod 32:30-33), Jeremiah (Jer 3:25; 9:1), Nehemiah (Neh 1:6-7), and Daniel (Dan 9:5-14). Ezra acknowledges the wrongs committed by the community as well as God's justice and mercy. Ezra emphasizes that the Lord's mercy outweighs the severity of the iniquity. As a righteous God, God allows a few survivors to remain despite the guilt.

9:8 Our God cheered us and revived us: See Psalm 30:5.

9:11 Ezra is an expert in the Instruction from God. His prayer demonstrates his intimate knowledge of God's word, quoting from the Instruction and the prophets. through your servants the prophets: The Lord warned about the temptation of idolatry through the prophet Moses ahead of Israel's entry to the promised land. Moses is the quintessential prophet of the Lord (Deut 18:15; 34:10). Moses' successors repeated the divine injunctions (Mal 2:11). The land which you are about to enter to possess: See Deuteronomy 4:5. a land polluted: See Leviticus 18:25;

<sup>12</sup>So now, do not give your daughters to their sons in marriage, do not take their sons for your daughters to marry, and never seek their peace or prosperity. This is so you may be strong, and eat the good of the land, and leave it for an inheritance to your children forever.'

<sup>13</sup>After all that has happened to us because of our evil deeds and our great guilt—although you, our God, have punished us less than our iniquities deserve and have allowed us to survive as we do—<sup>14</sup>will we once again break your commandments and intermarry with the peoples who practice these detestable things? Would you not be so angry with us that you leave us without remnant or survivor? <sup>15</sup>LORD, God of Israel, you are righteous, for we have survived and a few remain until now. Here we are before you in our guilt, though no one can face you because of this guilt."<sup>f</sup>

The community responds

10While Ezra was praying and confessing, weeping and bowing down before God's house, a very large crowd of men, women, and children of Israel gathered around him. The people also wept in distress. <sup>2</sup>Then Shecaniah, Jehiel's son, from the family of Elam, spoke up and said to Ezra, "We've been unfaithful to our God by marrying foreign women from the neighboring peoples.<sup>g</sup> But even now, there is hope for Israel in spite of this. <sup>3</sup>Let's now make a covenant with our God to send away all these wives and their children, according to the advice of my master and of those who tremble at the commandment of our God. Let it be done according to the Instruction. <sup>4</sup>Get up, for it is your duty to deal with this matter; we will support you. Be strong and act."<sup>h</sup> So Ezra got up and made the leading priests, the Levites, and all Israel take a solemn pledge that they would do as had been said. So they took a solemn pledge.

The assembly decides

<sup>6</sup>Then Ezra got up from the area in front of God's house and went to the room of Jehohanan, Eliashib's son, where he spent<sup>h</sup> the night. He didn't eat food or drink water, for he was mourning because of the unfaithfulness of the exiles.

<sup>7</sup>An order was then circulated throughout Judah and Jerusalem that all the returned exiles should gather in Jerusalem. <sup>8</sup>All those who failed to appear within three days, as mandated by the officials and elders, would have all their property taken away. They would be separated from the congregation of the exiles. <sup>9</sup>So within three days, all the people of Judah and Benjamin gathered in Jerusalem. It was the twentieth day of the ninth month.<sup>i</sup> All of the people sat in the area in front of God's house, trembling because of this order and because of the heavy rain.

<sup>10</sup>Then Ezra the priest stood up and said to them, "You have been unfaithful by marrying foreign women and adding to Israel's guilt. <sup>11</sup>But now, make a confession to the LORD God of <sup>12</sup>The whole assembly shouted in reply, “Yes. We must do as you have said. <sup>13</sup>But there are many people, and it’s the rainy season; we can’t continue to stand outside. Nor can this task be completed in a day or two because many of us have sinned in this matter. <sup>14</sup>Let our leaders represent the entire assembly. Let all in our towns who have taken foreign wives come at appointed times, along with the elders and judges of every town, until God’s great anger at us on account of this matter be averted.” <sup>15</sup>Only Jonathan, Asahel’s son, and Jahzeiah, Tikvah’s son, opposed this; Meshullam and Shabbethai the Levites supported them.

Resolving the issue

<sup>18</sup>Of the family of priests, there were found the following who had married foreign women—of the family of Jeshua, Jozadak’s son and his brothers: Maaseiah, Eliezer, Jarib, and Gedaliah. <sup>19</sup>They promised to send their wives away, and their compensation offering was a ram of the flock for their guilt.

<sup>44</sup>All these men<sup>5</sup> had married foreign women, some of whom had borne children.<sup>6</sup>

Loss of Jerusalem

1 These are the words of Nehemiah, Hachaliah's son.
In the month of Kislev,<sup>a</sup> in the twentieth year,<sup>b</sup> while I was in the fortress city of Susa,<sup>c</sup> Hanani, one of my brothers, came with some other men from Judah. He talked them about the Jews who had escaped and survived the captivity, and about Jerusalem.

<sup>3</sup>They told me, "Those in the province who survived the captivity are in great trouble and shame! The wall around Jerusalem is broken down, and its gates have been destroyed by fire!"

Confession

<sup>4</sup>When I heard this news, I sat down and wept. I mourned for days, fasting and praying before the God of heaven. <sup>5</sup>I said:

"LORD God of heaven, great and awesome God, you are the one who keeps covenant and is truly faithful to those who love you and keep your commandments. <sup>6</sup>Let your ear be attentive and your eyes open to hear the prayer of your servant, which I now pray before you night and day for your servants, the people of Israel.

"I confess the sins of the people of Israel, which we have committed against you. Both I and my family have sinned. <sup>7</sup>We have wronged you greatly. We haven't kept the commandments, the statutes, and the ordinances that you commanded your servant Moses.

<sup>8</sup>"Remember the word that you gave to your servant Moses when you said, 'If you are unfaithful, I will scatter you among the peoples. <sup>9</sup>But if you return to me and keep my commandments by really doing them, then, even though your outcasts live<sup>e</sup> under distant skies, I will gather them from there and bring them to the place that I have chosen as a dwelling for my name.' <sup>10</sup>They are your servants and your people. They are the ones whom you have redeemed by your great power and your strong hand.

<sup>11</sup>"LORD, let your ear be attentive to the prayer of your servant and to the prayer of your servants who delight in honoring your name. Please give success to your servant today and grant him favor in the presence of this man!"

1:1 Nehemiah: The name has two components, "console" and the shortened form "yah" from the divine name Yahweh. Kislev: the ninth month of the Jewish year (November/December). in the twentieth year: of Artaxerxes I, 445 BCE. fortress city of Susa: The winter palace of the Persian kings was located in Susa, the ancient capital city of the Elamites. Cyrus the Great made the city his seat of government when he assumed power from the Babylonians. Susa is also where King Ahasuerus held his extravagant drinking feast (Esth 1). Daniel has his vision regarding the Persian Empire while in Susa (Dan 8).

1:2 the Jews who had escaped and survived the captivity: In 587 BCE, Judah was conquered by the Babylonians. In the eleventh year of King Zedekiah, after an 18-month revolt and siege, Jerusalem fell, and the temple was destroyed. Judah's last king was removed from the throne. At this time, many of the Judean leaders were deported to Babylon. Most of the residents of Judah, who were peasants, were left behind to go about their regular business. The state of the province was markedly diminished. However, outside of Jerusalem regular life mostly continued. It's not clear here if Nehemiah is inquiring about the dejected state of Judah brought about by this Babylonian destruction, or if a more recent devastation is affecting the neighboring peoples of Judah.

1:3 Hanani and his associates bring Nehemiah a report of the distressing state of affairs back in Judah. The wall around Jerusalem is broken down, and its gates have been destroyed by fire!: Thanks to the edict of Cyrus the Great, some of the exiled Jews started returning to Judah in 538 BCE. Yet the wall remained in disrepair since its destruction in 587 BCE. It's highly possible that this state of neglect continued in part because of the Samaritan interference with the restoration efforts. The Samaritan officials persuaded the Persian government that the rebuilding efforts in Judah under Zerubbabel's leadership were for the purpose of rebelling against the imperial power (see Ezra 4). It's also possible that some surrounding nations had recently taken advantage of the vulnerable condition of Judah. Thus the damages mentioned here are fresh. According to 1 Kings 9:15, it was King Solomon who built the wall of Jerusalem.

1:4 I mourned for days, fasting and praying: Compare with Joel 1:14; Isaiah 58:1-14; Daniel 9:3. God of heaven: a common way to refer to God in the post-exilic documents (cf. 2 Chron 36:23; Ezra 1:2; 5:11-12; 6:9-10; 7:12, 21, 23).

1:5-11 Nehemiah's prayer echoes language typically found in the book of Deuteronomy.

1:5 who keeps covenant: See Deuteronomy 7:9; 29:8. truly faithful to those who love you and keep your commandments: See Deuteronomy 5:10; 7:9.

1:7 commandments, the statutes, and the ordinances: Permanent occupancy of the new land was attached to the observance of God's word (Deut 4:1, 5, 8, 14; 5:31; 6:1; 12:1). Moses charged the Israelites to always teach and observe God's commandments (Deut 6:20; 8:11).

1:8-9 If you are unfaithful, I will scatter you among the peoples: a summary of Deuteronomy 4:30.

1:10 redeemed by your great power and your strong hand: from the life of slavery in Egypt (cf. Deut 9:26).

2:1 Nehemiah is a cupbearer, a favored official in the court of the Persian King Artaxerxes (464–424 BCE). Royal court positions in the ancient world required a great deal of intimacy and confidentiality. Court physicians, emissaries,

Cupbearer's plea

2 At that time, I was a cupbearer to the king. <sup>1</sup>In the month of Nisan, <sup>d</sup> in the twentieth year of King Artaxerxes, the king was about to be served wine. I took the wine and gave it to the king. Since I had never seemed sad in his presence, <sup>2</sup>the king asked me, "Why do you seem sad? Since you aren't sick, you must have a broken heart!"

I was very afraid <sup>3</sup>and replied, "May the king live forever! Why shouldn't I seem sad when the city, the place of my family's graves, is in ruins and its gates destroyed by fire?"

<sup>4</sup>The king asked, "What is it that you need?"

I prayed to the God of heaven <sup>5</sup>and replied, "If it pleases the king, and if your servant has found favor with you, please send me to Judah, to the city of my family's graves so that I may rebuild it."

<sup>6</sup>With the queen sitting beside him, the king asked me, "How long will you be away and when will you return?" So it pleased the king to send me, and I told him how long I would be gone.

<sup>7</sup>I also said to him, "If it pleases the king, may letters be given me addressed to the governors of the province Beyond the River to allow me to travel to Judah. <sup>8</sup>May the king also issue a letter to Asaph the keeper of the king's forest, directing him to supply me with timber for the beams of the temple fortress gates, for the city wall, and for the house in which I will live."

The king gave me what I asked, for the gracious power of my God was with me.

Inspecting Jerusalem

<sup>9</sup>So I went to the governors of the province <sup>e</sup>Beyond the River and gave them the king's letters. The king had sent officers of the army and cavalry with me.

<sup>10</sup>When Sanballat the Horonite and Tobiah the Ammonite official heard this, they were very angry that someone had come to seek the welfare of the people of Israel.

<sup>11</sup>When I reached Jerusalem and had been there for three days, <sup>12</sup>I set out at night, taking only a few people with me. I didn't tell anyone what my God was prompting me to do for and cupbearers were often foreign individuals who had gained the ruler's trust (cf. Gen 40 and the story of Joseph, who served in Pharaoh's court).

2:2 I was very afraid: Nehemiah's sadness over the desolate condition of his ancestral province was genuine. But his sadness in the presence of the king could have been seen as offensive. Nehemiah is afraid that he might have upset the king.

2:3 Why shouldn't I seem sad: See Isaiah 61:3, which expressed sadness over the same conditions in Judah, the city, the place of my family's graves: Nehemiah doesn't identify Jerusalem by name. His reservation may be due to the reputation Jerusalem had gained as a city of sedition and rebellion. Apparently this information could be found in the royal annals of the Persian administration (Ezra 4:12, 15).

2:5 send me to Judah . . . so that I may rebuild it: Nehemiah's request isn't merely a nostalgic desire to see his ancestors' city back in its former state. A restored Jerusalem would signify the continuation of the Jewish identity and selfhood. Security and pride would be restored. The inhabitants who stayed would regain their confidence. Politically and culturally, the removal of the marks of the devastation would also signal removal of the shame and humiliation suffered at the hand of the conquerors. Reinstated worship practices in the temple would announce the Lord's restoration of Judah's fortunes. A monumental project such as the rebuilding of Jerusalem, a subjugated city, required imperial authorization. The rebuilding efforts could certainly be viewed as a political statement—an attempt for insurrection against the imperial power. A newly vibrant city could also pose a threat to the neighboring nations. See Ezra 4.

2:6 I told him how long I would be gone: Nehemiah remained in Judah for 13 years (Neh 5:14; 13:6).

2:7 letters: imperial authorization for Nehemiah's safe conduct through the Persian provinces between Susa and Jerusalem. The news of Nehemiah's visit to Judah may not be well received by the officials in the surrounding provinces. Some of them had tried to foil Judah's attempt to rebuild Jerusalem. Thus Nehemiah is reasonably concerned about his personal safety.

2:8 the gracious power of my God was with me: Nehemiah's prayers have been answered (Ezra 7:9; 8:18, 22; Neh 2:8, 18).

2:9 province Beyond the River: Darius the Great (521–486 BCE) was an astute statesman. He divided the vast Persian Empire into 20 satrapies, or provinces. Beyond the River (Euphrates) was the fifth province, and it included Palestine, Syria, Phoenicia, and Transjordan.

2:10 Sanballat the Horonite and Tobiah the Ammonite: The Elephantine Papyri (407 BCE) from Egypt identify Sanballat as the governor of Samaria. There were two more Sanballats who served as governors of Samaria. We don't know whether Samaria exercised authority over Judah, but this passage shows clearly that there were rivalry and animosity between the two provinces. Samaritan officials raised suspicion about Judeans plotting rebellion against the imperial administration. Sanballat is an Akkadian name, which means, "Sin [the god] has healed." Though the text identifies Tobiah as an Ammonite, his name suggests that he was a Jew. His name means "Yahweh is good." someone had come to seek the welfare of the people of Israel: See Nehemiah 4:1, 8; 6:2, 13. The imperial backing might have been perceived as a threat by the Samaritan officials.

2:12 I set out at night: Nehemiah's night survey of the Jerusalem walls is intended to avoid stirring jealousy among Jerusalem, and the only animal I took was the one I rode. <sup>13</sup>I went out by night through the Valley Gate past the Dragon's Spring to the Dung Gate so that I could inspect the walls of Jerusalem that had been broken down, as well as its gates, which had been destroyed by fire.

<sup>14</sup>Then I went on to the Spring Gate and to the King's Pool. Since there was no room for the animal on which I was riding to pass, <sup>15</sup>I went up by way of the valley by night and inspected the wall. Then I turned back and returned by entering through the Valley Gate.

Let's rebuild

<sup>16</sup>The officials didn't know where I had gone or what I was doing. I hadn't yet told the Jews, the priests, the officials, the officers, or the rest who were to do the work. <sup>17</sup>So I said to them, "You see the trouble that we're in: Jerusalem is in ruins, and its gates are destroyed by fire! Come, let's rebuild the wall of Jerusalem so that we won't continue to be in disgrace." <sup>18</sup>I told them that my God had taken care of me, and also told them what the king had said to me.

"Let's start rebuilding!" they said, and they eagerly began the work.<sup>f</sup>

<sup>19</sup>But when Sanballat the Horonite, Tobiah the Ammonite official, and Geshem the Arab heard about it, they mocked and made fun of us. "What are you doing?" they asked. "Are you rebelling against the king?"

<sup>20</sup>"The God of heaven will give us success!" I replied. "As God's servants, we will start building. But you will have no share, right, or claim in Jerusalem."

Rebuilding the gates and walls

3Then Eliashib the high priest set to work with his fellow priests and built<sup>g</sup> the Sheep Gate. They dedicated it and set up its doors, then dedicated it as far as the Tower of the Hundred and as far as the Tower of Hananel.

those who don't want Judah to benefit from imperial attention. Judah's neighbors are hostile to Nehemiah's intention to refortify the walls of Jerusalem.

2:13 Valley Gate past the Dragon's Spring to the Dung Gate: Nehemiah's inspection starts at the western wall. Then he proceeds counterclockwise to the southernmost Dung Gate. Dragon's Spring is unknown.

2:14 Spring Gate: located in the Kidron valley. King's Pool: also known as the Pool of Siloam.

2:15 the valley: The Kidron valley runs north to south between the Mount of Olives and the eastern hill of the temple mount and David's City.

2:16 The officials didn't know: Nehemiah keeps his plan a secret, at least until he has a well-formulated plan to rally the community's full support. Nehemiah's initiative to repair and fortify Jerusalem faced challenges internally and externally. Neighboring peoples saw the repair of Jerusalem as Judah's intention to revamp its security efforts and thus harboring aspirations to become an independent state (see Ezra 4:4). There were social, economic, and political differences among the Judean residents. The local Judeans and the returnees from the exile disagreed over several issues, including who were the true Jewish people, and thus the legitimate possessors of the land.

2:17 so that we won't continue to be in disgrace: Nehemiah's speech appeals to the sense of dignity and duty of the Judeans. A presentable and secure city would restore people's confidence and pride in their nation. See Psalm 44. 2:18 I told them: Nehemiah's speech rallying the Judean residents to join his cause is compelling. He assures people that God approves of the project he is about to launch. Nehemiah also informs them that the work has already gained the imperial approval.

2:19 Geshem the Arab: possibly the king of Qedar, a nomadic people from northern Arabia. Are you rebelling against the king? Such accusations of revolt were sensitive charges. The Persians were constantly involved in countering real or imaginary conspiracies among the subject nations. Indeed, around Nehemiah's time the imperial power had brutally quashed several revolts in various parts of the empire.

2:20 The God of heaven will give us success! Nehemiah is confident that the divine favor bestowed upon his trip would continue accompanying the reconstruction effort. you will have no share, right, or claim in Jerusalem: Just like Zerubbabel and Jeshua (Ezra 4:3), Nehemiah is determined not to allow anyone from outside the community to participate in the rebuilding. Nehemiah might have been equally distrustful of outsiders, especially given the open hostility he had encountered at his arrival to Judah. 3:1-32 The list of builders and their respective assignments may originate from an independent source. Perhaps this record was preserved in the temple archives, and later inserted into the Nehemiah memoir. Nehemiah's fortification of the wall covers the entire perimeter. It starts and ends at the Sheep Gate. It proceeds counterclockwise. Some gates aren't mentioned: that is, the Gate of Ephraim (Neh 8:16) and the Prison Gate (Neh 12:38). Such omission may owe to a simple scribal error or an indication that there were originally two independent records. The fact that 41 groups enlisted shows that everyone in the community took part in the project. Each group works on the assigned post. The unity and solidarity of diverse social groups may explain how the vast wall around the city was completed in a mere 52 days (Neh 6:15). Among the builders are priests (3:1, 22, 28), goldsmiths, perfumers, merchants (3:8, 32), rulers of districts (3:14-19), temple servants (3:26), and keepers of the gate (3:29). Both men and women participate in the building endeavor (3:12).

<sup>2</sup>The people of Jericho built next to them, and Zaccur, Imri's son, built next to them. <sup>3</sup>The children of Hassenaah built the Fish Gate; they laid its beams and set up its doors, bolts, and bars. <sup>4</sup>Next to them Meremoth, Uriah's son and Hakkoz's grandson, made repairs. Meshullam, Berechiah's son and Meshezabel's grandson, made repairs next to them, and Zadok, Baana's son, made repairs next to them. <sup>5</sup>Next to them the people from Tekoa made repairs, but their officials wouldn't help with the work<sup>b</sup> of their supervisors.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>6</sup>Joiada, Paseah's son, and Meshullam, Besodeiah's son, repaired the Mishneh Gate;<sup>j</sup> they laid its beams and set up its doors, bolts, and bars. <sup>7</sup>Next to them repairs were made by Melatiah the Gibeonite, Jadon the Meronothite, and<sup>k</sup> the people of Gibeon and of Mizpah, who were ruled by the governor of the province Beyond the River.
